Line Forms On Right, Men!

Presidio's WACs are looking for a man!

To coach their basketball team, that is.

Entered in the northern California Women's Armed Forces Basketball League, the local gal cagers await a suitable coach whom they can look up to, honor and obey on the basketball court.

Currently under the direction of Lieutenant Dorothy Crook, the Wac basketballers downed Parks Air Force Base WAFs, 35-27, in their practice season opener last week.

Though they made Lieutenant Crook appear as the latest entry in the Coach of the Year Derby, she — unhappily — confesses as having run through her bag of cage tricks.

"I have taught them all I know," she murmured, "now I have to find someone—preferably a man—to take over."

Qualifications are simple, she said. They include time for Monday and Thursday practice sessions; familiarity with the rules and a working knowledge of basketball tactics.

Applications should be made with Lieutenant Crook, Ext. 2667.

And she asked that volunteers call quickly, for the need is urgent since practice contests have been scheduled and the league opener is mere weeks away.

In return, the gals — like Georgia Kelly and Patsy Shultz, who paced the team in the opener with 17 and 12 points, respectively — promise not to nag, to heed his wisdom and play like tigeresses against their foes.

Deadline Nears For Finance Course; Seek Applicants

An all inclusive accounting course for officers to start 28 January, 1957, at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., has been announced this week by Maj. James D. Womac, assistant Post S-3.

School nominations—including name, rank, service number—must reach Post Headquarters, Attn: AMNPR-PT (S) not later than 1200 hours, 7 Nov., 1956.

Specifically the school is open to field grade FC commissioned officers, members of the regular Army or reserve component officers on extended active duty. Excluded from consideration are reserve officers on active duty for training only.

The account course (14-0-21), which runs for 17 weeks, includes study in the following fields of accounting: principles, cost, intermediate and advanced accounting, auditing theory, municipal and government accounting and analysis of financial statements. Students are not trained for a specific MOS.

To be eligible for this school officers must have an actual or anticipated assignment to finance or accounting duties.

Reporting date for the school is 27 Jan., 1957; termination date is 24 May, 1957.

Promotions

Post's second E-7 promotion in 15 months went this week to new M/Sgt. Harrison J. Breaux (MOS 296.60), Hq. Co., 30th Engineer Group. The one E-6 slot alloted to Post for October went to Sp1 Davey L. Sanford (MOS 294.10), Company C (6002).

New Policy In Gratuity Selections

Armed Forces members, in certain situations, may name more than one beneficiary of the six-month base pay gratuity, according to a Defense Department interpretation of the Survivor Benefits Act (PL 881).

Prior designations of recipients are voided by the law if the deceased service member is survived by a spouse or children.

Under the ruling, service personnel may designate any one or a combination of parents, brothers or sisters to receive all or equal shares of the payment made to their survivors in the event of their death while on active duty.

Where there is no immediate family and no beneficiaries are named, parents would take equal shares; if there are no surviving parents, brothers and sisters would share in the same proportion.

The gratuity also is made to survivors where death results from service-connected injury within 120 days after discharge. (ANS)

Church Attendance High In Antiaircraft Command

Attendance at on-post and on-site chapel services has averaged around 14 per cent for several months, Chaplain Strevig said. This compares with around 10 per cent for the Army as a whole.

He emphasized this figure does not include those men who leave post or gun and Nike sites to attend civilian services, or those married men who live off post and attend civilian services with their families.

Chaplain Strevig credited increased command support and better facilities with much of the increase. Battery and battalion commanders have allowed men at sites the time and transportation to attend both military and civilian services. Where possible, men on duty have been replaced long enough to allow them to attend church.

Bulletin boards, lighted and specially designed for religious news, have been placed at each battery and religious periodical racks have been installed in day rooms, he said.

"Best Mess" Award for the 30th AAA Group at Fort Barry was awarded to Headquarters Battery for keeping the best mess hall in the unit. Colonel Dallas F. Haynes, Commanding Officer, 30th AAA Group, presented the Best Mess Award to M/Sgt. Glen M. Armstrong, Mess Steward of Headquarters Battery. The Best Mess Award is based on everything from dining room appearance to food preparation.

Crusade Drive Still Lagging, Needs $3,317

Presidio contributions to the Bay Area Fund Crusade jumped to $32,697.33 this week following military payday. To reach the goal set at the kick-off of the drive, $3,317.67 is still needed.

Civilian donations continue to lag behind military contributions, according to the Post Funds custodian.

The drive will continue until the coming Post and Sixth Army civilian paydays, and it is hoped the lag will be overcome on these days. A day's pay has been set as the minimum fair share to meet the goal.

The contributions made this week bring the total to 90.7 per cent of the goal, a 5.9 per cent increase over last week. The total includes $29,167 in cash and $3,530.33 in pledges.

AAA Tops Drive Goal

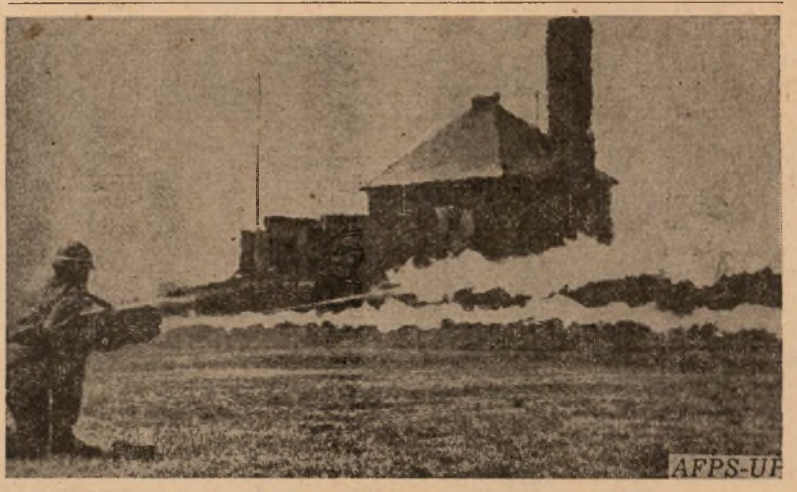
Fort Baker's 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command Headquarters went over the top in its United Bay Crusade drive this week, contributing 104 per cent of its quota.

The 101-man headquarters donated $801 on an assigned goal of $765, according to Colonel B. M. Warfield, Asst. Chief of Staff, G1 for the command and headquarters and command chairman for the United Bay Crusade.

December Draft

Washington (AFPS) — The Defense Department has asked Selective Service to induct 17,000 men in December for the Army.

Draft officials also have been requested to provide the inductees by 12 Dec. to avoid calling men for service during the Christmas season, the Defense announcement said.



The other services will place no December calls for men.

New Info Plan Would Better Career Field

"A long stride forward in providing the Army trained information officers who not only know military matters but the requirements of the mass media of communications," is Army Information Chief Maj. Gen. G. S. Meloy's evaluation of the move to establish information specialization as a career field.

Under the new program, spelled out in AR 616-140, Army officers would receive both information training and basic training in their respective branches. Then they would alternate between branch and information assignments.

Officers must be captains or higher to be eligible for information specialization, according to the new regulation.

Flame Thrower which weighs 26½ pounds, combat loaded, is in the final stage of development by the Army Chemical Corps. It is a one-shot model used for close-range combat. The weapon was designed to be used against bunkers and other emplaced positions where high explosives are ineffective. It can be set with a remote device for defensive flank emplacements, used as a booby trap, and included in a paratrooper's "jump" equipment.

Army Association Sees New Array Of Weapons

The "world's largest bubble," the Redstone missile and the "Honest John" rocket highlighetd the recent two-day display of Army weapons and equipment at Ft. Myer, Va.

The demonstration of atomic-age mobility and firepower was staged in conjunction with the second annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army. Some 15 Army branches participated.

The "bubble," 150 long, 50 feet wide, and made of thin inflated plastic, housed an ordnance exhibition. It is used for protecting supplies and equipment and requires no supports.

The surface - to - surface Redstone missile stands 69 feet tall. The "Honest John" is a long-range artillery rocket.

Ninteen Army "frogmen," aquatic commandos from the 77th Special Forces at Ft. Bragg, N. C., paraded in a 3,000-gallon tank.

Other exhibits featured the latest tanks, helicopters, missiles, amphibious vehicles and self-propelled artillery.

Achievement Award

Chief Warrant Officer George W. Arndt has received a Certificate of Achievement for serving more than 26 years and in recognition of his service in Guam and Europe in World War II.

Portuguese Army Staff Chief Will Visit Tomorrow

A 17-gun salute will be fired at the Presidio tomorrow in honor of a visiting Portuguese Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Frederico da Costa Lopes da Silva, who is on a three-week tour of U.S. Army installations as guest of Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, U.S. Army Chief of Staff.

General Silva, accompanied by several staff officers of the Portuguese Army, arrives at San Francisco's International Airport 1800 hours tonight where he will be met by Maj. Gen. Walter J. Muller, Sixth Army Deputy Commanding General.

Following the 17-gun salute and honor guard ceremony tomorrow, the Portuguese general will be guest of honor at a luncheon at the Presidio Officers Club, with Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, as host.

Monday the party visits Fort Mason and the Pacific Transportation Terminal Command headquarters followed, Tuesday, by a tour of military installations on the Monterey Peninsula.

Departing on Wednesday, the group will fly to Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

90-Day Storage Set For Service Household Effects

Service families will be permitted to store household possessions at original duty stations, in transit or at destinations, up to 90 days at government expense beginning 1 Dec., the Department of Defense has announced.

The change in the Joint Travel Regulations outlaws the previous restrictions requiring the sponsor to show special circumstances beyond his control before temporary storage privileges were granted.

The regulation change also provides an additional 90-day free storage privilege in specific unavoidable conditions. If the second 90-day request is not granted, the serviceman will pay all charges for warehousing beyond the first 90 days.

Privileges under the regulations can be accumulated. A service family whose privilege in one situation expires is entitled to the opportunity at another time.

Top Scientists Here For Confab

New Data System Will Allow AG Record Reduction

Within six months, the Army expects to have the records of all commissioned officers on active duty available for reference on two drums of tape.

The records will be kept current on a daily basis and will be useful for various purposes from individual personnel actions to gross reports requested by Congressional committees. There will be space for 350-plus entries per officer.

A "centralized automatic data processing system" (ADPS) which is being installed in the Adjutant General's office in the Pentagon will make the change possible. The system is based on the IBM 705, an electronic data processing system.

The new system will not affect field preparation of records at first.

America's top scientific personnel in the field of missiles—650 strong—converge on the Presidio Tuesday for the 24th Shock and Vibration Symposium which will consider "The Missile Structure and its Electronics."

The scientists and engineers, who represent government laboratories, industrial contractors and university research centers, are meeting in this two-day conference to exchange information and bring each other up to date on the latest advancements in the missile field.

Shock and vibration problems are especially complex in the field of missiles, explains Dr. Elias Klein, head of the Department of Defense Shock and Vibration Centralizing Activity who arrived at the Presidio Tuesday to handle pre-symposium details.

Missiles, which are subject to shock and vibration in handling, firing and flight, have more parts than our largest airplanes, says Dr. Klein. He explains that the reliability of the whole missile is utterly dependent on the reliability factor of each individual part.

Presidio Units Will Join Veterans' Day Parades

Several representatives of the Presidio will participate in the San Francisco Veterans' Day parade Sunday, 11 November. The group will assemble at 1130 hours in the area immediately west of Market Street on Embarcadero.

Presidio personnel will observe Veterans' Day on Monday, 12 November. All duties except necessary guard and fatigue will be suspended.

Military groups which will parade are the 21st Engineer Company from the 30th Engineer Group, Sixth Army Band, Sixth Army Colors, marching units from Co. A 6002 and the 30th Engineer Group colors.

Veterans' Day became a legal holiday under the name of Armistice Day in 1938. The date of 11 November was chosen because it commemorated the end of World War I hostilities.

The Unknown Soldier, who is especially remembered on Veterans' Day, was buried in Arlington Cemetery in 1921.

Two years ago Congress changed the name of the holiday to Veterans' Day as a tribute to those who served not only during World War I, but also World War II and the Korean War. It also honors those who continue to serve in peacetime.

Veterans' Day, which is dedicated to world peace, is to be distinguished from Memorial Day, which honors those who lost their lives in the service of the United States in all wars.

CG Veterans' Day Message

On 11 November, Veterans' Day, we pause to pay deep tribute to the veterans, both in and out of the military service, who risked or gave their lives so that America could remain free and strong.

Within recent days, we have seen American citizens exercise their priceless privilege of voting in free elections while many other peoples throughout the world continue to be ground down under Communist oppression.

The current tragic events in other parts of the world merely repeat age-old lessons of history. The privilege of freedom for any country can only be assured by the strength, devotion, and courage of its people.

We, who are privileged to wear the uniform of our country and to carry on the glorious traditions established by the veterans of America's history, must be prepared to protect our beloved country if the need should arise. Because aggressors attack the weak, we must maintain our ready strength as a "Power for Peace."

New Army Contract

For further development and production of electronic military equipment, the Army has recently awarded contracts amounting to a total of approximately $35 million to the Reytheon Manufacturing Company of Waltham, Mass.

Approximately $6 million of the total will be used for plant preparation and tooling up.

NGs Man Half Of U.S. Nike Sites

Half of the Army's Nike guided missile sites in the continental United States eventually will be manned by National Guard antiaircraft units, according to Lt. Gen. Stanley R. Mickelsen, chief of the Army AA Command.

Although such a move has been discussed in general terms by Army and Guard officials, Gen. Mickelsen's announcement both confirmed the idea and gave the first concrete figure on the expected degree of Guard participation.

Gen. Mickelsen also said that no new sites will be built specifically for 90 mm guns. Instead, sites will be built which can be used for one of the Army's rapidly growing arsenal of Nike-type guided missiles.

On Veterans' Day

Gaunt echoes from your silent tread
Steal 'cross our fields and bays,
As down the corridors of hope
You march to deathless frays.

And quietly are your flags unfurled,
With guns at ready, still,
You stand the endless watch of time
On Freedom's pitted hill.

For your's is triumph in the right
To sing, to love, to rise,
Above the callous boot of might,
And grasp the vaunted skies.

Your gift has been of rare old coin,
Struck from all hearts that pray
That liberty will 'compass all,
On some future Veterans' Day.

AA, Engineers Ahead In Area Crusade Drive

The 30th Engineer Group, 30th AAA Group, headquarters units of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command and four Nike and gun battalions in the Bay area have topped their Bay Area Crusade goals.

The tentative closing date of the drive is 13 November, the next civilian payday. The Presidio goal is $36,015.

The 6th AA Regional Command, the 30th AAA Group and the Nike outfits contributed $8,135, topping their assigned quota of $6,600 by $1,535.

Contributions from the 30th Engineer Group totaled $2,957.54. Its goal was $2,792.62.

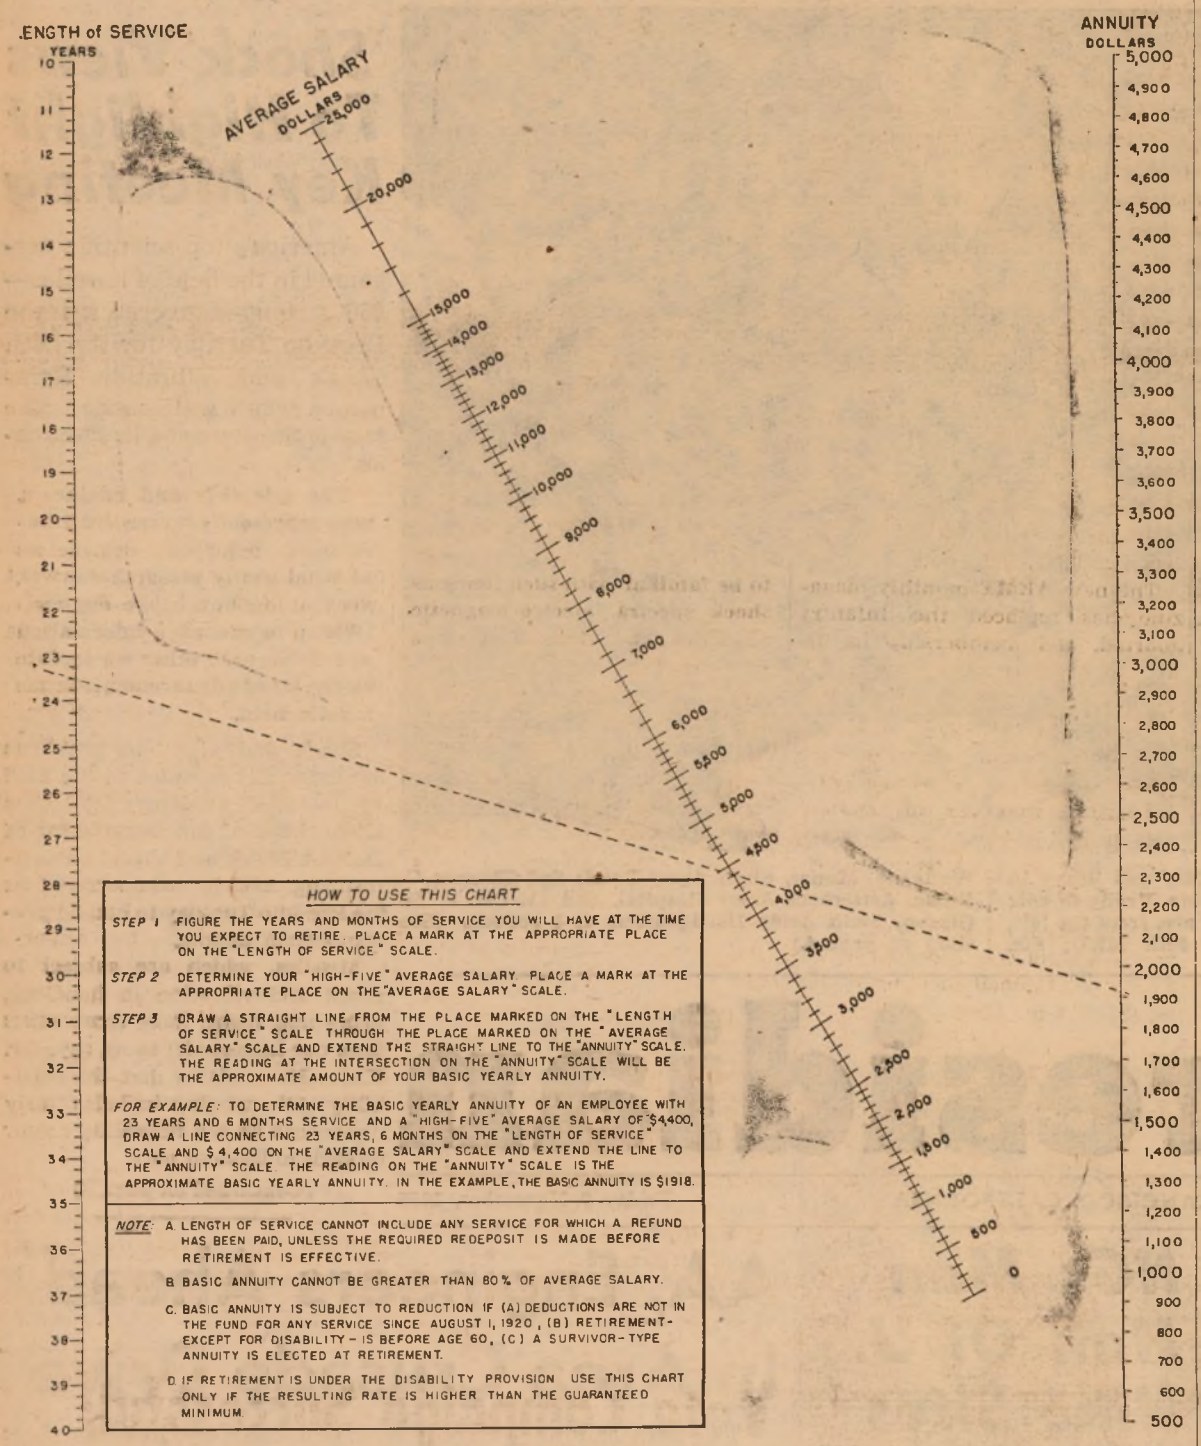
Reserve Units Seek Civilian Clerk Typists

A Civil Service examination for male Clerks (typing) to fill Army Reserve Unit Administrative Clerk positions throughout Northern California has been announced by the Department of Army. The positions pay $3670 a year.

Persons appointed will serve as representatives of the Commanding Officers for one or more Army Reserve Units and may be required to attend summer encampment with the unit. Reserve membership is desired but not required.

Applicants must pass a written test; must have at least three years of general office experience; and military experience in administrative or personnel work is desirable.

Applications are now being accepted by the Army and Air Force Board of Civil Service Examiners, Old Mint Building, 5th and Mission Streets, San Francisco 3, California.



DPC's Veterans' Day Message

On Sunday, 11 November, citizens throughout these United States will participate in ceremonies honoring their war veterans, men and women who have so successfully defended the ramparts of freedom down through the years. It is tragic, indeed, that as we pause in tribute to these sons of freedom, we once again stand on the threshold of crisis, crisis in an age of accelerated destruction. Yet what could be more fitting than that in these times of grave stress we bow to the defenders of all our yesterdays. Bright warriors, without whom there would be no today, and little hope for tomorrows. It should give us pride and sustaining courage to know that our destiny has been, and will ever be, in the hands of such staunch men and women. We of the Presidio salute each and every one of you as the "bright warriors" of our past and future.

Civil Service Commission Explains Annuity Benefits

Annuity benefits under the Civil Service Retirement Act based on separation from service on or after 1 October, 1956, have been announced by the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

All retiring employes must have at least five years of civilian service with the Government and must have been employed under the Retirement Act for at least one year out of the last two years preceding final separation unless retiring because of total disability.

Immediate retirement is based on the following minimum age, minimum service and special requirements. No special requirements are listed when retiring at 62 after five years of service or at 55 or 60 after 30 years of minimum service.

If retiring after 25 years of service at any age or after 20 years of service at 50 years of age, separation must be involuntary without cause. If retiring at any age under 62 after five years of service, the individual must be totally disabled for service in the position he occupies.

If the general service requirements are met and the individual is separated from the Federal service for any reason before he is eligible for immediate retirement, he may receive an annuity when he becomes 62 years old.

The amount of annuity depends upon the "high-5" average salary and length of service. The "high-5" salary is the highest average annual salary produced by the individual's basic salary rates during any five consecutive years of service. Within-grade periodic pay increases are part of the basic salary, but additional pay, such as overtime and allowances, are not.

The length of service figured in years and months includes all periods of Federal service, including creditable military service. This does not include any period for which a refund of retirement deductions has been paid unless the refund with interest has been redeposited.

The approximate amount of each individual's basic annuity can be figured by using the Civil Service Annuity Chart. Basic annuity cannot be more than 80 per cent of the "high-5" average salary. If it is more, the 80 per cent figure should be used as basic annuity.

Basic annuities are reduced if the individual is retiring before 60 years of age, except if retirement is for total disability; if the individual has civilian service after 31 July, 1920, during which no retirement deductions were made from the salary and for which no deposit has been made; or if a survivor type of annuity is selected.

Info Topic Points Services

One of a series of information topics on staff agency services available to the soldier, this week's troop talk, Army Medical Facilities and Services for the Soldier, will outline the mission of the local Army Medical Corps.

Purpose of the topic is to familiarize Presidio personnel with the local medical facilities available to them and the proper procedures for making use of them.

Most of the materials for the talk were obtained through personal interviews with personnel of the Presidio Dispensary and Letterman Army Hospital.

While this week's talk is concerned with medical services for the soldier himself, a second talk, scheduled for 4 December, will outline provisions for his dependents.

Other talks in the series have dealt with Special Services, the Post Exchange, the Inspector General, legal aid, the Army Emergency Relief and the Red Cross.

"This is a sophisticated program," notes Dr. Klein, explaining that many who attend will be disappointed because "it will be over their heads." Members of the symposium are expected to be familiar with such items as shock spectra, electro-magnetic shakers and dimensionless damping parameters.

The symposium will formally open 0930 hours Tuesday at the Post Theater with a welcoming address by Maj. Gen. Riley F. Ennis, Sixth Army Deputy Commanding General. After the morning session the symposium will become a two-ring show with parallel sessions at the Post Theater and Harmon Hall. Shuttle busses will transport scientists between points.

A "highbrow debate" will be held Tuesday evening to discuss Random Versus Sinusoidal Vibration Testing. Dr. Art Warner, who will preside over this meeting, and Dr. B. O. Koopman, who will act as moderator, represent the Weapons Systems Evaluation Group of the Department of Defense.

Men representing over 200 projects will attend the symposium. Under ordinary circumstances clearance restrictions would prevent a scientist on one project to discuss the common problem with someone on another prjoect. "But here we bring them together under a common clearance—they can find out what has been done and what needs to be done," says Dr. Klein.

The pressure of today's missile race often requires science and industry to produce missiles before it is known whether they will work. This expensive, but necessary, procedure is done by anticipating the answers to problems that have not yet been solved, states Dr. Klein.

Next week's symposium will insure that problems do not have to be solved twice. The importance of such a meeting can be estimated by considering the expense in time and money involved in taking 650 of the nation's top missile men off their projects for four days — two meeting, two traveling—for this Presidio symposium.

Dr. Klein, who has handled all 24 of these Department of Defense symposiums, is an old visitor to the Presidio. In 1951 he handled the 18th symposium here. It, too, concerned missiles.

Vote Campaign Successful; Soldiers Jam Local Polls

The large soldier vote in this week's election—both by absentee ballot and by voting machine—was the result of a long and concerted effort on the part of Army information outlets to make every individual aware of his voting responsibility.

For the past six months the Star Presidian has, weekly, mentioned one or another phase of voting. All told more than 25 separate stories and items totaling 369 inches of copy have been devoted to this one topic.

A series of articles on How to Register in Your State ran in the Star Presidian which—one by one—itemized the specific voting requirements for each state. Every Presidio serviceman had exact information on how to register, and apply for his home state ballot.

Editorials run in the Star Presidian pointed out each American's voting heritage and explained each individual's responsibility to go to the polls.

Information on the 1956 Freedoms Foundation letter awards program whose topic this year is "My Vote—Freedom's Privilege," was repeatedly publicized.

And all current news concerning voting was given important emphasis in the Army newspaper So when it came time to vote at the Presidio — the troops turned out in full force.

Hold It! says San Francisco Examiner photographer Frank J. Sayers, ready to photograph "Star Presidian" Feature Editor Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon, who has the distinction (besides being red headed and from Ireland) of voting for the first time in Tuesday's election. Sergeant O'Hanlon, who on prior voting days has either been in transit or overseas, is busy studying her voting manual.

Poster Depicts Sixth Army Action

One of the crucial actions of World War II occurred on 20 October, 1944, when four divisions of the U. S. Sixth Army poured across the beaches of Leyte Gulf in the Philippines. They were part of a vast land-sea-air team under the supreme command of General Douglas MacArthur. In this, as in all large-scale amphibious operations, the success or failure of the whole effort depended on whether the initial assault forces could take, hold, and eventually break out of the beachhead area.

Enemy resistance increased sharply as the Sixth Army troops pushed inland through difficult terrain. Bad weather hampered the much needed air support and bogged down supply activities. Despite these difficulties, Leyte was taken. The stage was now set for the final decisive moves against the Empire of Japan.

The landing on Leyte is the subject of one of the posters in the Department of the Army's U. S. Army in Action series, which units may obtain through normal distribution. Individuals may order them (as a set or singly) from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C. The Leyte poster, entitled "Follow Me," is DA Poster 21-43. The price is 15 cents per copy. (ANS)

New Officer Efficiency Reports Due

New officer efficiency reports, which go into effect 1 January, 1957, after nearly five years of study, will provide for a reviewing officer "to be personally charged with examining any reports found to be unusual, adverse or controversial."

In announcing the new form, the Army defended the present form as "basically sound." However, the new DA Form 67-4, which contains eight sections, as compared to five in the present DA Form 67-3, represents a complete revision.

The reviewing officer is provided for in Section III in the new form. He would normally be the one who rates the indorsing officer, and would insure that normal rater-indorser channels have been followed.

Making inquiry into any unusual circumstances surrounding a rendition of the report, the reviewing officer might refer the report to the rated, rating, and/or indorsing officer for comment as appropriate. He might initiate action toward reassignment of the rated officer. Or he could forward the report with appropriate comments to DA.

The new system is designed to "focus attention of senior officers upon officer personnel management within their organizations and should reduce the number of reports which must be returned to the field by DA for adjudication or administrative corrections."

Current emphasis on physical conditions is reflected in Section II of the new form which requires comment on the rated officer's "present physical ability to perform in time of war the duties required of his grade and branch."

To better reflect the rating officer's opinion of the officer he is rating, a choice of six word descriptions are provided to describe level of performance.

The rating Unk (unknown) can now be given which will not penalize the rated officer. Other ratings are: O—unsatisfactory, 1—satisfactory, 2—very satisfactory, 3—excellent, 4—superior, and 5—outstanding.

Jobs for which the officer may be rated mentioned in the revised form, which have no comparable entry in the old form, include: Serve abroad in an assignment requiring contact with foreign forces and/or foreign governments, serve in an assignment requiring appreciation of good public relations and serve in an assignment requiring expression, either written or oral.

Section V of the new form lists 14 traits, qualities and characteristics from which the rater must indicate three in the order that they are most pronounced. He may also list four others as pronounced, and he may list three that he feels are least pronounced in the officer.

The rating characteristics include the following: Able to influence and direct others, well grounded and informed, makes practical decisions, sound judgment and common sense, courage of his convictions, strong initiative, accepts responsibility, gets along well with people, can work with minimum supervision, loyal to superiors, teamworker, always sets the example, delegates authority, and loyal to subordinates.

The last three sections of the revised report are similar in design and information to the old report.

Top Wac this month for Company D, 6002nd SU, is Pfc. Adele Tovar of Post S-1. Pfc. Tovar, a native of Cheyenne, Wyo., received the recognition for her consistent observance of military and social courtesies and an excellent efficiency rating from her section officer, Lt. Col. Archie R. Traynor. M/Sgt. David C. Hill stands by to congratulate the winner.

PX May Employ Retired Officers

Retired Regular officers are eligible to work for post exchanges and to open officer messes, according to a clarification of terms announced by the Comptroller General.

An exchange manager holds a "position" but not an "office," the Comptroller General has concluded.

Retired officers accepting such positions must limit their combined salary and retirement pay to $10,000 a year. Since the job is a Federal position, it is under the dual compensation clause of the 1932 Economy Act which limits the pay of a retired officer holding a position.

Guardsmen Choice Over Hq. Gridders For Presidio Title

Undefeated Headquarters Company Sixth Army and once-beaten Honor Guard footballers, who came on with a late season surge, square-off Wednesday for the Presidio Intramural football league championship.

The Guardsmen, well stocked with talent, rate as a one-touchdown favorite over the two-platooning Headquarters team in the clash scheduled for Fort Scott field.

Reason for the late date of the contest is the participation of the Honor Guard in the Arizona State Fair. Many of the Guardsmen's top players were put on orders to the Fair.

With such athletic notables as Norm Ellenberger, Gene Guerra, Jim Anthony and Ernie Choy leading the way, the Guardsmen, kingpins in the Western League with a 6-1 record for the season, figure to win the all-important contest.

Headquarters, which rolled through the Eastern League unbeaten in six starts, relies on a strong aerial attack for its touchdowns and the speed of receivers.

Carl Stabile and Gordon Peaks throw often—and successfully—to Ends Keith Weesner and Bob Kircher for scores and the Guardsmen can expect more of the same Wednesday.

The Guardsmen closed out their season last week by dumping the 549th Engineers from the unbeaten class, 13-0, in a thriller.

Guerra's passing arm was the major factor in the triumph. He threw to Ellenberger for the first TD in a play that covered 50 yards in the second period to give the Guardsmen a 6-0 bulge.

In the fourth stanza, with the issue still in doubt, Guerra clinched matters with a five yarder to Bob Jones who scored. Guerra then passed to Choy for the point after touchdown.

The Honor Guard gained its sixth victory via the forfeit route when oft-beaten and cellar-dwelling 660th Engineers threw in the towel.

The 549th Engineers, still in the race despite their loss to the Guardsmen, dropped out of contention for good when they lost a 13-7 tiff to the 99th Engineers. Only a Roy Scharrock to Jim Compton pass prevented a second straight shutout.

In the Eastern League, EOD forfeited to the 163rd MP Co., while the Headquarters Battery, 752nd AAA Missile Battalion and D Battery, 752nd, family fuss was cancelled because of rain.

In the Western League, the Honor Guard crushed the 542nd Engineers, 28-0; the 99th Engineers whipped winless Headquarters 660th Engineers, 40-0, and the 21st Engineers tipped the 537th Engineers, 13-8.

The 549th clash with the 99th was rained out and the 660th forfeited to the Honor Guard.

Pre-Season Cage Meet Nears End

The semi-finals of the Presidio pre-season intramural basketball tournament puts four topnotch clubs into play.

Battling for the championship will be the 30th Engineer Group against the 9th AAA Missile Battalion and 6002 SU meeting 30th AAA Missile Group.

In the quarterfinal games, D Battery, 9th AAA and Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, battled right down to the wire with a basket by Ed Parks providing the win with a last minute bucket for the 9th AAA.

Parks wound up as the leading scorer for the 9th AAA with 17 points. But Carl Stabile, who tallied 18 for Headquarters, wound up as the game's real star.

In another quarterfinal contest, 30th Engineers defeated the 163rd MP Company, 30-29, in the best of the thrilling games played. It was a double overtime with Lowell Bassett putting in the winning basket with less than a minute to play in the second overtime.

Oakland Sets Auto Show

Dates for the eighth annual National Roadster Show were set today for February 19-24 in the Oakland Exposition Building, it was reported by Mary L. Slonaker, show manager.

Exhibitors and visitors from every state in the nation once again are expected to make the "National" the biggest auto exposition of its kind.

"Competition is the keynote of the National Roadster Show," she said. "The nine-foot gold cup, said to be the largest trophy in the world, is the annual award going to the builder of the best roadster in the United States. This trophy and 50 other awards help to make the Roadster Show bigger and better each year."

Eighteen divisions of competitive exhibits each year bring to the show some of the most unusual automobiles ever designed. Cars on display include all types of customs, streamliners, dragsters, roadsters, belly tankers and special cars requiring new classification.

Cars designed and constructed by individuals rather than factory models are glorified in the unique show, it was pointed out. More than a quarter of a million visitors during the last eight years have proved the national appeal of the show and have caused Oakland to become the mecca of enthusiasts every February.

The National Roadster Show is produced each year by Crown American Company under the general direction of Galard (Al) Slonaker, president. Exhibit entries will be accepted beginning the first of December at the show office, Exposition Building, 918 Fallon Street, Oakland, California.

Still No Coach— But Wacs Win

Maybe the Presidio Wac basketballers don't need a coach after all!

Hunting high and low for a man to assume command, the local girl cagers scored their second victory in a row last week, 39-22, over Parks Air Force Base.

Although their plea for masculine help went unheeded, the Wacs, led by a number of returning veterans and some new stars, showed enough in their clash with the Wafs to be considered championship material.

Lieutenant Dorothy Crook, however, still desires a man to head the team. But so far, none have made a bid to take over.

Should any interested, basketball-minded man on Post possess the necessary qualifications, Lieutenant Crook urges him to contact her on Ext. 2667, immediately, if not sooner.

Rouge Leads Post Marksmen To Win

Presidio of San Francisco shooters, paced by Colonel Leon J. D. Rouge, of Sixth Army Headquarters, boast a triumph over two of California's top law enforcement agencies today.

With Rouge shooting for a 296 score in the Western Revolver Association matches at Oakland Army Terminal, the Presidio defeated the California Highway Patrol team and the San Francisco Police Department squad.

The Presidio shooters thus earned top honors in the meet which attracted a total of 250 shooters from 26 teams in the West. Altogether, 11 Presidio personnel participated in the matches.

Kallam fired second to Rouge with a 292, while Wade shot a 291 and Hunter a 286. Wade came in fourth in the aggregate standings with an 868 total.

Two Win Medals For Top Firing

Capt. John F. Kallam, Post S3 Section, and Sgt. David Dewey, Headquarters Co. (6000) placed in the top 10 per cent at the recent National Trophy Pistol Match. The men were awarded silver medals by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist.

The Match is sponsored by the National Board for the Promotion of Pistol and Rifle Practice for both civilians and service personnel.

The Match was held at Camp Perry, Ohio. About 950 competed against Captain Kallam and Sergeant Dewey for the top 10 honors.

Captain Kallam also received a bronze medal for leading the team which placed eighth among the 64 entered.

Fisherman's Good Deed For Salmon

The fish bore a DFG tag requesting the tag be returned to Sacramento headquarters so that accurate records could be kept of the salmons' use of the Trinity River spawning areas.

The angler complied, accompanying the tag with the information that it was "a nice big female full of eggs, which we returned to the river and fertilized with a jack salmon." Back went the word from DFG that the female had been tagged near Junction City on the Trinity earlier in the fall and thanking the sportsman for acting as midwife.

Toreros Rip Parks Quint In Season Opener At Kezar

Ahead from opening buzzer to final gun, Presidio of San Francisco's basketballing Toreros opened their 1956-57 season this week on an auspicious note.

The Toreros, giving every indication they will be northern California's top Armed Forces cage team, waltzed to an easy victory, 89-58, over Parks Air Force Base in the preliminary contest to the U.S. Olympic cagers vs. Olympic Club All-Stars clash in Kezar Pavilion.

Sparked by Carroll Williams, former San Jose State star, and Ronnie Reynoir, one-time Loyola of the South great, the Toreros forged out in front minutes after the start and maintained their advantage without trouble.

Williams, who also participated in the main event Wednesday night, potted nine field goals and five free throws for a total of 23 points to lead the way for Coach Hal Fischer's quint. Reynoir, who was an All-Sugar Bowl Tournament selection his last season as a collegian, banged in 10 field goals for 20 markers.

Reynoir and Williams also got help in the scoring parade from Norm Ellenberger who contributed 15 points to the Presidio cause.

The star-studded Presidio quint moved out in front in a hurry, building to a 48-25 halftime lead and then coasting during the second half as Fischer substituted freely.

All in all, Presidio never had cause for a worried moment, though Parks center, Gordon Sutterfield, managed to come up with 17 points, high for the Airmen, who go under the nickname of "Blue Devils."

A capacity crowd was on hand for the main event, marking the return of USF's Bill Russell and K. C. Jones to their old stomping grounds.

Big Bill and Jones, who is an Army private, sparked the American entry in the Games to a 73-54 victory over a combination of northern California college and amateur stars.

Russell delighted the crowd by banging in 18 points for the Olympians, nine of which came during a 15-point spurt in the first half that demolished the local cagers' chances for a victory.

The victory was the Olympians ninth in a row on their pre-Olympics tuneup tour of the Nation. They close out their tour in Long Beach tonight against an AAU club and depart for Australia Sunday by air.

Williams, incidentally, turned in a bangup game for the local stars against the Olympians. The close-cropped guard, who set an all time San Jose State scoring record, brought forth cheers from the crowd as he tallied eight points and kept the Olympians from running away with the contest.

Cage Ace Hired to Lead Youth Program

A former Bay area and San Francisco high school star athlete has assumed direction of Presidio youth activities, post special services announced this week.

Hired to organize and establish a youth activities program was George McLaughlin, one-time City College of San Francisco and St. Mary's College cager.

McLaughlin, who is 6-4, graduated from Sacred Heart High School in San Francisco in 1949 and went from there to City College where he played on the school's northern California junior college champship club and accompanied it to the National tournament in Kansas City.

From 1951 to 1953 he played for St. Mary's Gaels.

McLaughlin was inducted into the Army in September 1953 and eventually became a member of special services in Okinawa. He was discharged from the Army last year.

The 26-year-old cager still keeps his hand in the game. He is a member of the San Francisco Olympic Club team along with several other former college stars.

Sports Notes

Olympic Cagers Sharp

By Armed Forces Press Service

College Park, Md.—An estimated 10,000 persons were on hand at the University of Maryland field house to watch our Olympic-bound basketball team square off against a team of eastern college All-Stars recently.

For the Olympians, it was their only appearance on the East Coast while traveling across the country on a 10-game exhibition tour.

The eastern quintet, with such stars as West Virginia's Hot Rod Hundley, North Carolina's Lennie Rosenbluth and Temple's Guy Rodgers, was no match for the Olympic five. The Melbourne-bound quintet won, 82-62.

The Olympic squad's BIG weapon is 6-foot 10-inch Bill Russell, a defensive giant who also can hit from inside almost at will. Although the former University of San Francisco ace had an off night in the scoring department (he only got 10 points—two field goals) he was his usual terror on defense, grabbing 18 rebounds and making it rough for anyone who dared to shoot close by.

The close man-to-man defense thrown up by Olympic Coach Gerald Tucker of the Phillips Oilers was tighter than an over-zealous party-goer on New Year's Eve. The club's defensive prowess is going to make it mighty rough for the opposition at Melbourne.

The All-Stars set up a 2-1-2 defense, which forced the Olympians to shoot from outside. And that's just what they did. Stanford's 6-foot 4-inch Jim Walsh popped in 26 and K. C. Jones, Russell's running mate at USF who is now in the Army, tossed in 11.

Meanwhile—back in the garage—Hot Rod was going through the motions of pleasing the fans. The clever ball handler didn't play much because there were 19 others on the bench. He got only two points but what he lacked in scoring he made up for in chuckles.

The game indicated that the team is equipped to come home with the Olympic title, repeating America's performance at the '36, '48 and '52 Games.

Boston — Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox was the last big leaguer to hit .400 or better when he batted .406 in 1941.

Armed Forces Send 77 Stars To XVI Olympiad In Australia

Melbourne—The United States has sent more than 300 athletes—77 of them from the Armed Forces—to the 1956 Olympic Games at Melbourne, Australia, 22 November to 8 December.

Servicemen will compete in basketball, boxing, canoeing, cycling, fencing, gymnastics, modern pentathlon, pistol and rifle shooting, rowing, soccer, swimming and diving, track and field, water polo, weight lifting, wrestling and yachting.

One Armed Forces athlete, Lt. (jg) William Andre—former Dartmouth College luminary who is assigned to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. — is a member of both the modern pentathlon (five events) and the fencing teams.

The XVI Olympiad will get under way with the traditional carrying of the Olympic torch. The flaming symbol will be flown from Athens to Cairns, on the northeastern coast of Australia—2,750 miles north of Melbourne. At this point, a relay team of runners—one for each mile—will carry the torch down the coast to the Olympic site.

In September, 1954, the Secretary of Defense appointed a "Department of Defense Committee on International Sports Competitions," with representatives from all the services. Congress gave official support to servicemen's participation in the Olympics, and as a result the Armed Forces have provided opportunity for interested servicemen to train and try out for the U.S. team that will journey "Down Under." Career Objectives

Chairman Young States Key Needs

Maintaining an adequate supply of managerial talent is one of the foremost problems facing Government and industry, according to Philip Young, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission.

The Federal service objective is to maintain a consistent movement of administrators up a clearly defined career ladder, in accordance with their individual capacities, Young said.

Career staffing must establish conditions that will foster the development of individuals in the service who have the potential ability to fill career posts.

Conditions are development and training programs, a practical promotion system without political interference and incentives such as adequate financial returns and assignments that will hold promising people now in service and attract newcomers.

TV, Radio To Feature Army Song This Sunday

The new Army song, "The Army Goes Rolling Along," will be featured on radio and television programs Veterans' Day, Sunday 11 November.

Goodyear Playhouse features the song on that day, using the US Army Field Band Chorus, as a dramatic highlight in their color production entitled "Stardust II." This telecast is kinescoped and will appear on NBC-TV at 2100 hours (EST).

The NBC radio program, Monitor, will have three live sequences at approximately 1515, 1535 and 1550 hours (EST). These productions will feature the US Army Band and the US Army Chorus, with an introduction by Secretary of the Army Brucker.

CBS radio network program, "Sunday Desk," is carrying a message regarding the new Army song by the Army Secretary at 1730 hours, accompanied by a band and chorus rendition of the song.

Deliver New Jet 'Copters For Army Aviation Test

First deliveries of the Army's new rotor tip propelled ram-jet helicopter, the YH-32, have been made to the Army Aviation Test Board, Fort Rucker, Ala., Department of the Army announced this week.

Four of the 12 YH-32s ordered by the Army and developed by Hiller Helicopters, Inc., Palo Alto, will undergo extensive field tests by the Army Aviation Test Board.

The other eight "choppers" are scheduled for delivery to other field installations in the near future. As yet Sixth Army Aviation Section has received no word on whether it will receive a YH-32.

The YH-32 is a two-place, side-by-side, two-blade single main rotor helicopter, powered by two ram-jet engines developing approximately 40 pounds of thrust each. The 12-pound engines, which have no moving parts, are CAA certified.

Flight controls consist of a conventional cyclic stick control, collective pitch lever and directional control pedals. The latter control the pitch of the single-blade, counter-balanced tail rotor.

The main rotor assembly is driven by a ram-jet engine mounted on the tip of each of the two main rotor blades which are rigidly connected to the rotor hub. The tail rotor and accessories are driven from the power take-off of the main rotor column.

Air frame construction is basically a welded tube frame on which an accessory mounting beam is attached to provide fittings and brackets for mounting the fiberglass cloth tail boom structure, fiberglass enclosure, fairing and plexiglass forward windshield.

High fuel consumption of ram-jet engines limits the YH-32 to extremely short range operation. Flight endurance without refueling is approximately one-half hour.

The value of the YH-32 rests in its use as a test vehicle for proving new design concepts. A significant feature of the YH-32 is its extensive use of fiberglass in the fuselage for structural and non-structural parts. Both the principle of the tip propulsion and the use of fiberglass for major components have possible applications in larger aircraft of the future.

Thumb Pointing Taboo Says Reg

Don't stick out that thumb, soldier, hitch hiking is not permitted!

The regulation further explains "No person who accepts a ride in any vehicle upon a highway has any right of action for civil damages against the driver of such vehicle on account of personal injury to or the death of the person who accepts such ride."

"The solicitation of rides (hitch hiking) on public highways and thoroughfares in any manner whatsoever, or by standing or walking on the traveled portion in the direction of traffic is unmilitary, a discredit to the service, a violation of State law, and is prohibited by the Army," says the regulation.

Unrest May Force Red About Face

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

"The Hungarian Rebellion might force the masters of the Kremlin to return to the "iron fist" policies of Stalinism; overthrow "moderationist" Nikita Krushchev; curtail or wipe out Poland's new found nationalism and renew efforts to suppress Titoism everywhere."

At the Presidio for retirement at the end of this month, General Stokes has long been considered one of the military's top observers of "police indoctrination" by the Communists in satellite countries. He was formerly military attache in Budapest from '46 to '49 and was later called to testify before the Congressional Committee on Communist Aggression in 1954.

It was during this testimony that Gen. Stokes produced a "memo of record" (cleared by G-2) for the committee. Both the memo and the general's testimony were read into the Congressional Record and reprinted in various language newspapers in this country and abroad.

General Stokes has been labeled "an enemy of the People's Republic of Hungary" because of the Communist-forced confession of Robert Vogeler. Vogeler named him head of an imaginary spy ring in Budapest.

Maj. Gen. John L. Stokes

A deep, personal friend of Joseph Cardinal Mindzenty, imprisoned for eight years until freed during the recent rebellion and now in refuge in the American Legation in Budapest, General Stokes says the ailing prelate is the most venerated man in Hungary.

The general cites three major causes for the current revolt in Hungary; 1) Hopelessness of life in a police state. 2) Failure of Communist propaganda to win the nation's young people. 3) An intense and deep hatred by the Magyars for everything Russian.

He thinks the East Germans may be the next satellite slave state to rebel against their Red masters.

General Stokes further believes that this side of Russia there is little prospect for the Moscow brand of World Communism.

"There is bound to be a breakdown of Communism in countries that have once enjoyed the better things of life. Only among peoples who have never known anything but Communism, or a form of rule more severe, can the Reds hope to retain blind obedience."

"And even though economic interests may continue to parallel for some years to come, basic national and racial differences will eventually bring about a breach and prevent any fulfillment of the Marxist dream."

As for any type of revolt in Russia proper, Gen. Stokes feels this is only wishful thinking.

"Under Communism, the Russians have obtained a certain amount of social and economic security in a world that they have always feared. Since they have never known anything better, they are satisfied."

General Stokes emphasized that the above views are his own and should in no way be construed as official or as reflecting Department of the Army policy.

A former chief of staff for Sixth Army, General Stokes' last assignment was as chief, Military History, Army Special Staff Section, Washington, D.C.

He will join a former West Point classmate, Major General Walter J. Muller, deputy commanding general, Sixth Army, in retirement ceremonies at the Presidio on 30 November.. Following. military honors, a reception will be held at the Presidio Officers' Mess for the retiring generals.

Reduce Promotions To Quarterly Basis

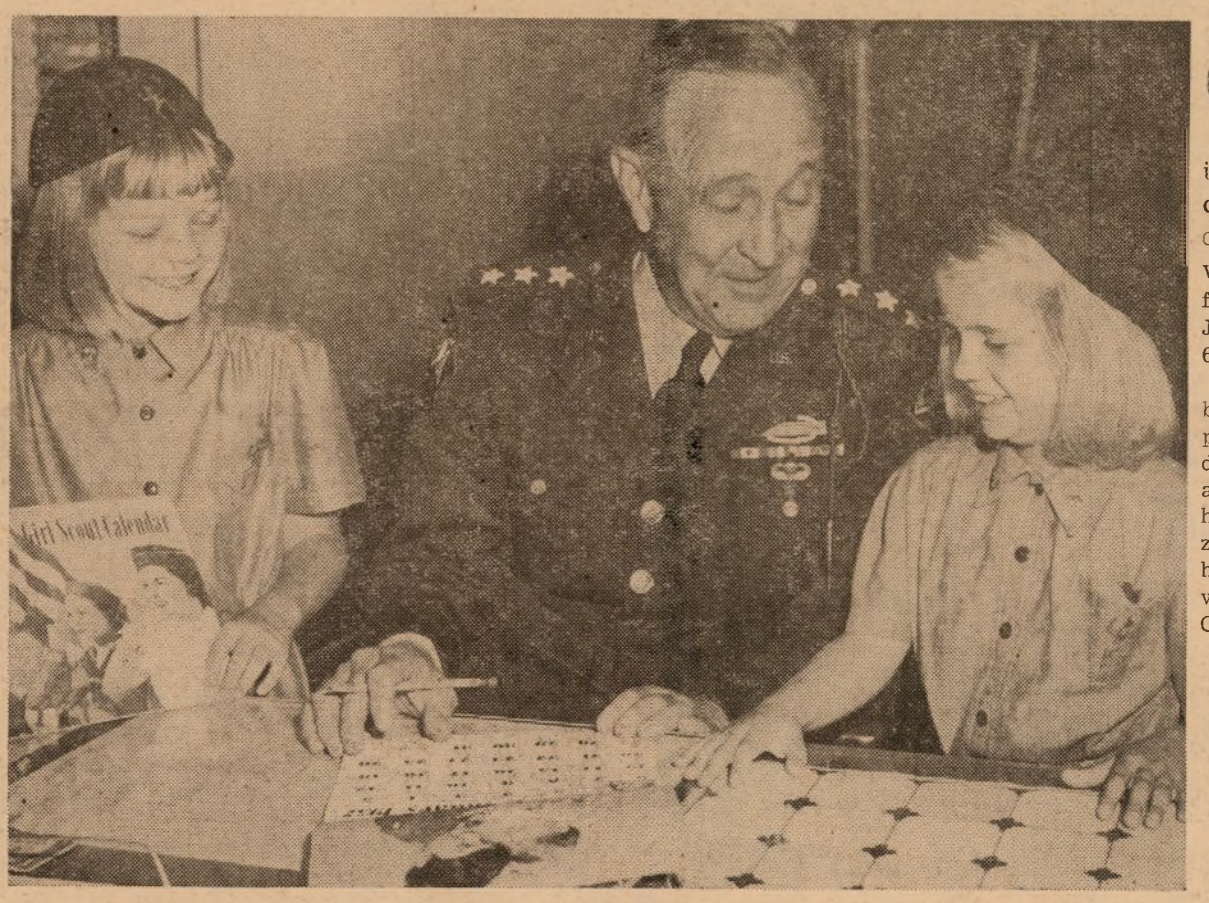
Say New Policy Will Speed Pay And Promotion

Army promotions starting this month will come down in quarterly instead of monthly allotments, Sixth Army Headquarters announced today.



The advantage of the new policy, according to a Sixth Army spokesman, is that enlisted men will get promotions and pay raises earlier —at the beginning of each quarter.

The current allotment covers November and December. But starting with the new year, promotion allocations will be handed down on a three month basis. They will come on the 10th of January, April, July and October.

Promotions for E-3 remain on a monthly basis for this month and next. Men who on 1 November and 1 December have completed 10 month's service are authorized pro-

Discharges Will Depend On Own Unit

The Army this year will issue Christmas present discharges and separations to officers and enlisted personnel whose normal release date falls between 21 December and 6 January, according to DA Circular 635-14.

Personnel in this category may be released during the 11-day period, 11-21 December. Just when during this span that soldiers will actually be released depends on how soon the individual's organization allows him to process and how heavy is the transfer point work load, according to 1st Lt. Cecil M. Hunt, Post Transfer OIC.

"Last year we had the majority out in the first half of the period, and we'll do the same this year if we can," states Lieutenant Hunt. He explains that personnel whose normal ETS falls during this period will, of course, receive first consideration.

Approximately 100 soldiers were released early "for the convenience of the government" last year, says Sfc. Edward J. Larin, Post Transfer Point. However, the figure may be much greater this year, he explains, because of the high number of volunteer draftees who went into the service in January 1955 to be eligible for the GI Bill.

This release policy will apply only to those who are in the Continental United States or its terri-

Army Radiation Center Set For Sharpe General Depot

Sharpe General Depot at Stockton, Calif., will house the U.S. Army Ionizing Radiation Center, according to Wilbur M. Brucker, Secretary of the Army, and Lewis L. Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Construction is expected to begin during this fiscal year and the center is slated to be in operation late in 1958.

The Army Corps of Engineers will build the center. Its operations will be directed by the Quartermaster Research and Development Command at Natick, Mass.

The center's first purpose will be to develop methods of utilizing ionizing radiation to preserve foods and to determine the economic feasibility of such a process.

A $3,000,000 nuclear reactor and related equipment will be designed and constructed for the center by the AEC. The reactor will be a water-moderated type with solid fuel elements, and will be a source of intense gamma radiation for use in experiments with foods and other materials. A preliminary design concept is being completed by the Inter-Nuclear Co. of Clayton, Miss.

Other facilities will include a high energy particle accelerator to be procured by the Quartermaster Corps, and office, laboratories and processing and storage areas constructed by the Corps of Engineers. Estimated cost of the additional facilities is $4,500,000.

Included were Rep. Harold C. Outertag (R-N.Y.); Rep. George W. Andrews (D-Ala.); Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young; Rep. George H. Mahon (D-Tex.), and Samuel Crosby, staff member.

Posthumous Belgian Award Highlights Retreat Parade

The Belgian Croix de Guerre with Palm, awarded to the late Lt. Col. William J. Wynn, will be presented to his youngest son at 1600 hours today in a ceremony on the main parade ground.

The Consul General of Belgium, W. Van Cauwenberg, will present the award to Frank Wynn, 41 Catalpa Ave., Mill Valley, Calif. Maj. Gen. John H. Stokes, Jr., Sixth Army Deputy Commander, will represent Sixth Army Headquarters as reviewing officer. Some 600 Presidio troops will pass in review.

The medal was awarded Colonel Wynn in 1946, but it had not been formally presented to him before his death in Germany in 1949. The inscription reads ". . . For exceptional services of war rendered to Belgium in the course of the liberation of its territory and of its defense (1944-1945)."

A native of Little Falls, Minn., Colonel Wynn was commissioned a second lieutenant in November, 1940. He was graduated from The Adjutant General School and The Command and General Staff School.

During World War II Colonel Wynn served in France, Belgium, Luxembourg, The Netherlands and Germany. He was assigned to the Presidio from 1945-1949.

Sing You

Soldier Choruses Are Encouraged

The Army is encouraging all its bandmasters throughout the world to feature vocal soloists and choral ensembles with their individual concert organizations.

According to DA Circular 28-28, necessary rehearsal time will be allotted for band choruses. The Army points out that vocal soloists and choral ensembles singing the traditional national and service-associated songs, raises the espirit de corps and morale of the troops.

Soloists and choral groups enhance the spectator appeal of band programs and through these activities Army bands stimulate soldiers to sing unit and patriotic songs while on the march. (ANS)

Wyman Says Defense Key Is 'Full Time Americans'

General Willard G. Wyman—the Commanding General of the Continental Army Command—told the Association of the United States Army at its annual meeting recently that: "National defense knows no profession—only full time Americans!"

Addressing the members, General Wyman said, "The interest in the vital role of the Army to the nation's security which has brought us together and motivated our association far transcends the mundane concerns of any vocation or occupation.

"Where national defense is concerned, there is no distinction whatsoever between the best interests of the professional soldier, the ex-soldier, the part-time soldier, or the patriotic civilian!

"Where national defense is concerned, we are all full-time Americans!"

General Wyman pointed out that outstanding contributions to national defense have been made by public servants who have never worn a uniform. He stated that among persons present were many representatives of the press and industry whose only qualification for membership in the Army Association was their dedicated interest in the preservation of the United States against any and every kind of enemy strategy, threat, or employment of armed force.

"So I repeat," said the general, "National defense knows no profession—only full time Americans!" (ANS)

Civilian Musicians May Enlist For Band School

New procedures allow civilian musicians to enlist in the Army as bandsmen and train at the Army Element of the United States Naval School of Music after finishing basic combat training.

Under new changes outlined in AR 601-223, local Army Recruiters will arrange for a civilian musician applicant to be auditioned by the bandmaster of a nearby Army Band.

If the musician applicant passes the audition he is given a letter containing his score and a recommendation to the Army Recruiter that he be enlisted into the Regular Army as an unassigned bandsman.

Upon completion of his basic combat training the bandsman will be enrolled in the School of Music, which is located in Washington, D. C. The range of subjects studied there, as in prominent civilian conservatories, extends from dance orchestra fundamentals through theory, harmony, ear training, symphonic literature, and concert band techniques.

New Missile Tester Shown Army Experts

A guided missile testing machine that makes hundreds of pre-flight tests on missiles in minutes has been demonstrated to Army officers.

The tester, built by Sperry Gyroscope Co., is called RACE (Rapid Automatic Checkout Equipment). It uses computer elements to check all units of the missile system and to provide necessary maintenance and supply information.

The machine pinpoints the faulty component, flashes its location and replacement time on a console screen and delivers a computer punch card that spots the plug-in replacement for technicians.

The tests take hours when done by conventional means.

Supreme Court

Rechecks Civilian Court Martial

The U.S. Supreme Court has agreed to reconsider the question of whether military courts have the right to try civilians who accompany the Armed Forces overseas.

Last year the court upheld the statute which makes persons serving with, employed by or accompanying the Armed Forces overseas, subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

The present statute makes civilian employees, members of service families, and others, subject to trial by court martial for crimes committed in foreign lands.

Senior Institute!

War College Will Mark 55th Year

The Army War College, senior institute of the Army educational system, opens its 55th year in existence this month.

Closed during World War I hostilities and for 10 years during and after World War II, the college was reopened at Fort Leavenworth in 1951. Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, former Commanding General of the Sixth Army, became the school's Commandant when classes were resumed.

Established in 1901 by Elihu Root, then Secretary of War, the college specializes in the training of higher echelon officers. Its permanent home is now at Carlisle Barracks, Penn.

Key Executive Lauds Incentive Awards Program

One of the greatest values of the incentive awards program is that it lets the American people know the high caliber and dedication of their public employes, according to John W. Macy, Jr., Executive Director of the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

Incentive awards should be tied in with other programs, Macy emphasized. Among the programs that would profit from such coordination are work simplification, safety, recruitment and community relations.

The most significant development under the new program has been the increase in employe participation. The number of suggestions offered rose from 181,000 in 1954 to 217,000 in 1955 and exceeded 294,000 in 1956.

New History Issue

The Signal Corps' preparation for war is described in the 32nd volume of the Army's World War II historical series.

"The Signal Corps: The Emergency," the first of three books on the Signal Corps, is available for $3.50.

Orders should be addressed to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C.

No Stateside Duty

Two New Films On Japan, Reds

Two films, "You in Japan" and "Communist Weapon of Allure," have been released by the Office of Armed Forces Information and Education.

The movie on Japan offers a quick orientation on Japan today. It emphasizes the strategic importance of that country to the United States and to the Communist bloc.

In the film on communism, Dr. Warren B. Walsh, professor of history and active in the Russian Studies Program at Syracuse University, suggests that communism appeals to the emotions.

Presidio Crusade Campaign Sets New Record

New Order Will Revamp Fund Raising

Old System 'Vexing' Says DOD Study

Publicizing dollar goals and quotas and ordering "fair share" contributions have been eliminated in fund-raising campaigns among federal workers and service personnel, the White House and Department of Defense have announced.

Bases will be allowed to suggest "fair share" minimums, but the suggestions are not to imply that such contributions are ordered. Actual amounts given will not be publicized.

Envelopes will be supplied to prospective givers so that donations may be secret. Gifts will then go "intact" to the individual's chosen agency. No one will be asked to contribute to unidentified agencies.

A maximum of three solicitations will be made each year. The campaigns have been divided into Federal Service Overseas Fund Campaign, national welfare and emergency relief; service to the Armed Forces and national health agency needs for research, care of the stricken and health education.

The Federal Service Overseas campaign includes CARE, Crusade for Freedom, International Social Services, United Service Organizations, National Recreation Assn., American Social Hygiene Assn. and the United Seamen's Service.

The final group includes the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Assn., the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, Muscular Dystrophy Assns. of America, the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, National Society for Crippled Children and Adults (Easter Seal), the National Tuberculosis Assn. (Christmas Seal) and the United Cerebral Palsy Assn.

The revamped policy is the result of more than a year's study. The DOD described the old system as leading to "vexation and frustration" and "a loss of valuable on-the-job time."

Philip Young, Civil Service Commission Chairman and Presidential Advisor on Personnel Management, was appointed general supervisor of the program.

Commenting on the new plan, President Eisenhower said:

"We who work in the government want to assume our full citizens' share of voluntary support of the many worthwhile private health and welfare organizations.

"True voluntary giving is based on the personal desire of an individual to make a private donation to a specific agency for a purpose with which he is familiar and which he wants to support."

Youth Vespers Topic

The second in a series of discussions on "Communism and its Effects on the World," will be featured at this week's meeting of the Youth Vespers. The group will meet at 1700 hours, Sunday, at the Main Post Chapel. Teenagers are urged to attend.

Army Teletypers busy sending messages back to the Presidio from San Francisco Civil Defense Headquarters are observed by Adm. Albert G. Cook (Ret.), Commander of the 7th Civil Defense Sector, Mayor George Christopher, and 1st Lt. Robert J. Wallace, 30th Engineer Group Liaison Officer. Pfc. Billy McRae is busy preparing material on "Operation Quiver," the earthquake test exercise held 8 November, for transmission to 30th Group Headquarters.

Engineer Team Shows Well In SF's 'Operation Quiver'

San Francisco was hit by a paper earthquake on the night of 8 November. All of the city's disaster agencies—and the U.S. Army—immediately swung into action.

Known as "Operation Quiver," this simulated quake—supposedly the intensity of the 1906 temblor—was planned to test the preparedness of the Civilian Disaster Corps.

First military action in this exercise involved sending Army liaison officers to establish contact with the disaster area to report back to the Presidio by radio or teletype.

Minutes after notification of the earthquake, men from the 30th in a radio truck were speeding to Civil Defense Headquarters. The team arrived at the headquarters at 1720 and by 1802 hours had a teletype installed in the building and were sending messages back to the 30th Engineer Group's MARS station at the Presidio.

Directors of the disaster operation were George Christopher, Mayor of San Francisco, and Admiral Albert G. Cook (Ret.), Commander of the 7th Civil Defense Sector. They kept the Army commo team busy banging out messages.

With the emergency in hand at 2305 1st Lt. Robert J. Wallace, 30th Engineer Group Liaison Officer, and his alternate, 2nd Lt. Gerald F. Keleher, prepared to return to the Presidio. Members of the communications team included Sp2 David E. Woodbury, Pfc. Billy E. McRae and their supervisor M/Sgt. Harrison Breaux.

Col. Lawrence R. St. John, commander of the 30th Engineer Group, is responsible for assigning liaison officers to coordinate civil disaster matters in 7 of the 13 Central and Northern California counties charged to the Presidio of San Francisco. The 30th Engineers also have the task of furnishing communications between all 13 counties and the Presidio.

32 More Win New Citations For Sick Leave

Thirty-two civilians are scheduled to receive letters of commendation for accumulating 1000 or more hours of sick leave during Federal service.

Commanders of Letterman Army Hospital, Sixth Army, Post and Camp Stoneman will be issuing the letters shortly.

Sixth Army, Post and Letterman honored a total of 147 civilians who had accumulated a minimum of 1000 hours sick leave in September.

Healthy Guy is William B. Shawler, Real Property Officer with the Sixth Army Engineer Section. Bill was recently awarded a 1000-Hour Certificate for having used less than five days sick leave during 28 years of Federal employment. He has accumulated nearly 50 days (1182 hours) of sick leave during his career.

High Cost Of Carelessness!

Since 1951 more than 18,000 servicemen have died in non-combatant deaths. "Private cars" accounted for over half these deaths.

A total of 9,100 servicemen died from private auto accidents. This figure is more than one quarter of the total figure for American combat deaths in Korea.

Another 1,300 died in government military vehicle accidents. The balance of deaths were attributed largely to military aircraft accidents.

Drive Grosses 108% In Best Showing Ever

The Presidio topped its United Bay Area Crusade goal by 1.08 per cent, the Post Funds custodian announced this week. The drive ended 10 November, but some contributions are still coming in.

Grand total received was $36,673.07 which was comprised of $35,138.78 in cash and $1,534.29 in unpaid pledges.

Col. Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, was extremely well pleased with the drive's success.

"Not only was our dollar quota higher than in previous years, but we had less personnel to participate," said the Deputy Post Commander.

Col. Charles G. Rau, post executive officer and chairman of the Presidio and Sub-Post division of the drive, received a note of thanks and congratulations from Clarita N. Robinson, staff director of the Military division for the United Bay Area Crusade.

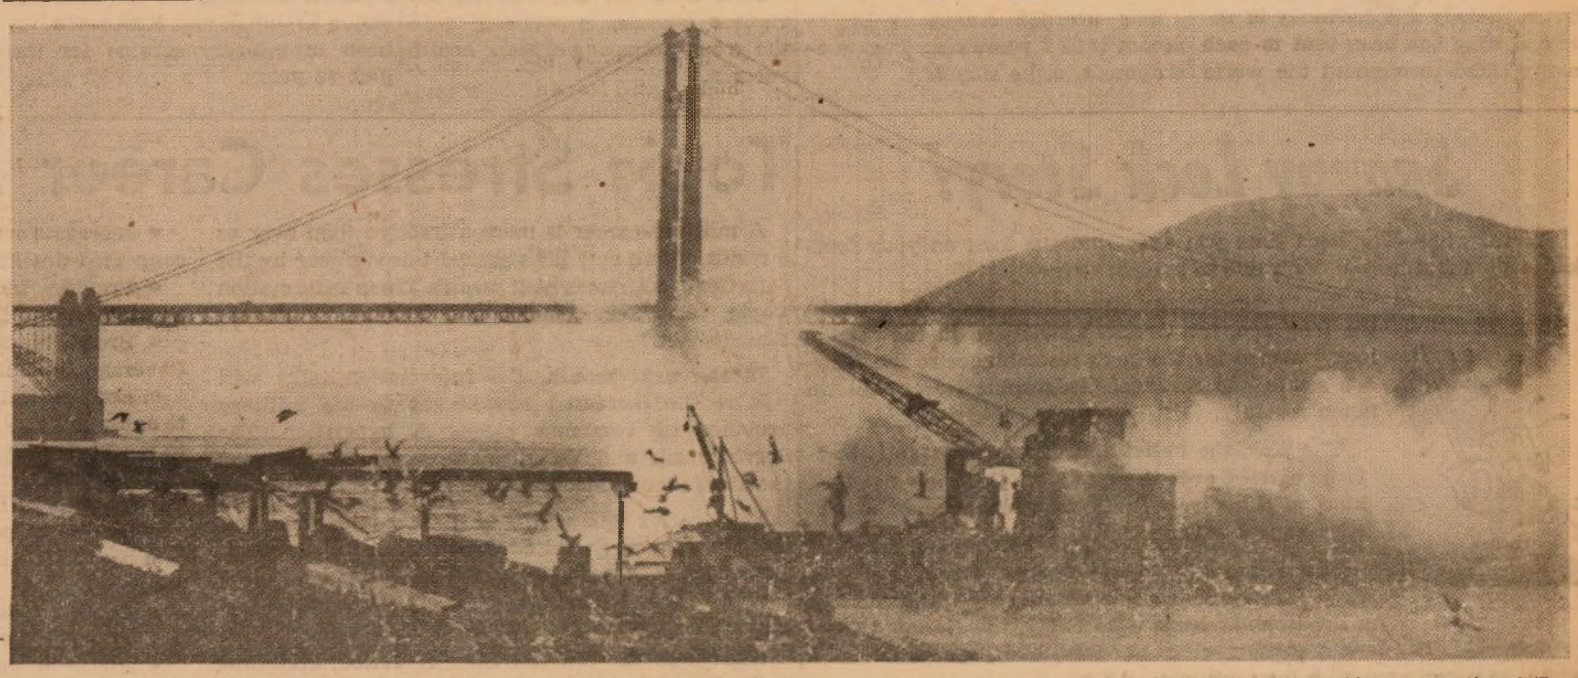
"This was a real joint effort," the colonel said. "Military and civilian alike can be proud of a worthwhile job, well done."

Forty-one military and civilian organizations reached or topped 100 per cent of their quotas. Post Ordnance with 140 per cent participation led the military groups. Post JA civilians boasted 146 per cent participation.

Chaplains led Sixth Army participation with 126 per cent. Sixth Army civilians in Section AG (56th MRU and 102nd MRU) attained 109.5 per cent.



Company "E" 6002 and 16th Base PO reached 120.6 and 120.7 per cent of goal, respectively, to lead the units. Headquarters Co. Det. 1 (6002) civilians hit 100 per cent.

Both civilians and military personnel of the Officers' Open Mess reached the 100 per cent mark.

Last year's quota was $30,000 as compared to $36,015 this year.

Army's Own Bedlam

Last Explosions reverberate over the Presidio from blasting in the Letterman Hospitall beach area. This week the 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction) finished their project of cleaning up the pilings left from the Panama-Pacific International Exposition pier. The Engineers have been off the job for over a month, while the damage to fish from explosions has been investigated.

Hardworking Team shown here is busy completing new-style health records for all Post personnel. The crew — all former members of the deactivated 505th MP Battalion — have until the first week in December to complete their project. Separate 201-type folders for medical and dental folders must be prepared by this team, which includes, from the left, Sp3 Robert L. Tattenham, Pfc. Fred H. John, Sp3 James H. Van Low and Sp3 David Hammond.

Hello! London Calling!

The world's first transoceanic telephone cable system was opened Sept. 25 when a long-distance call to London was placed in New York. Inauguration ceremonies were held concurrently in the two cities and in Ottawa.

Construction of the $42 million phone link, which can carry up to 36 conversations at the same time, was started two years ago. The major underwater section crosses the Atlantic between Clarenville, Nfld., and Oban, Scotland, a distance of 2,250 miles.

The telephone cable is the first voice link across the Atlantic and the first to span any ocean.

Telegraph cables have been operating under the north Atlantic Ocean since 1858. Today, there are 20 of them beneath the sea. (AFPS)

Band Leader Says Army Song Growing Very Popular

The Sixth Army Band is going all out to make the new official Army song the best known piece of music in the area, according to Sfc. Benjamin T. Buckley, assistant band leader.

Since 28 July, when it received instructions to emphasize "The Army Goes Rolling Along," the Band has been playing the song at all parades as well as at many off post engagements.

Transcriptions of the song have been beamed out to Army personnel in all parts of the world over Armed Forces radio and television stations.

The AFRTS Service in Los Angeles, Calif., is transcribing and distributing records of the new song, "The Army Goes Rolling Along," to all overseas stations via the "Weekly Transcription Library." The version being supplied was recorded by the U. S. Army Band and Chorus.

The song will be aired on "The Army Hour" program over the facilities of the Mutual Broadcasting System throughout the United States during the week of 13 November, 1956. Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker will officially dedicate the song on "Veterans' Day," 11 November, this year.

A lead sheet containing the lyrics, melody and harmony of the official song has been sent to each Army Band throughout the world by the Department of the Army. The song will appear soon in the new Army Song Book which is presently being staffed before publication. Although it is now undergoing some revisions, the Armed Forces Song Folio will also contain the Army's new song.

Nuclear Battle Tactics

Small units widely dispersed on the battlefront will be needed in future wars to offset the massed firepower and destructiveness of atomic weapons, according to Lt. Gen. C. D. Eddleman, deputy chief of staff for military operations.

The problems of dispersal cannot be solved by extending the space between men. Battalion-size units which can operate semi-dependently on a fluid, dispersed battlefield is the present Army conception of a basic tactical force.

Ex-MP's Battle New Enemy; Set 7 Dec. As VM Day!

There's a battle—7 against 2200—going on in the Post personnel section these days.

The seven (one woman and six former MPs) are making slow but determined headway against the overwhelming enemy. The war started last week after two days of briefing, and already this tiny band have dispatched more than 300 of the aggressors.

It takes about 10 minutes for an individual in the crew to knock off one of the enemy. The seven aren't particularly upset by the lop-sided odds; they even guarantee a complete victory by 7 Dec. 56.

Each enemy comes in two parts, health and dental. All told there are 2200 of these new style health records—one for each individual directly connected to Post—which constitute a new all-service health system.

The records look like the standard Army 201 file, and, similarly, are designed to travel with the soldier from post to post. Formerly, the health records compiled by one station were discarded after the individual transferred.

Contained within each "health" jacket will be the following items: Chronological record of medical care, abstract of service health record, immunization record and report of medical examination. The "dental" jacket contains just a health record.

Former personnel of the deactivated 505th Military Police Bn. working on Project Medical Records include Sp2 Albert L. Beck (NCOIC), Co. E (6002), and Pfc. Edward J. P. Payette, Sp3 Robert L. Tattenham, Sp3 David J. Hammond, Pfc. Fred H. Hohn and Sp3 James H. Van Lew, all from Hq. Co. (6002).

Mrs. Alice P. Boyette, officers records branch, is working with the group preparing officers' health records.

These records must be initiated and maintained for all Army military personnel on "extended" active duty, including cadets of the United States Military Academy. Change 1 of AR 40-403 outlines the effective date of implementation of this new records system.

Snappy Lock Story!

Washington—The next time you snap shut the lock on your footlocker give thanks you don't live in ancient Greece.

There weren't any streamlined padlocks then. In the long ago, the Greeks specialized in the "sickle lock," named for the key's resemblance to the reaper's sickle, the National Geographic News Bulletin noted recently.

The Key, the bulletin said, was so large it had to be carried over the shoulder. Certainly not the kind of thing you could wear on a chain along with your dog tags.

The Egyptians were probably the first to use crude pin keys and tumblers, roughly corresponding to the tumbler locks used today, the National Geographic said. The key, a straight piece of wood, had pegs on one end placed to correspond with the tumblers. (AFPS)

Topic Stresses Career Attractions

A military career is more attractive than ever as a result of two new laws passed this summer by the 84th Congress, states next week's Troop Information Topic, "The Servicemen's and Veterans' Survivor Benefits Act."

In the next month, the information talks will outline the increased advantages to the military provided by two new pieces of legislation, The Servicemen's and Veterans' Survivor Benefits and the Dependents' Medical Care Acts.

This week's talk will deal mainly with questions and answers on Social Security under the Survivor Benefits law. A second week will be spent on other aspects of this law before going on in a third session to the Dependents' Medical Care Act.

What does the law do? Simply stated, according to the information topic, the Act:

- Increases some VA payments in case of service-connected deaths, especially to widows.
- Provides for more balanced levels of payment to widows, especially in later life.
- Broadens and makes permanent Social Security Coverage for military personnel.
- Enables military personnel retired after 1956 to apply military wage credits earned after that year to Social Security benefits, as well as to apply gratuitous wage credits for active military service during 1951-56, inclusive.
- Relates Dependency and Indemnity compensation for widows to the pay attained by service members.
- Equalizes payments to survivors by eliminating distinctions between wartime and peacetime deaths.
- Places all members of the Armed Forces, Regular and Reserve, under the same survivor laws.

Presidio Service Club Slates First Mutt Show

The Post dog catcher is slated to take a sabbatical leave on the afternoon, soon to be announced, when mutts of all shapes, sizes, colors and breeds will be marched, en leash, to the Presidio Service Club by their small boy or girl owners as entries in the Presidio's First Annual Mutt Show.

On the same afternoon, the Service Club lawn is expected to bear marked resemblance to the local dog pound, while the mutts and their owners vie for show prizes in nine categories, with three separate prizes for each category and a blue ribbon for every entry.

The largest mutt and the smallest, the smelliest and the best groomed, the mutt with the greatest number of spots, with the longest tail, the most obedient and the most heedless; there will be prizes for one and all.

Entry blanks for the mutt show will be forwarded through Message Center from the Service Club to families on the Presidio. Registration for the show must be completed by 21 November when the entry blanks have to be in the hands of the Service Club hostesses.

Presidio boys and girls aged 5 to 16 are invited to register their mutts and take part in the show on the afternoon, soon to be announced.

Guardsmen Tip Hq. Company For Presidio Grid Crown, 13-6

Ellenberger, Guerra Star In Triumph

The Honor Guard, capturing a shaky victory in their showdown battle with Headquarters Company Sixth Army, is the Presidio's Intramural Football League championship team today.

The Guardsmen, favored over Headquarters Company by one touchdown in pre-game ratings, took the victory by the expected margin, 13-6, Wednesday on the Fort Scott Field.

As expected, Gene Guerra and Norm Ellenberger, the Guardsmen's top touchdown getters all season, once again sparked their team to the win, although the smaller, but fast, Headquarters men battled the inevitable right down to the final gun.

Headquarters Company left the field muttering over some official's rulings that went against them during the contest. They may protest the game on a basis of misunderstanding of rules, it was reported.

The Guardsmen went out in front early in the clash, worried as Headquarters Company scored late in the first half to pull within one point of the lead, and then iced the tilt after the intermission.

Guerra figured in all the Guardsmen scoring. He fired one pass to Ellenberger for a score and ran over the clincher himself. Ernie Choy tallied the point after touchdown for the Honor Guard.

The Guardsmen scored their first touchdown early in the going when Ellenberger took a Guerra aerial into paydirt and Choy made good the PAT. That gave the Honor Guard a 7-0 bulge.

Gordon Peaks made good a pass to Bob Kircher that covered 25 yards. The Headquarters team failed in the PAT attempt when a pass was blocked.

The victory was the seventh in eight starts for the Honor Guard, while the loss represented Headquarters Company's first defeat in seven games.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander, attended the game and presented the Honor Guard the trophy emblematic of the Presidio championship after the contest.

The teams had previously been awarded trophies for winning their respective league championships.

Post Volleyballers Open Drills Monday

Major Bob Jones, captain and coach of the top-rung locals, announced this week that the Toreros, with three returning veterans in the fold, would start drills Monday in the Fort Scott gym at 1745 hours.

The volleyballers will stage practice sessions every Monday in preparation for their opening tournament at the Oakland YMCA, December 8 and for the upcoming Army events.

Along with Jones, the Torero volleyballers have Dick Godino, who earned a Service All-American rating as setman last year, and Catalino Ignacio, another setman, back on the team.

But Jones, a onetime University of Southern California athlete who keeps in trim by playing volleyball, said berths are still open on the squad. He invited personnel interested in coming out for the team to appear at the gym or contact him at Ext. 4223.

The locals, who placed second in an All-Service competition in Seattle earlier this year, hope a sizable number of players turn out. Jones indicated he may get player help from AAA units once the ack-ack tournament is completed next month.

Pheasant Season Opens

John L. Farley, director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, has announced that pheasant hunting will be permitted this year on portions of the Tule Lake and Lower Klamath National Wildlife Refuges.

On the Tule Lake refuge, pheasant hunting will be permitted during the entire State season, 17 November to 2 December, inclusive, on Area I; on 17, 18 and 19 November only, pheasant hunting will be permitted on those lands of the refuge known as the Frog Pond and Lower Sump areas, and on those same opening days hunters will be permitted in Area III, known as the Panhandle buffer strip. All areas open to hunting will be posted.

On the Lower Klamath refuge, some of the land will be open only during the first three days of the season and other sections will be open throughout the season. Inquiry should be made of federal officers at the scene for specific directions.

Anyone hunting within these refuges must possess a valid California hunting license and pheasant tag. Each hunter will be allowed to take not more than two dogs with him for the purpose of retrieving dead or wounded birds, but the dogs must not be permitted to run at large.

Top Rated Presidio Cagers Stage Final Drills For Opener

Boasting northern California's top Armed Forces basketball team, Presidio of San Francisco's Toreros knuckle down to final drills next week.

The Toreros, a star-studded outfit of former collegians, appear a solid bet to retain their Army-Air Force League championship once they apply the final touches to their attack.

Coach Hal Fischer's springy crew opens its season in two weeks when it meets Travis Air Force Base on the Airmen's court.

And, if a lineup which includes two former All Coast cagers means anything, the Toreros will prove their early season ratings.

Fischer was pleased with the Toreros' showing in their official unveiling last week in Kezar Pavilion against Parks AFB.

The Presidio quint easily won the contest as Carroll Williams, onetime San Jose Stater, Ronnie Reynoir, Loyola of South, and Norm Ellenberger from Butler whipped in 58 of the team's 89 point total.

Tony Psaltis, the former San Francisco high schooler and last season's top University of Southern California veteran, tossed in eight points to help the Presidio cause.

He, along with Reynoir, Williams and Ellenberger, is expected to supply the locals with a potent scoring punch.

Reynoir and Williams looked particularly great in the opener. Williams tallied 23 points to top the Toreros, while Reynoir, no slouch himself, contributed ten field goals for 20 points.

Beagle Voted Grid Honor

Annapolis, Md. — Ron Beagle, Navy's All-American end for the past two seasons, was the top vote-getter in a poll of former Naval Academy football player to select an All-Time Navy team.

Picked as quarterback of the All-Time team was George Welsh, who is currently the field general of the Norfolk (Va.) Navy Tars. Welsh and Beagle were the main battery of the Navy's air attack in 1954-55.

Others named were: Dick Duden, end (1943-45); Frank Wickhorst, tackle (1924-26); Don Whitmire, tackle (1943-44); John (Babe) Brown, guard (1910-13); Eddie Burke, guard (1926-28); Dick Scott, center (1945-47); Tom Hamilton, halfback (1924-26), and Jack Ralton, fullback (1908-11). (AFPS)

752d Nabs AA Group Net Title

Fort Scott's 752nd AAA Missile Battalion pulled from behind twice in the final set yesterday to defeat the 436th AAA Battalion (Skysweeper) of Travis Air Force Base 15-6, 5-11 and to take the volleyball title of the 30th AAA Group.

The triumph kept the 752nd unbeaten in the tourney and made the squad the 30th Group representative in the 6th AA Regional Command Tournament in Los Angeles later this month.

The 436th reached the finals by defeating Fort Baker's 9th AA Missile Battalion 15-11, 12-14, 10-5 in semifinal play at Letterman Sports Center.

Fort Scott's 752nd AAA Gun Battalion moved into the finals with a 15-3, 15-5 decision over Fort Baker's 9th AAA Missile Battalion in semifinal play.

The defeat knocked the 9th from the ranks of the unbeaten, following the 9th's earlier victories over the 52nd AAA Gun Battalion (Skysweeper) of Castle Air Force Base, 15-8, 15-6, and the 441st AAA Missile Battalion of Berkeley, 15-8, 11-13, 15-6.

The 752nd's victims included the 436th AAA Gun Battalion (Skysweeper) of Travis Air Force Base, 15-4, 15-5, and 740th AAA Missile Battalion of Fort Scott, 15-2, 15-6.

In loser's bracket games of the double elimination meet, the 740th beat the 52nd, 15-10, 10-14, 15-2, before losing 15-12, 15-12 to the 436th. The Travis AFB team had knocked the 441st from the meet earlier with a 15-7, 15-7 triumph.

In addition to the 30th AAA Group championship, the winning team gets a trip to Fort MacArthur to compete in the 6th AA Regional Command tournament Nov. 24-29.

Kops Hold Pin Loop Top Rung

Despite a 3-1 defeat to the Hardnoses, the Keystone Kops retained their hold on first place in the Presidio Bowling League last week.

The defeat, however, narrowed the MP's lead over the Kingpins, Hardnoses and Hilltoppers, all tied for second place. The Kops boast a 19-9 mark, while the second place trio stand at 17-11.

In the Pacific League, the G-1 Section maintained its firm hold on the lead. The G-1ers took a 3-1 triumph over the Sleuths to boost their season record to 20-4. The QMers are in second place with a 17-7 mark.

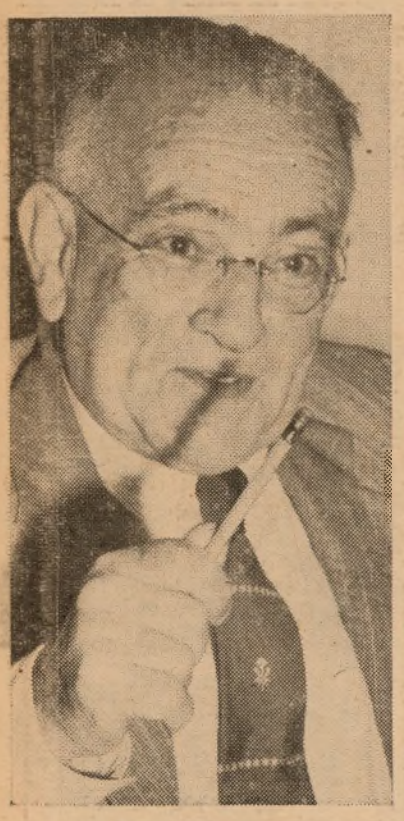
Pheasant Roosters Plentiful In State

Sex ratio counts of the pheasant population prior to the 17th November opening of the pheasant hunting season point to a plentiful supply of roosters in the fields. Sex ratio counts are taken to determine the nesting success of the past year. High ratios of cocks before the hunting season in heavily hunted pheasant populations generally result from high nesting success.

Sex ratio counts were carried on in eight areas in the Sacramento Valley, with nearly 3,300 pheasants being classified. Completed counts in seven areas showed a comparatively high average of 82 cocks per 100 hens.

Deer Kill Hits Figure Of 105,000



The Department of Fish and Game today announced the 1956 deer kill for the coastal and inland seasons combined now totals approximately 105,000. Of this figure, approximately 75,000 were taken during the inland seasons and 30,000 in the coastal hunts.

The inland seasons produced a kill of about 31,000 does, fawns and spike bucks and about 44,000 legal bucks, forked horn or better. These figures are based on the number of tags returned by 7 November. The total 1956 buck kill now is only a few hundred below last year's figure of 68,050.

Leading counties in the inland deer harvest were Modoc, Lassen, Siskiyou, Tehama, Shasta and Plumas.

Iona's sophomore cager Joe Bernardi, who was named to the all-tournament team in the recent Quantico (Va.) holiday basketball tourney, played service ball at the Brooke Army Medical Center, Tex.

Shock Symposium Shows 'Progress'

Dr. Elias Klein

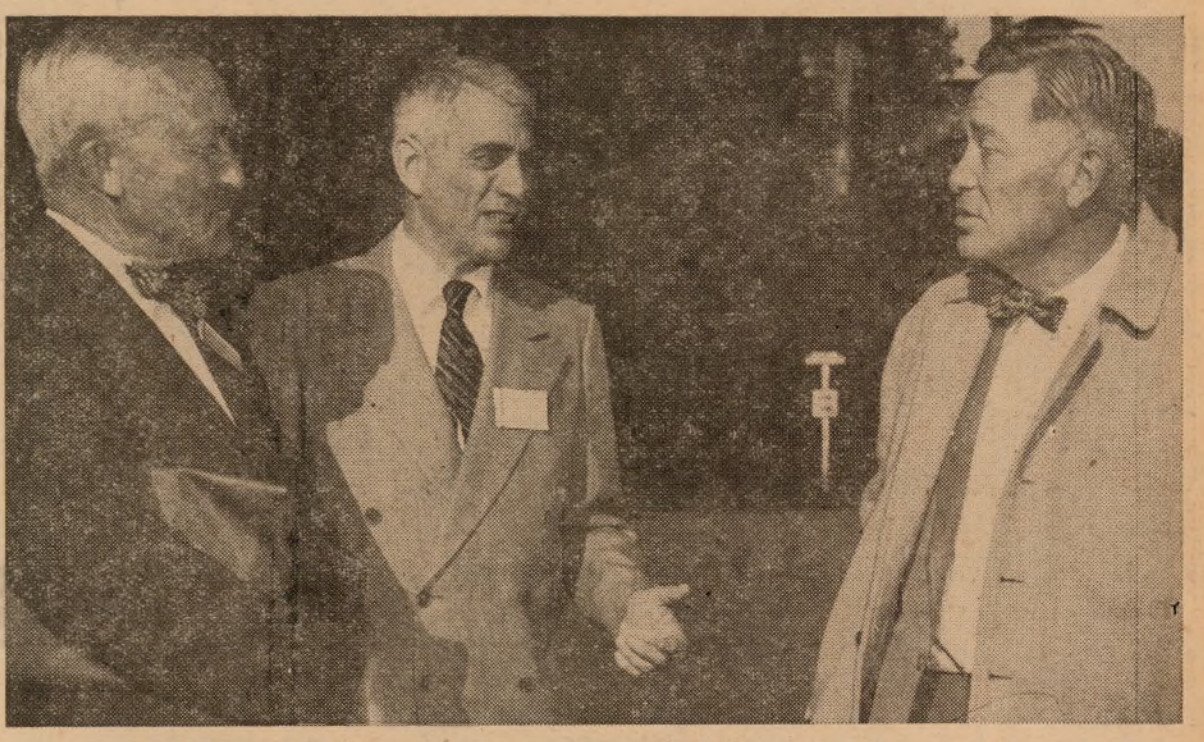
Chief Says Meet Very Successful

Questions and answers on the intricate problems of guided missile development were traded among 650 scientists and engineers, representing 200 separate projects, who attended the 24th Shock and Vibration Symposium held at the Presidio this week.



Parallel meetings discussing the theme of the symposium, "The Missile Structure and Its Electronics," were held at Harmon Armory and the Post theater. The meetings were classified and armed guards barred the doors from all who lacked proper identification.

"Bringing all these minds together under one roof can result in great progress for the missile program as a whole and each of its components," asserted Dr. Elias Klein, head of the Department of Defense Shock and Vibration Centralizing Activity, who planned the meeting.

Each individual missile project is ringed by separate classification restrictions, which means one scientist on one project can't talk to another scientist on another project although they may be encountering the same problems, explains Dr. Klein.

"But by bringing all the men together under a common classification—and limiting discussion to that classification — we are able to talk to each other about what we have done, what we are doing and what we must do," Dr. Klein adds.

Men who are working on projects concerned with the United States' satellite program also attended the symposium which was held Tuesday and Wednesday.

Missile Matters are discussed by three of the nation's most eminent scientists in the field of guided missiles during the 24th Shock and Vibration Symposium held at the Presidio this week. A "highbrow debate" on Random Versus Sinusoidal Vibration Testing, held Tuesday evening, featured Dr. Arthur H. Warner (left), as chairman, and Dr. B. O. Coopman (center), as moderator of the meeting. Both men are from the Department of Defense Weapons Systems Evaluation Group. Above, they chat with Chief Scientist Royal Weller of the Point Mugo Naval Air Missile Test Center.

New Warning System Will Detect Gases

Atomic or hydrogen blasts and poison gas attacks can now be detected by a defense system developed by the Army, according to the Department of Defense.

The Radiological Defense Warning System will be used to guard military installations and industrial plants against surprise attack. The system is in use at one major military headquarters.

When danger is detected, the system trips relays that sound warning horns, closes blast doors, turns off gas lines, starts radiologically filtered ventilation systems and triggers a series of other protective devices.

The warning instruments are a gamma ray detector, a device sensitive to certain blast pressures and a thermal detector operated by infrared radiation from fission or fusion.

Small aluminum cylinders are placed atop steel towers and are wired to an underground control board. If a cylinder tower is destroyed, the system goes into action automatically.

Digest's December Issue Highlights Army Missiles

A young Warrant Officer has taken his place alongside 11 general officers and one colonel as a contributor to the Army Information Digest's special December issue on The Army's Missiles.

Chief Warrant Officer C. E. Driskill, Jr.—an instructor in the Guided Missile Department, Antiaircraft and Guided Missile School, Fort Bliss, Texas—has written the story of one man who gained success and satisfaction through participation in the guided missile program. His article shows that young soldiers with eyes to the future will find unlimited horizons in missile careers.

Other contributors have written articles about the Army Missiles Program, Missile Commands, and the Future with Missiles, as well as other aspects of the subject. In all, there are 125 pages in the magazine—one of the most comprehensive and authoritative discussions of Army missiles made to date.

As stated in the publication, "In the long history of Warfare, successive advances in weaponry have sought to deliver firepower of ever-increasing force and effectiveness. In this special issue on Army missiles, high-level Army authorities discuss and appraise the newest addition to Army firepower—their development, principles of employment, impact on tactics and logistics, and implications for the future."

The lead story in the magazine is Army Chief of Staff General Maxwell D. Taylor's article on "The Role of Missiles in the Army Weapons System." (ANS)

AAA Technician Wins Company Five-Year Pin

Kenneth L. Wade, technical advisor to the Pacific Coast's Army Antiaircraft defenses at Fort Baker, has been awarded the Philco Corporation's Five Year Service Award. The presentation was made by Major Lloyd E. Salisbury, 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command.

Early Outs

tories before 21 December, according to the circular. Further early departure from overseas theaters to meet stateside requirement will not be authorized, although eligible officers and enlisted men will be separated as soon after arrival as possible.

The Army will grant leave extensions including "utilization of excess leave for this period if necessary," for ZI returnees to avoid reporting to new duty stations during the holiday.

Enlisted personnel who may be released under the policy will not be retained beyond 21 December due to non-receipt of records but will be separated or discharged on temporary records.

The directive excludes officers to be involuntarily relieved from active duty on specific dates as directed by the Department of the Army, and non-regular medical, dental and veterinary corps officers, who will not be discharged or released from active duty prior to completing 21 months' service.

Enlisted men inducted or enlisted under provisions of the Universal Military Training and Service Act, who are eligible for release prior to completing two years' service, but must complete 21 months' active duty will not be allowed separation prior to this minimum time, and regular Army personnel whose re-enlistment bonus and accrued leave pay would be adversely affected by an early release will be retained to their advantage.

Civilian Jobs Here

Openings for a tabulating machine operation supervisor and an electrical engineer have been announced by the civilian personnel section of the Presidio.

General Ginder Named To Head Reserve Units

Washington — Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker has named Major General P. D. Ginder to head the newly created post of Assistant Chief of Staff for Reserve Components.

In a reorganization of the Department of the Army staff, General Ginder's former office, Special Assistant for Reserve Components, will be discontinued with the responsibility for reserve affairs falling under his new post.

The office of Assistant Chief of Staff for Reserve Components will combine under one staff head many Reserve matters which formerly were handled by several different agencies. The relationship of the National Guard Bureau with the Secretary of the Army and the Chief of Staff remains unchanged. The Chief, Army Reserve and ROTC affairs will continue as the operating agency for the Army Reserve at departmental level.

Secretary Brucker stated that this change in staff organization, effective 1 November, this year, will provide a focal point in the Army staff for coordination of the reserve component program, and is a part of the Army's continuing efforts to improve the efficiency of its management system. (ANS)

580 Move Up!

WO Promotion's On Increase

Permanent promotions for 580 chief warrant officers in the top two pay grades have been announced by the Army. All promotions are subject to physical qualifications.

Most of the promotions went to men on active duty in commissioned status as Reserve officers.

Promotions to pay grade W-4 totaled 125. Of these, 43 are on duty in warrant officer status, 82 as officers.

Promotions for 455 to pay grade W-3 were divided 371 to those on EAD as commissioned officers, 84 as warrant officers.

29 June Is Bonus Claim Cutoff

The Army has set 29 June of this year as the cut-off date for reenlistment bonus overpayment claims. Overpayments to be forgiven or collection repaid have also been defined in DA Circular 35-92.

Overpayment of reenlistment bonuses are to be forgiven if they resulted from not counting enlistment allowance payments made after 30 September, 1949, as bonuses in figuring the size of the reenlistment bonus.

Those who were "overpaid" because enlistment allowances were not counted as bonuses and then had the overpayment taken out of their pay, are entitled to a refund of the money deducted from their pay.

On 30 March, 1955, the Comptroller General ruled that the enlistment allowance had to be counted as a bonus. The first cut-off date was April 1955 until clarified by the recent circular.

561st Engs Tackle Navy Pier In Night Training Problem

"Everybody benefits from this project—the men get training, the city saves thousands of dollars, and the company gets valuable timbers," says Capt. Charles F. McCurdy, company commander for the 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction).

The project, to tear down a 45 x 200 yard dock located on the Sausalito waterfront, is an ideal example of civilian and military cooperation, states Captain McCurdy.

Originally the pier was an old railroad ferry terminal; during the war it was used by the Navy. Now rotten, the pier is both an eyesore and a fire hazard. It would have cost the city as much as $30,000 to have the structure leveled by a private firm, so Sausalito officials finally decided to burn it.

About this time Captain McCurdy approached city officials to see if there were any old piles in the Sausalito area that the 561st could remove for training purposes. He learned that the ferry terminal had 200 good piles, and to boot, its destruction would provide "an excellent training job."

So last Thursday—after completion of the Letterman beach clearing job — the 561st moved into Sausalito with two barges, two cranes and 15 to 20 men. The job is expected to be completed in two weeks.

There will be little blasting in this job; mostly it will be a matter of pulling and jetting. The big cranes can pull the lose piles right out of the bay floor. The tougher piles are loosened by jetting, which amounts to shooting high pressure jets of water into the mud around the timber.

A small amount of blasting will take place when the engineers destroy four concrete piers which were used for submarine net anchors during World War II. In a sense the toughest part of the job will be removing the dock's asphalt top. This "messy" job primarily involves back work.

Captain McCurdy, who describes the project as "one of the best training projects we've had," is taking additional advantage of the training potential by a night exercise which was held Tuesday from sundown to midnight. As under combat conditions all phases of the company were in operation —from the line, to the cooks, to the orderly room.

RA Applications Show Serious Lag

A total of 1104 persons have applied for Regular Army commissions during the first month under the Augmentation Program. The Army had hoped to receive 10,000 applications.

The lag has been attributed to the existence of three months before the deadline. The Army fears a rush of applications in January.

At present 105 applications have been received from Sixth Army.

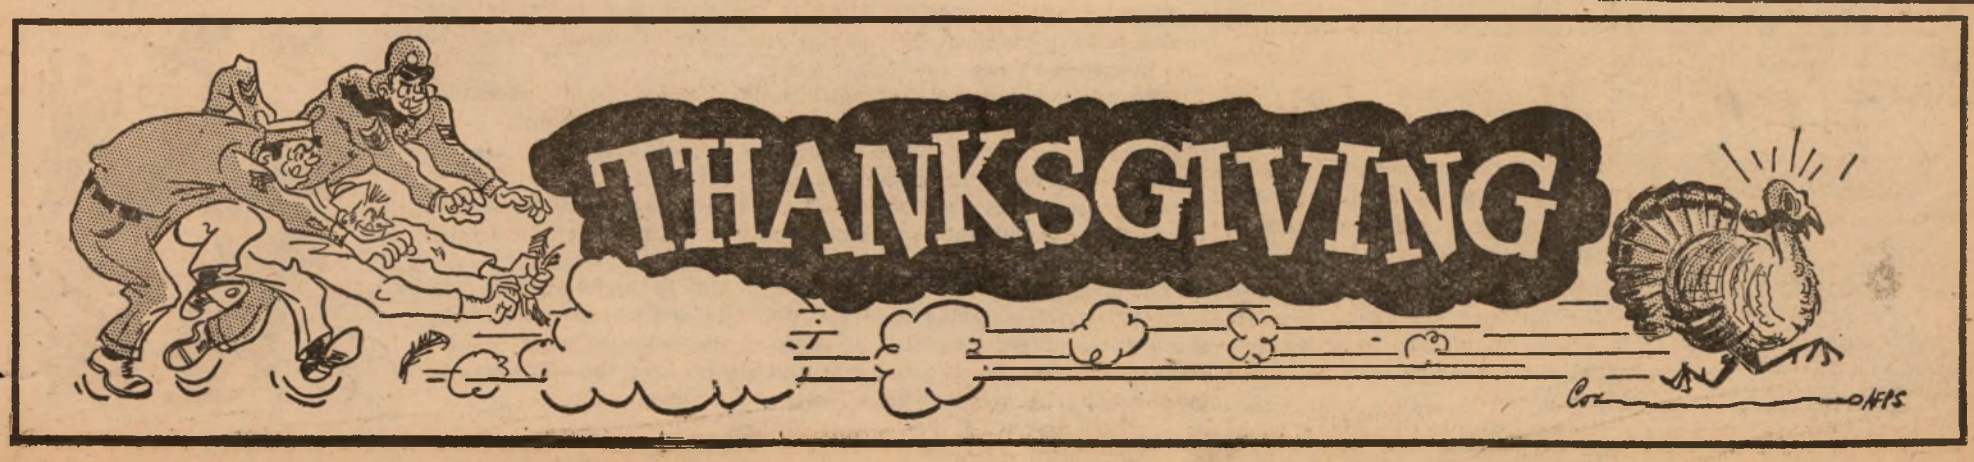
The Army has 1679 Capehart housing units under construction at five separate posts. Contracts are expected to be awarded on another 5362 at seven posts.

In addition 4874 units at seven more posts are being advertised.

Rents on the Capehart units are equal to the quarters allowance. The units come in one, two and three bedroom sizes. Emphasis is on construction of one, two and four family buildings.



DPC's Message

In keeping with the President's proclamation this day will be observed by members of this command as a holiday. Further, every member of this command is urged to take upon himself the devout observance of our Thanksgiving Day by attending religious services and by inviting friends and acquaintances to join in worship of the Giver of all good.

When we look at the world in which we are living and compare our blessings with those of other nations, we fully realize that we have much for which to be thankful. Let us, therefore, follow the leadership of our Commander-in-Chief and give to God our humble and devout thanks for His innumerable blessings upon us.

Lewis Converts To Oil

Oil burners will replace coal furnaces at Fort Lewis, Wash., if present plans by the Post Engineers office are completed. Coal has heated 60 per cent of the Fort Lewis buildings for 25 years.

The furnaces have become uneconomical to repair, according to Clyde W. Kimbrough, Fort Lewis engineer. The switch will also allow about 60 men from each infantry regiment to lay down coal shovels and be reassigned.

Thanksgiving Wasn't Always Something Special, Soldier!

★ ★ ★

By Marian Cornfield
Star Presidian Staff Writer

U. S. Armed Forces — from the icy walks in Alaska to the famous streets of Paris — will enjoy traditional Thanksgiving dinners in peace.

Turkeys and trimmings have been sent to overseas posts, and mess staffs at the Presidio and other U. S. posts plan deluxe menus.

But Thanksgivings have not always been so comfortable nor dinners so thoughtfully prepared.

In 1777 George Washington attempted to bolster his troops by ssuing the first Thanksgiving proclamation to the Continental Army. The Revolutionists were celebrating the defeat of the British at Saratoga, even though some 20,000 British troops were lodged in Philadelphia, then the nation's capital.

But it is not likely Washington also proclaimed a turkey feast. The troops probably ate, as usual—16 ounces of beef, 16 ounces of flour, 6½ ounces of peas or beans, 16 ounces of milk, rice and a quart of spruce beer or cider.

In 1863 Lincoln issued the first Presidential Thanksgiving proclamation to his countrymen who were battling the Confederates. The Yankee picture was bright at that time, because Grant had managed to dislodge Bragg's forces from Lookout Mountain, Chattanooga and Missionary Ridge.

Civil War troops fared much the same as their predecessors on Thanksgiving and other days. Their diets had been augmented only by hardtack, green coffee, yeast powder, sugar, salt and pepper.

The U. S. entrance into World War I found a handful of doughboys across the Atlantic in November, 1917. Although a few additions were made to their Thanksgiving dinners, the traditional turkey was not yet traditional in the Army. To beef, flour and dry beans had been added baking powder, potatoes, prunes, syrup, milk, cinnamon and butter.

World War II and the Korean War brought additional battlefront Thanksgivings.

Now for the fourth consecutive year Thanksgiving will be observed in peace. And the old-time Army dry beans will be replaced by turkey, dressing and pumpkin pie.

Drum Stick Anyone? asks Sp3 Peggy Harris, D Company (6002) cook, as she prepares to slice into the big turkey. Supervising her carving technique is M/Sgt. James Kinces, steward, for the combined C and D Company mess. "Come Thanksgiving Day there will be an abundance of turkey for all," Mess Steward Kinces asserts.

New VA Survey Aids Most Disabled Vets

Veterans Administration is surveying 305,000 veterans seriously disabled in service to bring their family status up to date.

VA said only those veterans who are 50 per cent or more disabled and who receive additional compensation because of dependents are involved in the survey.

The survey, conducted through the medium of a questionnaire, will not affect veterans whose family status was determined by VA since August 31, 1955.

Additional compensation for dependents of veterans was first authorized in 1948 and the family status of many disabled veterans has not been brought up to date since then.

VA expects this additional compensation for dependents will be increased in some cases and decreased in others as a result of the survey, scheduled to be completed by January 1, 1957.

G-1 Clerk Steno Wins Cash Award For Performance

Miss Bette Hilke, Clerk-Stenographer, G-1 Plans Branch, has been awarded a Department of the Army Performance Award Certificate for sustained superior performance of duty and a $200 check.

The award, signed by Brig. Gen. Louis J. Rummagi, Sixth Army Chief of Staff, was presented by Col. Robert Erlenkotter, Sixth Army Chief of Staff, G-1 Section.

Miss Hilke, a native San Franciscan, began her Civil Service career with the Sixth Army Quartermaster Section in 1952.

Safety Often Only Courtesy!

The sergeant marched his detail to the warehouse, and then proceeded to have his men start making stacks out of various containers that littered the floor.

The work commenced, but not exactly as the sergeant had envisioned it. In the ensuing rush, big boxes were stacked on little ones, boxes were placed one on top of another in such a way that a good sneeze could dislodge the entire pile.

At the base, one container stuck out a little farther than the rest making it very easy for some hapless soldier to trip over it and seriously injure himself.

The moral to this is, be careful, always think of the fellow who may have to remove something from that stockpile, and who, because of the carelessness of someone else in stacking the material, may become critically injured. Be sure and safe, and always keep the other man in mind, making his safety as big a factor as your own.

There We Are! says Sp3 Robert E. Jones (right) to Sp3 Elroy G. Wenzel. Both men of Sixth Army Honor Guard appeared in a recent issue of a national magazine. They were in an article which showed a demonstration of the Army's newly developed automatic fox hole digger.

Some Really Thankful People

At least 500 Hungarian refugees will observe their first American Thanksgiving at Camp Kilmer, N. J. The installation was ready to receive the first persons fleeing from the Communists Monday, 19 November.

Temporary rehabilitation of the camp will continue and several thousand additional refugees will be accommodated in the next 30 days, according to Wilber M. Brucker, Secretary of the Army.

The Hungarians will arrive at McGuire Air Force Base, N. J. Lt. Gen. Thomas W. Herren, Commanding General of the First Army, will direct the reception, processing and general welfare of the refugees.

The people will be turned over to appropriate civilian welfare agencies at a later date.

Local Soldiers Demonstrate Foxhole Digger For Life Mag

Two local men were pictured in "Life" magazine last week in conjunction with the development of a mechanical foxhole digger.

The five-pound digger developed by Stanford Research Institute at Menlo Park consists of tripod legs and two tubes which contain a rocket motor and an explosive charge. The motor pounds the explosive two feet into the ground. In 70 seconds the charge explodes, leaving a crude foxhole, four feet wide and four feet deep. The entire process takes 90 seconds.

At present the three by three foxholes are dug by hand. Sometimes, depending on soil condition and battle pressure, the process takes up to an hour.

'Overlord' Plaque Set

The tiny schoolroom where Dwight D. Eisenhower planned the invasion of Europe—Operation Overlord—will be the scene of a plaque unveiling this Sunday when the London Branch of the American Legion commemorates this historic event.

Engineers List Tools For Do-It-Yourself

The "Do-It-Yourself" craze has officially hit the Presidio through a published list of tools and materials available to each unit from the Post Engineer.

The list includes paint brushes, crosscut saw, a claw hammer, screwdriver, plunger, flathead screws, plumber's snake, pipe wrench, strap and chrome wrenches, wire, common and finishing nails, faucet washer, 15 amp. fuse, sink stoppers, patching plaster and a jack chain. Ladders are available for temporary use.

Materials desired should be listed on one copy of DA AGO Form 5-27 and forwarded to the Post Engineer. Requests for tools must contain a certificate from the unit commander showing that the tools have not been authorized by TOE or TA.

Fuses should be replaced in lighting circuits only. If a fuse blows after replacement, the Post Engineer Work Order Section should be called.

Window shades, window screens and door screens will be repaired by the Engineer Carpenter Shop. Replacement for broken window panes and requests for painting of existing structures are handled by the Paint Shop. Light bulbs are available at the Post Engineer Warehouse.

Lilly S. Cooper

Ord Section Clerk Retires Following 38-Year Service

Mrs. Lilly S. Cooper, property and supply clerk, Sixth Army Ordnance Section, will culminate 38 years of continuous civil service when she retires 30 November.

Mrs. Cooper, who entered Federal service in September, 1918, has held her present position since 1925. During that time she spent four years at Fort Douglas.

A resident of San Francisco, Mrs. Cooper has received 10- and 25-year service ribbon certificates and will receive a letter of achievement.

After retiring, Mrs. Cooper plans a trip to Hawaii. She hopes to concentrate on her hobbies, photography and art work.

Promotions Go Up Some Under New Quarterly System

The first enlisted promotion quotas under the new quarterly system of allocations show a substantial increase in the top two grades but a drop in the lower two over which the Army has retained numerical control.

More masters and firsts will be permitted during November-December than any two-month period for the last year.

A freeze continues in 25 different MOSs, an increase of five over last month. All MOSs frozen in September except MOS 719, Movements Specialist, remain closed.

During this two-month period, promotions will be available for the following: 520 to grade E-7, 2040 to grade E-6, 6560 to grade E-5 and 45,200 to grade E-4.

Any man in grade E-2 who has completed 10 months' service on the first of November or December may be promoted to E-3, if recommended by the unit commander.

Federal Physical Therapists Need AMA Ed Approval

Physical therapists who enter the Federal service must be graduated from a school of physical therapy approved at the time of their graduation by the Council of Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association, the Civil Service has announced.

If graduated before 1936, therapists must be from a school approved by the American Physical Therapy Association.

The requirement, previously in effect for the Veterans Administration only, now applies to all physical therapist positions filled through civil service examinations.

The changed requirement will not affect therapists already in civil service.

VA Says Home Purchaser Should Make Personal Check

Northern California veterans purchasing new homes with GI loans should inspect the properties personally before closing the loans, Mr. J. Glenn Corbitt, manager of the San Francisco Veterans Administration Regional Office, said today.

He pointed out that while VA has an inspection service to determine if new homes meet accepted standards of good construction, the veteran-purchaser should personally check all items of the property before completing the purchase.

"The veteran should inspect the property with the builder or his representative to make sure that the home, the property and the equipment is satisfactory," Mr. Corbitt said. "If it isn't, definite arrangements should be made with the builder at that time to have any defects remedied."

If defects develop after the veteran has moved into the new home, the builder should be notified immediately, Mr. Corbitt said. Then, if a satisfactory adjustment is not made within a reasonable time, the veteran should notify the Loan Guaranty Division, Veterans Administration Regional Office, 49 Fourth Street, San Francisco 3, California.

His letter to VA should give the street address, or lot and block number; the VA loan number; the builder's name, and a list of defects. The VA will attempt to have corrections made which may be determined as the responsibility of the builder, Mr. Corbitt said.

Medicare Limit

Dependent dental care will be limited to three major areas beginning 8 December.

Emergency care will be given to relieve pain but will not include permanent restorative work or dental prosthesis. Treatment will be administered as an addition to medical or surgical treatment.

Dental care will be given outside the continental United States in remote U. S. areas, where adequate civilian dental facilities are not available.

On Target

Huachuca Tests Check Firing

Signal Corps, Infantry and Field Artillery units from various parts of the United States are conducting a special series of tests involving the firing of 81 mm mortars, 4.2 inch mortars, and 8 inch, 105 mm and 155 mm howitzers. Fort Huachuca, Ariz., is the site for the tests.

The tests are under the technical direction of the Electronic Warfare Department of the Army Electronic Proving Ground. They are designed to investigate new combat applications in the military electronics field.

The First Signal Group of Fort Huachauca is supplying the specialist manpower to operate and maintain the experimental electronic equipment used in the tests.

Bad Packing Damages Goods

The Army has officially noted that household goods take a beating when shipped between stations.

It blamed the situation on "questionable practices and misinterpretation of regulations relative to the packing and crating of household goods."

Individuals responsible for repairs and utilities will supervise household goods packaging done by government personnel or commercial contract, according to Cir. 420-10.

The circular points out that major appliances and heavy items should be strapped down with steel strapping. Other items are to be padded, wrapped and given protective cushioning. Empty spaces should be filled with dunnage.

"Waterproof barriers will be placed in the doorway" of containers so that there will be no moisture damage to household goods.

Happy Threesome are Larry and Linda Quale and their dog, Lady. Because Larry has leukemia, he needs type B, positive blood to remain alive. He can go for months without needing any blood, but when the time comes, he needs it fast and fresh. His parents, Sgt. and Mrs. Edwin Quale hope those at the Presidio with B positive blood will volunteer to back Larry up when he needs help.

A Thanksgiving Story That Should Turn Thoughts Towards Xmas Giving

By Sp.3 Richard Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

"He's lively as a bear cub, except when the hemoglobin content in his blood drops, then—boom!" says Sgt. Edwin Quale, 163d MP Company, of his six-year-old son, Larry.

A year and a half ago Larry came home from the hospital after an attack of incurable leukemia. "The doctors predicted he would live but six weeks to three months, saying we would be lucky to have him for another Christmas," says his mother.

"But here it is almost Christmas time again, and he's so full of life it just isn't funny," says Mrs. Quale, who explains that Larry has progressed just the opposite from what the doctors expected.

Mrs. Quale knows her son could go anytime, but is encouraged by Larry's present stamina. She says simply, "We have a lot of hope."

Larry, who lives with his family in the shadow of the Golden Gate Bridge just above Fort Point, is as full of pep as any first grader, according to his mother. He walks nearly a mile to the school bus each morning, and when he's not in school, he plays with intense activity as though he is trying to make every waking moment full lived.

"Bright for his age and way ahead in reading at school," Larry one day asked his mother if he had leukemia. She told a forgivable fib and told him, no, he had nose bleeds like any other little boy. Larry gave his mother a serious, knowing look with his bright brown eyes and said, "I know I don't have to worry, mommy; I know God will take care of me."

Right now Larry needs people to take care of him, people with type B, positive blood. For the past 18 months he's been fine—only needed two pints of blood the whole time. But when the hemoglobin drops—boom, he'll need lots of help in a hurry.

Before, when he was in the hospital, Larry needed two or three pints of blood daily for 40 days. Men in Sergeant Quale's MP Company, the 163d, have been supporting Larry till now. But most of them have either given or been transferred, and now there are only three or four names on the list which backs Larry up.

Because he must get fresh blood, Larry is wholly dependent on volunteer donors. When he starts to hemorrhage, only whole blood with live pletelets can stop the bleeding.

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day. What better time for a decision to back Larry up, if and when he needs help?

Anyone with B positive blood can get his name on the list of emergency donors for Larry Quale by writing or calling Maj. Frank H. Smiley, Letterman Blood Bank.

Civilian Award Program Saves Service Millions

Federal employee suggestions and superior accomplishments under the Government Employees' Incentive Awards program, established in 1954, have saved the American taxpayer more than $102,000,000 during the 12-month period ending June 30 at a cost of less than $6,000,000, U.S. Civil Service Commissioner George M. Moore has announced.

"During that period," Mr. Moore told members of the National Federation of Federal Employees at their national convention in Louisville, Ky., recently, "the American people have bought the biggest bargain in history—and I mean bargain in the best sense of the word.

"Between July 1, 1955, and June 30, 1956," he continued, "employee suggestions and superior accomplishments resulted in actual first-year dollar benefits of $102,099,120—and in most cases they are benefits that will go on for many years. This is money in the pocket of the American taxpayer. Awards to employees totaled $5,885,831 — and that is money in the pocket of the Government worker."

Mr. Moore said that during the 12-month period Federal employees submitted a total of 294,638 suggestions of which 79,295 were adopted. He noted that the adoption rate was equal to that of private firms that have had suggestion programs in operation as far back as 1914. In addition to the suggestions, Federal employees earned 23,054 superior-performance awards.

"As compared with the previous fiscal year," he said, "the number of suggestions received per 1,000 employees rose from 102 to 132. The number of suggestions adopted per 1,000 employees rose from 26 to 36. And the number of superior-performance awards per 1,000 employees rose from less than three to ten!"

He pointed out that a comparison of this latest 12-month period with the year just prior to the start of the present incentive awards program in 1954 showed a 61 per cent increase in rate of suggestions submitted and an increase of 64 per cent in the adoption rate. "This," he said, "is striking evidence of the value of the new incentive awards law.

"The 1956 incentive awards story," Mr. Moore said, "is a story of progress and achievement by Federal employees. The upsurge of employee participation has brought a growing realization that through incentive awards, 'progress' can be every employee's business. Through this program we see the Federal employee at his best, serving his Government and his fellow citizens with all the resources of his inventive mind and his productive hands."

Commissioner Moore reviewed other improvements made in the Federal civil service system within the last few years. These included increased retirement annuities, salary increases, low-cost group life insurance, and an improved and expanded career system.

Performance Award Certificate for sustained superior performance of duty and a $300 check were presented to Mr. Otto Cook, Attorney Advisor with the Sixth Army Judge Advocate Section. Col. Carlos E. McAfee, Sixth Army Staff Judge Advocate, made the presentation. Mr. Cook is a University of Southern California Law School graduate and a retired Army Lieutenant Colonel.

PX Officials Hope To Beat Increased Operating Costs

Rising operating costs at military exchanges are not expected to be passed on to customers in the form of higher prices, exchange officials have announced.

The officials noted that PX customers realize an approximate 25 per cent across-the-board saving compared to civilian prices.

During the 1956 fiscal year the exchange service added 90 outlets and 400 employes. The expansion, in addition to wage increases caused the increase of operational costs.

Officials forecast savings through greater efficiency, new management techniques and greater use of automation. The officials also hope for improved service and better display of items.

An exchange catalog for personnel stationed at remote sites is being prepared.

When Numismatists Get Together They're Likely To Talk About Money

Everybody likes money. But while most would rather spend it, there are at least two men on Post who get even more pleasure out of saving this moldy, old stuff, in fact—the moldier the better.

Wrong, not misers — numismatists — a technical term for the hobby of collecting money.

Ralph Scanlin, manager of the Post Pitch and Putt course, has been following this avocation for only three or fours years and already has a collection valued at nearly $3,000.

M/Sgt. Edward F. Kiersztian, field first for Hq. Co. (6002), has been saving coins since the age of 18. His uncle, who at one time had a collection valued at $75,-000, got him started. Sergeant Kiersztian isn't saying just what his collection is worth. But he does reveal that his most valued prize is a collection of six Spanish gold coins. An item that would make any collector drool.

Money talk flowed when these two collectors got together at the Pitch and Putt course recently. Sergeant Kersztian admired Mr. Scanlin's gleaming set of U.S. gold pieces, and in turn received unreserved praise for his 1797 silver dollar now worth a whopping $250.

One of the most glittering parts of Mr. Scanlin's collection is his display of proof sets all contained in clear plastic. Proofs are the first coins run off by a mint each year. Made with special care, they are highly polished and detailed. These sets of penny, nickel, dime, quarter and half dollar are sold to collectors for $2.10. The coins—put immediately in plastic containers —are never touched by human hands.

Because coins are made in limited numbers, they occasionally have great speculative value. An example of this is the 1950 proof set which sold that year for $2.10 and now is valued at $65.

All U.S. money is minted either at Philadelphia or Denver. The San Francisco mint has ceased production after producing its last two coins, the 1955 penny and dime. Every coin from the Denver mint shows a small "D" and every coin from San Francisco shows a small "S." Philadelphia coins have no marking.

Coins are valued first by rarity and second by condition. For instance, a 1916 dime is considered rare as a relatively small number of them were minted. A dime of this year if quite worn might be worth only $10. Mr. Scanlin, however, owns one in "fine" condition which is worth $65.

Two of the most valuable American coins in existence are the 1913 Liberty nickel and the $4 gold piece. Only 6 of the former and 18 of the latter coins were minted. The insurance value of these individual coins runs as high as $50,000.

Indian head pennies in general are not as valuable as people think. But certain years, such as 1877 and 1909 (SF Mint) will bring a good price.

Age alone does not always mean value. Mr. Scanlin has one coin that dates back to 5 B.C., but is only valued at between $5 and $10.

Non-circulated coins, preferably those that have never been touched by human hands, are the most valuable. Many collectors buy rolls of newly minted coins each year, then stash them away and forget them—hoping that years hence they will become valuable.

Prior to 1863 the United States used fractional currency as well as coins for amounts under $1. There were paper bills for 3 cents, 5 cents, 10 cents, 25 cents and 50 cents.

Many Soviet coins minted before World War II have great value today, because the Russians melted many of their coins down to assist their war effort.

Sergeant Kiersztian points out that money collecting can be turned into great profit and urges everyone to invest in a book on coins. "Anyone can start a collection," he adds, "and the value mounts up fast."

While still in his teens, Sergeant Kiersztian built a large collection by each week turning his pay check into pennies. After sorting through all the coppers, he would return to the bank and exchange them for nickels. This sort and exchange process would go on through dimes, quarters and half dollars.

Both Mr. Scanlin and Sergeant Kiersztian will enthusiastically agree that for hobbies, money collecting—to coin a phrase—is worth every penny!

Funny Dime! agrees M/Sgt. Edward F. Kierstian, who is examining the money collection owned by Ralph Scanlin (right), manager of the Presidio Pitch and Putt Course. Both men are avid numismatists (money collectors). Above they are viewing some fractional currency — three, five, 10, and 25 cent bills — which up to 1863 was used in America instead of coins.

Army Strength Down Below Million Mark

Last month for the first time in almost six years, the Army's strength dropped to below one million men. It is expected to stay below the one-million mark until after 1 January, 1957.

Congress has authorized a minimum of 1,043,000 for year-end strength. The Army hopes to reach this level after the first of the year.

The fast reduction and slow build-up has been attributed to lower enlistments and reenlistments, and the fact that the Army will have to depend upon the draft to increase its strength.

Reenlistment rates dropped sharply below those of earlier months. The greatest dip was among first termers who didn't sign up for a second hitch. Among "career" men the rate has held steady between 85 and 90 per cent.

The draft call will remain at 17,000 a month.

JWB Proving Special Friend To Off-Duty Presidio Soldiers

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Feature Editor

No more fitting time than the highly honored Jewish Festival Of Lights and the American Thanksgiving, could be chosen to acknowledge the work being done for Presidio service men and women by a unit of the Jewish Welfare Board in San Francisco.

The 15 JWB women have as their emblem the five-point star of their religious denominations; their goal—to bring touches of home and family life to military men and women in the immediate Sixth Army area.

Launched locally in 1941, the San Francisco JWB joined forces with the USO to assist in all types of military social welfare. At the Presidio they share the responsibilities of Letterman Army Hospital and those of the Presidio Service Club, Fort Baker, Fort Cronkhite, Fort Barry, Fort Miley, and Angel Island.

Under direction of Mrs. Milton L. Colton, wife of a San Francisco businessman, and her administrative associates, the group of women travel, gift-laden, to the Presidio and its sub-Posts one night a week.

On the first of each month, each lady brings a birthday cake to the hospital wards and the clubs. They set out snowy linen table cloths, light the birthday candles and bring cheer to those celebrating. They bring gifts for each celebrant whose birth date falls in that month, join in community singing and share in the club activities. The ward patients at Letterman receive the same regular attention.

The AAA units scattered throughout the Bay Area are likewise remembered by the visiting women, nor is their service limited to this community. They have "adopted" the patients of a Veterans Hospital in Sheridan, Wyoming, and Palo Alto. Thousands of soldiers of all religious convictions in Korea, through the generosity of the local and national JWB, will open long-traveled gifts sent them this week in honor of Thanksgiving and the Jewish Festival Of Lights, both marking their origins at the same time.

Once each week, the women of JWB visit the psychiatric wards at Letterman Army Hospital. They sing, dance and provide musical entertainment for the temporarily shut-in patients there. Those well enough to leave the wards are taken for a bus ride to Stern Grove and to see a motion picture at the Alexandria Theater in San Francisco. The only obligations of the headquarters for these services are that the patients be certified fit for travel and that an Army bus be provided for their outings.

Token Of Esteem! Mrs. Milton Colton receives an award of merit from Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander. Given annually to the chairman of the Jewish Welfare Board unit of San Francisco in recognition of its services to military men and women of the Presidio and the Sixth Army area, the gold brooch is the third of its kind awarded to JWB since its services were first launched here.

If you ask Mrs. Colton, the JWB chairman, what proves the most gratifying highlight in the military community projects carried out by her group, she will say unhesitatingly, "it is the wonderful feeling that our work is so much appreciated at the Presidio and everywhere in the area." Her most treasured material possession is a small gold pin presented to her by General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army commander, during a recent Awards Night honoring the unit's work here. It carries Mrs. Colton's initials on the face and a brief citation to JWB on the back.

"It was not the General's first recognition of our services," she added. "He also gave me two gold stars honoring our work, but somehow, my appreciation of his courtesy grows with time."

War and peace carry their particular heroes and heroines. But to military personnel serving in the Sixth Army area the following roster of local JWB men and women would readily be spotlighted for special honors. They are, Shea Swartz, Harry Altschule and William Z. Dalin (chaplain), Ethel Sibley, Belle Kersteine, Ilse Dolger, Sue Greenberg, Stella Messner, Frances Brill, Edith Freedman, Mrs. Mack Koblick and Mrs. Isadore Korz.

Its Presidio functions include parades and reviews here and at Fort Scott and Fort Baker, concerts at the Service Club and Letterman Army Hospital, and broadcasts aired by West Coast radio stations.

The 60-man musical unit participated this year in civic ceremonies welcoming the President of Italy and the President of Indonesia to the city of San Francisco. In addition, the band appeared at county fairs within a 100-mile radius of the Presidio.

Uniforms currently being worn by the band members are the new Army dress blues which are usually reserved for formal events.

Air Academy Loses First

Denver — Just when they figured to complete their first season of varsity undefeated, the Air Force Academy Falcons ran up against a superior foe.

The fledgling Airmen were handed their first defeat of the year by Idaho State, 13-7, last week in Pueblo, Colo., as the Bengals staved off every threat to the win.

Tied previously by Whittier College and winners over six other foes, the Falcons could muster only two first downs and 28 yards net during the first half.

Idaho State, second place finishers in their league, pushed across two tallies during the opening half and coasted the rest of the way.

DA Approves New Waterfowl Span

The Department of the Army has approved a permit for a bridge with a removable span across Montezuma Slough near Suisun City. The bridge is to be built jointly by the Department of Fish and Game and the County of Solano.

Negotiations are in progress between the two agencies over means of financing the structure. The bridge would provide access to the Grizzly Island Waterfowl Management Area. It is estimated the construction could be completed in 18 months to three years, depending on how soon the financing details can be worked out. The department's share would come from capital outlay funds provided by the Wildlife Conservation Board.

Melbourne—The XVI Olympiad—an international meeting on the field of friendly strife—gets underway here tomorrow in an atmosphere made tense by revolt in Hungary and threat of war in the Mideast.

The 14-day festivities start tomorrow with the parade of athletes into the huge 110,000-seat Olympic Stadium and other opening ceremonies, but the ranks of competitors have been thinned by the withdrawal of five nations from the Games.

Already Iraq, Lebanon, the Netherlands, Red China and Spain have quit and only a rallying cry by the International Olympic Games Committee prevented a stampede.

The sentimental favorite in this, the third post World War II Olympic Games, are the Hungarians. Their countrymen's revolt against Communist domination has captured the sympathies of the world and, though they may not place high up in the unofficial scoring, they'll get plenty of moral support.

Despite recent events in the Balkans and the Mideast, this year's Olympic Games gives promise of being the most spectacular ever.

And despite adverse weather conditions during the last week, the United States' track and field forces promise to uphold the high standards expected of them.

In their final tuneup late last week, Uncle Sam's lithe and limber thinclads won nine of 16 events. Among the victories was hurdler Jack Davis' world record in the high hurdles. Five Australian marks also tumbled in the invitational meet at Bendigo, 100 miles from the capital.

Davis, a Navy lieutenant and one of nearly 80 Armed Forces athletes on the U. S. team, negotiated the high hurdles in 13.3, thereby raising hopes that a 13 seconds flat is indeed a possibility once the track and field competition—the heart and soul of the Olympics—gets underway.

Basketball, invented in the U. S. but rapidly becoming an international affair, gets the competition started tomorrow night. Here, as in track and field, the Americans are expected to win. What with a host of great college and AAU cagers on the squad, plus outstanding talent and plenty of height, the U. S. is expected to breeze.

The American cagers face Japan in the opener and are expected to meet the Russians, who are not bracketed with the Yanks, for the championship.

American cage forces, however, will counter with agile Bill Russell, star of the University of San Francisco's two-time NCAA champs.

In boxing, Poland and Russia, whose fisticuffers reportedly have greater experience, are expected to hold sway. The U. S. team, which is allegedly not as strong as the 1952 team which won five Gold Medals, is rated behind these two nations.

One reason for their great experience is that neither the Russians nor Poles have professional boxing. Hence their ringmen have been competing as amateurs for many years.

In swimming, Australia and the U. S. are expected to stake a fierce battle for the majority of Gold Medals, though a number of smaller nations will pick off some of the coveted rewards.

All things considered, the XVI Olympiad figures to be a jim-dandy, with record performances expected on all fronts.

Army-Navy Grid Feud Set 1 Dec.

More than 100,000 fans are expected to flock to mammoth Municipal Stadium, 1 December, when the two service teams clash.

Experts point to the traditional rivalry which makes the game difficult to forecast accurately. The Midshipmen have the better record this season.

The Middies walloped Virginia, 34-7, on a muddy Baltimore field last week in their final tuneup as Chet Burchett tallied three touchdowns. Navy scored in every period except the second.

The game, reports said, was a sloppy, penalty and fumble marred affair played in a rainstorm which turned the field into a muddy swamp.

Army, meanwhile, lost its tuneup game to Pittsburgh, 20-7, despite a 7-6 lead at the half.

Quarterback Corny Salvaterra tallied once and figured in two other scores as the Panthers checked Army's speed.

Salmon Tagging Project Ends

Field work on a project to determine the number of salmon using the upper Trinity River for spawning has been completed, and Department of Fish and Game biologists are analyzing the results.

The purpose is to determine how large a hatchery will be needed at the federal Trinity Dam site, now under development, and to learn what flow releases will be needed from the dam for salmon spawning. The hatchery will be built by the federal government and operated by the Department of Fish and Game.

During the three-month project, department field crews tagged 1,500 salmon below the spawning area and examined 10,000 carcasses of salmon which had died naturally after spawning upstream. About 160 tags were recovered from the carcasses and anglers sent in additional tags. These will help the biologists to estimate the size of this year's salmon run into the Trinity River, and the number taken by anglers.

Counseling Supervisor at the Presidio civilian personnel office, Mrs. Ruth Burke, explains Federal service examinations and opportunities to Sp3 Harry C. Hutchinson, who is about to be discharged. The counseling service is open to all military personnel.

Civil Service Program Aids Service Personnel

Service personnel about to be discharged may take advantage of a Federal service counseling program at the Presidio.

The program supervised by Mrs. Ruth Burke, who has counseled Presidio service men and women for 12 years, is conducted in the Civilian Personnel Section, Building 36. Counselors are available from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The service offers information concerning duties, experience requirements, salary and other facets of Civil Service positions.

"Our biggest problem is to see the people before they are discharged," Mrs. Burke said. "That way they can attain eligibility and be ready to fill a position as soon as they are discharged."

Persons who establish veteran preference are given five or ten points in addition to passing grades made in examinations, Mrs. Burke explained. The extra points give veterans higher positions on eligibility lists for appointment.

Veterans with ten-point preference may apply at any time to reopen examinations for any position.

Veterans with five-point preference who are unable to file for examinations before deadline because of service in the Armed Forces are allowed late-filing privileges to compete in closed examinations. The application must be made within 120 days after discharge.

Mrs. Burke counsels an average of three service persons a day. Although typists are especially needed, few WACs have taken advantage of the service, she added.

Interviewers in additions to Mrs. Burke are Ione Estes, Patricia Dundas, Hannah Rosenbaum and Marcella Carbone.

Those with "an outstanding record of military service" will be selected for the training.

The program is designed to provide the Army with officers whose knowledge of the geographic, linguistic and ethnic aspects of an area will "assist them in making sound estimates and proper command decisions" about actions in or affecting the area.

Individuals must submit applications by 1 February of the year in which training is desired. Training may take up to four years and those accepted must serve four additional years after training is completed.

Foreign areas are identified by the major language spoken within them. Specialists must learn the major language and may be required to learn various dialects.

Civilian Pay Increase

An increase in the starting pay of foresters and research foresters recruited at grades GS-5 and GS-7 has been authorized by the Civil Service Commission.

Entrance salaries for GS-5's will be $4,210 instead of $3,670, and $4,930 instead of $4,525 for GS-7's.

The increase was authorized in an attempt to offset a shortage of qualified personnel needed to manage the Nation's forests. The new rates will also apply to the GS-5 and GS-7 employes already on the rolls in these jobs.

Stokes, Muller Retire Here Today

Retiring DCG Served On Patton, Clay Staffs

Major General Walter J. Muller, Deputy Commanding General, Sixth Army, was commissioned a second lieutenant upon graduation from the U.S. Military Academy in 1918.

The first part of General Muller's military career was spent in various infantry and tank forces assignments in the United States and overseas.

In 1942 the general became Logistics Officer for the Western Task Force, the organization that planned and executed the invasion of French Morocco, then commanded by the late George S. Patton, Jr., General Muller landed with the Task Force in Africa and participated in the invasion of Sicily. He also assisted in planning the landings in southern France.

The retiring general later joined the Staff of the Third Army in England and served as Director of Military Government in Bavaria.

In 1953 General Muller began a 14-month tour of duty as chairman and member of the Interim Mixed Parole and Clemency Board for German War Criminals in the Office of the U.S. High Commissioner of West Germany.

The general has earned the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit with one Oak Leaf Cluster, Bronze Star with one Oak Leaf Cluster and the Army Commendation Ribbon. He has been decorated by the governments of France, Luxembourg, Belgium and Russia.

Since April 1956, it has been my privilege and pleasure to serve with you as a Deputy Commanding General.

Whatever accomplishments this command has achieved have been yours. They have been due: To teamwork and mutual cooperation; to the untiring efforts of a loyal and efficient staff; to the leadership and ability of all commanders; but above all, to the esprit de corps and efforts of the individual soldier and civilian.

As I near the end of an active career of over 38 years of close assocaition with the American Soldier, I can think of no more appropriate way to pay tribute to him than to quote the words of Colonel Dodge in the dedication of one of his books on "Great Captains": "To the American Soldier who, not bred to arms, but nurtured by independence has achieved the proudest rank among the veterans of history."

Best wishes to your families and you.

Sincerely,
WALTER J. MULLER
Major General, USA
Deputy Commanding General

Combat, Staff Work Highlight Bright Career

Major General John Harrison Stokes, Jr., Deputy Commanding General, Sixth Army, was graduated and commissioned an Infantry second lieutenant by the U.S. Military Academy in 1918.

General Stokes completed courses at the Infantry School of Arms at Camp Benning, Ga., the Ordnance School at Watertown Arsenal, the Infantry School, while assigned to the Presidio in 1934, and the Command and General Staff College.

In 1941 General Stokes joined the 2nd Infantry Division and served successively as assistant to the assistant chief of staff for operations, assistant chief of staff for supply and chief of staff for supply. He accompanied the division to Europe, serving as chief of staff and assistant commander until the division returned to the United States.

During service with the 2nd Infantry Division, General Stokes participated in the battles for Normandy, northern France, Rhineland, Ardennes and central Europe.

Upon his return General Stokes became chief of staff of the 15th Corps in the European Theater and later was named deputy commander of the Allied Control Commission for Hungary. In 1947 he was appointed Military Attache at Budapest.

General Stokes has served as chief of staff of the California Military District; a member of the Secretary of the Army's Review Board Council; Commanding General of the Military District of Washington; and Chief of Military History, Office of the Army Chief of Staff.

The general has been awarded the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, Bronze Star Medal and Army Commendation Ribbon. He has been decorated by Russia, France and Czechoslovakia.

To those with whom I have served:

This afternoon the formalities of a military retirement will write an official finish to my 38 years of Army service.

I say official, for a soldier never really leaves the Army. In the bedrock of both happy and sad memories; of bright successes and hopeful failures; of associates who concurred or disputed the passage; is anchored his emotional ship of yesterdays and tomorrows. He will always be a soldier. And the mere change in the routine of his life serves only to enhance the past demands of service and dedication.

It is with respect, deep gratitude and high hope for your successful futures that I leave you. Hoping in the end that you, as I, will have found satisfaction in honest dedication to the finest service of all—The United States Army.

JOHN HARRISON STOKES, JR.
Major General, USA
Deputy Commanding General

Several Service Bills Face 85th Congressional Action

Several service bills which were not passed by the 84th Congress are scheduled to be introduced at the 85th session, according to the Department of Defense.

The bills would permit service families living in government housing considered substandard to pay rentals below quarters allowances; would increase career opportunities for regular nurses and medical specialists; and would forgive overpayments to reserve medical officers for rental and subsistence while interning in non-government institutions prior to 1 July, 1954.

Others provide for retirement and longevity credit for service as a member of the WAAC; interservice transfer of regular and reserve officers in addition to those of the Medical Corps; and longevity credit to graduates for time spent in service academies or ROTC programs.

The Cordner Committee is preparing a report on Technical and Professional Compensation for Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson. The report may include findings which would require a law to provide added incentives for the retention of skilled personnel.

Holiday Leave Trip Plans Must Go To Transportation

Individuals using commercial or private vehicles for holiday trips from 21 December to 1 January are requested to submit trip plans to the Post Transportation Officer.

The forms are to be forwarded by each unit to Building 220 by 3 December.

Rail-Coach travel furlough rates are effective only when the traveler is in uniform and is carrying valid leave, pass or furlough papers. Tax is not required on round-trip furlough fares or "special" coach fares to Pacific Coast destinations.

Hours of departure from and return to the installation will be established for all personnel going on leave. Regulations governing the wearing of the uniform will be observed when traveling in uniform.

It's "Army Green"!

A 33-year-old captain assigned to Fourth Army as an Assistant Professor of Military Science and Tactics for Shreveport, La., high schools, has received a $300 check for naming the new Army uniform, "Army Green."

Capt. Norman L. Williamson, Lancaster, S. C., was one of 33 contestants who suggested "Army Green" and was selected on the basis of his reason for recommending the name.

Last Elements Of Lybia Bound Engineer Unit Leaves Tonight

By Sp3 Richard Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

The parade ground at Fort Scott will be lighted tonight and the Sixth Army Band will be playing as more than 30 members of the 30th Engineer Group say goodbye to friends and board buses to start their long journey to Lybia.

This is the climax of the training and the beginning of the job, a job that may take three years and will certainly involve both hardship and danger.

The men of the 329th, commanded by Maj. Leo Bellicu, and the 542nd, commanded by Capt. Joe Martinez, have undergone three months of intensive training which has covered mine detection as well as all phases of surveying.

Because they are traveling as a unit, the men have the confident outlook that goes with group experience. They know they have a tough, grim job to do, but they also know it may very well be the most exciting and adventurous experience of their lives.

Buses will take the engineers to Oakland where they will board a special train consisting of six pullman cars and a diner. The Red Cross will give the men a final send-off, before the train pulls out on its southerly route through Bakersfield, Albuquerque, and Wichita to Chicago.

The troops will arrive at Brooklyn Army Terminal and board the USNS Rose the same day, 4 December. The trip to North Africa is expected to take 14 days, which would put the engineers in Lybia for Christmas.

Base operations for the 30th Group project in Lybia will be set at Wheelus Air Force Base located just outside Tripoli. While Tripoli has a population of 126,000 (1946 census) there are only two other cities in the country that exceed 10,000 population.

The job that is taking the engineers to Lybia involves closing a large gap in a world-wide, high-accuracy geodetic survey net. Whenever possible, the 30th Group's own aircraft will assist the surveyors.

World War II mines constitute the greatest danger factor. Battles raged over this area, and many fields that were then mined have never been cleared. Today the only means of livelihood in this desert hinterland, other than date farming at the oases, is the collecting of wartime scrap metal.

The world's highest temperature, 136.4 degrees, has been recorded only 25 miles south of Tripoli. Most of Lybia's population is located on a narrow strip of land that borders the Mediterranean and has a summer temperature of 85 to 95 degrees. But much of the area to be mapped lies on the inland desert plateau, 1000 to 2000 feet above sea level and 15 to 20 degrees hotter.

Most likely the men will work three 7-day weeks and return to base on the fourth. Or they may work six weeks and then be off for two.

Many of the group — which consists of about half college graduate engineers — look forward to the latter tentative work schedule. They hope during their two-week rest periods to be able to catch hops to Europe.

The married men are looking forward to the possibility of bringing their wives and families over to Tripoli after the Mid East crisis cools off. Before the Suez flareup, dependents had been planning on going to Lybia.

Field Desk Check is made by Capt. Joe Martinez, company commander of the 542nd, prior to departure for Lybia. This small desk which contains the morning report and other vital orderly room material is the only administrative equipment that is traveling with the troops. Pvt. Everett A. Reinikka, orderly room clerk, stands by while his CO inspects.

Co-Op Training Program Seeks Eligible Members

A cooperative training program for engineering and science students is being offered through the joint efforts of the Army and civilian educational institutions.

The program is particularly applicable to Reserve Forces Act trainees and is designed to encourage students to enter these fields.

Cooperative training programs were instituted eight years ago. Normally five years are required to attain a degree, with three years in the academic and two years in the work phases.

Those selected enter the program during their freshman year as Department of Army civilians. Starting annual pay is $2960. This increases each year until during his last school-work year the student is earning $3670. Upon graduation he is offered a $4480 Department of the Army civilian position as a professional engineer or scientist. In three months the employee is eligible for advancement to $5335 a year.

Additional information is available from the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D. C., Attn: Office Civilian Personnel.

Wilson Fete Set

Government agencies and the nation have been called on to honor Woodrow Wilson, 28th President of the United States, born 28 December, 1856.

The Woodrow Wilson Centennial Year was established by a joint resolution of the 83rd Congress on 30 August, 1954.

In proclaiming the formal tribute to Woodrow Wilson, President Eisenhower urged citizens and organizations to participate in appropriate observances to commemorate his life, his ideals and his concern for the freedom of peoples throughout the world.

Special 'Day' Set For Local Catholic Service Personnel

A Day Of Recollection for servicemen and women of the Roman Catholic faith will take place at The Helpers Of The Holy Souls Convent Chapel, 204 Haight Street, San Francisco, 9 December.

Sponsored by the USO-NCCS club, the exercises will begin with Mass at 1000 hours, and be climaxed with Benediction Of the Blessed Sacrament at 1600 hours.

Military men and women of the Presidio who wish to participate in the Day Of Recollection are asked to contact Chaplain Robert Plocki, at Extension 2111, or the USO-NCCS club, 70 Oak Street, telephone HE 1-1575.

Program Offers Many Advantages

Promotions, longevity, retirement points, service schools and a day's pay for each two-hour meeting attended are among the advantages offered in the one-year reserve participation program passed last year.

Under the new law most individuals are able to choose their own home town unit, according to M/Sgt. Quintan C. Brown, Post Reenlistment NCO.

Men leaving the service before 1 July, 1957, are eligible for transfer from several years in the Ready Reserve to the Standby Reserve under the one-year participation plan.

Each man is given a personal interview during separation processing by Sgt. Brown or a member of his staff. In October more than 66 per cent of those interviewed signed up for the program.

Nosey Natives from the Iranian desert gather about 30th Engineer Group airplane whenever it lands, according to reports from an inspection party recently back from this area. Army engineers from the 30th Group are at work in Iran completing the final link between European triangulation datum and Asiatic triangulation datum. The information gathered by the survey will be used for control of photography for new maps.

30th's Mapping Unit In Iran Finds Job Tough, Interesting

News of "Yankee ingenuity," Shah safekeeping, and civilian-clad Army mappers is included in a report by two officers just back from a month-long inspection tour of 30th Engineer Group activities in Iran.

Lt. Col. Keith N. Flory, 30th Group Deputy Commander, and 1st Lt. Stanley R. Forbes, Assistant Group S-4, had also planned on visiting Lybia to inspect preparations being made to receive the 30th Group engineers leaving today for a three-year project there. However, the Suez flareup resulted in cancellation of flights in the area.

The engineers in Iran are working to connect a final link between European triangulation datum and Asiatic triangulation datum. Both Army and civilian engineers are engaged in establishing a first order triangulation arc and a second order level-line survey.

Work is impeded by the fact that natives mistake the brass bench marks implanted by the engineers for buried treasure markers. The natives persist in digging up the markers almost as fast as the surveyors can place them.

Often left to their own "Yankee ingenuity," the engineers have done a remarkable job of bettering their situation. One party has arranged to rent local railway substations for billets and operations. When they cover the nearby territory, they move on down the line and rent another sub-station.

Tehesan, a city of 900,000, is the base of operations from which the surveyors establish field camps as distant as 500 miles. Whether in the field or the base camp, all personnel wear civilian clothes due to an agreement with the Iranian government.

When asked to comment on local color, Colonel Flory and Lieutenant Forbes mention the presence of at least one mosque in every village, the unique irrigation, the Shah of Iran's guard, and the absolute barrenness of the country outside of Teheran.

The presence of a beautiful white mosque in every village can be attributed to the fact that the country is 95 per cent Moslem.

Almost every square acre of land level enough to be farmed receives water through underground tunnels, according to the two officers. The tunnels, dug with crude tools, are reached through shafts that dot the land at regular intervals.

Most impressive are the elaborate safety precautions taken to guard the Shah of Iran. Before he ever steps out of doors the route he is to travel is completely lined with Iranian police and soldiers. The guards stand in twos—back to back—one facing the crowd and the other facing the Shah's entourage. This solid, two-sided guard often stretches five miles or more.

Although the men have virtually no entertainment facilities and are working seven days a week, their morale seems high, according to the two inspectors. This can be attributed both to the fact that the men are ahead of their project and because all three surveying parties have American mess sergeants.

East is Near; is Middle; is Far!

The National Geographic Society has reported on the countries included in the three Easts—Near, Middle and Far.

Near East Conflict Has Many Historical Precedents

The present battle to control the trade routes and land of modern Israel and Sinai is a repetition of history that has occurred many times since Biblical days.

Egyptians, Hittites, Assyrians, Babylonians, Phoenicians, Philistines, Greeks, Romans, Frankish knights and Saracens have battled there through the years, according to the National Geographic Society.

Egypt's Sinai Peninsula ties Asia and Africa together at the southeast end of the Mediterranean Sea. Most of the country's 386,100 squares miles is sparsely populated, hot by day and frigid at night.

The Suez Canal, completed by France in 1869, is closely tied to Egypt's modern history. The Canal cuts 4,000 miles off the trade route from Europe to the Far East.

Suez' strategic importance to European trading nations has made it a source of conflict in both World Wars and accounts for the English interest in the area. England established a protectorate in Egypt in 1914 and kept troops in the Canal until 1956.

Established in 1948, Israel covers 8.000 square miles, an area smaller than Massachusetts. It shares the 135-mile border in the Sinai, the classic bridge between Asia and Africa.

From 1948 to 1955 Israel's population doubled and now stands at more than 1,526,000, according to National Geographic Society.

WAC Recruiting Chief Plans Final Inspection Tour

Major Noble, who has held her present position for three and a half years, will visit Richmond, Oakland, Pleasant Hills and stations in the Sacramento Valley from 3 December through 6 December.

A graduate of the University of California, Major Noble supervised the WAC recruiting activities of the 10 recruiting main stations in the Sixth Army Area.

Maj. Sarah C. Seawell, who has recently returned from the Far East Command, will replace Major Noble.

MARS Chief Due Here; Plan Local Open House

MARS, a joint Army-Air Force operation, was activated 26 November, '48, to promote amateur interest in military radio communications. It also provides a system of nets which can be available to the Armed Forces in time of emergency.

In the Sixth Army area there are 115 major, central type clearing stations and 848 individual stations run by "ham" operators. The MARS station at the Presidio coordinates the other area stations and also has direct ties with Hawaii, Alaska and Washington, D.C.

The net stands ready to assist any type of emergency or disaster operation. During last winter's flood period more than 300 critical messages were handled by the Presidio station which was then located on top of Bldg. 35.

Of prime interest to the individual during normal times is the "morale" use made of the stations. Besides Red Cross, Chaplain and Special Services business, MARS will handle personal messages.

This means that if a soldier had a sick family member and wanted to learn of his condition, he could ask MARS to check for him. The Presidio station would radio the amateur closest to the soldier's home. The "ham" would then call the home and relay the message back to the Presidio. This service is for free!

MARS messages include requests for money, arrival information and or emergency help requests for blood, serum, etc. They may be transmitted anywhere in the United States or anywhere overseas where there are Army or Air Force installations. Message forms are available at the Sixth Army Communications Center, Bldg. 35.

Maj. Warren H. Robson

The new MARS station has about $12,000 worth of equipment, seven operators, two repairmen and operates 20 hours a day, from 0800 to 0400 hours. Besides standard transmitting and receiving equipment, there are radio-teletype receivers and senders and VHF equipment.

To increase facilities for receiving and sending personal messages for the holiday season, MARS, for 60 days, starting 1 December, will open a nation-wide network, MARS Army Traffic Net (MATN). It will be run on a 12-hour basis utilizing two standby members from each state who will pass on messages to other amateur members in the state.

Rau, chairman of the Presidio and Sub-Post drives, turned over a $35,905.66 check as Col. Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, looked on. The Presidio also raised $982.51 in unpaid pledges, bringing the total donations to $36,888.17, or 102.4 per cent of the original goal.

New Series

Medicare Bill Discussion; Wives Will Receive ID Card

Service dependents become eligible 7 December for certain civilian medical care under the Dependents' Medical Care Act.

Before 1 July, 1957, wives will receive a Dependents' Authorization for Medical Care card (DD Form 1173) listing all persons dependent upon the service husband. The card must be presented whenever medical treatment is requested.

Until the new cards are issued, service dependents should identify themselves by the best means possible when requesting medical care.

Husbands can obtain the card by applying to their Commanding Officers. Service wives living apart from their husbands, but who are not divorced, can obtain an application blank (DD Form 1171) from the nearest Army installation.

The Dependents' Medical Care Act also applies to a man if he is dependent on his wife and if she is a member of one of the uniformed services on active duty for more than 30 days.

Spouses eligible for both service and civilian care are the lawful wife of an active duty serviceman and the dependent lawful husband of an active duty servicewoman.

Unmarried legitimate children who will be able to use both facilities are those under 21; those over 21 but dependent for more than one-half of support because of a mental or physical incapacity that existed before they became 21; and those under 23, dependent for more than one-half of support because of full-time enrollment in an institution of higher learning approved by the Secretary of Defense.

Dependents eligible for service care only are dependent parents or parents-in-law and unremarried widows or dependent widowers of deceased service personnel who died while on active duty or retired status.

By the Numbers

The use of the "serial number," now called Army Service Number, began in 1918.

He will be assigned to the United Nations Command Military Armistice Commission. The general, who has commanded the brigade since March, 1955, will fly to Korea from Travis AFB about 20 Feb.

No replacement has yet been announced.

Why They Reenlist "I am a veteran of more than 20 years' military service," says M/Sergeant Charles D. Mahon (above); "I've taken six more to fill my own vacancy as first sergeant of the 163rd MP Company. I live on the Post with my wife and five children and I respect and appreciate the security provided us by the Army." "I have learned," says Sfc. Nathan Margulies (right), of Headquarters Company, 6002nd SU, "that during 14 years of Army service, military life is the most suitable economically for my family and myself." Sgt. Margulies is on duty with the unit's Provost Marshal Allotment Investigation. His career includes an assignment as Intelligence agent in Austria during World War II. He reenlisted this week for three more years.

Some Hints

Many Xmas Fire Hazards Can, Should Be Avoided

Christmas trees and greens should be used only from 18 December to 3 January. Decorations should be flameproofed by the Fire Departments at the Presidio, Fort Cronkhite or Angel Island. Attach name and address to the material and take it to one of these stations.

Trees should be placed in water in a container of sand, and water should be replenished each day. Trees should not stand near sources of heat and should not block room entrances or home doorways.

Electric lighting sets that bear the Underwriters' Laboratories (UL) label should be used. Using candles on the trees or nearby where there is danger of open flame coming in contact with the tree or other combustible material is prohibited. Lighting sets should be checked for frayed wires, loose connections and broken sockets.

Gift wrappings should not be accumulated in the home and should not be burned in the fireplace.

Gifts should not be combustible and should not be operated by hazardous materials such as alcohol, kerosene or gasoline.

Ash trays should be available for smokers and smoking prohibited near the tree.

A blast of flame and a sound system which authentically reproduces the takeoff noise of a Nike will be featured.

The flash and curling smoke effect of the flame will be achieved through the use of sweet peas, pansies, orchids, baby breath, lily of the valley and a variety of yellow, purple and red blossoms.

The overall size of the float mounted on a tractor will be 42 feet long, 20 feet wide and 17 feet high from the tip of the Nike to the ground. About one and one-half ton of flowers will be used.

Col. William M. Cohoon, Military Personnel Procurement Officer, Headquarters Sixth Army, Project Officer, directed the designing and blueprinting. Valley Decorating Co. of Fresno, Calif., will construct the float.

Scott Club Revamped; Celebrates

More than 200 NCOs and wives gathered at the Fort Scott NCO Club last night to view the renovation progress and enjoy a buffet dinner and refreshments.

Most striking change in the club is the new lounge area which faces the "million dollar" view of the Golden Gate Bridge and San Francisco Bay. The other major addition is a terrazzo floor which was installed for $2,000.

The club saved several thousand dollars on the lounge area, because club members built the area in their spare time. The major purpose behind the whole alteration project was to situate the lounge to take advantage of the view.

Several officers from Post headquarters were among those who attended this half-way function. The whole project is expected to be completed within three months when the new kitchen and dining area are finished.

Dog Show Set For Saturday At Local Club

Star Presidian readers are asked to tell their little boys and girls about the wonderful dog show which takes place at the Presidio Service Club 8 December at 1400 hours.

There is a blue ribbon for each entry, and young owners may vie for any dog prize covering nine categories in the field of show dogdom. There are three separate prizes in each category which probably will include even fire hydrant and lamp post awareness in relation to the local scene.

The dog catcher will be under MP restriction on the afternoon of 8 December, so young dog owners and their best friends are free to walk to and from the Service Club.

Registration blanks for the Mutt Show will be delivered on the Presidio through regular distribution. Families living off Post will be enabled to secure blanks for their pets through Post Exchanges, the Commissary and other media.

If further information on the Presidio Mutt Show is desired, please call Miss Walker at the Service Club, extension 2000, any afternoon during the week.

Chapel Christmas Concert Will Highlight Britten Carols

The annual Christmas concert by the Presidio Post Chapel choir will be presented Sunday, 16 December, in the main chapel at 1930 hours.

Directed by Gary Hall of San Francisco, the program will highlight a series of carols by Benjamin Britten, accompanied by Mary May, the well-known Bay Area harpist. Kay Shipley and Jeanette Allen, soloists, will be featured in the work.

These numbers are derived from Polish, French, Spanish, English, Russian, German and Finnish melodies. The Sixth Army bandsmen are appearing in the final phase of the Christmas concert in a special arrangement for choir and instrumentalists.

Enlisted personnel interested in the job are urged to call the Star Presidian office, Ext. 4244, or call in person at Building 87-A, Erwin said.

Interested parties should contact the Star Presidian at the earliest possible moment since familiarization with job techniques and news sources is of vital importance, Erwin added.

Want To Be A California Reserve Game Warden?

So you want to be a Reserve Warden.

Want a hard job for no pay? Are you in good physical condition, able to endure long hours of work under strict discipline? Are you willing to pay for your own gun, badge, uniform and personal expenses? Can you pass a rigid character and experience test? Complete a tough training course?

All right, you asked for it. Here's the story:

The Department of Fish and Game's Reserve Warden program has been in existence nearly 15 years and under just such conditions as those outlined above, enthusiastic volunteers have turned out regularly for a 10- to 12-week schooling period leading to a commission in the Reserve Fish and Game Patrol. The program resulted from sportsmen's demands and it has produced large dividends.

The reserves regularly spend at least one day a month on duty paired with regular wardens near metropolitan areas where anglers and hunters concentrate. In addition the reserves help out during seasonal opening and closing days and holidays when there is heavy pressure on the patrol. They have spent thousands of hours of their own time and have taken part in hundreds of arrests for fish and game violations.

The volunteer aides also are assigned to sport shows, fairs and other special events, freeing regular wardens for other duties.

But most of all, the reserves perform a public relations service by working closely with sportsmen's organizations and the public in their own area, helping to spread the firsthand knowledge they have gained of fish and game conservation enforcement problems.

During their training the Reserve Warden candidates are taught about law enforcement procedures, in the field and in court. They learn how to handle firearms, fishing and hunting gear and patrol techniques. They study the United States and California Constitutions and the State Fish and Game Code. Throughout the course they are told of the need for firm but courteous and impartial treatment of the public with whom they come in contact.

Reserves serve a probationary period of one year during which they are subject to instant dismissal for any infraction. The result: only the most capable and most devoted volunteers make the grade. They are under the constant supervision of the regular wardens and the Wildlife Protection Supervisors (except in Region I, which does not have a Reserve Warden program).

Colonel C. C. W. Allan
Shoots Hole-in-One

Colonel Allan Fires Ace

If Colonel Charles C. W. Allan, Sixth Army deputy chief of staff for public affairs, still wears a happy grin on his face today, it's because he joined the exclusive club of golf hole-in-one shooters.

The colonel fired his first hole-in-one on the Presidio golf course Saturday after 25 years of devotion to the game.

He turned the trick on the 160-yard sixth hole, using a number six iron.

Zaninovich Paces Hq. To Triumph

George Zaninovich, former Stanford University star, paced Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, to a 46-40 triumph over Headquarters 30th AAA Group in the American League opener of the Presidio Intramural Basketball League.

Zaninovich, who tanked 18 points for Headquarters, will be lost to the team soon, however. The Army is presenting the ex-Indian cager with an early release on his birthday, 12 December, to return to Stanford for work toward his Master's Degree.

In the National League, the 537th Engineers walloped Headquarters Company, 6002 SU, 72-28, as Collins poured in 24 points.

The Honor Guard, led by Gene Guerra, who fired home 21 markers, ripped Headquarters, 752nd AAA Battalion, 64-46, in a Western League contest.

D Battery of the 9th AAA Missile Battalion won the preseason tournament with a 36-30 triumph over Headquarters Company of the 30th Engineers in the finals.

Parks with 16 and Newsham with 14 paced the AAA team to the win.

Post Sports Office also announced it is tentatively scheduling a Holiday Tournament from 26 December to 3 January.

Actual play, however, depends on the number of entries received in the sports office. The tournament is designed to meet the recreational needs of Presidio personnel who will not be on leave during the holiday period.

Plans call for formation of an eight-team league. Units interested in participating should contact Hal Fischer, athletic director, for further information.

Three Torero Hoopsters On Injury Roster; Opener Set Tonight

Although three Toreros are operating at something less than full strength, the local cagers, honed to razor sharpness by taskmaster Hal Fischer, are ready, willing and able to get the Army-Air Force League schedule on its way with a socko start.

Fischer, who has had his charges hard at work since mid-October, reports that Ronnie Reynoir, Norm Ellenberger and Carroll Williams all have injuries that hamper their court abilities.

Reynoir, the angular southerner from Loyola of New Orleans, came up with a dislocated wrist; Ellenberger has a pulled groin muscle and Williams a wrenched knee.

All Expected to see Action

All are expected to see action in the opener however limited their appearances may be.

The remaining Toreros, and there are a flock of talented cagers on the squad, are set for the Travis Flyers.

The Presidio quint will still have a powerful scoring punch despite the fact that the three mainstays may spend some time on the bench.

Fischer is expected to rely on Tony Psaltis, the San Francisco Greek who shot to fame as a USC Trojan star, and Hube Brown, Niagara cager for three years before Uncle Sam put the request in for his services. Brown, reports have it, has looked particularly good in practice sessions against S. F. State and City College.

These worthies can take up the slack when and if Williams, Ellenberger and Reynoir leave the contest.

Fans Like Williams' Hustle

If Williams is benched because of his knee ailment the Toreros lose a real sparkplug. The little hustler has a great reputation among northern California cage fans for his drive and shot-making abilities.

Reynoir, too, has shown much during his tenure on the club, while Ellenberger, the team captain and lone returning veteran, is a gifted athlete whose contribution to victory can't always be measured by the points column in the box score.

To add still greater lustre to an already outstanding team, the Toreros can call on John Blackwell, stringbean former Grant Tech player, Tor Hansen from San Jose State and Glen Scott from Alabama.

So far three contests are on the Presidio schedule before the Christmas holidays intervene. The Toreros meet Hamilton Air Force Base on 7 December and Castle AFB on 14 December. They also plan a road trip to Arcata to meet Humboldt State's Loggers.

Volleyball Champs— Master Sergeant Catalino R. Ignacio of the 752nd AAA Gun Battalion accepts trophy from Colonel Daniel A. Ranney, C.O., 30th AAA Group, for winning group championship recently. The victory qualified the 752nd to enter the Sixth AAA Regional Command games in Los Angeles.

Volleyball Title Won By Locals

Fort MacArthur — Fort Scott's 752nd AAA Missile Battalion took the volleyball championship of the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command yesterday, whipping the 933rd AAA Missile Battalion of Los Angeles 15-8, 4-15, 15-13, 15-10, in the finals.

The victory handed the San Francisco team a berth in the All-Army Antiaircraft Command Volleyball Tournament, scheduled 1-10 Dec. at Selfridge Air Force Base, Detroit, Michigan.

The 752nd gained the Regional Command title without a loss, going unbeaten through both the 30th AAA Group Tournament in San Francisco and the Regional tournament at Fort MacArthur.

Earlier victories for the 752nd in the Los Angeles tournament included the first-round triumph over the 933rd, 15-8, 15-13, and a semi-final rout of the 519th AAA Battalion of Camp Hanford, Washington, 15-3, 15-5.

The 933rd stayed in the double-elimination tournament to the finals by defeating the 26th AAA Group at Fort Lawton, Washington, 15-8, 15-6, and the 519th Battalion, 15-7, 15-10. The 519th took its first-round encounter from the 26th Group, 7-15, 15-10, 15-6.

The Fort Scott team was seriously challenged only once, in the second set of the finals clash with the 933rd. The 752nd jumped to a 4-0 lead, but failed to score again until the next set as the 933rd grabbed a 15-4 victory, on the basis of brilliant play led by 1st Lt. Melvin Green and Pfc. Gilbert Haimshohn.

As the 6th AA Regional Command champion, the 752nd will compete for the All-Army Antiaircraft Command championship against the champions of the 1st, 2nd, 4th and 5th Regional Commands. Volleyball is one of four sports organized on a command-wide basis to promote athletic participation and build morale in the Army Antiaircraft Command.

Ord Gridders Edge Sill For 8th In Row

The Fort Ord Warriors, Western service football champions, remained in the unbeaten class last week, thanks to a missed point after touchdown attempt.

The Warriors squeaked to their eighth straight victory, 15-14, at Fort Ord Saturday, over the Fort Sill, Okla., artillerymen.

Ord got into the scoring column first when Sam (First Down) Brown, former UCLA tailback, returned a punt 70 yards into the end zone and booted the extra point in the opening period.

The Cannoneers took the lead at the half, 12-7, with a pair of TD's during the second period. Bob Bauman plunged over for the first Sill score, climaxing a 49-yard drive. Ord's Leroy Vaughn blocked the extra point try.

Sill got another touchdown in the second period on a pitchout from quarterback Fred Meyers, ex-Army and Oklahoma A&M star, to Fred Delgadillo of San Jose State. The PAT misfired.

Ord moved out in front during the third period, 13-12, when California's Paul Larson threw to A. D. Williams, one-time College of the Pacific star, for 28 yards. Fort Sill blocked the conversion.

Each team tallied a safety in the second half to make the missed conversion the margin of victory.

Army's '56 Progress Report Being Distributed To Field

Washington — The Secretary of the Army has published a special report in the form of a brochure titled, "United States Army Reports '56 Progress" which is now being distributed on a world-wide basis from General Headquarters to company-level.

The report shows the Army's tremendous progress during 1956 and explains why its forces are deployed on three continents and has personnel stationed in 73 foreign countries.

The Army is pictured in perspective showing its mission, scope, and some of the ground force accomplishments during the past year with the introduction of the NIKE B, M56 self-propelled 90 mm gun, Missile Master, combat television, Helmet radio, Mechanical Mule and several new aircraft models.

According to the report, studies and tests directed toward improving the Army's organizational structure in the missile and atomic age were accelerated in 1956. As a result of those studies, the word PENTANA has entered the Army's dictionary. In other words, a five-sided basic organizational structure, instead of the triangular formations which evolved in WWII, will be used.

The report deals with research and development in the missiles field, the missile master system, new equipment, Army aviation, man power, reserve forces, logistics and many other important phases which make our Army the most successful in the world.

The U. S. Army is today the most superbly trained and equipped in our history. The report points out that the many splendid achievements of the past year should give every member of the Army confidence and determination to meet the challenge of the future as an integral part of the FIRST TEAM. New WAC Chief

Milligan Named To Succeed Galloway As New WAC Chief

The fifth WAC director, Colonel Milligan is presently with the Plans and Operations Branch, G-3, Headquarters, Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe, Va. She previously served as WAC Staff Advisor, U. S. Army, Europe and WAC deputy director.

Born in East Pittsburgh, Penn., Colonel Milligan holds a bachelor of science degree in education from Carnegie Institute of Technology and a master of education degree from the University of Pittsburgh. She was also graduated from the Army Command and General Staff College.

Musical Deadeyes

Every member of the U.S. Army Field Band qualified for marksmanship awards during the annual range firing at Fort Meade, Md. The record is significant since the band travels and plays concert schedules most of the year.

Although the "Star-Spangled Banner" was written by Francis Scott Key on 14 September, 1814, it wasn't until 1931 that it was officially adopted as the National Anthem.

Some RA Integrations A Year Sooner

A limited number of officers for Regular Army integration will be selected in June 1957 instead of June 1958, as originally announced.

The date does not change basic eligibility requirements or application instructions under the Regular Army Officer Augmentation plan.

The Army expects to appoint some 7000 officers to Regular Army status during the next two years. They will be selected from the active and inactive Reserve, National Guard, former officers, and qualified specialists not now holding commissions but with scientific backgrounds. The majority selected will be junior officers.

G-4 Plans Chief Named Head Of New Joint Supply Group

Greater efficiency through interservice supply coordination is the goal of Area Coordinating Group 6 which was established following a meeting early this month of Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine supply representatives located within the Sixth Army area.

Under the direction of the Joint Chiefs of Staff the Army has convened similar meetings in each of its commands throughout the world. These meetings and their resulting coordinating groups have been given the following purpose:

- Minimize procurement, stocking and cross hauling of material assets of the military services.
- Avoid duplicity of effort through joint utilization of the capabilities of each military service to provide service incidental to the supply of material.
- Utilizing material assets of the military services to the fullest extent practicable.
- Providing for a systematic exchange of supply management information necessary for the accomplishment of the above.

Chairman of the Area Coordinating Group 6 is Col. Thomas M. McGrail who will hold this position until the start of the next fiscal year when the chairmanship will rotate to a Navy officer.

Colonel McGrail also directs the new Sixth Army Interservice Supply Division. His assistant, Maj. Ervin L. Schley, explains that part of the job of the new division is to give official recognition at Army level to supply trading agreements that have been in effect already at installation level.

Colonel McGrail

Before supply agreements have been up to the initiative of the individual post commander. Now there is an official coordinating group to give assistance when needed to these agreements.

From 50 to 75 service installations in the Sixth Army area are eligible to take part in this interservice supply and service trading, according to Major Schley.

"But in my opinion," he says, "the greatest savings will come not in money, but in manpower. We will eliminate duplication of effort."

Examples of this cooperation already in effect are the AAA units stationed at Air Force bases. In many instances the Army men use the Air Force recreational, messing and housing facilities. They even help pull Air Force details.

Military policing duties are another example of services working together. In San Francisco the Army handles these duties, while in Seattle the Navy performs the same function.

Joint telephone exchange service, taxi service and even typewriter repair service are presently operating in some areas for the benefit of more than one service.

The Hoover Commission was one group that pointed out the possible benefits that could be derived from such coordination. They examined common items such as screwdrivers that are used by all services and found that different prices were paid by different services for the identical item.

Sixth Army's new Interservice Supply Division has only been in operation about two weeks and will not really be in full operation until the first of next year, states Major Schley.

Third Time this year the 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction) comes out winner in Best Mess competition. Company Commander Capt. Charles F. McCurdy congratulates his mess steward, Sp.1 Wilbert J. Broussard, for fine work in the kitchen. The two men were presented the award by Col. Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, this week.

Signal Confab Here Draws Top Officers

About 26 visiting officers representing 20 installations took part in the panel discussion meetings. Various procedures and problems comprised the discussion topics.

9th AANCOs, Specialists Move Into New Quarters

Bachelor non-commissioned officers and specialists of equivalent pay grade of the 9th AAA Missile Battalion, separated from their families, have moved into new NCO quarters.

The Battalion Bachelor NCO Quarters were officially dedicated by Col. Daniel A. Ranney, Commanding Officer, 30th AAA Group and Lt. Col. Frank A. Bates, Jr., Commanding Officer, 9th AAA Missile Bn.

Residents of the BNCOQ elected M/Sgt. George L. Clavin, Battery "B," Sfc. Conray Thomas, Headquarters Battery, and Sfc. Gerald L. Schnurr, Medical Detachment, to the Board of Governors. The officers are with the 9th Battalion.

Maj. John E. Doane, executive officer of the 9th AAA Missile Bn., who initiated the project, has been appointed advisor.

Wins Cash, Certificate

Kenneth S. Erwin, editor of The Star Presidian, was presented a Department of the Army Performance Award Certificate and a $200 check for outstanding performance. The presentation was made by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander.

When lowered, the American flag is folded into a triangular shape with stars showing to represent the cocked hat of the American Revolution.

Test New Rifle Instruction System

Trainfire I, a new system of rifle instruction, may replace the present 50-year-old Army training program. The system is designed to give trainees realistic instruction in the type of shooting that could be expected in combat.

Several hundred trainees have learned to shoot under the testing of Trainfire I at Fort Jackson, S. C., and Fort Carson, Colo. The trainees, firing at pop-up, partially-obscured targets, scored 10 per cent more hits than conventionally-trained soldiers in recent tests.

Trainfire I targets are electrically powered, remotely controlled mechanisms which present a silhouette and fall when struck by a bullet. The target simulates a human figure that suddenly appears, remains exposed for a few seconds, then disappears.

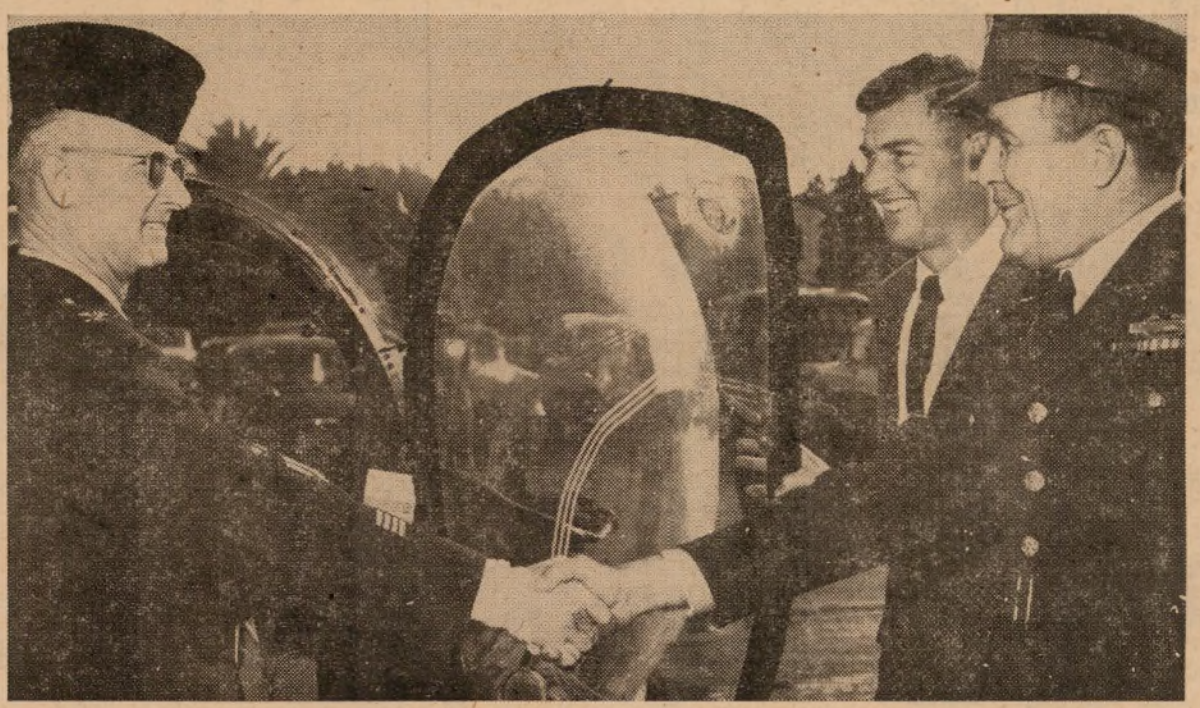
Vol. 5, No. 28 | PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA | Friday 7 December, 1956

Letterman's Anniversary This Month

Letterman Army Hospital this month celebrates its 58th year as an Army hospital. On 1 December, 1898, it was officially designated as a general hospital. Prior to this it served the Independent Division 8th Army Corps.



This hospital has played a major role during the critical times of both United States and Bay Area history.

Today the hospital cares for some 700 patients daily. Although this is far below the 3500-bed capacity of World War II or the 1200-bed service of World War I, the hospital is still growing. Two years ago the thoracic surgery service was added and soon a new recovery ward will be opened.

Letterman first met the challenge of emergency during the Spanish-American War when it treated 5,390 sick and wounded patients.

But the people of San Francisco owe their deepest gratitude to Letterman for service performed during the great fire and earthquake of 1906. At this time the hospital opened its doors to the victims of the quake and provided maximum facilities for their care. Permanent buildings could not handle the great mass of needy so a tent city was set up for their relief.

Of course, in World War II Letterman operated at maximum capacity. It served the returning soldiers from the Far East which included the "Angels of Bataan." Again during the Korean conflict the hospital served those injured in combat.

A Presidio First took place Wednesday when the Army became the first military service in the Bay Area to utilize commercial helicopter transportation. Above, Col. John K. Miller, Chief, Arizona Military District, said goodby to Deputy Post Commander Carl E. Lundquist, stepped into the waiting aircraft, piloted by Noble Stark (center), and 11 minutes later arrived at the San Francisco International Airport.

★ ★ ★ Flight Time: 11 Minutes To SF Airport

The Presidio took a bold step into the future Wednesday when it said goodbye to visiting Col. John K. Miller, Chief, Arizona Military District, and then called a helicopter instead of a cab to transport him to San Francisco International Airport.

This is the first time in the Bay Area that a military service has utilized commercial helicopter transportation, according to Post Transportation Officer Lt. Col. J. J. Speciale. Commercial service started Monday in San Francisco.

The great potential of a helicopter-airline combination was strikingly illustrated by Wednesday's example. It took Colonel Miller 11 minutes to fly to International Airport from the Presidio parade ground. He stepped out of his air-taxi, walked a few feet to the waiting airliner, and 2 hours and 40 minutes later landed in Phoenix, Ariz.

Deputy Post Commander Carl E. Lundquist, who was present at the takeoff, had his eye on the future when he said: "With our highways so overburdened this is the coming

Wilson Speaks

Aviation Missile Role For Army Is Clarified

The Army's development in the aircraft and missile field was sharply curtailed—except in the anti-aircraft field—by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson in a memorandum which last week clarified the roles and missions of the Army and the Air Force.

In accordance with Mr. Wilson's memo, the Army will:

Have a combat zone responsibility up to 100 miles forward of the line of contact with an enemy and extending 100 miles to the rear of the front lines. Earlier directives established the Army's forward area from 50 to 100 miles.

Retain the Army aircraft limit of 5,000 pounds for fixed wing planes and fix at 20,000 pounds the empty weight limit for helicopters in combat operation for command, reconnaissance and airlift of personnel and materiel. Previously there were no limitations on the size of helicopters.

Restrict aviation research to specific requirements peculiar to the needs of the Army, making maximum use of Air Force and Navy aircraft research and development facilities.

Confine development of surface-to-surface missiles for tactical use to a 200-mile range. This will preclude Army employment of an intermediate range missile.

Assume sole responsibility for developing and manning anti-aircraft missiles such as the Nike and Talos for point air defense.

The Air Force will:

Provide air lift of tactical units and supplies and airborne operations in currently approved strategic concepts.

Continued tactical air support and battlefield interdiction for ground forces beyond that which can be provided by Army surface-to-surface missiles.

Have exclusive responsibility for research and employment of land-based intermediate range missiles as well as the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile.

Maintain area defense against air attack and responsibility for developing and manning of longer

Red Cross Taking Large Role In Hungary; Needs Financing

The Red Cross today is hard at work feeding, clothing and housing the thousands of refugees who have fled from Hungary. In addition this international relief organization is providing medical care and message service for the needy.

To help pay for this emergency assistance the Red Cross has launched a $5 million drive. Presidio personnel, who are assured that 100 per cent of the money will go for Hungarian relief, are invited to contribute.

"This is not going to be a big thing," explains Raymond J. Gilbreth, Presidio Field Director for the American Red Cross, "because we just finished the big Bay Area Crusade."

"This is strictly an emergency campaign for relief of the Hungarians. Everyone knows the need is there; no need of me telling them what to do," Gilbreth adds.

Three At Presidio Have Heart Failure

Sudden death visited the Presidio in three separate instances during the past 10 days.

Captain Bernard L. Heller, Post Commissary officer, died here on 1 December, of a heart attack. At the Presidio since 1954, Captain Heller was on military orders to Formosa at the time of his death. He entered Federal service in 1942, leaving it in 1946, and returning to active duty in 1950.

The deceased officer is survived by his parents and his wife and two children. His interment took place in San Francisco National Cemetery, 5 December, after military services at the Post Chapel.

Sgt. Mateo Bonifacio, 51, member of the Sixth Army Band, died suddenly on 29 November. His wife died only a few months ago, and Sgt. Bonifacio is survived by their six children. His body was flown home to the Philippines on 3 December.

Master Sergeant Stanley J. Lacki, a Letterman Army Hospital patient, aged 32, died of a heart attack at Letterman, 29 November. He is survived by his wife.

Sgt. Lacki's body was sent to Chicago, Illinois, for burial.

DOD Seeks 17,000 For Army In Jan.

Washington—The Department of Defense has asked the Selective Service System to provide 17,000 men in January for assignment to the Army.

The monthly calls for inductees have been the same since October.

The other services do not intend to call for selectees in January, the DOD says. (AFPS)

Holiday Leave Problems

Are you asking for Christmas leave? If your Commander doesn't approve it for the exact days you request, here's why:

The Army is urging all its installation commanders to phase personnel leave periods during the Christmas and New Year holidays in order to help alleviate traffic congestion.

According to DA Circular 55-21, a lack of coordination and advance planning with respect to authorizing leave for military personnel in the past caused service and civilian travelers to have considerable difficulty in utilizing commercial transportation facilities during the holidays.

In addition, highway congestion increased during the holidays and there were numerous accidents involving Army personnel.

As it is anticipated that heavy demands will be placed on commercial transportation facilities this coming holiday season, the Army is stressing that all agencies exert every effort to help facilitate Christmas and New Year leave traffic. (ANS)

Commercial Helicopter Service

Explaining the mission of the Transportation Corps to provide the fastest, cheapest service, Colonel Speciale says, "We'll use any form of transportation—whether it be rocket ship or dog sled—as long as it gives us the most efficient service."

At present Post Transportation is experimenting with two aspects of commercial helicopter service in order to attain comparative cost figures between this and conventional service.

Air-taxi service to International Airport is one phase. Any colonel or civilian of like rank is entitled to sedan service to the airport. From now on any person who requests it may travel by helicopter instead.

The other experiment in helicopter utilization concerns the transportation of men and supplies from the Presidio to Fort Baker and Angel Island. The DPC has approved a 30-day experimental agreement with Rick Helicopters, Inc. Post transportation hopes, during this trial period, to get cost figures to compare with vessel operating expenses.

Willard P. Farnum, military representative for American Airlines, was also at the Presidio to witness the historic departure from conventional taxi service. He explained that Colonel Miller was the first helicopter delivered passenger to fly American Airlines out of San Francisco.

Defense Department

New Program Stresses Mutual Understanding

Good relations between the public and the military as a goal have received increased emphasis with the publication of a new Department of Defense directive. The policy applies overseas as well as in the United States.

Although the services pursue extensive community relations programs, the DOD order emphasizes the necessity for commands and individual military and civilian members of the Armed Forces, and their dependents, to show an interest in community affairs, act with "sympathetic understanding" of local problems, and take part in activities of interest to the people of the civilian community.

According to Reuben B. Robertson, Jr., deputy secretary of defense, the DOD is aware of the excellent work which is being done by local commanders in maintaining good relations with civic communities.

While this is primarily a local responsibility, Mr. Robertson said, there must be a coordinated drive to bolster those areas where community relations can be improved.

The directive calls for renewed effort to better Armed Forces relationships with the civilian population in the U.S. and overseas by generating public understanding and community cooperation with respect to our national defense activities.

Money will be collected on a volunteer basis at company level. The aid it buys will be speeded by fastest channels already set up by Red Cross and sent into Hungary through its neutralistic Swiss International Committee of Red Cross which has the only ingress for relief supplies into the stricken area.

Almost daily airlift shipments of vital supplies from the East Coast are being made via Air Force, TWA and other commercial airlines at no cost to Red Cross. Red Cross survey teams in Hungary and Austria keep all 40 participating Red Cross societies apprised of needs as they arise.

The International Red Cross is presently serving 50,000 hot meals a day and by the end of the month expects to be feeding over 200,000 daily meals of 800 to 1,000 calories. Meals go first to families from 8,000 destroyed homes and the 30,000 that were damaged in the Budapest fighting. Next in line will be those families whose breadwinners are dead or unable to work, those with more than four children, old persons and invalids.

Children up to 14 will get hot milk, with sugar and vitamins. Special additional foods will go to those under three. In addition to food, the Red Cross is giving priority to coal and gas to keep hospitals and children's institutions warm.

Report!

Army Aliens Must Register Each January

Under the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, aliens serving on active duty with the Army in the Continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Guam, or the Virgin Islands, are required by law to report their address to the U. S. Immigration and Naturalization Service each January.

Service personnel falling into this category should obtain and fill out an address report form (I-53) at the nearest post office or Immigration and Naturalization Service office and return it to the clerk.

In addition, aliens serving with the U. S. Army overseas must report their address within ten days after returning to the Continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, or the Virgin Islands. Army Regulations 608-73, dated January 4, 1956, outlines details of this requirement.

Engineers Plan Party

The Sixth Army Engineer Section Employees Association holds its annual Christmas party 21 December, in Building 35. Santa Claus will be honor guest and the customary festivities will prevail.

More Mothers

Motherhood won out over a career in Sixth Army Engineer Section this week when Mrs. Lilly Jay, a clerk-stenographer in the section for the past nine years, resigned instead of taking a maternity furlough.

Matters are somewhat complicated in Mrs. Jay's family circle due to the fact that her baby's nurse was also expecting a blessed event.

Army Missile

range surface-to-air missiles such as the Bomarc for carrying out this assignment.

The Navy, in close cooperation with the Army and Air Force, is charged with development and use of ship-based air defense weapons systems for accomplishment of its mission.

The Marine Corps is authorized to adapt for its use such surface-to-air weapons systems developed by the other services as may be required for its assigned function.

Mr. Wilson said these clarifications do not "predetermine the weapons to be used by each of the services and their numbers, nor the numbers of men to be trained in various fields."

He added, however, that the Joint Chiefs of Staff had been asked to recommend adjustments in Air Force tactical wings which may be eliminated as the number of planned Army guided missile and rocket units increase.

Washington (AFPS)—Social Security tax deductions, starting with January paychecks, will be made at the rate of two and one quarter per cent of monthly or semi-monthly base pay.

The maximum yearly deduction under the law is $94.50 based on the first $4,200 of base pay. Allowances, incentive and special pay are not taxable for Social Security purposes.

When basic pay is $4,200 (monthly tax rate of $7.88) or less, the tax will be deducted in equal monthly amounts throughout the year.

However, many warrant officers and those in the grade of O-3 and above whose basic pay exceeds $4,200 will be taxed monthly during the year at the rate of two and one quarter per cent only until the $94.50 total is reached.

The monthly tax for service academy cadets, who receive $111.15 monthly, will be $2.50.

The table above gives the monthly rates of Social Security tax deductions according to pay grade and years of service.

Headquarters Company Sixth Army Men Volunteer Fifth Give Of Year

By Merrill Harrison
6th Army Information NCO

Carrying on a tradition begun during the Korean War, 350 men of Headquarters Company, Sixth Army, last weekend donated $236 to bring the mother or wife of an as yet unselected patient to San Francisco to visit him at Letterman Army Hospital at Christmas.

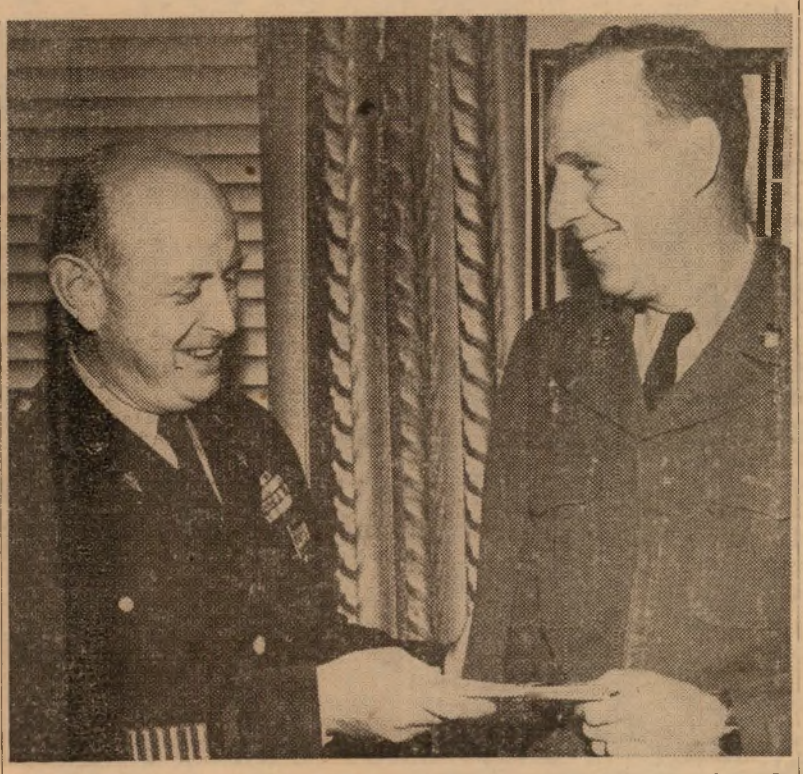
The 30 November payday donation of these men, about half of whom are career Regular Army men who have been through the combat mill and the other half of whom are younger inductees—veterans of the Cold War—was the fifth and last donation they'll make from their pay in 1956.

They started by ponying up for the March of Dimes drive in January. In February they contributed to the Crusade for Freedom.

July and August saw them giving to the Army Emergency Relief and then came the Bay Area United Crusade Drive in September and October, when they donated $1,604, to bring their first four gifts to a total of $2,417.05—from soldiers some of whose pay starts, before income tax and other deductions—at only $78 a month.

Ask them why they give to these various causes and most of them will come up with the answer that soldiers though they may be, and far from their own homes as they may be, they're members of the community where they are stationed and as such they feel that they are entitled to participate in these worthy campaigns.

The Army's attitude, of course, is like that of most communities today — cutting down on the number of individual charitable drives in favor of one or two big, well-organized, well-directed campaigns each year to benefit the most worthy causes.



Thus, at the Presidio, it was determined that campaigns would be carried on officially only for the March of Dimes, the Army Emergency Relief Fund and the United Bay Area Crusade in 1956.

This policy has naturally found favor among the soldiers, many of whom remember the appeals made each payday for contributions to one cause after another. But the men of Headquarters Company, who began their own Christmas campaign in 1952, insisted on conducting their own drive for a Letterman patient again this year—despite the donations during the year.

The Christmas project, never tagged, began just before Christmas in 1952 when San Franciscans were contributing to various funds to bring soldiers' mothers to Letterman. Almost on the spur of the moment the soldiers of Headquarters Company said, "If the civilians can make a soldier-patient at Letterman and his mother happy for a few days at Christmas, so can we." And they did.

Mrs. Anna Sander of Lapwai, Ida., a widow, had a son in Letterman, Corporal Kenneth Sander, an infantryman paralyzed as a result of wounds received in action in Korea. She hadn't seen him since he had been evacuated from Korea to Letterman; she couldn't afford the trip. But she spent a wonderful week with her son over Christmas as the guest of the soldiers of the Headquarters Company who didn't know her or her son until they met them both after her arrival in San Francisco.

In fact the men at the company have never known who would be the recipients of their gifts. They chip in their money, their first sergeant presents it to Letterman's commander and it's up to the hospital authorities to select the patient who will be visited. That is handled very carefully.

Christmas Help money, totalling $236, donated by the men of Headquarters Company (6000), is presented to Col. Paul S. Fancher, commanding officer of Letterman Army Hospital, by M/Sgt. John W. Wooten, Headquarters Company first sergeant.

The doctors and nurses at the hospital screen their wards, looking first for a patient physically unable to travel. Next, it must be a patient whose wife or mother could not afford the trip to San Francisco. And the patient must also be one who will really benefit, as the doctors put it, from a visit of his wife or mother, one who would get a real "lift," as did Sergeant Louis O'Brien in 1953.

Sergeant O'Brien's case approached the melodramatic. He was on duty with the Army Engineers in England when he fell prey to polio and was flown back to Letterman in an iron lung to be near his wife and children, at that time living in Pleasanton. His mother, 67-year-old widowed Mrs. Lucy O'Brien, hadn't seen him for six years and Sergeant O'Brien was in bad shape, totally paralyzed and down to less than 85 pounds, unable to lift a finger.

She received a wire in her home in Homer, Mich. How would she like to visit Louis at Christmas—all expenses paid? A frail, small person, Mrs. O'Brien was so excited at the prospect of the totally unexpected trip that after accepting the invitation she suffered a heart attack.

But she recovered in time to make her first plane ride and arrived in San Francisco to spend the happiest Christmas of her life, she said, with her son, who had determined that his mother wouldn't see him flat on his back.

By the time she arrived he was able to sit up, propped with pillows, and with just a little help he was able to embrace her. He'd had his "lift."

Seventeen-year-old Private Leland Langloys of Rockwood, Mich., joined the Army in 1954, finished his eight-week basic training course and went home on a short leave, proud of his uniform. While home he became ill and was taken by his parents to the hospital at Selfridge Air Force Base near Detroit, from where he was flown to Letterman. He had a tumor of the brain and surgery was necessary.

Christmas of 1954 was coming and the young soldier was outwardly cheerful but pretty lonely. His parents had several other youngsters at home and the family was not wealthy. Mrs. Langloys got a wire. Would she like to spend Christmas and a few other days with her son? She would and did.

Several months later Leland was discharged from the hospital and the Army and returned to his home, from where he has written a few letters to his former nurses.

Last year Airman Eugene Boltz, stationed at Castle Air Force Base, Calif., was riding in a car that was hit by a train in August, 1955. His injuries included multiple fractures of the skull, extensive injuries to his face, fractures of both jaws, loss of an eye and a fractured leg. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pierce W. Boltz, rushed to San Francisco from their Jonestown, Pa., home, to visit their critically injured son.

Airman Boltz was in a coma during the entire visit, so before Christmas Mrs. Boltz received a wire. Her son, who had already undergone several surgeries, was on the mend. This year Airman Boltz, still a patient, will probably spend Christmas at home with his family.

Nobody knows yet who will be the patient to be visited this year. Neither the officials at Letterman, who will select him, nor the men of the company, who have paid for the trip. But the men of Headquarters Company aren't worrying. They dropped their dollars into the jar at pay call—their last big give of 1956.

Mine Proof!

New Detector Stops Jeep

Washington—The Army's Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, Fort Belvoir, Va., have developed a jeep-mounted detector which automatically stops the vehicle when it locates a land mine.

The detector, which can find mines buried in and along roadways, covers a path six feet wide directly in front of the jeep and can be moved to either side of the vehicle.

When the search coil passes over a mine, the vehicle is stopped instantly by the brake actuator, a spring-leaded hydraulically operated piston which disengages the clutch and sets the brakes.

In addition, a meter mounted on the panel indicates the presence of the mine, and a system of lights also located on the panel changes from green to red, while an audible signal is received through earphones by the driver.

The detector and its carriage assembly weigh about 700 pounds. The apparatus is transported in racks on the rear and one side of the jeep when not in operation. (ANS)

Last Mule Bows Out . . . Replaced By Helicopter

Helicopters will replace the time-honored mule when the Army's last animal tactical unit is inactivated at Fort Carson, Colorado, this winter, the Department of the Army has announced.

When the 4th Field Artillery Battalion (Pack), which was organized almost half a century ago, becomes a part of Army history, its designation will be moved to Fort Sill, Okla., where it will become the experimental 4th Airphibious Field Artillery Firing Unit.

Personnel of the 4th Pack, organized in 1907, will remain at Fort Carson. Approximately 125 horses and mules are now used by the battalion.

The new airphibious unit was developed by the Continental Army Command, with headquarters at Fort Monroe, Virginia. For experimental purposes, it will be equipped with various artillery weapons, including howitzers and rocket launchers, transportable by helicopter. The unit will test and evaluate the effectiveness of tactics, develop techniques of employment in combat, and study the adequacy of personnel and equipment allocations.

In devising the new organization, the Continental Army Command envisioned that its capabilities would include rapid aerial mobility and rapid emplacement, including an observation system, communication net, and limited ground mobility. Aircraft whose rate of flight is 70 to 100 miles per hour will be used.

Organization of the airphibious unit, to be commanded by a lieutenant colonel, will include 224 officers and enlisted men. Its equipment will include eight reconnaissance, ten utility, twelve one and a half-ton, and eight three-ton helicopters.

In combat operations, tactical employment of the 4th Airphibious is expected to be similar to that of the standard motorized artillery unit.

This unit is expected to be particularly suited for use in special operations in the mountains, Arctic and jungle. It could normally occupy positions which would not be readily occupied, or may be inaccessible to, units with ground transport, including areas surrounded by the enemy. It would also be able to evacuate isolated positions with minimum interference from enemy action.

Continental Army Command officers anticipate that the airphibious unit could move 650 miles in a day's flight. It is expected that an outfit of this sort could communicate and operate over land where roads and airfields are not available, or even water where water transport cannot be provided.

The 4th Field Artillery Battalion (Pack) is the last tactical unit in the Army to use horses and mules. It was activated on June 13, 1907, as the 4th Field Artillery Regiment (Mountain) at Vancouver Barracks, Washington. It trained at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming, and during 1908 and 1909 saw action in the Philippine Islands.

In 1916 and 1917 the unit took part in the punitive expedition into Mexico, and at the outbreak of World War I assisted in training other pack outfits for service in France.

On January 4, 1941, the unit was reorganized as the 4th Field Artillery Battalion (Pack). During World War II it saw service overseas in New Hebrides, Guadalcanal, New Guinea and the Philippine Islands.

Post Provides Top Graders Private Living

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon

In line with recent Army-wide policy augmenting the prestige of non-commissioned officers through separate mess and billeting facilities, the Presidio opened two buildings recently—one for senior women non-coms—and another for its men non-coms at Fort Scott.

Accordingly, with the blessings of commanding officers and first sergeants, some 22 ranking enlisted Presidio men completed moving into their BOQ-type building at Fort Scott, and 15 enlisted women took over private housekeeping in Building 508, adjoining the Lombard Gate.

Senior non-coms among the men were drawn from 6000 SU, 6002 SU, 30th Engineer Group, 548th Ordnance Disposal Unit, 740th AAA, Joint Operations Center, 660th Engineer Group, 99th Engineer Group, 163rd Military Police Company, and other units in which rank and marital status warranted the change.

With a lone Airman, T/Sgt. Gary D. Gravitt, (JOC) in their midst, the men are now in process of adjusting from squad-room life to the more secluded life of soldiers living in smaller individual groups.

The enlisted women, drawn exclusively from Company D of 6002 SU, are likewise devoting their off-duty time to making flowers grow where none grew before; to hanging drapes and pictures and flora and fauna from the far lands in which they have all served as military personnel.

On the distaff side, the new residents as yet encounter no serious problems calling for wide readjustment in their individual ways of life.

"After all," declares Sfc. Mary E. Rice, assigned to Post Finance and Accounting Section, "we have learned to live amicably in larger groups during the past 10 to 13 years of military service. We can still remain individuals in taste and cultural preferences, and we are now learning to allow for our nearest neighbor's likes and dislikes as it affects smaller group living."

The enlisted men see their new way of life as a rather mixed blessing; for instance they revel in maid service provided at group cost. Their billets, a BOQ-type, boast a main lounge and a laundry, but as yet no kitchen. The men eat either in their former mess halls or in the Presidio NCO Mess, but contrary to accepted opinion, they are more quick to enumerate the delights of individual room privacy than are the enlisted women non-coms.

"I appreciate being able to close the door to my own room," says a youthful M/Sergeant, "it's nice to be able to take sack time without having to lose sleep listening to some guy sound off about his latest girl friend or the price of an EM haircut at Joe's barbershop."

The women's new billets formerly served as housing units for small military families. Since their off-Post ration status has not yet been established, they share the cost of home-cooked food and the planning for keeping the frigidaires stocked for week-end dining at home. For the immediate present, they take most of their meals in the consolidated Mess hall or in the Non-Com Club. The men follow pretty nearly the same meal pattern.

Obviously, the only major difficulty being experienced by the men is transportation to and from Fort Scott. Not all of them own cars, and their duty hours vary.

Sheldon Congratulates WAC

"It was the most wonderful moment in my Army career," says Pfc. Sylvia Jane Carbonell, 20-year-old Hawaiian girl, as she described her meeting with Brigadier General Charles A. Sheldon, acting Chief of Staff, at the Sixth Army headquarters this week

Sylvia, second Hawaiian girl to win the Wac Of The Month award for the 6002nd SU, Company D, during the past three months, is an administrative clerk assigned to the Secretary General Staff section. During her meeting with General Sheldon, she was photographed for the "Star Presidian" as she received the acting Staff Chief's commendation for earning Wac honors of the month.

Chosen by vote of the Company Non-commissioned Officer Council and the approval of her commanding officer, the attractive dark-haired girl was awarded her title on the merits of her initiative, military courtesy, ability and personality. She has served in her duty section for the past five months, came into military service 14 months ago and took her training at Fort MacLellan, Alabama.

After her basic training, Pfc. Carbonell attended the Army Signal School at Fort Gordon, Georgia. Her parents, with two more sisters and a brother, make their home in Kahulau, Mani, Hawaii.

Sylvia sings in the Presidio Wac Glee Club chorus. She was one of the first entrants in the Wac Rifle Team, recently launched here by Master Sergeant Wayne K. Steward, and she has already been appointed assistant team manager for the potential Annie Oakleys when they face the targets at Fort Scott Rifle Range.

General Congratulations from Brig. Gen. Charles A. Sheldon, acting chief of staff, go to Pfc. Sylvia J. Carbonell, Sixth Army secretary general staff section, for her selection as WAC of the Month.

ROK Officers Here For Briefing Talks

Foreign military visitors to the Presidio this week included Major General Oum Hong Seup, chief of Engineers, ROKA, Brigadier General Yun Tae, III and Brigadier General Cho Sung Kun, of the ROK Army.

Here for a series of briefings on U. S. Army Engineering functions, the visiting officers began their local itinerary at Sixth Army Engineer Section. Other official visits took the Korean officers to the 30th Engineer Topographic Group, the South Pacific Engineer Division and the San Francisco Engineer District.

Prior to their departure from the Presidio proper, the ROK Army officers were entertained at a luncheon in the Officers' Club where they were hosted by Major General Riley F. Ennis, acting Sixth Army Commanding General, staff officers and commanders of the installations covering the visiting officers' orientation visit.

Mobile Forces Concept Discussed Wednesday

The new "Mobile Forces Concept," will be discussed Wednesday, 12 December, at Harmon Armory, 1400 to 1600 hours, by a team from Headquarters CONARC.

All officers who are cleared for secret and can possibly be spared from their duties are requested to attend the meeting.

It is felt that the new problems imposed by this concept, which will require new thinking in tactics, logistics, communication, transportation and medical support, will be of interest to all officers.

Edgar Allen Poe is one of the most distinguished nongraduates of West Point. To rid himself of financial dependence upon his father, he refused to attend formations and was thrown out.

New Medical Care Act Gives Choice Of Health Facilities

Dependents eligible for both civilian and service hospitalization may choose from civilian, Armed Forces or Public Health Service facilities under the Dependents' Medical Care Act.

The Government pays for outpatient care only for maternity care before and after delivery; treatment of fractures, dislocations, lacerations and similar wounds; medical care before and after hospitalization for bodily injuries or for cases requiring surgery; and diagnostic tests in connection with approved civilian outpatient treatment.

Dependents are responsible for payment to a civilian doctor or hospital for examination or treatment unless they receive outpatient treatment for which the Government normally pays or their visits lead to hospitalization. If a dependent pays for the treatment and it falls into these classes, he may submit a claim to the respective service for reimbursement.

Dependents utilizing either civilian or service medical facilities are required to present their Dependents' Authorization for Medical Care card (DD Form 1173). Cards become invalid if they are erased or changed in any manner.

Cards will be valid for two years from the date of issue. They must be turned in when expired, when a new card is issued, when any of the dependents listed on it become ineligible or upon the death, retirement or release of a member to inactive duty. Lost cards must be reported either to the nearest Army installation or through the Commanding Officer of the service person.

Persons using identification cards to obtain medical care to which they are not entitled, may be fined up to $10,000 and imprisoned up to five years. If a dependent permits another person to use his card unlawfully, he is subject to the same penalties.

New Regs Set For Reserves

Retired Regular Army enlisted men will be permitted to join units of the Ready Reserve under regulations being drawn up in the Pentagon. The policy change will not apply to National Guard units.

Retired enlisted men would be paid the same as other reservists for drill, active duty for training or active duty if they waive pay for the same periods.

The use of experienced retired men, especially skilled technicians, is expected to benefit the reserve units. The individual reserve unit will be permitted to accept or reject the retired Regulars who volunteer.

Remember the Alamo!

Colonel William B. Travis died alongside the 187 other Americans he commanded when the Alamo fell on 6 March, 1836. Numbered in the crew of rugged frontiersmen and soldier patriots were James Bowie and Davy Crockett.

The first "radar observations" were made by Dr. Albert Hoyt Taylor and Leo C. Young of the Naval Aircraft Radio Laboratory, Anacostia, D. C., 27 September, 1922.

Dog Show Tomorrow

Unhappy Doggy is "Lady," being enthusiastically bathed by her two young masters in preparation for the Kids Dog Show, which will be held tomorrow at the Presidio Service Club, 1400 hours. David, Susan and "Lady" are all members of the family of Sgt. and Mrs. Merle Jernigan, Sixth Army Band.

Mary Anderson

New Librarian Experienced With Children

Post library has a new librarian. She is Mrs. Mary Anderson, wife of 1st Lt. John Anderson of the 30th Engineer Group, and she started work Monday.

But, according to Chief Librarian Mrs. Elizabeth Bock, the new librarian is going to be active in a variety of projects besides her regular library work. She will coordinate activities, help develop an enlarged library program and do special events work at both the adult and children's level.

The young librarian will be right at home in children's library work. In her first library job she worked as children's librarian for the Cleveland Library System. Prior to this she was working on her master's degree in library science at the Western Reserve University in Cleveland. And before this she was an art major with a minor in psychology at the University of Akron.

Mrs. Anderson has spent four years overseas working in libraries for Army Special Services. She was in Orleans, France, for two years and then transferred to Munich, Germany. It was during the latter assignment that she met her husband who was instructing at the NCO academy there.

She and her husband have been at the Presidio since August. "It's wonderful . . . it really is," is her comment on this duty station.

Children of the main Post, Fort Scott and Fort Funston in the age groups from infancy to age 6 will have their party at the Presidio Service Club. Those in the same areas in age groups 7 to 12 will be hosted at the Presidio Theater.

Youngsters from Forts Baker, Barry, Cronkhite and North Bay Area in age groups up to 6 will be entertained at the Fort Baker Service Club, while those from the given areas, ages 7 to 12, will have their Christmas party at the Fort Baker Theater.

A real live Santa Claus and stage entertainment will be provided for the children up to 6. Those in the 7 to 12 age groups will see movies and cartoons and there will be an individual gift and candy for each child attending the party.

Parents of children unable to attend the Christmas party are asked to call WEst 1-6111, extension 3404, prior to the date the event takes place.

Presidio's Bookmobile Starts Rolling Along

This policy, jointly decided upon by the Post Library system and 30th AAA Group, has resulted in the Presidio Bookmobile which Friday completed its first round of the nine Nike sites on its book route.

Several hundred books of every sort were distributed to enlisted men and officers stationed at isolated posts as far distant from the Presidio as 70 miles. In addition to distributing books, Sp2 Spann Miller, Jr., who pilots the Bookmobile, collected 23 requests for volumes available at the main library.

"It's a good beginning," says Chief Presidio Librarian Mrs. Elizabeth Bock, who rates the Bookmobile as "the best solution to the problem of getting books to the men at isolated posts."

The Bookmobile, a converted house trailer, has all the facilities of a small library. It provides its own heat and lights. At one end of the trailer there is a small check out desk. And there is even a card file showing the books available but not present.

Every Monday, Sp2 Miller stocks his rolling library with 500 to 700 volumes. Books from every library category — from military science to science fiction—are included in the selection. The Bookmobile works out of the Fort Scott library which makes all its books available for the project on rotation basis.

Sp2 Miller leaves Fort Scott early every morning so he can arrive at his designation about an hour before dinner. This way he can show his wares both to the troops in the area and the troops that rotate in for the noon meal.

On some occasions, as at Angel Island, the Bookmobile goes right up to the troops on duty at the radar and launching areas.

Operation Bookmobile is financed jointly by the Post library system and the 30th AAA Group Central Welfare Fund, the latter on a six-month trial basis. Funds for converting the trailer came from the Sixth Army Welfare Fund. Anti-Aircraft funds will be used for the purchase of new books.

Each soldier is allowed to check out six books; or twelve if he is married. The Bookmobile visits each site every two weeks.

And By Sea . . . goes the Presidio Bookmobile on one of its visits to Bay Area Nike emplacements. Last stop for this library on wheels, which visits nine Nike sites every two weeks, is Angel Island, which can be reached only by one of the L-Boats operated by the Fort Baker Harbor Craft Detachment. On its first trip to Angel Island, the Bookmobile, run by Sp2 Spann Miller, Jr., Post Special Services, had to squeeze on the L-Boat next to a rotating fire truck and just about didn't make the trip.

Five Servicemen Snare Olympic Gold Medals

Courtney, a 23-year-old former Fordham track star, turned in a tremendous performance in winning the 800-meter championship in 1:47.7, a new Olympic record.

Fifty yards from the tape, the Boston Army Base private lost the lead to England's Derek Johnson. Courtney's never-say-die spirit pushed him back in front about 10 yards from the finish line and he crossed the wire one foot ahead of the stunned Johnson.

Courtney's teammate and half-mile rival, Arnie Sowell, Pittsburgh U., had to settle for fourth place after setting a blistering pace early in the race. The Army ROTC student was timed at 1:48.3 In sixth place was 2nd Lt. Lon Spurrier of Hamilton AFB, Calif., who was clocked at 1:49.3.

In the pairs-with coxswain rowing finals, Ens. Art Ayrault of the Seattle Naval Station was a member of the championship crew which included Conn Findlay of Belmont, Calif., and coxswain Kurt Seiffert of Rochester, Mich.

Yale's eight-oared shell, beaten in an opening heat, came back strong to whip Canada and Australia in the final. Marine Reserve 2nd Lt. Thomas Charlton, Jr., who'll report for active duty following the games, was bowman of the victorious Yale eight.

Other early Olympic results are:

Track and Field

First Lt. Walter Thane Baker of Lockbourne AFB, Ohio, was second in the 100-meter final and third in the 200-meter final. Pvt. Ira Murchison, assigned to an ROTC group at Western Michigan College of Education, was fourth in the 100 meters. Both the 100 and 200-meter titles were won by Bobby Morrow, a student at Abilene Christian College.

Josh Culbreath, a Marine private from Quantico, Va., won the second heat of the 400-meter hurdles and came in third in the final event with a time of 51.6. Winner of the gold medal was Glenn Davis of Clinton, Ohio, in the record time of 50.1.

Specialist Third Class John Bennett, Ft. MacArthur, Calif., was second to Greg Bell of Bloomington, Ind., in the broad jump. Bell's distance was 25' 8¼" and Bennett leaped 25' 2½".

Captain Adolf Weinacker of Willow Run AFS, Mich., placed seventh in the 50-kilometer walking final in 5:00:16. Norman Read of New Zealand won the title in 4:30:42.8.

High scorer for coach Gerald Tucker's boys in the Japan game with 15 and the Thailand game with 15, was 2nd Lt. Ron Tomsic, Truax Field, Wis. Tomsic, who has a fine jump shot, played college ball at Stanford.

In the game with Japan, Pvt. Carl Cain of Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., reinjured his back and may be sidelined throughout the entire basketball tourney.

Yachting

The U.S. entry in the 5.5-meter sailing championship, Rush IV, raced second to Norway's Viking. The Rush IV was skippered by Ens. Ferdinand (Andy) Schoettle of the Newport Naval Station, R. I. A member of the three-man crew was Ens. Robert Stinson, also of Newport.

Boxing

Service boxers got off to a good start with welterweight Pearce Lane, a first lieutenant from Ft. Polk, La., outpointing Enrique Tovar of Venezuela in his opening round match. Jose Torres, a rugged private first class from Ft. Meade, Md., won a unanimous light middleweight decision over Peter Read of Australia.

One of the service fighters, A2C Harry Smith of Bolling AFB, Washington, D. C., was disqualified from the boxing championship for being one ounce overweight at the weigh-in. Smith was to compete in the featherweight (125½) class.

Weight Lifting

First Lt. Pete George, of Scofield Barracks, T. H., world and Olympic middleweight champion, finished second to Fedor Bogdanovskii of Russia. George's lifts for the press, snatch and jerk were: 270, 281, 358—(Total 909). The Russian's lifts: 292, 270, 363.75—(Total 925.75). (AFPS)

Basketball

Rowing

In the finals of the double sculls, Pvt. James Gardiner, Ft. Wayne, Mich., and Bernard Costello of Birmingham, Mich., finished second to a Russian crew. Marine Pfc. John McKinlay and Sgt. Arthur McKinlay, twin brothers from the Grosse Ile NAS, Mich., were members of the four-oars without coxswain crew which placed second behind Canada.—(AFPS).

2 Army Boxers Win Games Gold Medals

Melbourne—Soldiers Pete Rademacher and Jim Boyd won the only two Gold Medals for the United States boxing team at the Olympic Games finals in Melbourne, Australia, last week.

The third U. S. finalist, Pfc. Jose Torres, lost a decision to Olympic champ Laszlo Papp of Hungary in the light middleweight class.

Rademacher, a balding father from Washington now stationed at Fort Benning, said he came "along for just one thing." He accomplished his mission in a hurry.

Another left hook by Rademacher sent Moukhine down for the second time. He regained his feet only to suffer a severe beating at the ropes when the sympathetic referee called a halt to the bout with 30 seconds remaining in the opening round.

Boyd, a private, also stationed at Benning, floored his foe four times but had to weather a heavy counterattack in the second round. A left hook in the third and final round sent Negrea down for a fifth time, but he held on for the distance.

Papp, a 30-year-old railway clerk from Budapest, proved superior to clever Torres. Winner of the Olympic title in 1948 and 1952, Papp gave Torres a lesson in ring technique, starting in the second round.

Papp, cautious in the first three minutes, moved out in the second and staggered Torres with a short left to the head. After that, the Hungarian clearly outboxed the wild swinging American inter-service champion.

Torres, though, tried for a KO in the third, but missed more often than he landed. He got in a good right just before the bell, but Papp didn't flinch.

Despite the defeat of their heavyweight, the Russians managed to win most of the boxing Gold Medals. They won the feather, light welter and middle crowns.

The United States and Great Britain won two each, while Germany, Romania and Hungary picked up one Gold Medal apiece.

In 1952, at Helsinki, led by now world's heavyweight champ Floyd Patterson, the United States won five first place medals.

Weightlift Show Tuesday

Seven Presidio soldiers who gained fame in civilian life as weight-lifters will give an exhibition of technique and style in a show scheduled for the Service Club Tuesday at 8 p. m.

Headed by Ralph Yoshida, the men will demonstate body building techniques, bench press styles, and on the dips. Yoshida, who is a former Hawaiian, Pennsylvania, Alaskan and current United States champion will demonstrate weightlifting.

The show is slated to run for an hour and one-half.

O'Brien Sets Shot Record 'Down Under'

Melbourne, Australia — Parry O'Brien, muscular first lieutenant from Travis AFB, became the sixth serviceman to win an Olympic gold medal by setting a new Olympic record in his specialty, the shot put. The defending Olympic champ and world record holder tossed the 16-pound iron ball 60 feet 11 inches, bettering his old Olympic mark of 57 feet 1½ inches.

Other late Olympic flashes:

Modern Pentathlon

The U. S. team of George Lambert, Sioux City, Iowa; 2nd Lt. Jack Daniels, Ft. Sam Houston, Texas, and Lt. (jg) William Andre, Naval Academy, finished second behind Russia in the over-all standings with 13,482 points. The Soviets had 13,690.5 points.

In the over-all individual standings, Lambert was fifth, Andre seventh, and Daniels 13th. Daniels, originally an alternate, replaced the injured Bob Miller, a specialist third class from Ft. Sam Houston.

Lieutenant (jg) Jack Davis, San Diego, Calif., the world record holder for the 110-meter high hurdles, ran second to Lee Calhoun of Gary, Ind., in the hurdles final. Calhoun's 13.5 clocking set a new Olympic record.

Bill Dellinger, an AF second lieutenant from Portland (Ore.) International Airport, failed to finish in the 5,000-meter run, which was won by Vladimir Kuts of Russia.

Second Lt. James Lea of Edwards AFB, Calif., failed to qualify for the 400-meter semi-finals, finishing fifth in the third heat of the second round.

Boxing

Private first class Luis Molina, San Diego MCRD, Calif., outpointed Bill Griffiths of Australia in the second round of the boxing championships, but the San Jose lightweight was eliminated from the tourney in the quarter-final round by Tony Byrne of Ireland.

Jose Torres, Ft. Meade, Md., private first class, outpointed Franco Scisiani of Italy in a quarter-final light middleweight contest. Also in the quarter-finals, welterweight Pearce Lane was eliminated by Fred Tiedt of Iceland. Lane is a first lieutenant from Ft. Polk, La.

Williams Stars As Toreros Rout Foe In Cage Opener

With little Carroll Williams, the San Jose State scooter, showing the way, a springy Presidio of San Francisco cage team opened the 1956-57 campaign last week by stampeding Travis Air Force Base.

Paced by Williams' 23-point performance, the Toreros—certainly the best service team in the West—crushed the Airmen, 93-46, to rack up their 36th straight league victory in three years.

The Toreros roared to a 20-2 lead in the opening minutes of play and were content to coast the rest of the contest as Fischer cleared his bench.

Though Williams, who set a flock of scoring records for San Jose during his three years of play there, was high man, he got plenty of help. All told, five Presidio cagers hit for double figures in the lopsided encounter.

This scoring outburst enabled the Presidio to roll to a 39-21 halftime lead and even widen the margin during the second half.

Of the five starters, only Ronnie Reynoir, the Military Police officer from Loyola of the South, failed to connect for a higher share in the scoring. But Reynoir, who tallied four points, has been hampered by a dislocated wrist.

Jim Cummings, the latest addition to the Toreros, bagged six points. Fischer welcomed the former Vanderbilt star with glee when he turned up on post. And with good reason, too. Cummings is 6 feet 8 inches and weighs 230 pounds, according to Fischer, and is expected to prove a valuable asset to the squad.

The Toreros played the U.S.S. Storey in Letterman Army Hospital gym yesterday and will participate in a basketball clinic at San Rafael High School tomorrow.

They return to league action Tuesday when they meet Hamilton Air Force Base.

The Torero home opener is scheduled for Friday, 14 December. Tentative plans call for the Deputy Post Commander to start the tipoff and participation of the Sixth Army Band in preliminary ceremonies. The game is scheduled for 1930 hours.

AAA Cager Leads Post Point Race

Morris C. Storseth, a onetime high school athlete from North Dakota, paced Headquarters Battery, 9th AAA Missile Battalion, to one easy victory in the Presidio Intramural Basketball League this week and did his utmost in a second, but losing, cause.

Storseth, who knows his way around a basketball court and track field, banged in 26 points to lead his team to a 78-43 win over B Battery of the 9th AAA Battalion.

He added 27 more points to his season total, but he and his mates lost a 64-62 thriller to D Battery of the 9th. That output easily makes Storseth, typist in the Battalion S-3, the league's top scorer.

First Army Nurse (Male) Volunteers For Airborne

The first Army Nurse Corps officer ever selected by the Army for airborne duty will report for training to the 101st Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Kentucky, on 3 December, the Department of the Army announced today.

Second Lieutenant Robert M. Stauffer, 623 North 23rd Street, Allentown, Pennsylvania, currently assigned to William Beaumont Army Hospital, El Paso, Texas, volunteered for duty as an airborne nurse.

Two other male Army Nurse Corps officers, yet to be selected, will serve with Lieutenant Stauffer on a surgical team organic to the Division. Their place on the surgical team is part of an effort to provide closer medical support and greater assistance to the physician than has been possible with the less skilled medical technicians.

The new nurses will be able to hold sick call and perform minor treatment in the field. In the event of large scale casualties, they would be able to assist the physician in the preliminary examination, sorting of patients and emergency lifesaving procedures.

Lieutenant Stauffer, who is 23 years old, took a two-year premedical course at Muhlenberg College, Allentown, and completed the required three-year course in nursing at Bellevue Hospital, New York, New York, in 1955.

Army To Save Three Million OnSuggestions

Washington—The Army expects to realize an estimated three million dollar savings from suggestions submitted by military and civilian personnel during the first quarter of the 1957 Fiscal Year under the Army's Employee Suggestion Program.

The Program, which urges all civilian, officer and enlisted members of the Army to submit ideas for the promotion of efficiency and economy, received 16,989 proposals from Army employees throughout the world.

A total of 4,579 suggestions were adopted for an estimated first-year savings to the Army of $3,054,244, for which three thousand, seven hundred civilian employees divided $102,331 in awards. During the same period, 879 military personnel submitted adoptable suggestions.

One of the largest cash awards within this period went to Malcolm R. Ingram, a civilian working for the Milan Arsenal, Tenn., for suggesting certain mechanical changes in the processing of M-24 truck booster bodies. Mr. Ingram was awarded $475 for his suggestion, which is expected to save the Army $74,000 the first year. (ANS)

OAFIE Will Distribute New Medicare Pamphlet

Washington—A pamphlet on the new Medical Care Act for Service Dependents has been prepared by the Office of Armed Forces Information and Education, Department of Defense, and is being distributed to each member of the active Army with dependents.

The pamphlet, which contains a tear sheet on how dependents may identify themselves and pertinent information on the Act itself, is to be delivered by each sponsor to his principal dependent.

In addition, the pamphlet is being distributed on a need-to-know basis to all active Army, National Guard and Reserve units from General Headquarters down to and including company size units and batteries.

Titled "Medical Care for Service Dependents," DA Pamphlet 21-91, also referred to as DOD Pamphlet 6-4, is a condensation which covers the entire Medical Care Act in plain layman language.

21st, 660th Face Annual Training Test

When the men of the 660th Engineer Battalion (Base Topographic) move into the field Monday morning for their annual training exercise they will be ready for 72 hours of realistic battle conditions complete with aggressor ground attacks, strafings and bombings.

Fully equipped, including gas masks and rifles, the troops will move across the Golden Gate bridge to the desolate fringe areas bordering Forts Barry and Cronkhite. Their objective will be to gather topographic information for map making while contending with an unfriendly civilian population and aggressor forces.

During this same period the 21st Engineer Company (Base Photomapping) will be undergoing their training exercise in the Fort Scott map plant. These men, too, will have to contend with an unfriendly civilian population and air attack while working day and night on a two-shift basis, producing map manuscripts.

Automatic Expert Richard S. Boutelle, president of Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corp., demonstrates a new lightweight automatic rifle. The weapon, known as the AR-10, has an aluminum barrel with a stainless steel liner, and a stock of fiberglass and plastic foam.

Test New Lightweight Rifle

A new lightweight automatic rifle, known as the AR-10B, is being tested for possible Army use at Springfield Armory, Mass.

Produced by Armalite Division, Fairchild Engine and Aircraft Corp., the weapon was envisioned by George Sullivan, patent attorney, whose hobby is guns.

Twenty aluminum magazines which accompany the rifle also will be tested. Like the rifles, they are designed to use the NATO 7.62mm cartridge.

The AR-10 weighs 6.85 pounds, has an aluminum barrel of special alloy, with a stainless steel liner and a stainless steel, 20-round clip. The stock is made of featherweight fiberglass and plastic foam, with a rubber butt plate.

After the Armory tests, several AR-10B's will be supplied to Aberdeen Proving Grounds to undergo the standard tests that military rifles have been subjected to for more than 30 years.

Presidio Personnel Given Extra Day Over Christmas

Military and civilian personnel whose activities are not essential to maintenance, protective, security or other critical activities will be given an added holiday on Monday, 24 December, according to a DA Circular released this week.

Individuals whose basic workweek includes Sunday with Monday as a day off, will be given an extra day on the first workday after 24 December.

Employees normally paid on 24 or 25 December will receive paychecks 21 December and those whose payday is on 1 January will be paid 31 December or earlier.

Leave, Work Regs Set For Holidays

"All duties and training except those essential to the operation of the Post, including support of Army Antiaircraft Command units on tactical sites, will be suspended from 1700 hours Friday, 21 December, to 0800 hours Monday, 7 January," according to Post letter AMNPR-DP 006.

Suspension of training and granting of leave is authorized for group, separate battalion and separate unit commanders during this period. No more than 50 per cent of unit strength will be absent at one time, however.

Offices are to be operational during normal duty hours at all times, except on 24 and 25 December and 1 January, which will be legal holidays for both civilian employees and military personnel.

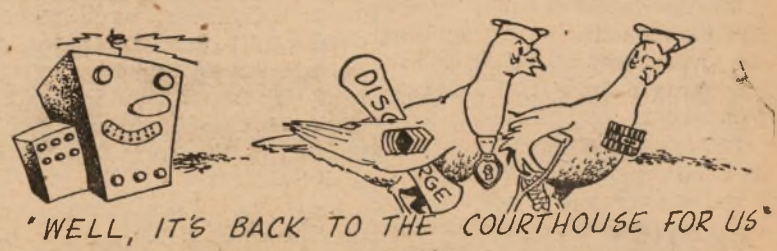
RA Integration Cards Now Being Processed

Washington—Individuals who submitted applications for Regular Army integration under the RA Officer Augmentation Plan will start receiving post cards acknowledging their requests in the near future as Department of the Army officials began processing procedures on 3 December.



Under this program, the Army expects to appoint some 7,000 officers to Regular Army status during the next two years. They will be selected from the Reserve, both active and inactive, National Guard, and former officers.

Originally the first group of officers were to be selected in June, 1958, but the program has been stepped up and a limited number of outstanding individuals will be chosen by June, 1957, the majority of whom will be junior officers.

The Army is stressing that regardless of whether individuals were unsuccessful in previous applications, eligible personnel may apply for RA commissions under the new program until January 31, 1957. Final selections will be made by boards of senior officers convened at DA level. (ANS)

Christmas Plans

The complete schedule of Christmas religious services planned for personnel of the Presidio and sub-Posts has been completed this week by the Catholic and Protestant chaplains. The full list of both programs and their given hours and dates will appear in next week's special edition.

Electronic communications have replaced the war birds, used by the Army from 1878 in the Dakota Territory through the Korea fighting.

Pigeon fanciers will be given advance notice of the sale details. Birds will be sold in lots of five pairs, with a minimum purchase of one lot and a maximum of five lots. The Pigeon Fanciers' Association has been requested to be prepared for any emergency which may require use of the birds.

Eighteen pigeons whose actions saved American lives during combat may be placed in public zoos or institutions throughout the country.

Agency Chief Says Missile Program Change Not Radical

Huntsville, Ala. — The Army Ballistic Missile Agency's present program will not be altered by the recent clarification of Army and Air Force roles in missile and aviation fields, according to Maj. Gen. J. B. Medaris, the agency commander.

The actual language of the official statement authorized continuance of the Army's developmental work on the Jupiter Intermediate Range Ballistic, said General Medaris who quoted Secretary of Defense Wilson's statement, "the choice of weapons to be used for various missions . . . can only be made after a careful technical review . . ."

So, during FY 1957, and until the technical review can be made, the competing weapons systems will be continued with support. For FY 1958 the Army will support the land-based Talos (an antiaircraft missile) and the Air Force will provide support for the land-based IRBM program.

Commenting on the Redstone missile, which was also mentioned in the Department of Defense clarification, General Medaris pointed out that the memorandum allowed the Army to "continue its development of surface-to-surface missiles for close support of Army field operations with the following limitations:

"That such missiles be designed and programmed for use against tactical targets within the Zone of Operations, defined as extending not more than 100 miles beyond the front lines. As such, missiles would presumably be employed within the combat zone normally extending back of the lines about 100 miles. This places a range limitation of about 200 miles on the design criteria for such weapons.

"That the tactical air support functions beyond those that can be provided by Army surface-to-surface missiles, as above defined, remain the responsibilities of the Air Force."

General Medaris pointed out that the Army was given permission to make "limited feasibility studies in this area (IRBM)," and also that Secretary Wilson had said the present ruling "does not predetermine the weapons or forces which a commander in the field would be permitted to use in event of war."

Series Final

Uncle Sam Will Pick Up Tab In Most Medical Care Cases

(Editor's note: This is the final article in a series on the Dependents' Medical Care Act, prepared from an Armed Forces Press fact sheet.)

The government pays the tab in most cases when service dependents choose civilian hospitalization under the Dependents' Medical Care Act which became the rule last week.

When admitted to a civilian hospital, the dependent pays $1.75 a day or the the first $25 of the total cost, whichever is greater. If a private room is certified by the attending physician, the dependent pays an additional 25 per cent of the cost difference between a private and semi-private room.

If a private room is selected for the dependent's convenience, he must pay the noted hospital charge plus the total cost difference between the two rooms.

The government pays for semi-private accommodations for 365 days plus the doctors' bills, laboratory fees and X-rays during hospitalization. Dependents are entitled to complete obstetrical and maternity care, including care before and following delivery and two examinations of the infant within 60 days after delivery. If delivery is made in a home or office and the mother is not hospitalized, the dependent pays the first $15.

Special duty nursing service and laboratory and X-ray treatment before and after hospitalization for bodily injury or surgical operation are provided.

If private duty care by a registered nurse is certified by the physician, the dependent pays the first $100 plus 25 per cent of the charges over $100.

When injuries such as fractures and dislocations are treated outside of a hospital, the individual pays the first $15 of the total charges. Multiple injuries resulting from one accident are considered one injury.

If diagnostic tests for bodily injury or surgery are needed, the dependent pays costs above $75 for tests before hospitalization and test costs above $50 after hospitalization.

Dependents selecting service facilities are entitled to diagnosis; treatment of acute medical and surgical conditions, contagious diseases and acute emergencies of any nature; immunization; and obstetrical and infant care.

Funds are not provided for elective medical and surgical treatment, domiciliary care, ambulance service or home visits unless provided by service facilities in emergencies, and hospital care for chronic diseases and nervous and mental disorders.

Dental care is available to civilians only if required for treatment of a medical or surgical condition when hospitalized, in emergencies, or in U. S. areas designated "remote."

Artificial parts of the body, hearing aids, orthopedic footwear, or spectacles must be purchased by the individual.

Service medical facilities outside the United States, Puerto Rico and Alaska usually are open to civilians.

Aviation Chief Clarifies New Defense Directive

Secretary of Defense Wilson's 26 November clarification of respective Army and Air Force missions in the field of aviation "assures the Army that it will be able to fulfill all its missions," stated Sixth Army Air Chief Colonel Frank G. Forrest this week.

The four point definition of the Army air mission read exactly as the Department of the Army had previously defined it, the Colonel pointed out.

Under the clarification, the Army aviation program consists of those types of aircraft required to carry out the following Army functions:

- Command, liaison and communications.
- Observation, visual and photographic, reconnaissance, fire adjustment and topographical survey.
- Airlift of Army personnel and material.
- Aero-medical evacuation.

Most encouraging aspect of the Department of Defense's ruling is that it does not restrict the quantity or performance of Army aircraft. "We could use any number of airplanes on one mission, if we needed them," noted Colonel Forrest who pointed out that available funds would, of course, ultimately limit quantity.

The 20,000 pound empty weight limitation for rotary wing aircraft set by Department of Defense does not restrict Army aviation in the Colonel's opinion, because this maximum exceeds the helicopter size industry can feasibly produce.

The only restriction that concerns him is the 5,000 pound empty weight limitation set for fixed wing aircraft. "If the Department of Defense denies authority for the Army to procure fixed-wing troop transport aircraft exceeding this limitation, the Army will be in trouble."

"But I do not believe this is the intent," he added. "It appears that Secretary Wilson recognized the Army's need for fixed wing transports when he authorized procurement of the DH C-4 (DeHavilland twin-engine 'Otter') and stated he is giving consideration to another project involving a plane in the development stage."

Fixed-wing transports are considered more important than rotary-wing aircraft by Colonel Forrest because they have greater ultimate potential. They cost less to procure and operate besides carrying a greater pay load farther and faster. Fixed wing aircraft are being developed with short take off capabilities and some day will be able to take off and land vertically, predicts the Sixth Army Air Chief.

Looking to the future and anticipating the possible development of Army aircraft, Colonel Forrest pointed to the Department of Defense ruling which defines the area in which a single field army will operate as 200 miles from rear to front and as much as 150 miles wide.

"Air mobility appears to be the only practical way to obtain rapid movement in this area of thousands of square miles. It is possible that each field army will be provided with an Army combat air transport force of a certain size."

The Department of Defense ruling, which stated that Army airlift will be provided for movement of small units to improve local mobility allows considerable room for expansion when small units are intepreted to mean combat groups approximately the size of a reinforced battalion. Local mobility is interpreted by Colonel Forrest to include the entire area of the combat zone as opposed to the entire theater of operations.

An Army air transport contingent capable of lifting one combat group per corps appears to be the minimum airlift required by each field army. Under these conditions it is possible that each field army will have a combat air transport force of one group consisting of six battalions.

Air mobile tactics which would exploit the effects of an atomic strike relatively deep in the enemy rear such as seizing critical terrain features, supplying fast moving armour, shifting troops and moving reserves are all potential roles for future Army aviation, said the Sixth Army Air Chief.

"The more the Army uses missiles for close support, the more important the reconnaissance function of Army aviation will become—especially for targets over 10 to 15 miles," asserted Colonel Forrest.

Composite aviation elements — necessarily limited in scope — which would perform all or the majority of the Army aviation functions are suggested by the Colonel. A division aviation company could provide observation and fire adjustment for division artillery, aerial photography, very limited quantity of air transport, medical evacuation and command and control.

Aviation companies could observe and adjust fire for corps artillery. Corps and Army headquarters and troops would have aviation companies primarily for command control and medical evacuation.

Colonel Forrest summarized his statements by stating "the scope of Army aviation organization permitted by the Department of Defense may consist of combat air transport units, long range air observation units, sky cavalry units and the three types of units mentioned above."

TOE aviation sections or teams also may be provided for command and control in certain engineer and signal units and medical evacuation, he added.

Commenting on Army aviators who must provide "intimate coordination of effort," with ground forces, the Sixth Army Air Chief said these men "must be first line troops . . . with a high degree of skill and determination to carry out their mission."

Concluding his remarks on the Department of Defense clarification of 16 November, Colonel Forrest assured his associates in Army aviation that this directive is good news; "it means we're in business."

Presidio CAP Squadron Provides Locals Interesting Opportunities

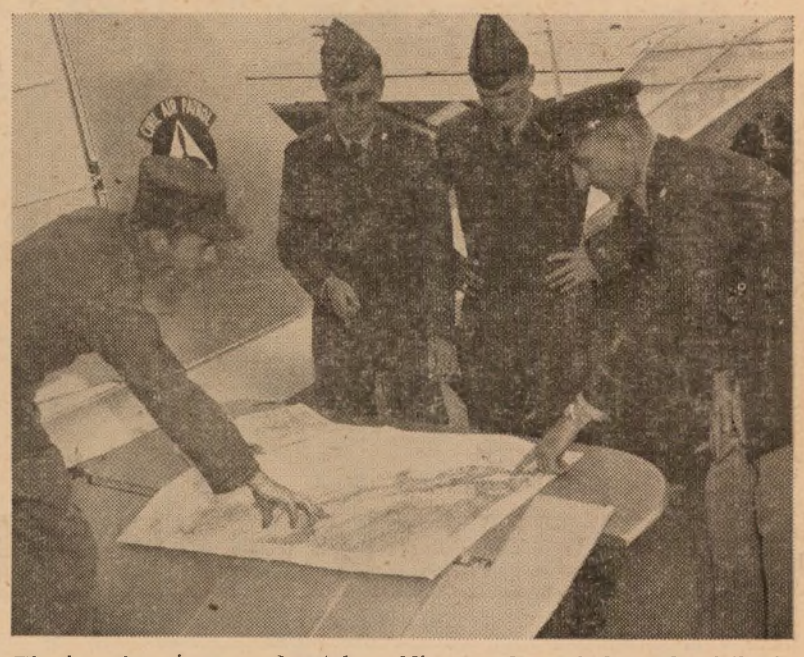
By Richard Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

For Presidio personnel who like both to fly and contribute to their country's security the 96th Civil Air Patrol Squadron located on post, bldg. 204, offers these and other opportunities.

Officially a civilian auxiliary of the United States Air Force, the CAP is primarily interested in flying education. But in emergency it provides pilots and airplanes for a variety of needs including search flights for downed aircraft.

Four Presidio soldiers — all enthusiastic pilots — belong to the CAP and take an active part in its organization. They are Lt. Col. Leland D. Esh, staff officer of the CAP California Wing; M/Sgt. Hill C. Higdon, squadron training officer; Sgt. Walter R. Dunn, engineering division, and Pfc. Keith Weisner, supply officer.

The flying soldiers take part in all CAP activities including the air searches. This year the 96th Squadron has been called out on seven of these lost airplane hunts. The searches call for terrain flying which is considered very dangerous.



A person doesn't have to fly to belong to the CAP. Basically the personnel fall into three groups, the senior pilots, the observers and cadets. The first two groups are adults and the last group young people of high school age.

Approximately 45 boys and girls, ages 14 to 18, attend the Thursday evening CAP meetings as cadets. They learn navigation, search procedure, meteorology and even military drill. Summer camp sessions are offered for additional aviation familiarization.

It costs an adult about $15 to join the CAP. He must help pay the expenses for his proficiency flying, but the Air Force furnishes fuel and lubricants when the CAP goes on an air search.

The CAP nationally can muster a total of some 7,000 planes in an emergency which include both aircraft owned by CAP members and CAP units. The Presidio 96th Squadron has 4 aircraft of its own. They are an L-16, L-56, PA 18 and a Commonwealth Sky Ranger. They also have a Link trainer.

Preventive Med Residency Course Set

The first Army formal residency training program in preventive medicine will begin 1 July, 1957, the Army Surgeon General's Office has announced.

Regular Army Medical Corps officers or qualified civilian physicians who accept commissions in the Regular Army are eligible for the program.

The residency consists of a three-year combination of military and civilian training. The training begins with an 11-month course in military preventive medicine at Walter Reed Army Institute of Research or an equivalent graduate course in preventive medicine or public health at a civilian university.

The second year is spent in an approved civilian residency training program in a city, county, district or state health department. The final year consists of formal military residency training at a large Army post with some time spent at a nearby Army headquarters under the supervision of the preventive medicine officers.

Training is followed by three years of practice in the specialty to establish eligibility for Board examination.

Military personnel can apply through channels. Civilian physicians apply to the Surgeon General, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D. C., Attn: Chief, Personnel Division.

Perhaps you want a short, humorous book. We suggest James Thurber's latest, FURTHER FABLES FOR OUR TIMES. This small volume is packed with short tales poking fun at human nature. The following are choice morals which follow the fables:

"Get it right or let it alone. The conclusion you jump at may be your own."

"Open most heads and you will find nothing shining, not even a mind."

Nero Wolfe fans can follow his latest adventures in Rex Stout's MIGHT AS WELL BE DEAD. Nero and Archie track down a young man who has been accused of theft by his own father, but proven innocent. When they reach him they also find embezzlement, murder and a national scandal.

The Protestant minister from Ohio who turned fighter pilot, Col. Dean E. Hess, has written a book for all to read this season. BATTLE HYMN is the heartwarming tale of Korean orphans and the 5th Air Force airlift "Operation Kiddy Car." How new hope was brought into the lives of these children on the island of Cheju will be an inspiration to all who read it.

Do historical novels hold your interest? If so, THE CROSS AND THE SWORD by Evangeline Walton should be your choice. The brutal and bloody period of Danish raids and settlements in early England is the background of this tale of Sweyn, the young Dane, and his long road to the new religion, Christianity.

After reading THE COMPLETE GUIDE FOR THE SERVICEMAN'S WIFE you may want to add it to your Christmas gift list. The book is written by Lt. Col. Carroll V. Glines, Jr., who taught a course for service wives at the University of Oklahoma, in collaboration with Elizabeth Land. This book is for the wives of draftees and reservists who want to learn about the Army in a short time. It is aimed at both the enlisted men's and officers' wives in all branches of service. The information is concise, up-to-date and practical.

These are just a few of the new December books in your Post Library. Drop in, look over the collection and relax through reading over the holidays.—(Mary A.)

The Post Fire Department is cooperating in the Yuletide toy project by accepting individual or group gifts and submitting them in turn to the San Francisco Fire Department which is doing its part by bringing the toys to where they feel the need is greatest within the city area.

To date, the charitable toy collection includes mobile trucks and tractors, a TV set, tricycles, dolls, a doll house and books, also several boxes of games.

Presidio personnel are invited to share in the project by submitting toys for the collection, either to Mrs. Ivey through the Sunday School Classes, or to the Post Fire Department.

Local USO Clubs Plan Gala Holidays For Servicemen

Christmas activities at the San Francisco USO clubs have been planned with a view to meeting the social needs of Presidio and sub-Post servicemen and women too far away from their homes to be in the more familiar environment during the festive season. The USO clubs listed below, extend a most hearty welcome to the military within and beyond the city area, to avail of any or all the Yuletide events following:

Through the USO clubs, San Francisco families are inviting military personnel as their house guests during Christmas week. Reservations for this special courtesy may be obtained by calling the listed clubs by telephone or through personal calls at any of the buildings.

Sunday, 16 December, the YMCA-USO (966 Market Street), has planned a "Caroling Caravan" to local hospitals, starting from the Y at 1330 hours. On the same evening the NCCS-USO (70 Oak Street), is holding a Christian decorating party commencing at 1900 hours.

Tuesday, 18 December, at 1830 hours, the Embarcadero USO presents a Christmas dinner for visiting servicemen and women, followed by a tour of the city department stores (about 1930 hours). A Mexican Christmas party and dance is slated to take place at the same USO club, Friday, 21 December, beginning at 2100 hours.

Christmas Dance Set For Local Club

On 22 December the Service clubs of the Presidio, Fort Baker and Fort Cronkhite are uniting to present a formal Christmas dance for enlisted men and women in the area.

To be held at the main club, the dance will feature a first-class orchestra with dancing from the hours of 2100 to 2400.

For the lady guests, ballerina-length dresses are the order of the day. Their escorts are asked to be either in Class A uniform or in suit and tie.

Refreshments of a very special order will be served during the dance and it is planned to have corsages for the ladies.

Buses from Forts Baker and Cronkhite will bring guests from there to the Presidio Service Club at a time to be announced later, and there will be a junior hostess for each serviceman to dance with.

Close Games Nab Spotlight In Post Cage

Presidio Intramural Basketball League play was highlighted this week by two close games when the 537th Engineers squeezed by the 99th Engineers with a score of 40 to 39 and then fell before the guns of Headquarters Company, 30th Engineers, by a score of 45 to 48.

Lt. Muril D. Vincellette's total of 16 points was the deciding factor in the 537th's victory, but Sp3 Frank De Santis' tally of 17 points for the 99th Engineers helped make the margin of victory a small one.

The 537th Engineers also figured in the other close game of the week, but this time they were on the short end of a 45 to 48 score when they lost to Headquarters Co., 30th Engineer Group. Lt. Philip C. Jeske and Sp3 Robert H. Brinkerhoff netted 15 points each for the winners and Lt. Vincellette and Sp3 Roger V. Collins poured in a total of 18 points a piece for the losing team.

Toreros Win 'Y' Tourney

The Presidio volleyballers, defending all-Army and Sixth Army champions lived up to expectations Saturday, when they posted the winning 6-2 record, during the Fellowship Tournament held at the Richmond YMCA.

The tournament was sponsored jointly by the Oakland and Richmond YMCA's, and was held on a split round-robin basis; where each team met their opponent twice during the course of play.

Stellar performances were turned in by Matt Schmutz, star spiker of last year's championship team, and a newcomer to the Toreros, Ciprinjas Garancs.

Toreros Squeak Past Hamilton; Face Castle In Home Opener Tonight

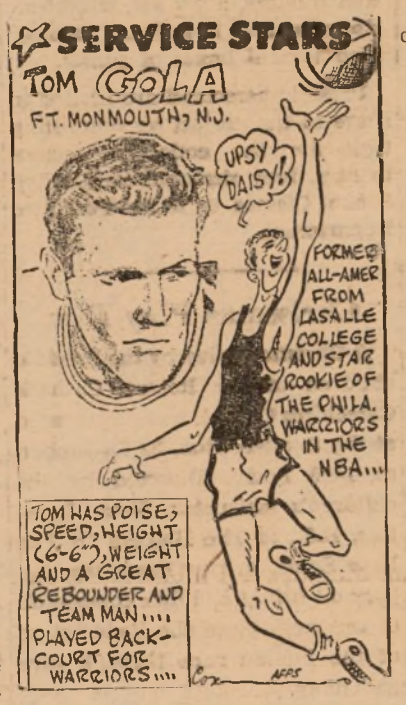
Presidio of San Francisco's basketballing Toreros got the scare of their lives Wednesday at Hamilton Air Force Base.



Generally conceded to be the Number 1 service basketball team on the Pacific Coast, the usually torrid Toreros suddenly blew cold and were lucky to grab a 72-68 victory over the Airmen.

The Toreros, who stage their home opener at Letterman Army Hospital Gym at 8 p.m. tonight, against Castle AFB, fell behind for the first time this season and only the scoring efforts of Carroll Williams, Tony Psaltis, and Jim Cummings kept them from defeat.

Williams, as usual, took high point honors, potting 23 points in the Presidio's behalf. He got able assistance, however, from the one-time University of Southern California team captain, Tony Psaltis.

The San Francisco Greek out of Mission High School enjoyed one of his better nights from the floor. Psaltis tanked five field goals and eight free throws for 18 points and, according to unofficial word, missed only two shots from the floor, a talent he has shown since his prep days.

Cummings, the huge 6'7" cager from Vanderbilt University, played his first full game for the Presidio and contributed 12 points to the cause.

Hamilton, sparked by Art Barnes, onetime Southern Methodist University athlete, jumped into the lead at the outset of proceedings. But the Toreros overcame Hamilton's 9-4 early lead and went out in front 13-11 midway in the opening period.

But Barnes, who tallied 20 of his 24 points in the first half, kept the Airmen within shooting distance. At the half the Presidio walked off the floor holding a slender, 42-40 advantage.

The Presidio widened its margin to 13 points early in the second half, but the Airmen continued to keep pace as the Toreros lagged.

Barnes finally came to life in the final seconds of the contest, firing through a pair of buckets to cut the Presidio's margin.

The victory left the Presidio the only unbeaten team in the Army-Air Force League and marked the Post cager's 37th consecutive win in league competition over a three-year period.

Gun Club Competition Sunday

An old-fashioned Turkey Shoot with some new angles has been conceived by and will be sponsored by the Presidio Gun Club on Sunday at the Presidio Pistol Range (Crissy Field) from 1000 hours to 1600 hours.

Matches will be fired with .22 and .45 calibre pistol in the pistol events and with .22 calibre in the rifle events. Guns and ammunition will be furnished or if desired, you may fire your own weapon.

Matches scheduled include skill matches, lucky matches, special ladies' events, and both right hand and left hand events in pistol matches. Skill matches in the rifle event will be with iron sight only.

Some of the matches were conceived with the idea of overcoming the advantage of the pros over the tyros. Everyone has an equal chance of taking home a turkey. Matches are open to everyone, military and civilian, young and old.

Tickets, on sale for fifty cents by members of the Presidio Gun Club, will be good for any one event. Tickets will also be available at the range.

The winner of each event will be awarded a turkey. In addition, a drawing will be held at 1600 hours and the holder of the lucky stub will be given a turkey whether present or not.

Scot's Doubles For Holiday Bird

The Presidio Lanes, at 1400 hours tomorrow, will be the scene of Scotchman's Doubles with the top couples taking home the turkeys. At least five turkeys, possibly more depending upon the number of entrants, will be awarded to the high scoring couples.

M/Sgt. Robert Mahon, 163rd MP Co., announced that the Scotchman's Doubles are open to all couples upon payment of an entry fee of $1.00 per couple.

Spike Guns Of All Foes In Title Try

The first nationwide athletic championship ever won by a West Coast AAA team went to the "spiking wonders" from Ft. Scott's 752nd AAA Gun Battalion as they whitewashed opposition in the All-Army Anti-aircraft Command Volleyball Tournament at Detroit, Michigan, last week.

The team faltered in only one set in sweeping to the title with a 15-4, 12-15, 15-3, 15-2 victory over the 504th AAA Missile Battalion of Dearborn, Mich., in the finals.

It was the 752nd's second triumph over the Dearborn team, following a 15-5, 10-15, 15-7 Fort Scott win in the semifinals of the double elimination tournament.

It was the third consecutive tournament won by the 752nd. The team started by defeating teams from the other AAA battalions in the Bay Area to take the 30th AAA Group Tournament at Letterman Sports Center.

Next came the title of the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command Tournament at Los Angeles, in which the 752nd mowed down opposition from the Los Angeles, Seattle and Hanford, Washington, areas.

Leaders in the 752nd's march to the national title were the team captain, Sp3 Jesus Gonzales, and Pfcs. George L. Lynch and Philip S. Kilmer. All won praise from tournament observers for brilliant spiking and sharp defensive play.

Congratulations were extended to the team from Brigadier General Legare K. Tarrant and Colonel Arthur Roth, Commanding General and Deputy Commander of the Sixth AA Regional Command respectively, and Lieutenant Colonel Charles A. Jenkins, Commanding Officer of the 752nd and acting CO of the 30th AAA Group.

Baseball Youths Set Fund Drive

The Babe Ruths and Mickey Mantles of the 1960's, the members of the Presidio Little League and the Youth Baseball Leagues, are beginning a drive to procure baseball uniforms before the season opens this coming spring.

According to a plan submitted by Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander and approved by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, 6th Army CG, the baseball players will visit all Presidio offices from 21 December to 28 December in search of contributions to support the purchase of uniforms.

The Little Leaguers need replacement of their present well-worn uniforms and the Youth Leaguers hope to acquire uniforms for the first time. They have been unable to afford them in the past. This season both leagues hope to appear on the playing field in typical baseball regalia.

New Training Program For Handymen

A Do-It-Yourself 30-day training program involving 30 days instruction of 20 selected enlisted men has been initiated at the Presidio.

Men with hobbies or a working knowledge of carpentry or plumbing are to be screened by unit commanders with a view to determine their aptitude and establish their necessary minimum of 12 months remaining on the present enlistment, a prerequisite to selection for the special training program.

The Do-It-Yourself instruction course will continue over a 12-month period if sufficient interest and ability are shown to warrant it.

Men successfully completing one of the courses of instruction are being given a certificate of completion showing the specific types of jobs they are authorized to perform.

Best Barracks Award for November in the 30th Engineer Group was presented to Capt. Anthony L. Alonzo, Headquarters and Headquarters Company Commander, by Col. Lawrence R. St. John, Commander, 30th Engineer Group. The award is given to add incentive to the Army's Do-It-Yourself program.

Of Pigeons

"G.I. Joe," who is credited with saving the lives of hundreds of troops at Colvi Vecchia. Italy, during World War II, flew 20 miles in as many minutes carrying an order to cancel the scheduled bombing of the city. The action saved a British brigade which had entered the city ahead of schedule. The Lord Mayor of London presented the Dicken medal to "G.I. Joe" in 1946.

An urgent message for the late Gen. George Patton was carried 90 miles in 100 minutes by "Yank," who also carried a message on the fall of Gafsa in Tunisia.

"Caesar" carried 44 combat messages in North Africa during World War II. Among these was one requiring him to travel 300 miles and to cross the Mediterranean to a home loft in Tunisia.

During World War I "Cher Ami," whose body has been mounted and placed in the National Museum, Washington, D. C., saved survivors of the "Lost Battalion." The pigeon carried a message 25 miles in 30 minutes from the lost men to American troops who were attacking them. One leg was shattered by a bullet and one wing was injured on the flight.

During World War II about 40,000 racing pigeons were volunteered by civilian racing fanciers.

Monterey Bay Port Call Set For Ord Men

More than 2,200 men, trained at Fort Ord for the 10th Inf. Div. in Germany, will load directly into a troopship in Monterey Bay for shipment through the Panama Canal to Bremerhaven.

The troopship movement will be the first to originate from a point other than a designated port. It will test the feasibility of an offshore loading exercise.

The transport, the USNS General Walker, is scheduled to anchor in Monterey Bay on 9 January and to leave for Germany the next day.

If the plan is feasible, Fort Ord and nearby Monterey Bay could present an ideal combination for the training and speedy shipment of overseas replacements. The plan would offer the safety of decentralization and the security of a comparatively isolated point of embarkation, according to Transportation officials.

Reserve Flight Program

About 400 college seniors enrolled in the Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps will begin flight training at civilian educational institutions during the current academic year, the Department of the Army has announced.

Mock War

Besides testing their technical production capacities, both units will be operating their administration, supply and mess section on a combat basis. Men of the 660th will bivouac both nights in the field. Security guards will be on duty around the clock.

Aggressor personnel from the 99th Engineer Company will go all out to make conditions as realistically uncomfortable as possible. They will set road blocks, attack working parties, harrass the bivouac area and throw gas and smoke grenades. Field parties will be subject to strafing by fixed wing aircraft.

Objectives of the exercise are officially listed as determining how well the individuals are trained in their MOS, how well the unit can perform its mission and in which areas training needs improvement.

Umpires from 30th Group Headquarters will determine each unit's success in carrying out its mission and score it accordingly. They will also assess deaths and injuries to the forces in combat.

Chief umpire for the 660th test is Maj. Richard C. Hirsch who will be assisted by Capt. William C. Gonyo and Capt. Seamon J. Mol-Kenbuhr. The 21st exercise will be umpired by 1st Lt. Robert J. Wallace with the assistance of CWO Clarence H. Saunders.

Manufactured by Lyn Coach and Truck Co., Oneonta, N. Y., the clinics are expected to cost $192,000. They can be operated either independently or from fixed electrical and water outlets.

The air-conditioned units will provide complete dental service, including laboratory, X-ray and a two-chair operating room.

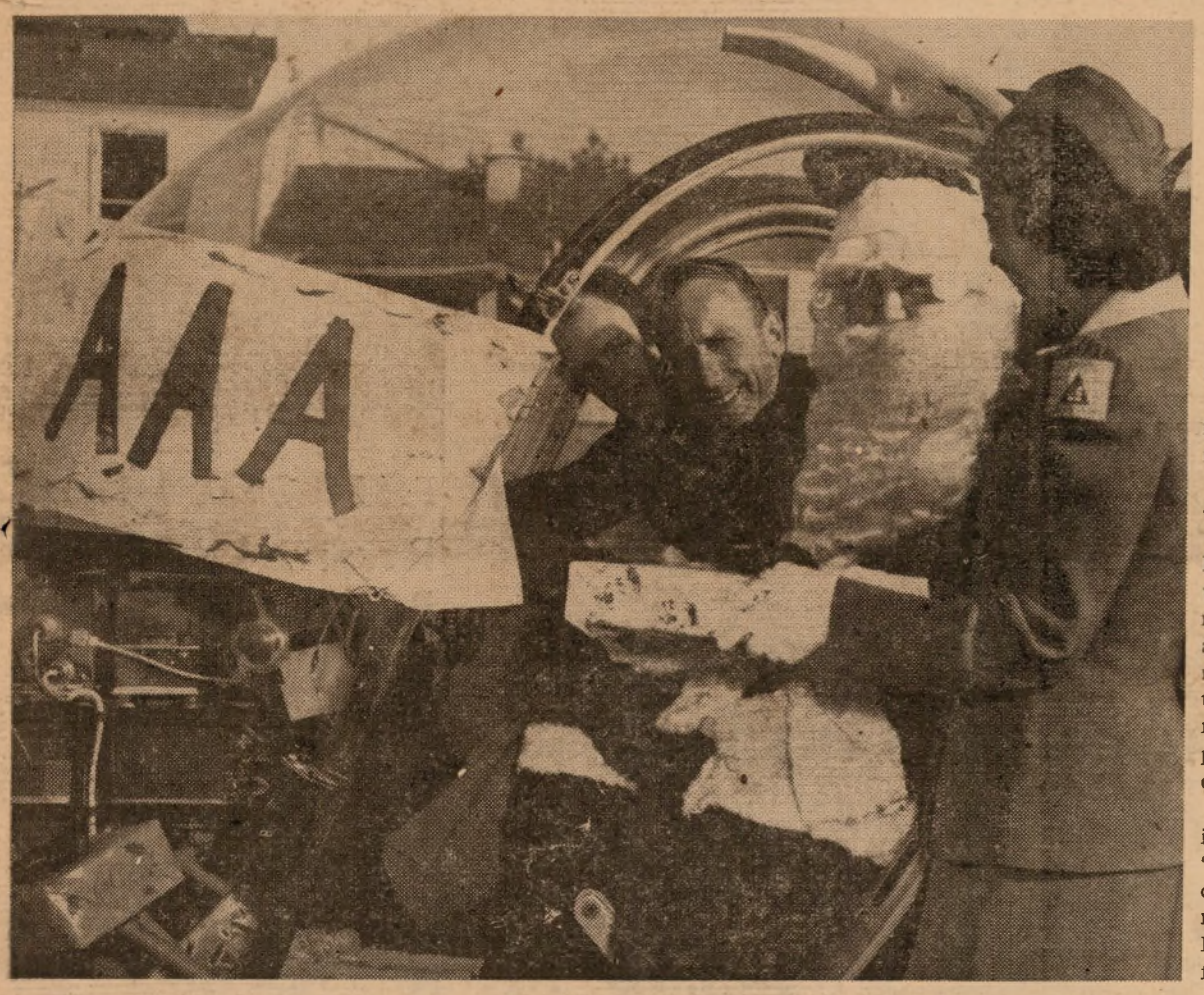
New Year Festivities Highlight NCO Club Sked

The Presidio NCO Open Mess is helping its patrons to ring in the New Year with Charlie Stern's popular dance orchestra and the sensational Ronnie Draper to highlight the floor show. Also on the entertainment schedule is "The Great Martinelli," master magician and illusionist, and Riki Shea, comedienne and singer.

A buffet supper will be served at the Non-Com Open mess all through the New Years Eve festivities. The cost of admittance is $1.50 per person and reservations may be secured by calling extension 2028. Early advance arrangements are recommended by the club directors, since a large crowd is expected to attend the club on that evening.

The Fort Scott Annex is featuring Lou Frye and his Dixieland "Tom Cats" in its New Years Eve celebration. No reservations are necessary for this one since the Fort Scott club boasts a regular family clientele.



At the Fort Cronkhite club annex, a fine Western band and buffet supper is being planned, and likewise, no reservations are needed for the club's guests. The Presidio Annex club will also serve breakfast until 0300 hours. New Years Eve celebrants are reminded that it is a good way to end a full night's welcome to 1957.

All the club annexes will close at 2000 hours on 24 December and remain closed until the established reopening slated for 26 December.

Yule Marriage

There is a quaint ritual in Denmark whereby two fruit trees are married at Christmas time by binding them together with straw.

Santa To Visit Isolated Sites By Helicopter Christmas Morn

Santa Claus may be using old-fashioned reindeer again this year, but his helpers—at least at the Presidio—are going to make their rounds by whirly bird.

Six service club girls and three Army helicopter pilots will team up Christmas morning for "Operation Isolated Santa," which will involve making six gift flights to ten isolated Nike stations in this area.

The identity of the presents to be delivered will not be disclosed until Christmas Day, but 1,200 have been purchased — a gift for everyone.

This volunteer Christmas project got started when Dorothy Webb, director of the Fort Baker Service Club, approached Maj. Harold Utley, special services officer for the 30th AAA Group, with the idea of visiting the nearby Nike sites on Christmas Day.

Major Utley felt the men in the really isolated stations were the ones who needed the Christmas cheer and suggested a visit to them. This plan materialized when Capt. Jack H. Gerber, aviation officer for the Sixth AAA Regional Command, arranged for helicopter transportation. If foul weather prohibits air travel, the visits will be made by sedan.

The flights, which start at 0800 hours on Christmas Day, are slated to visit not only the battery headquarters but will also set down at the radar and launching sites in each area.

Santa's helpers—all service club directors — include Dorothy Webb and Donnal Bedford, Fort Baker; Aliisa Gronroos, Fort Cronkhite; Isabelle Walker and Elizabeth de la Torres, Presidio, and Marian Evans, staff director for Sixth Army service clubs.

Besides Captain Gerber the pilots donating their Christmas morning to "Operation Isolated Santa" are Lieutenants V. R. Watson and R. E. Smith, both of the 30th Engineer Group.

Another holiday project will originate out of Fort Baker on Christmas Eve when a boat load of cheerer-uppers will steam out to Angel Island with games, refreshments and gifts for the soldiers in the barracks.

Chief of Staff's Yule Message

Christmas, with its message of peace, comes once more to the Army with its mission of peace. To our soldiers and their families, it is a time for thanksgiving that our country has continued to enjoy the blessings of peace during the past year. It is also a time for reflecting on our ever-present responsibility as soldiers, to work unceasingly to increase our ability to prevent war and to restrain the forces of aggression.

In discharging the peace-preserving functions of the Army, many of its members will pass the Christmas Season far from their homes in the 73 foreign countries where our Army is stationed. To them should go an especial measure of thanks for the vigil they keep along the frontiers of freedom. I hope that another Christmas will find many of them safely returned to their homes.

With full confidence in the men and women of the Army wherever they are found, I wish for all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Together let us enter 1957 with the determination to make the Army an increasingly effective force for world peace.

MAXWELL D. TAYLOR
General, United States Army

G-3 Ladies Have Unique Children's Xmas Project

For the fifth consecutive year, Mrs. Jeanette B. Irons, Classified Control Points, G-3, is conducting her private project for San Francisco needy children.

Mrs. Irons sells tickets to her friends and to G-3 employees. She donates a ham to the lucky ticket-holder and uses the proceeds to purchase toys for the children. Each year about $70 is collected.

Miss Winnifred M. Senn, Budget and Fiscal Officer, G-3, entered the project two years ago by designing and making dolls which are sold. The dolls were originally offered as toys but are now sold by popular request.

Personnel in G-3 led by Carole Zabriskie and Margaret Thomson assist Mrs. Irons in selling tickets and selecting and wrapping the gifts. The toys are turned over to the San Francisco Public Welfare Department for distribution.

Candlelight Luck

Highway Safety Tips

Washington—If you're planning to drive home on Christmas leave, here are some highway driving hints that will help you make the trip safely and surely both ways:

- Never eat a big meal just before or during a long trip.
- Stop every hour whether you feel tired or not. Always get out of the car for a few minutes.
- If you must drive at night, keep the dash lights as dim as possible to reduce glare but turn on the interior lights occasionally as darkness has a tendency to relax some drivers too much.
- Don't keep your eyes focused on a point straight ahead. Look to the right and left, and don't follow the same car too long.
- Always get a good night's sleep before starting a trip. Wear loose clothes. Open your jacket and loosen your collar.
- Play the radio but avoid slow, "dreamy" music; change stations frequently.
- If you find your attention wandering, pull over to the side of the road and take off your right shoe. The vibration from the gas pedal will have a stimulating effect.
- Keep plenty of fresh air coming into the car. Don't smoke too much. It may tire your eyes.
- Vary speeds from time to time, keeping below the maximum. Constant speeds have a tendency to invite "speed hypnosis."
- If these suggestions don't keep you alert, pull off the highway and take a nap. If you're worried about sleeping too long, park near a filling station and ask the attendant to wake you. (AFPS)

Army Television Program Slated For Local Viewing

A special half-hour film entitled "Christmas in Music" has been distributed by the Army to about 370 U.S. television stations and Armed Forces TV stations overseas.

The film, distributed through the weekly series, The Big Picture, will be aired in San Francisco over KOVR, Channel 13, at 1700 hours, 22 December.

The chorus sings "Silent Night," "Adestes Fidelis," and robed as Dickens' carolers, "Away in the Manger." New York TV songstress Jan Crocket and band vocalist Bob Benson will also appear in the show staged and filmed at the Army Pictorial Center, Long Island City, N. Y.

A message by General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, and a prayer by Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Ryan, Army Chief of Chaplains, will be featured.

Army Tomorrow

On the changing battlefield of tomorrow, the decisive margin of strength will fall to the side possessing superior mobility required to exploit the destructive effects of its weapons.

DEADLINE IS WEDNESDAY NOON

When To Celebrate New Year's Day Big Question For Many Centuries

New Year's Day has turned up in some of the most unexpected spots on the calendar.

Throughout history, men have celebrated the coming of the New Year, but there's been great variety of opinion concerning when the year should begin.

In ancient times many nations started the year at spring planting time or after the fall harvest. The ancient Egyptians, Phoenicians and Persians celebrated the new year on the first day of fall—the autumnal equinox.

Even today the Jews fix their new year around the autumnal equinox. In 1956, Jews celebrated Rosh Hashanah — "Head of the Year"—6-7 September. It marked the opening of the Jewish year 5717.

Two important dates to the early inhabitants of Europe were 1 May and 1 November. The first marked the arrival of warm weather, and was widely celebrated as May Day. 1 November ushered in the cold weather and was celebrated by the Celts as both New Year's and All Saints Day. The Celts also celebrated Halloween, and their new year thus fell at the time when ghosts were said to visit the earth and give clues to the future.

Before the Romans came to England, New Year's Day was celebrated in that country on 10 March. The Romans introduced the custom of greeting the new year 1 January.

The Julian calendar of the Romans had minor flaws and in the 16th century many nations began replacing it with the more accurate Gregorian calendar.

England, however, waited about 200 years before adopting the Gregorian calendar in 1752. The switch was made also in this country, then an English colony.

This calendar change made it necessary to add 11 days to the birthdate of George Washington. He was born 11 February, 1732, under the old calendar, but the new calendar moved it to the traditional 22 February. (AFPS)

Mrs. Jeanette Irons, Classified Control Points, will become Mrs. N. Pounds next March.

A resident of San Carlos, Mrs. Irons is a file clerk supervisor and has been with G-3 since 1949.

Miss Patricia Harty, Special Projects Branch, Training Division, will wed Sp2 Lowell Albert, 542nd Engineer Co., in June. A clerk-stenographer, she has been with G-3 since February, 1955.

Old Army Homesteader Finds Bachelor Life Outmoded

After more than 15 years of continuous Army Service and serving in all grades from Private to Chief Warrant Officer, CWO Nicholas F. Christofani of the 99th Engineer Company for the first time in his Army career has been evicted from government quarters and told to find his own bed.

When the Master Sergeants took over the BOQ at Fort Scott in the Army's efforts to increase NCO prestige there were mixed feelings in all grades involved. The Master Sergeants were real pleased to get the private rooms, the younger officers were real happy to move into San Francisco—but the "Ole Chief" was bewildered as he thumbed through "furnished rooms to let" ads in the local papers.

Chief Warrant Officer Christofani who has been a bachelor all of his 43 years has always enjoyed the companionship he found in barracks and BOQs. The "Ole Chief" disappointedly claims, "Gad! I'm too old to get married and too young to live alone."

"Won't fade away" says CWO Nicholas F. Christofani, 99th Engineer Company, as he unhappily moves out of government quarters into an apartment 30 feet from post boundaries. "The Ole Chief," a veteran of more than 15 years continuous Army service, was forced to move when the master sergeants took over the BOQ at Fort Scott. Mr. Christofani can still hear the bugle calls and continues to eat in the mess hall. He insists that he is ". . . one old soldier that's not going to fade away."

In order to hold down the shock of living off-post the "Ole Chief" managed to secure an apartment approximately 30 feet from the post boundaries and easily within earshot of all bugle calls. To further ease the transition the "Ole Chief's" new landlord is a retired Army man, one other occupant is also a Warrant Officer and one a retired Master Sergeant.

Christofani's apartment was formerly occupied by an Army doctor thus, according to the "Ole Chief," insuring that the apartment is up to his sanitary requirements. In order to eliminate long periods of depression and a nostalgic look in the "Ole Chief's" eyes his landlord has promised that the atmosphere would be as "Armyfied" as possible.

Although he has moved off-post, Christofani still eats all his meals in the 99th Engineer Company mess hall. He claims if he doesn't eat off a metal tray it just doesn't taste right.

The "Ole Chief" points proudly to himself and says, "This is one Old Soldier that's not going to fade away." (R.J.W.)

New Unit Designations Due Here 1 January

Army Order Will Change Local Titles

Effective 1 January 1957 many Presidio units will receive new designations, according to General Order 270, Headquarters Sixth Army. Individual mailing addresses as well as all official correspondence will be affected by the change.

The basic result of the redesignation is that units formerly designated by numbers and letters will now have actual titles.

"In the interest of economy," the order states, "existing letterheads, forms, etc., bearing current designations will be continued in use until supplies are exhausted." Changing of signs and vehicle and equipment identification is authorized as resources permit.

Sixth Army becomes Sixth US Army and the three headquarters detachments will become Headquarters Sixth US Army, Headquarters Company, Sixth US Army and Sixth US Army Flight Detachment.

At (6002) the five companies (Headquarters A, C, D and E), formerly designated as "Detachment 1 (6002) Station Complement," now become "US Army

Ask Caution On Non-Reg Army Greens

Washington — The Department of the Army has announced that some commercial uniform vendors, particularly in overseas areas, are selling Army Green uniforms which fail to meet required standards.

DA Circular 670-7 states that individuals purchasing uniforms from commercial sources should obtain a written guarantee from the vendors that they conform to Army regulations.

Personnel who buy the green uniform from civilian vendors are responsible for verification of the uniform's conformance to regulations.

According to the circular, commanders will take continuing action to insure that Army Green uniforms worn by personnel under their jurisdiction meet the specifications issued by the Quartermaster General.

The circular also authorizes commanders at all echelons to prohibit individuals from wearing the nonregulation uniform. (ANS)

Engineer Units Find Annual Training Exercise Offers Realistic Operation

By Sp3 Dick Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

"Well, if it wasn't real, it was darn realistic!"

This comment from a 30th Engineer Group soldier appears to be the general troop consensus regarding the training exercises engaged in this week by the 660th Engineer Battalion (Base Topographic) and the 21st Engineer Company (Base Photomapping).

The 660th — including headquarters and kitchen — went to the field and the 21st went to their photomapping plant.

Both exercises have been summed up this way: "An awful lot of work and an awful little sleep."

Aggressor action—night and day—kept the men continually on edge and prevented much shut eye. The danger posed by the enemy could be met only by heavy security forces which depleted the working strength of the units and put a heavier burden on the men who did work.

The tests, designed to determine the engineers' ability to perform their mission under realistic, wartime conditions, posed a situation in which the troops were supposedly working some 50 miles behind friendly lines, but subject to attack by guerrilla band and harrassment by unfriendly civilians.

The 21st plant aggressor harrassment was so strong that security forces had their schedule changed to two hours on and two hours off right around the clock. The men had no beds and could only sleep on the floor during their break time.

Despite the precautions, a prisoner, captured the first night, was able to smuggle several fire bombs into the heavily guarded building. After this slip the guard really tightened and the aggressor started getting the worst of things. Spotlights illuminated the area after the first night.

Inside the plant the men were hard at work on six complex mapping projects. Because of the reduced manpower the map makers were forced to work eleven-hour shifts. "It's pretty hard on the eyes," was an understated evaluation of this tedious situation.

Across the Golden Gate the men of the 660th set up their bivouac area at Kirby Beach which they reached by truck convoy after a circuitous 15-mile route. Three separate camps were established, one each for the 537th, the 549th companies and the Hq. & Hq. Det.

Out of the bivouac area 10 crews worked on a variety of projects designed to gather field data for the establishment of aerial map control points. One crew built a 60-foot Bilbey tower. Other crews figured length

New Signal Cable Links U.S., Alaska

A 1,250-mile underwater telephone cable system linking the United States and Alaska has been opened by the Army Signal Corps and the Bell Telephone System.

Hatfield Chilson, Assistant Secretary of Interior, and B. Frank Heintzleman, Governor of Alaska, made the first call over the new system, which stretches from Port Angeles, Wash., to Skagway, Alaska.

The system consists of two major projects, developed individually by the Long Lines Department of A.T.&T. and the Alaska Communications System, operated by the Signal Corps.

The A.T.&T. cable extends 900 miles from Port Angeles to Ketchikan. It is met in Ketchikan by a 400-mile ACS cable which reaches Skagway. From Port Angeles the cable circuits are connected to the U. S. network at Seattle by a radio relay link constructed by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. The circuits are fed into the Alaska communications network beyond Skagway.

The system, which will supplement radiotelephone and land line facilities, was built over a two-year period and can carry 36 conversations at one time.

Allot Special Dividends For Holders Of USGLI

Washington — A special dividend will be paid to Army personnel who surrendered permanent plan United States Government Life Insurance between 25 April, 1951, and 31 December, 1952, and who are now reinstating their policies, the Veterans Administration has announced.

The VA says that dividends were paid on most USGLI permanent plan policies in force on or after 31 December, 1952, and termination dividends were paid on policies surrendered or matured on or after 1 January, 1953.

As trustee of the USGLI fund, the Veterans Administration has now decided to pay an appropriate special dividend to eligible policyholders who surrendered their insurance between April, 1951, and December, 1952, but who intend to replace it or have the coverage reinstated.

In addition, these USGLI policies will be entitled to whatever termination dividend is declared upon subsequent surrender, maturity, or death of the insured. The VA claims that this decision to pay the special dividend makes it even more advantageous for most individuals to either replace or reinstate their USGLI policies.

The special dividend is payable only to personnel who surrendered the permanent plan USGLI. It does not apply to members who surrendered National Service Life Insurance during the same period.

Applications for reinstatement or replacement of USGLI must be submitted while personnel are on active duty or within 120 days from the date of separation from the Army. (ANS)

Army's Nike Float Could Win Award

The float's frame, which will hold one and a half ton of flowers, has been completed and test runs successfully attempted. The finished product will be 42 feet long, 20 feet wide and 17 feet high from the ground to the Nike's tip.

A blast of flame depicted in flowers and one-minute take-off sounds will be featured. The Valley Decorating Co. of Fresno, Calif., is constructing the float.

An emergency appeal for $5,000,000 to assist the Hungarian people has been launched by the American Red Cross, under the leadership of President Eisenhower.

Military and civilian personnel have been urged to make private contributions in self-furnished sealed envelopes. The individual's name, organization and amount of donation should be recorded on the inside flap of the envelope. Neither literature nor formal envelopes will be distributed.

Quotas will not be established for the voluntary contributions. Unit commanders and section chiefs will collect and deliver the envelopes to the Presidio Red Cross Chapter on 31 December.

Holiday Payday

Civilians whose normal payday falls on 1 January will receive paychecks on 2 January instead of 31 December as previously announced, according to Post Finance.

Those whose payday falls on Christmas will be paid today. The one-day delay in January paychecks is due to the Christmas holidays.

Termites and Outhouses

Improvised Holiday Decor Proves Engineer Ingenuity

What do you do if it's the Yule season and somebody wants to borrow your Christmas decorations!

Well, if you're in the buildings and structures branch of the Sixth Army Engineer Section you improvise—and come up with a solution that's colorful, educational and "Christmasy."

Of course, you need a few live termites. And a prefabricated "privvy." But most of all you need about 150 building material samples of items the Army uses for its construction projects.

Some termites (which died because nobody fed them any wood) and some wood (which has already been partially consumed by termites) make a graphic display on insect damage.

But more in the Christmas spirit is the tree which has been decorated with a variety of building samples such as metal fixtures, plastic tiles, wainscoating material, etc.

The engineer's castle and the prefabricated "privvy" serve as symbols of the "building" interests of the branch while a water tower model and an engineer tower illustrated the "structure" side of the branch. The "privvy" was constructed by members of the office out of sample materials.

Another part of the Christmas display includes a moisture meter for determining the relative dryness of wood, and a wood study kit showing 54 different types of wood.

The whole idea of the display was cooked up by the members of the office after the Engineer Employees Association requested the branch's Christmas decorations for a tree to be displayed in the hall of Bldg. 35. They decided to make their own decorations "out of the material we handle every day," explains Branch Chief C. A. Mette.

Displaying Award recently presented to her is Miss Dawna M. Bohlsen, G-1, Manpower Division. The clerk-stenographer received a Department of the Army Performance Award Certificate and $200 check from (right) Col. John N. Beck, Acting Assistant Chief of Staff, Personnel and Administration, and Lt. Col. Victor B. Fox, Manpower Division Chief.

Six Sixth Army Civilians Win Cash Employee Awards

Six Sixth Army civilian employees have been awarded a total of $750 in superior performance of duty and suggestion awards this week.

Miss Dawna Bohlsen, G-1, Manpower Division, received a $200 check and Performance Award Certificate from Col. John N. Beck, Acting Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1 (Personnel and Administration).

Two electrical engineers, Mr. Robert S. Archer, Engineer Utilization Division, and Mr. George S. Martin, Utilization Division, were presented Suggestion Award Certificates.

Mr. Archer was awarded a $300 check for implementing a standardized guide for the selection of lighting fixtures to be used by Army engineer sections throughout the Sixth Army area. A standardized electrical plan to be used in connection with submitted plans for interior electrical work netted Mr. Martin $200. Both awards were presented by Col. F. H. Falkner, Engineer.

Miss Flora McLenhan, Supervisory Accounting Clerk, and Mrs. Marie Waraner, Key Punch Operator, Finance and Accounting, also received suggestion awards.

Miss McLenhan was given $25 for simplifying a month-end report form and Mrs. Waraner received $10 for suggesting a method of reducing the number of copies required for messages. Lt. Col. David W. Jones, Jr., Executive Officer, made the presentations.

Miss Griffin devised a system for reducing the amount of typing required on Sixth Army program progress review releases by reproducing mechanically the heading and stub on each release.

Newly Proposed UniformLawWould Be Retroactive

A proposed uniform allowance law will make $250 uniform payments retroactive to 1 Jan., 1953, to those commissioned directly into the Regular Army from enlisted, ROTC or civilian status.

A $250 allowance was paid through 31 Dec., 1952, to all newly commissioned officers, regardless of component under a 4 Dec., 1952, act repealed by the Armed Forces Reserve Act. At present newly commissioned regulars do not receive uniform payments.

Celebrating

Army IGs Mark 179th Birthday

George Washington established the position of Inspector General as a result of his dissatisfaction with the state of training and the lack of uniform regulations, both for drill and for individual conduct of the elements of his command.

Today IGs report on matters which affect the efficiency and economy of the Army and strive to resolve problems presented by individuals of the Army establishment.

Col. David A. Watt, Jr., and Lt. Col. Raymond C. Ball head Sixth Army IG. Lt. Col. Willett Ware, Jr., is Post IG.

Famous Poem Turned Santa Into Jolly Man

Santa Claus, as we know him today, may be said to have originated in America, although his legend is based on stories from many lands, where he is known as St. Nicholas, Pere Noel, Father Christmas and so on.

The name comes from Holland, where under the Spanish influence, Saint became Santa. Nicholas was shortened to Ni'Klaus or Claus—thus Santa Claus.

When Santa Claus came to America, he was tall and gaunt. Later, as a result of Clement Moore's "The Night Before Christmas," Santa put on weight and became the rollicking red-nosed, rotund and jolly character we know today.

It might have been easier for him to come down the chimney when he was thinner, but children now love him as he is, and many try to catch a glimpse of the elusive fellow who brings so many good things for Christmas Day. (AFPS)

Uniform State Laws Would Aid Servicemen

The multiplicity of state laws which face service families on a ZI assignment may be slightly reduced next year, due to the work of the Committee of State Officials on Suggested State Legislation.

The committee, a branch of the Council of State Governments, makes annual recommendations for more uniform state laws. The suggestions for 1957 include lower game license fees for servicemen, better absentee voting laws and more lenient drivers' license renewals. The states must pass the suggested laws on an individual basis.

The game law proposal would allow servicemen to be considered as residents for licensing purposes. This would waive the period of establishing residency and the added fees for non-residents.

In regard to driving licenses, the committee recommends that a serviceman's license be renewable from his home state by mail as long as he remains in service and 30 days after separation.

The absentee voting law in existence in most states would allow servicemen and dependents; merchant marines and dependents; overseas civilian employees and dependents; and members of religious and welfare groups to vote by mail.

State employees in Reserve units should be allowed 17 to 30 days annual pay for any type of active duty for training, according to the committee.

Soldier Son Wins CMH After Death

A lieutenant colonel who died six years ago in battle in Korea has been awarded the Medal of Honor.

Though usually silent, porcupines can make sounds ranging from a snorting bark to a kind of cry or "scream."

recently assigned

Lieutenant Colonel WILLIAM N. KOSKI, CE, is the newly-assigned assistant Post Engineer. He returned recently from a three-year duty tour, assigned from the Eastern Ocean District Corps of Engineers Headquarters, New York, to a U. S. Air Force Base in Stephenville, Newfoundland, Canada.

In Federal service for 12 years active duty, Colonel Koski was graduated from Northern Michigan College in Marquette. He served with the Corps of Engineers in the South Pacific, the Philippines and Japan during 1942 through 1945.

Major ELBERT R. CURTIS assumed his new duties in the Sixth Army's G-3 Operations Section, this week. A veteran of 16 years military service, he was a combat officer with the 823rd Tank Destroyer Battalion in Europe during World War II. During 1946-47-48 he was assigned to the Philippine Command headquarters and in Korea he was assigned to the I Corps Artillery.

Major Curtis attended the Advanced Artillery School at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and the Command General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth. He resides with his wife and four children in the Presidio Apartments area.

Nuclear Battle Tactics

Small units widely dispersed on the battlefront will be needed in future wars to offset the massed firepower and destructiveness of atomic weapons, according to Lt. Gen. C. D. Eddleman, deputy chief of staff for military operations.

The problems of dispersal cannot be solved by extending the space between men. Battalion-size units which can operate semi-dependently on a fluid, dispersed battlefield is the present Army conception of a basic tactical force.

Thrift Shop Has Necessities, Pink Elephants For All Ages

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Feature Editor

It has something of the air of an old London Curiosity Shop! Unique from the point of view of its volunteer saleslades, any of whom may be the wife of an Army general, or daughter of a colonel, to its fascinating display of articles for sale, it is the Open Sesame to quick and inexpensive home furnishing for families of all military rank.

Suiting the needs of any taste or purse — ideal bargain counter for incoming families, or a rapid clearing house for those outward-bound. Here come the thrifty and the seekers after unusual items never available in a department store at the same small cost. Here you may find a gilt mirror for the empty hall, a bird cage for junior's pet parakeet, a cocktail set, a lovely imported tablecloth, a Biblical tapestry, radio, frigidaire or a clock, piano, pipe organ or piccolo; they are all at the Post Thrift Shop at a cost of next to nothing. They lie in happy array or equally happy disarray — waiting like children to be brought home from school.

Each and every item eventually finds a customer. Each article has its own particular charm, or it can serve a strictly utilitarian purpose, depending on the immediate needs of the prospective buyer.

"I had an old piano delivered for sale at the Thrift Shop last Monday morning," says Mrs. Alexander Cohen, wife of a Presidio officer, "and it was sold to a new owner by 1700 hours that evening!"

In operation at the Presidio for the past 22 years, the Thrift Shop was originally called the Trading Post. It was taken over as a community benefit project by the Presidio Women's Club in 1953, and the good deeds done through its function since would fill a book. It is dedicated to the interests of financing the social and athletic programs of young boys and girls of the Presidio.

Managed for the past four years by Mrs. Lloyd C. Parsons, wife of a retired Army colonel, the shop has blossomed forth from just a small general supply store to a three-way project of mutual benefit to the customer, to the person submitting a given article for sale there, and to the Presidio Youth Activities which is the main reason for the shop's existence.

The Thrift Shop is allocated a 15 per cent dividend on each item sold there by the volunteer sales ladies, all of whom are members of the Presidio Woman's Club.

Only source of income for all Youth projects in the area, the Thrift Shop is the financial parent of the Teen Age Club, Little League, Boy and Girl Scouts, Youth Baseball League, Social and Religious groups, and to the Pre-School Nursery, operated for the benefit of working mothers. It can therefore never be considered a place of materialist exchange only, for in its remote and unassuming manner, it is the silent benefactor of practically every young son and daughter of military parents living in the Presidio.

Shopping at the Thrift Shop is more fun than a barrel of monkeys. You are likely to encounter there the happy fellowship enjoyed by a Pfc. and a colonel, both going over the merits of a second-hand German camera, or a bride discussing with some seasoned housekeeper, the qualities of two popular-brand frigidaires.

Over the years, Mrs. Parsons and her staff of volunteers have sold motor boats, sail boats and shrimp nets, trailers, cutlery, dishes and furniture, pots and pans, Army and Navy uniforms, cots and beds and children's clothing. There is no end nor any limit to the things you can bring to the Thrift Shop for sale at reduced cost. If you are a man, and caught short for a freshly laundered shirt in first-class condition, you can buy it for a song at the Thrift Shop.

Obviously, however, the Thrift Shop is not run exclusively by or for the pleasure of Mrs. Parsons and the Presidio Woman's Club group. It is a two-way enterprise which must have cooperation in order for it to exist as a worthwhile community project.

There is only one thing expected of the man or woman submitting items for sale at the Thrift Shop; that the article be in good condition, clean, and in working order.

The shop is on Montgomery Street and Sheridan Avenue near the main Post Exchange. In Building 99, it is open from 1100 to 1500 Monday through Friday. It does immeasurable good as a means of providing healthy social and recreational activities for young sons and daughters of the Presidio. And only through the interests of parents and customers generally can it continue to serve such an important cause.

You are invited to patronize the Post Thrift Shop, either as a contributor of articles for sale or as a purchaser for your home or your friends.

Finance Sprites Bring Xmas Cheer

Faced with drab walls and armed with imagination and initiative, three civilian employees have brought Christmas spirit into the basement offices of Reports and Accounts Division, Sixth Army Finance, Finance and Accounting Section.

Working in spare time and slack hours, John Femminis, tab operator supervisor, and Helen Adams and Barbara Graves, tab operators, have enlarged Christmas cards into colored-chalk, wall-size pictures.

"The pictures have been done well and in good taste," commented Capt. Richard G. Fazakerley, Chief, Reports and Accounts Division. "They are a great boost to employee morale."

Dog's Day At Presidio As Mutts Win Honors

The dogs had their day at the Presidio Service Club recently when nearly 20 canines of all shapes, sizes, breeds and colors were led by their youthful owners to face the judges in the Presidio's first dog show.

Judges for the Mutt Show were James McGraw, of the 561st Engineers; Frank O'Sullivan (Santa Claus) and member of the San Francisco Fire Department; Alice Macondray (club hostess); Ring Steward, Master of Ceremonies; Frank Bousted, a dog food representative, and Lieutenant Colonel Archie Traynor, Post S-1, was the awarding officer.

Best dog in the show and best groomed dog, combined, by popular acclaim, was "Blackie," owned by Scotty Marsden.

Lewellyn Dineen's pet, "Mac," sported the longest ears, and "Kia," Mac Ames' pet, was awarded the shortest ear title.

Longest and shortest tail honors were carried off by "Corky," owned by Jill Griffin, and "Muffins," by Barbara Enmeier, was a repeat winner with the shortest.

"Jack," whose owner is James Gouch, was designated the dog having the most spots on its coat, and the most unusually marked animal, "Bingo," took honors for Judy Coolidge.

Each first and second place winner won a trophy and ribbon. The third place dog was awarded a special ribbon and a table lamp was the prize for the Best Dog In The Show.

Seek Cubmaster

A vacancy exists for a Cubmaster to Cub Pack 178, of the Presidio. This is a volunteer off-duty position open to any officer, enlisted man or Department of the Army civilian in the area.

Applicants for the Cubmaster position would be aiding the Youth Activities Program at the Presidio by supervising the Scouting activities for boys in the 8 to 11 age group. Further information may be obtained by contacting Lieutenant Colonel Willet Ware, Jr., Institutional Representative for the Boy Scouts of America. Telephone extension 2252 or 4345.

Dinner-Dance Tops Yule Program At Teenage Club

Those without reservations can arrange to attend the dance by contacting M/Sgt. David Hill at the Teenage Club.

In addition to the dance, club members will celebrate Christmas by singing carols around the Presidio, Wherry Housing and Upper and Lower Post.

During the holiday vacation the club will be open on 24, 25, 27 and 31 December from 1300 to 1630 hours. It will be closed on Christmas Day, New Year's Day and New Year's Eve.

The club will have a birthday night on 29 December and open nights on 22 and 28 December. Basketball games for club members have been suspended until after 1 January.

Lt. Col. James M. Enmeier, Sixth Army, and M/Sgt. David Hill, NCOIC, direct the club's activities. Sergeant Hill replaces Sfc. John Hoyt, club advisor for two years who has been reassigned to Germany.

The club gains its financial support through shared percentages on personal and household items sold at the Post Thrift Shop and individual donations.

BUNDLE OF JOY casts Debbie Reynolds as a Manhattan salesgirl who jumps into trouble when she befriends a fondling baby. None, including the owner's son, played by husband Eddie Fisher, believes the baby is not her own. The musical comedy unravels as romance and the baby come to Debbie's aid.

ISTANBUL is set in post-war Turkey, where Errol Flynn, a pilot adventurer, returns to recover smuggled diamonds which he had hidden several years earlier. Arson, violence and murder stand in Flynn's path, but he manages temporarily to hide the diamonds on a departing airliner.

EDGE OF THE CITY is the story of an Army deserter who befriends a Negro fellow-worker in a Manhattan railroad yard. The friendship antagonizes the yard boss, who kills Sidney Poitier in a cold-blooded fight. John Cassavetes is blackmailed into silence.

DON'T KNOCK THE ROCK features Alan Dale as a rock'n roll singer who stages a jamboree in his home town, with Bill Haley and his Comets. A girl brushed off by Dale gets drunk and starts a riot. To smooth matters, the rock'n roll kings put on a "culture" show, tracing the history of music, proving that rock'n roll is no worse than the Charleston and Black Bottom.

The Army Nurse Corps was authorized on 2 February, 1901.

Key Future Fields

The most significant factors affecting the future operations of the Army are new developments in the fields of firepower, mobility, and communications, with emphasis on atomic weapons, guided and ballistic missiles, and Army aviation.

Heave-ho and decorations go up for the holiday festivities at the Presidio Service Club. Miss Elizabeth de la Torre, club director, solicits help from, from left, Pfc. Robert C. Stottlar, 102nd MRU; Pfc. Charles Spingler, 56th MRU; Pfc. Howard M. Shone, 102nd MRU; and Pvt. 2 Leopold H. Rivers, Headquarters Co., 6002.

Wac Decorators from Company "D", Station Complement, have livened up a ward in San Francisco's Laguna Honda Home for the Aged. Fred Armstrong, a patient, and M/Sgt. Lillian N. Herivel, hold two plaques made from discarded motion picture reels, cedar trimmings from post hedges, foil paper and spun glass. The plaques will be hung in the ward's 25 windows. A mock fireplace and garlands of cedar sprays also brighten the 35-bed ward which is boasting its first Christmas decorations.

Post Takes Xmas To Sonoma Hospital

The children were given hand-made stockings filled with gifts. Scouts from the Presidio joined troops from the Ulloa Neighborhood Group in preparing the gifts. Troops from the Marina-Pacific Heights District contributed refreshments.

Making the trip with the girls were Mrs. James Enmeier and Mrs. Lois Morlock, troop leaders; Miss Kay Clodfelter, President of the Presidio Senior Scout Troop; and Pfc. Marjory Love, Pfc. Charlotte King and Sp3 Bettie Moore, Company "D," 6002 Headquarters Co.

Pfc. Horace Randolph, 6002 Headquarters Co., pianist; Sp3 Clifford Taylor, 30th Engineer Group, ventriloquist; and M/Sgt. Allen J. Larkin, who donned a Santa Claus suit, entertained the girls. The scouts sang and presented pantomimes during the program.

Signal Unveils Plastic Process For Atom Art

Photographs can be printed in areas affected by atomic radiation with a new photo sensitive plastic developed by the Army Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J., according to the Department of the Army.

Ordinary photographic papers tend to fog under nuclear radiation; however the new plastic is almost unaffected by gamma rays. Pictures made by the plastic process are clear, durable, waterproof and stronger than paper prints.

Discovered by the Ferro Chemical Co. of Bedford, Ohio, the process does not require water, chemicals nor darkroom. A sunlamp replaces an exposure light and an oven, the trays of hypo and developing solution. Total developing time is five minutes.

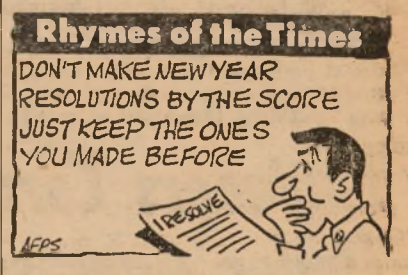
Subject for Ballad

The 148th Infantry Regiment (Sixth Ohio) was the unit in which Roger Young won the Medal of Honor during World War II and inspired "The Ballad of Roger Young."

Ft. Baker Service Club Plans Top AAA Holiday



The Fort Baker Service club has directed most of its Christmas programs to servicemen of the AAA units on Angel Island. Tonight, on the island, a big holiday Bingo is being played in the recreation hall with special prizes for the winners and a blackout prize of a telephone call to any part of the United States.

A Christmas Eve program of gift giving and participation in tournaments has been planned for the men on Angel Island. A varied stage show calendar has also been arranged by the Fort Baker Service Club for the island families all during the month of December.

Christmas Eve and Christmas Day are being honored at the club with Open House activities. A Christmas Eve party there will precede a tour of San Francisco to enjoy the residential and department store decorations and to hear the carols. The schedule will permit men of the Roman Catholic faith to attend Midnight Mass at the Chapel Of Our Lady on the Presidio.

Coffee and doughnuts begin the day on the morning of the 25th, after which tournaments will be played and Santa's gifts distributed throughout the afternoon.

At 1930 hours, a buffet supper is being served at the club and a Christmas Dance begins there at 2030. Refreshments will be available and there will be an impromptu talent show during intermission.

6th Army Management Info Due Streamlining

In an effort to increase the quality, timeliness, and usefulness of management information, and to reduce the accounting burden in the field, the CG, Sixth Army, has initiated a mechanized accounting program for major installations throughout Sixth Army.

In the initial phases of the program, ten major installations and activities in the area have been requested to make feasibility studies and to report the advantages which will accrue through mechanization.

Stations selected to mechanize will be machine producing financial inventory accounting and supply cost data through the use of punched card machines.

Bookkeeping machines to facilitate the preparation of reports may be introduced at smaller stations throughout the command, which cannot justify punched card machines.

Mechanization plans were launched in October when Col. Paul A. Mayo, Comptroller, Sixth Army, and two representatives attended a Department of the Army conference to observe IBM and Remington Rand punched card systems being tested at Fort Bragg and Fort Gordon.

Upon their return, a working committee was formed to plan and direct the program. The committee, headed by Mr. Norman Bader, Comptroller, Sixth Army, is composed of representatives of Comptroller, Finance and Accounting, G-1 and G-4 Sections of the headquarters.

Members are Mr. Albert Leslie, Mr. Harold A. Berling and Lt. Robert Dehlendorf, Comptroller, Sixth Army; Lt. William T. Teachout and Mr. Harry Palmer, Finance and Accounting, Sixth Army; Maj. Vincent P. Smith and Mr. Harold D. Simerman, G-1, Sixth Army; and Mr. Frank Muguira, G-4, Sixth Army.

Post and Sixth Army Finance and Accounting Sections have been pioneering with punched card machines in fiscal and disbursing accounting since December 1955. By 1 March, financial inventory accounting is expected to be fully mechanized, to be followed soon thereafter by cost accounting and civilian payroll.

Famous Army Victory On Christmas Night

The U. S. Army's first famous victory on the field of battle began on Christmas night 1776, at Trenton, N. J.

General George Washington matched surprise against the superior numbers of the British to give the Continental Army its first victory in long months of painful striving. At Trenton, the Americans eliminated 1,000 Hessians and drove the British from their salient in New Jersey.

The victory saved the flagging American cause and put new heart into Washington's troops. Captain Alexander Hamilton's Company of New York Artillery (now D Battery, 5th Field Artillery) opened the battle by blasting down the bewildered Hessians as they tried to form ranks in the street.

The battle at Trenton is the subject of the "Merry Christmas" poster in the Department of the Army's U. S. Army in Action series, which units may obtain through normal distribution channels for use in day rooms and offices.

Tunnel Opens

The tunnel connecting Forts Baker and Barry which has been closed since 9 August will reopen on Saturday at 0900 hours. Approximately $40,000 was spent on this first major repair project since the tunnel's opening in 1918. Besides sand blasting and crack filling, repairmen installed fluorescent lighting.

Future Army

In its weapons systems for the future the Army is seeking increased range, greater accuracy, and light weight to provide a high degree of battlefield mobility and the best attainable degree of air-transportability. Where practicable, the weapons should be capable of delivering either atomic or conventional warheads.

"THE BALD IGGLE" By AL CAPP

Confab at the CP takes place when the Commander of the 660th Engineer Battalion (Base Topographic), Maj. Luther Payne returns to the command post after a patrol. He discusses the situation with his adjutant, Capt. Louis Paragon. In the foreground the 660th sergeant major, M/Sgt. Stephen Popovich, writes down the arrival and departure of all persons in the area.

Bringing Home the Bad—Men of a 660th patrol herd their white-helmeted aggressor prisoners into camp for interrogation. Smoke and tear gas bombs accompanied the attack. But the alert patrols quickly brought the enemy to its knees.

Engineers Carry On Duties Under Aggressor Pressure

At all times the work crews as well as those in the main bivouac area had to be ready for chemical, biological and radiological attack and had to maintain security forces.

Forces in the bivouac successfully quelled an attack Tuesday noon and bagged 10 prisoners. The attack started with smoke and gas bombs and was followed by enemy patrol action. Quickly donning gas masks the security troops smashed the enemy.

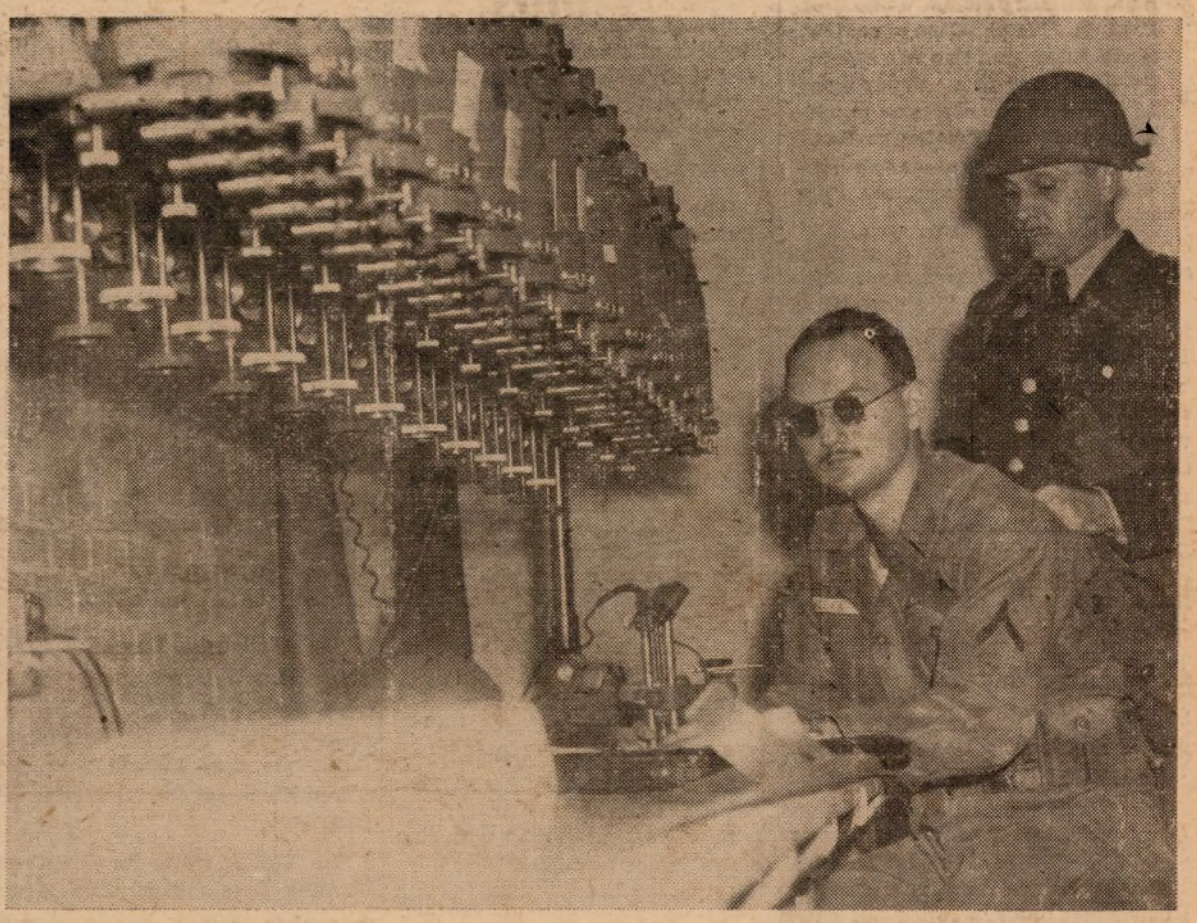
At night the security problem was greatly increased. Many times noises and shots would rouse the camp only to prove a false alarm. This kept the guards constantly on the alert and didn't let anyone get much sleep.

If anyone had what could be termed "fun," it was the aggressor forces, men of the 99th Engineer Company. They had the mission of sneaking around making life miserable for the defending forces by throwing bombs, firing rifles, etc., and then when the harrassment was over, they went back to their billets—to bed.

The umpires directed the actions of the aggressors, but didn't have the advantage of going home to bed when the fighting was over. They had to be constantly on the alert evaluating the units and directing the action. Every six hours a report had to go into headquarters.

This phase of the operation was directed by Maj. Richard C. Hirsh. Umpires assisting him on the 660th exercise were Capt. William C. Gonyo and Capt. Seamon J. Molkenbuhr.

Lieutenant Robert J. Wallace, with the assistance of CWO Clarence H. Saunders, directed aggressor action and umpired at the 21st exercise.



Scoring for the exercises was both strict and detailed. Approximately two-thirds of the available points were alloted to the technical operations and results of the units. The 21st was also judged on staff and command, protective measures and administration, supply and maintenance.

Work Goes On in the field despite harrassing action back at the bivouac area. Above, men of the 537th Engineer Company—armed and protected by security guards—tape the distances between the legs of a third order traverse. All told, ten crews worked out of the Kirby beach bivouac area gathering information which will establish control points for aerial mapping.

All Aboard! shouts the young engineer as the Post Nursery Special prepares to chug off with a load of pre-school kiddies. Nursery Director Mrs. Elfrieda Robertson is helping one young passenger aboard at the last minute. Nursery facilities are open to all military personnel and civilian mothers while they work at the Presidio.

Local Personnel Find Post Nursery Big Aid To Working, Social Life

Presidio parents who occasionally find a need to park their children have access to baby sitting service deluxe through the Post Nursery, building 569.

The Nursery is open from 0730 to 1800 hours daily, and at any time during this period, parents may drop off their children knowing they will be in trained hands.

In addition to its regular daily schedule the Nursery is open Tuesday evening from 1800 to 2300 hours and Thursday evening from 1000 to 2100 hours so the adults can play bingo. Saturday the Nursery operates from noon to 0100 hours Sunday morning, and Sunday church going parents may leave their children between the hours of 0730 and 1300.

Charges for this handy service are 35 cents for the first hour and 25 cents for additional hours. Between the hours of 0930 and 1130 there is a special commissary rate of 25 cents for an hour and a half.

Nursery Sets Holiday Schedule

The Presidio Pre-school Nursery is now taking reservations for care of children over New Years Eve. The nursery will remain open until 0200 hours 1 January.

Parents leaving their children at the nursery are required to leave a deposit of $2.00 per family when reservations are being made. There can be no refund of deposit for service after 26 December, nor will any telephone reservations be accepted.

Children being brought to the nursery on New Years Eve must be fed and ready for bed no later than 2030 hours.

Working mothers may leave their children at the Nursery for $10 a week (Monday through Friday), or $37.50 a month. Civilians who work at the Presidio may take advantage of this service during the hours of employment.

Elfrieda Robertson directs the Nursery with its staff of four. In addition, volunteer workers take turns helping with the night and weekend shifts.

Often the Nursery will handle 70 or 80 children, ages six weeks through 10 years, during a day. Facilities for napping the tots include 25 cribs and 10 bunk beds. There is a large TV set, plus ample indoor and outdoor toys for the youngsters' entertainment.

The Nursery staff will feed the children, but all food must be furnished by the parents. It is also advisable for the mother to bring a small blanket for nap time. Diapers, too, must be furnished.

The Nursery is run on a self supporting basis. However, when necessary it receives financial backing from the Central Post Fund.

Post Library Has Christmas Titles For Every Age Group

Since Christmas is one of the world's greatest stories, no wonder there are so many grand writings about it. Christmas tales are a wonderful aid to the enjoyment of the holidays, so the Presidio Post Library has collected a variety of Christmas books for your enjoyment.

Perhaps the best loved author of Christmas stories is Charles Dickens. In his CHRISTMAS STORIES you will find the old faithful "A Christmas Carol" along with two lesser known stories "The Chimes" and "The Cricket On The Hearth."

Dr. Edward Wagenknect has collected most of the world's great old Christmas stories in his two volumes, THE FIRESIDE BOOK OF CHRISTMAS STORIES and THE FIRESIDE BOOK OF YULETIDE TALES. Selections in these books range from the Gospel according to St. Luke to James Hilton's "Twilight of the Wise."

In the more modern vein, Eric Posselt has gathered a wonderful group of whimsical stories, drawings and cartoons in the happiest Christmas tradition. He calls his book simply CHRISTMAS STORIES. Included in the contents are "Christmas Spectacle" by Robert Benchley, "Dancing Dan's Christmas" by Damon Runyon and "Hints for Next Christmas" by A. A. Milne.

Did you know that the Puritans did not celebrate Christmas? In his book THE AMERICAN CHRISTMAS, James H. Barnett tells you why and also traces the festival in America from 1620 to present day. He gives the meaning behind Christmas trees, cards, gaily wrapped gifts and carols. The reader will find that this book enlightens, entertains and also deepens the meaning of Christmas.

LET'S KEEP CHRISTMAS is one of Peter Marshall's most inspiring and memorable sermons. It is a moving expression of gratitude that the Christ child came into the world and a plea that we keep Christmas "in all the loveliness of its ancient traditions."

Why not add to the joy of the season by reading again an old Christmas story or learning something new about this old holiday. (Mary A.)

Christmas DON'TS

Don't use old electric cords and lights on your tree. Test them before using.

* * *

Don't fail to dispose of all wrappings as soon as you open your gifts. Don't throw wrappings in the fireplace. Put them in a container outside your home.

* * *

Don't fail to remove your tree from the house as soon as possible after Christmas. Don't place it near the house, a fence, or the garage.

* * *

Don't forget to follow these simple rules and your Merry Christmas will be followed by a Happy New Year. (AFPS)

Mess of the Month

Best Mess of the Month honors were won by the 6000 SU Headquarters Company this week when Lieutenant Colonel Verne E. Marsden accepted the plaque from Colonel Charles G. Rau, acting Deputy Post Commander. Attending the presentation ceremony at Post Headquarters was Master Sergeant William W. Waller, NCOIC for the 6000th SU Mess.

All Over the World!

Christmas Festivities Are An Expression For Peace

Christmas speaks a universal language of peace and good will to all men. Customs and traditions vary from country to country, but in every land people express their earnest yearning for peace.

In the United States, Christmas is both a religious holiday and a time of family reunions. Children and grownups look forward to opening the gaily-wrapped packages beneath the Christmas tree.

Christmas in England is much like that in the United States. Children receive presents from Father Christmas. Carols are sung. Roast goose and plum pudding are traditional at the table. The day following is also a major holiday — Boxing Day — named from the time when the village priest opened the poor box to help the needy.

In France, only children receive presents at Christmas. Grownups exchange gifts on New Year's Day. Presents come from "Pere Noel" (Father Christmas), who fills shoes lined up before the chimney. The Yule Log appears in the form of a cake served as a traditional dessert.

Germany begins celebrating on the first of Advent—four Sundays before Christmas. Homes are decked out with red-ribboned wreaths of fir twigs. The big day for children is Dec. 6, the birthday of their Santa Claus. Two weeks before that date, youngsters put their shoes out each night and find candy in the morning, if they've behaved. On Christmas Eve, the whole family sings carols for the Christ child.

In Italy, Christmas is primarily a religious holiday. Midnight mass is widely attended after traditional Christmas Eve family dinners. Gifts aren't exchanged until Epiphany—12 days after Christmas. On that day, Befana, the good fairy, flies in through an open window and leaves presents for good children.

In Switzerland, presents are distributed on the Feast of St. Nicholas, Dec. 6. In many sections, Santa Claus is replaced by Christ Kindl (Christ Child), who travels in a gift-laden sleigh drawn by six reindeer.

Acting DPC Sends Holiday Greetings

As the holidays approach I send to all personnel of the Presidio of San Francisco my best wishes for a Joyful Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

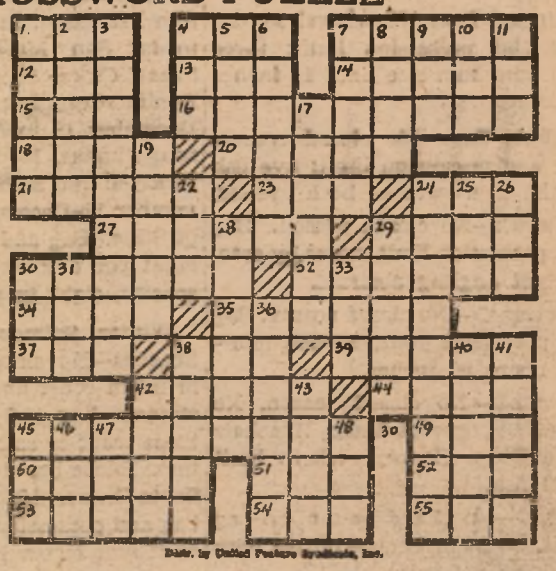
Your loyalty, cooperation and individual efforts during the year have contributed immeasurably to the furtherance of our mission and I am deeply appreciative.

May the New Year bring strengthened assurances of peace throughout the world and to you and your loved ones good health, fortune and happiness.

CHARLES G. RAU,
Colonel, Armor,
Acting Dep. Post Commander

In Belgium and Holland, the children's holiday is also Dec. 6, the feast of St. Nicholas. Children in the Low Countries fill their shoes with hay for the white horse that carries Saint Nick from roof to roof. In return the youngsters find candy and toys.

Sweden's celebration starts 12 days before Christmas and continues through Jan. 13. Lucia, the national spirit of Christmas, reigns supreme. Many villages choose a girl to represent Lucia through the season.



Iceland shares many customs with Sweden. Icelanders have a holiday-packed Christmas week. December 23 is celebrated as St. Thorlakur Eve in honor of an early Icelandic hero, and Dec. 26 is, as in England, a holiday too.

In the Philippines, Christmas is the time when families are reunited. No matter how poor a family is, Christmas is celebrated as the most important feast of the year. (AFPS)

Toreros Take Tenth Straight Game

Opening Toss-Up— Col. Edward B. Hempstead, Post S-4, performed the honors at LAH Gym when the Toreros opened their first home game of the season against Castle AFB Friday night, 14 December.

Cagers Pour Heat On McClellan Jets 97-39

Presidio's Toreros caught the McClellan AFB Jets with their flames out Tuesday night and handed them an unmerciful shellacking to post their fourth league win and their tenth win of the season against no losses.

The Toreros rolled along to an easy victory in a game marred by personal fouls and traveling penalties by both teams. The final score stood at 97 to 39.

Norm Ellenberger opened the scoring with two free throws followed by a free toss by little Carroll Williams after missing a lay-up. The first field goal of the game was made seconds later by the Torero's Tony Psaltis. Deichl hit a two-pointer for the Jets to put McClellan on the score board.

From this point on the Jets had very little to say about the way the Toreros scored. Although both teams lost the ball on repeated traveling offenses, the Toreros continued to lengthen their lead. John Daniels hit the bucket from outside the circle with 30 seconds to go before the first half ended to put the score at 48 to 21 in favor of the Toreros.

Norm Ellenberger, Torero captain, was the high man of the night with five field goals and 11 free throws for a total of 21 points. Ellenberger was followed by the little fire-ball, Carroll Williams with 19 points. Williams kept the Jet offense in a constant state of confusion with his repeated efforts to steal the ball. His efforts paid off to the tune of at least 6 points for the Toreros.

The Jets were hurt by their inability to hit the bucket, even from near the backboards when they did break through the Toreros tight defense. The Jets were also unable to find the range from the foul line and did not take advantage of the numerous opportunities given them by the large number of fouls called against the home team.

There were a total of 48 personal fouls called, 23 of these against the Toreros and 25 against the Jets. The Presidians made 35 points from their free throw attempts while the Jets could manage only 13 points on their free throws.

With 14 minutes to go, the Torero mentor, Hal Fischer, substituted freely, every man on the squad. The reserve team continued the slaughter and lengthened the margin from 80 to 29 to the final score of 97 to 39.

The Toreros were without the services of one of their star players, Jim Cummings, former Vanderbilt star, who injured his foot in a practice session Monday afternoon. Cummings has been a big contributor to the scoring column for the Toreros. It is unknown at this time whether or not Cummings will be able to participate in the post-holiday opener which will take place at the LAH Gym on 4 January, 1957.

The Toreros met Edwards AFB at the LAH Gym on Saturday and posted their ninth win of the season by a score of 76 to 41. The Presidians won the tussle handily with 4 players scoring in the two-digit column. Jim Cummings was high point man with 18, John Blackwell with 14, Ellenberger had 15, and Hansen with 10.

The Presidians trounced Castle AFB Friday night at LAH Gym to the tune of 94 to 54. The Toreros jumped into the lead in the opening seconds of the game and were never in danger of being overtaken. The reserve team was put into the game mid-way into the first half. The first team returned to open the second half, but were soon spelled by the reserves again.

The game was the first home game of the season for the Toreros and the opening toss-up was made by Col. Edward B. Hempstead, Post S-4.

Mathias, Lee Join Owens at Games

Dr. Sammy Lee and Bob Mathias, two of President Eisenhower's personal representatives to the Olympic Games joined the third — former dashman Jesse Owens—in Melbourne, Australia, this year.

The three represented the President at official Olympic functions.

USC Track Star In Basic At Ft. Ord

Sporting a "whitewall" haircut and stiff, new fatigues, Pvt. Ernie Shelton, onetime world's high jump champion from Southern California, is almost halfway through basic training with Company C, 11th Infantry Regiment, at Fort Ord.

The 24-year-old Southlander was inducted into the Army just prior to the start of the 1956 Olympic Games --- in which he failed to make the team at the trials in Los Angeles.

Compton College's Charlie Dumas set a world record of 7 feet, one-quarter inch, to make the team, while Shelton disappointed his followers by not qualifying, though he had been a near record holder until the trials.

But the Army recruit isn't crestfallen today. He has set his sights on the 1960 Games. Shelton hopes to better his top jump of six feet, eleven and one-quarter inches.

"I guess," he says, "I just wasn't supposed to go to the Olympics this year. My goal was seven feet and I kept going up until I was within a fraction of it. Then the bottom dropped out."

He hopes to get into the Army's sports program and regain the form which made him a champion.

"My best years are yet to come," he says, "and I'd like to jump seven feet at least once. I'm not satisfied with just coming close."

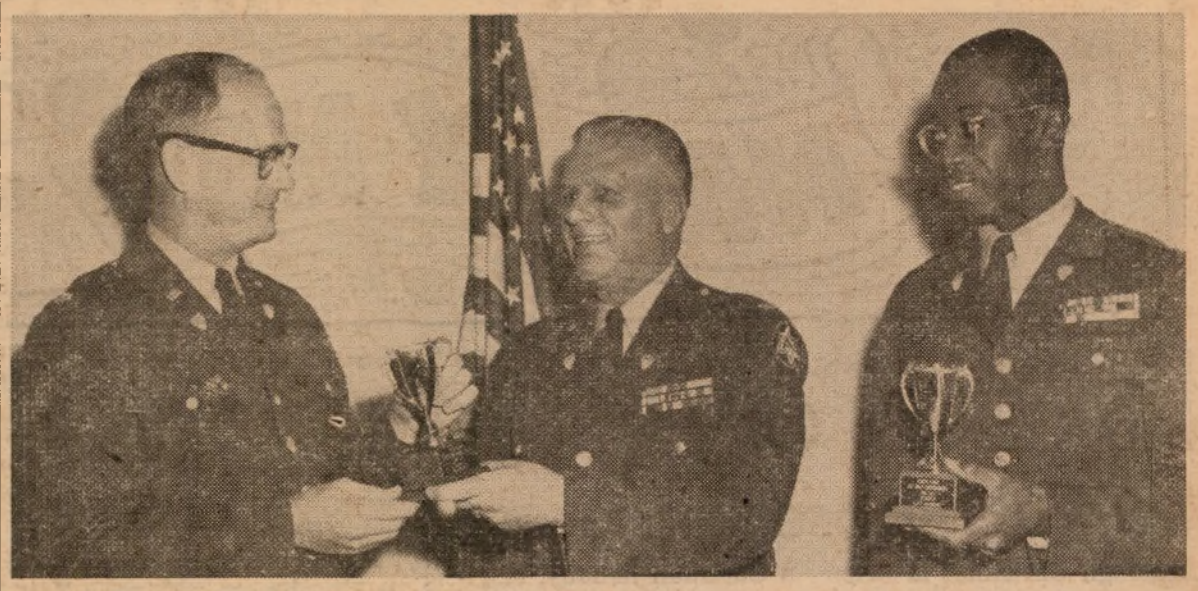
Tourney Meet Set

There will be a meeting of representatives of all teams who desire to enter the holiday basketball tournament at 1000 hours on 26 December, building 122, in the Post Sports Office. Tournament games will be played at the Ft. Scott Gym in either 7-minute quarters or 14-minute halves.



The tournament will be double or single elimination, depending on the number of teams entering. Games will be played in the afternoon and there will be a trophy awarded to the winner.

Annual Bowl Predictions

(Armed Forces Press Service)

Annual predictions on the bowl games:

Rose—Iowa (8-1) vs. Oregon State (7-2-1). The Hawkeyes, 21-14. . . . Sugar—Tennessee (10-0) vs. Baylor (8-2). The Vols have a high-ranking halfback named Johnny Majors, so pick 'em 34-7. . . . Cotton—Syracuse (7-1) vs. Texas Christian (7-3). Jim dandy of a game with Jim Brown and Jim Swink providing the thrills; we like the Horned Frogs, 27-13. . . . Orange—Colorado (7-2-1) vs. Clemson (7-1-2). How 'bout a 14-14 tie in this one? . . . Gator—Georgia Tech (9-1) vs. Pittsburgh (7-2-1). Should be a peach of a game with Tech swallowing Pitt, 14-13.

The Warriors of Ft. Ord, Calif., went through the football season undefeated, scoring 303 points to the opposition's 55. Leading ground-gainer was Malcolm Hammack, former University of Florida All-American, who averaged 8.8 yards a carry. . . . Floyd Patterson has fought twice in Chicago and both bouts have ended in the fifth round. . . . Top ground-gainer in the first official Ivy League this season was Art Boland, Cornell's senior quarterback from Lynn, Mass. The Big Red captain gained 838 yards in seven Ivy games (386 rushing and 452 yards passing). Yale was the top team on offense, averaging 373.1 yards in each game. Dartmouth edged the Elis for defensive honors, limiting the opposition to 215.1 yards a contest.

The Air Force Academy is already competing in 15 intercollegiate sports. Lack of height is the AFA's big problem as it faces its first varsity cage season. Only two players reach 6'4". The team's average is 6'1". Cadet to watch is guard Bob Beckel, who last year netted 563 points in 20 games. The squad includes 10 sophomores and six freshmen. . . . One of the world's best high jumpers, Ernie Shelton, is taking basic at Ft. Ord.

Second Lt. Pat Uebel, an airborne infantry student at Ft. Benning, Ga., has run into two instructors who also have played a little football. They are former West Point fullback Gil Stephenson and All-American end Dan Foldberg. Stephenson is a first lieutenant and Foldberg a captain. . . . For the first time in its 11-year history, the National Basketball Assn. concluded the first month of play with seven players averaging better than 20 points a game. They were Neil Johnston and Paul Arizin, Philadelphia Warriors; Bill Sharman and Bob Cousy, Boston Celtics; Dolph Schayes, Syracuse; Bob Pettit, St. Louis Hawks; and Clyde Lovellette, Minneapolis Lakers.

All-American quarterback Earl Morrall, the Spartan who directed the Michigan State eleven to the 17-14 Rose Bowl win over UCLA, led the nation's punters in '55 with an average of 42.9 yards per boot.

Safe Color Test Held At Ft. Lewis

A second series of field tests to determine the safest color to wear while hunting is being conducted at Fort Lewis, Washington, as a joint project of the California Department of Fish and Game, California Optometric Association, and National Rifle Association.

Two groups of Army personnel from Fort Lewis, those with normal color vision and the so-called "color blind," will be tested on such factors as speed, accuracy and efficiency in identification of colors.

Experiments will use cloth-covered panels of different colors and shapes, placed against such backgrounds as brushy mountain slopes and basins, snow, quaking aspen groves and heavy timber forest areas.

Major General Paul L. Freeman, Jr., commanding officer at Fort Lewis, has offered the complete facilities of the post for the tests. Observers will include representatives of the Washington and Oregon Fish and Game Departments.

(Fort Lewis was chosen for this second series of tests as the area offers topography and vegetation similar to that of Northern California, and Army personnel and facilities were available.)

The first series of field tests were conducted at Fort Ord last July by the same research team, as part of a hunting safety project developed jointly by the Department of Fish and Game, California Optometric Association and National Rifle Association.

Basic to the tests were the laboratory experiments, conducted at the University of California School of Optometry, which showed red to be a poor protective color to wear while hunting since it cannot be distinguished from foliage or shadows by most color-blind hunters.

In California alone, at least 48,000 (one out of every 8) hunters are color-blind or color-defective, "red-green" color-blindness being by far the most prevalent type.

Although the Fort Ord tests were only the first of the series which will eventually cover all kinds of hunting terrain, they did point strongly to two major conclusions: that red is definitely a poor protective color for hunters' clothing as it is difficult for color-blind persons to see, and that yellow and golden-yellow were the colors most easily and correctly identified under California coastal deer hunting conditions, both by those with normal vision and color-blind persons.

Ex Ring Champ To Head Davis ROTC

After an absence of 27 years, Lt. Col. Louis J. Besbeck will return to the campus of the University of California at Davis, as the Professor of the Military Science and Tactics Department. The last time Col. Besbeck visited the Davis campus he was the captain of the UCLA boxing team and the middleweight champion of the Pacific Coast Conference.

Col. Besbeck is a survivor of the infamous Bataan Death March and three and one-half years of living death in Japanese prison camps. The years of starvation and disease stripped 63 pounds from the trim puncher of 1929.

His will to live and the fighting spirit that he exhibited in the ring so many times have enabled the Colonel to regain his health and to carry on his brilliant military career. Col. Besbeck served in Korea in 1952 and then in Japan the following year, adding to his array of ribbons already crested by the Silver Star for gallantry on Bataan and two Purple Hearts.

The miracle of his own survival by sheer courage and determination will certainly serve as an inspiration to the Colonel's students.

AFA To Face Strong Foes Next Season

Denver, Colo. — Despite defeats in the last two games of the season, the Air Force Academy's varsity debut was a successful first step up the collegiate football ladder.

The Falcons will join the major school ranks in 1957 and already are slated to play top-ranking college elevens from almost every part of the nation by 1960.

Head coach Buck Shaw lauded his band of freshmen and sophomore players for their performances this season and assured the squad that it had made rapid strides during the 1956 campaign, which saw the AFA win six, lose two and tie one.

Shaw reminded the Cadets they'll be up against stronger foes each week next season, with Denver, Wyoming, Utah, Colorado A&M and New Mexico of the Skyline Conference on the schedule, along with Occidental, Detroit, Tulsa and George Washington.

But he added that with another year of experience and maturity plus the possibility of some help from the 1957 freshmen who will arrive in July, the Falcons need not fear they'll be outclassed.

Coach Shaw is now on the West Coast conferring with officials of the annual Shrine East-West game which will be played at San Francisco's Kezar Stadium, 29 Dec. Shaw will coach the West team. (AFPS)

From Beginning of History

Even Garden Of Eden Had Yule Observance

Although Christmas is strictly a Christian holiday, originating with the birth of Christ, it may be said that many of its traditions stem from the birth of man.

According to legend, Adam's Garden of Eden was situated in the region of northern Mesopotamia, said to be the cradle of civilization.

Four thousand years ago, the people of this region annually held a celebration that lasted 12 days. They gave tribute to the New Year, prayed to purify themselves and renew the strength they needed for the coming year. They also asked forgiveness for past sins.

As peoples migrated from this center of early civilization, they carried their faith and traditions with them to Greece, to the Roman Empire and to habitants of what is now known as Europe.

The Romans, who, like the Greeks, believed in many gods, gave special homage to Saturn, the god of seed-time, from mid-December to Jan. 1.

The most important day of this period was Dec. 25 when the sun was near its lowest point.

This marked the Roman Saturnalia, a joyous, boisterous festival that looked to the rebirth of a new and brighter sun and a better world.

No one knows the exact day of the birth of Jesus, and it was not until several centuries after His death that Christians chose Dec. 25 as His birthday.

During the third century after the death of Christ, Rome began to change its pagan ways and joined with Christians in the celebration of Christmas.

Church services became an essential part of the Christmas holiday. In fact, its name comes from the celebration of mass to mark the birth of Christ.

Pagans and Christians both had high respect for plant life, the source of all nourishment. It therefore was natural that they should turn to evergreens as a form of plant life that never seemed to die. This was the beginning of the Christmas tree. (AFPS)

Army's Gifted Family

The Army is developing a family of lightly armored carriers which can carry personnel, equipment, and supplies; can be used as weapons platforms, command, and reconnaissance vehicles; and can be lifted by medium assault and medium transport aircraft. They are amphibious, have cross-country mobility, and provide protection against small arms fire, fragmentation, and, to the extent possible, the effects of atomic weapons.

Holiday Greetings From Mr. Brucker

Men and Women of the United States Army:

At this Christmas season my thoughts are with you—my fellow members of the United States Army, in all parts of the world. I extend to each of you my sincere greetings and my best wishes for a joyous holiday season.

You stand for the preservation of the fundamental ideals and precious values symbolized by Christmas. You embody the indomitable spirit of America.

By your courage, resolution and fidelity in the service of your country, you are helping immeasurably to keep alive in the heart of humanity the bright hope that freedom will someday supplant tyranny and oppression, and that principles of right and justice will triumph throughout the earth.

By your strength and devotion, you are helping to build the firm foundations of an honorable and lasting peace based upon human freedom, and recognition of the dignity of man.

May all of you and your loved ones enjoy a blessed Christmas and find in the New Year the fulfillment of your fondest expectations.

New Ruling

Some Reserves To Seek Special Pay

Reserve officers released from active duty because they can not complete 20 years of service by age 60 now are eligible for readjustment pay.

The Army's announcement was based on a November decision made by the Comptroller General.

Reservists who have completed five years' active duty are eligible. The decision holds that those released under this condition are released "involuntarily" and can claim readjustment pay. The decision is retroactive to 9 July, 1956, the date of the Readjustment Pay Bill.

Tankers' Nightmare

The Army's Dart is a small, deadly antitank missile which can defeat any armor likely to appear on the battlefield and which also can be effective in an assault role.

Versatile Landing Craft Under Construction

Designed to meet Army requirements for transporting vehicles and other heavy cargo to and from ships and beaches, the beach discharge lighter can also make transocean voyages.

Vertical-axis propellors like those used on the LTI-2194, a river towboat, will be installed on the ship. They are mounted in separate wells in the ship's stern.

According to plans, the ship will be 338 feet long and will have a 65-foot beam, welded-steel construction and a light displacement of 1,549 tons.

Vehicles and cargo will be stowed on the main deck, with accommodations for messing and berthing on a partial deck below.

A hydraulically operated ramp which can be lowered to the beach for loading or unloading cargo will be at the forward end of the lighter. The ramp forms the bow section when closed. A hydraulically operated ramp enables the ship to pull away from the beach under its own power.

New Defense System Will Warn Early

In an atomic crisis—where things happen too fast for human reaction—a new defense system will automatically trip relays that instantly sound warning horns, close blast doors, turn off gas lines, start radiologically filtered ventilation systems and trigger a series of other protective measures.

This new nuclear bombardment defense system, developed by the Army Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J., can be mass produced (electronic parts) for the surprisingly inexpensive price, $500.

This automatic system, officially designated the Radiological Defense Warning System, does away with human decision or delay that could spell the difference between survival and disaster.

Already it is at work at one major military headquarters. Installation is planned at important Air Force bases and will be used by Civil Defense authorities at strategic locations throughout the country. It could also protect key industrial plants.

To avoid any chance of failure, the last-ditch protection uses three different detectors, any one of which is tripped by nuclear detonation, but not by any other type of explosion. Warning instruments include a gamma ray detector, a thermal detector operated by infrared radiation from fission or fusion, and a blast pressure detector. An added feature is a poison gas detector.

Service Club Offers Rose TourneyTour

The Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena is the destination of a special trip planned for servicemen by the Presidio Service Club. The trip, scheduled from 1300 hours 31 December to 1800 hours 1 January, will cost $17.00.

Reservations must be made in person at the club by 25 December. Men in the Forts Baker and Cronkhite areas can make reservations at those service clubs.

Trip expenditures include transportation by chartered Greyhound bus and sleeping accommodations at the Pasadena YMCA, located less than two blocks from the parade route. If enough feminine interest is displayed in the trip, Special Services will make the necessary reservations.

Transportation Plans Four New Bus Runs Here

New Nike Program Will Bolster Travis Air Base Defense

Travis Air Force Base will have one of the strongest, surest systems of air defense this spring when the Army's NIKE guided missiles begin their 24-hour vigil, according to a recent AAA officials' announcement.

When civilian construction workers complete their portion of the work, Army Ordnance specialists will equip the installations with missiles.

Graduates of the Army Antiaircraft and Guided Missile Center at Fort Bliss, Tex., will arrive this month to man the station. They will be joined by Fort Ord basic training graduates, who will be given on-the-job training with the NIKE system.

New Economy Would Curtail Sedan Service

An economy move by Post Transportation—aimed at cutting down sedan service—has resulted in the announcement of four new bus runs. One started this week and three more start Monday.

The 20-minute Business Loop Shuttle run which has been operating this week provides a handy new service for all Presidio personnel. It passes the following central Post locations: PX, Officers Club, Sixth Army Headquarters, Post Headquarters, Commissary, Crissy Field, California Military District, U.S. National Cemetery and the Enlisted Service Club.

The three additional routes which start Monday include the Residence Loop bus which will provide service to the Presidio and Fort Scott residential areas, a Fort Baker Loop bus and a Fort Cronkhite Loop bus. The two latter runs will provide separate service during weekdays and combined service on Saturday and Sunday.

"Military Sedan Service," it has been announced, "will not be used

Reclassification Hits 450 Top Graders

Overseas Travel Per Diem Will Be Reduced Shortly

Travel per diem allowance will be cut off shortly for overseas service personnel, who instead will draw the standard six-cents-per-mile travel rate now paid in the ZI.

According to the comptroller, the six-cent rate applies to all types of travel by non-governmental means. It will soon be written into the joint travel regulations.

The present overseas mileage rate is five cents in addition to travel per diem allowance, which ranges from $5 to $28.

Dependent travel money in the ZI and overseas is six-cents-per-mile for dependents over 12 and three cents for those under 12 with a maximum of 18 cents per mile.

PX Sale!

"Gigantic reductions!" was the comment by PX manager George Elliot when he announced a "great big clearance sale" which begins Monday at the Post Exchange, 1000 hours.

Most of the reductions are on men's, women's and children's clothing items, said Elliot, adding that most articles have been reduced at least one-half and some are two-thirds off.

A few out of model radios have been reduced more than half price, said Elliot.

MOS Surplus Could Force Tough Action

Presidio top three graders holding overage MOS's had a club labeled "more stringent measures" waved in their faces this month with the publication of Post Memorandum Number 2, which announced the third program in 18 months aimed at weeding out surplus personnel.

The new program could possibly affect an estimated 450 Presidio top graders who now hold a primary MOS rated as surplus.

The wording that makes the current memorandum stronger than past pronouncements is paragraph 3, which states: "In the event reclassification and retraining measures cannot eliminate the surplus MOS, the Department of the Army is considering the implementation of more stringent measures, such as reduction or possible elimination from the service of individuals in the surplus areas."

Recognizing the "resultant bad morale implications of such action," the memorandum points out that "the overall welfare of the Army makes mandatory the elimination of personnel who cannot be gainfully utilized."

Army Reserve Branch Schools Set Harmon Hall Conference

A one-day conference for Commandants of Army Reserve Branch Schools in the Sixth U.S. Army area will be held tomorrow (Saturday) at Harmon Hall.

The purpose of the conference is to study means of placing greater emphasis on practical training by localizing field problems to the immediate terrain and also by making greater use of actual equipment during the training period.

Major General Riley F. Ennis, Deputy Commanding General of the Sixth U.S. Army, will preside as general chairman. His opening remarks will keynote the meeting.

The conference will be conducted as a seminar with discussions scheduled on nine topics relating to the theme. Directing the discussions will be Sixth Army staff officers Colonel Albert M. Butler and Major George L. Reimer of the Army Reserve Branch and Colonel Robert H. Rhine and Lt. Col. Harley N. Miller of the Reserve Components Division.

There are 19 USAR Schools in the Sixth Army area, 11 of which are concerned with training for branches of the Army. In addition, a representative will be present from each of the eight Military Districts; from the Fort Ord, Fort Lewis, Camp Irwin and Presidio training centers and from the Fort MacArthur and Seattle USAR Schools.

'Bulge' Battle Starts Here

The Presidio version of "Slenderella" has been opened with an all-out battle against overweight in service personnel.

Overweight officers and warrant officers will be checked at annual physical examinations and evaluations and rechecked later at appropriate medical facilities. Professional guidance in reducing programs will be offered.

Enlisted personnel who find calorie counting a must will be checked and advised by the Post Surgeon.

Three reducing salons have been set up in the Presidio, Fort Scott and Fort Baker areas. For appointments, call ext. 2693, Presidio; ext. 5487, Fort Scott, and ext. 58-512, Fort Baker.

Cooke Joins Air Force

Air Force personnel began occupying Camp Cooke Military Reservation, the former Army training site at Lompoc, Calif., this month.

Under the direction of Major General B. A. Schriever, USAF, the base will be used as a training site for Air Force missile units.

An extensive rehabilitation, modernization and construction program is now in progress.

Soldier Finds Time During Busy Career To Pursue An Unusual Hobby—Etching

By Marian Cornfield
Star Presidian Staff Writer

If M/Sgt. Harold W. Brown extends an unexpected invitation to see his etchings, don't decline—he actually has them.

The sergeant, who is assigned to Post Troop Information was a commercial artist working for various advertising accounts when he began to change his artistic emphasis to etching. He had graduated from the Chicago Art Institute and the Chicago Academy of Fine Art.

"I started etching just about the time the bottom fell out of the market," said the sergeant, who had taught himself to etch nearly 30 years ago. He was selling his work through shows and galleries in Chicago when he was called to active duty in February, 1941.

During the next 10 years Sergeant Brown was able to complete only one plate due to lack of time, equipment and materials.

A member of the Carmel Art Association, the sergeant has exhibited his work with it since 1950. His etchings have also appeared in the Library of Congress, four international shows and are available for sale at the City of Paris Rotunda Gallery in San Francisco.

Sergeant Brown described his artistic field as "probably the most difficult medium of all." He added that there are only about 300 qualified etchers in the world.

M/Sgt. H. W. Brown

Monterey Subject of M/Sgt. Harold W. Brown was the inspiration for this portrait character study etching. "Man in a Black Beret" in reality is an amateur color photographer who enjoys the Monterey waterfront atmosphere. The etching was completed in early 1955.

The sergeant said that to his knowledge his work did not bring him under FBI surveillance, since engravers are more liable to attempt counterfeiting.

Korea has been Sergeant Brown's longest overseas stop, as he served there 20 months during the Korean War and 27 months in occupation. In 1946 he served as Executive Officer of the 754th Tank Battalion until the battalion was inactivated. He then became Division Fire Marshal and Safety Officer.

On his second Korea tour in late 1951, the sergeant served successively as TI&E Officer for 9th Corps Artillery, 3rd Logistical Command and was Information Officer in the Korea Communications Zone.

His only other overseas assignment was with the Latin American School at Fort Gulick, Panama, C.Z., the area from which he was reassigned to the Presidio.

In addition, Sergeant Brown has made a personal visit to Mexico, where he did a series of etchings on Mexican subjects.

He was graduated from the gunnery and maintenance courses of the Armored School; the Officers Advanced Course of the Infantry School; and the Troop Information and Education School, then located at Washington and Lee University.

Sergeant Brown, whose home is in Monterey, is pleased with his assignment at the Presidio and hopes to continue his etching with San Francisco and the vicinity as his subjects.

Price Has Gone Up!

The first Conscription Act was passed by Congress in 1865. It applied to all male citizens and foreign-born 25 to 45 years of age. Those who could pay $300 for a substitute were exempted.

Missile Sgt. Sheds Stripes For First Lieutenant Bars

Master Sergeant Thomas K. Crawford, of Battery "B," 740th AAA Missile Bn., Ft. Scott, discarded his stripes last Saturday (5 January) to don shiny new First Lieutenant bars.

Lieutenant Crawford, who had been a launcher platoon sergeant at B Battery since 1952, received his commission through the California Military District and has been called to active duty as a first lieutenant in the Army Reserve.

A native of Pulaski, Virginia, his service career began in 1942, when he enlisted in the Navy. He remained in the Navy until 1949, when he was discharged as a Gunners Mate 2d Class. He entered the Army the same year at Fort Ord, California, and was assigned to the 15th AAA Bn. at Ft. Lewis, Washington, which was then part of the 30th AAA Group, which now heads the antiaircraft defenses of the San Francisco Bay area. Lt. Crawford moved to Korea with the 15th AAA Bn., where he served during 1950 and 1951. Upon his return to the states, he was assigned to Battery B.

Immediately after he pinned on the bars, Lt. Crawford left for the Artillery and Guided Missile School, Ft. Bliss, Texas, to attend the Army Service to Air Missile Electronics Course.

He and his wife, Mary, own their own home in Napa, California. They have three children.

Three Veteran Employees Will Leave Engineers

Three civilian employees with a combined 18 years of service with Engineers, Sixth Army, have resigned since the first of the year.

Mrs. Tillie Berberabe, a clerk-stenographer with the section for more than 10 years, will leave next week to take a position with the Navy at Treasure Island. A farewell section party is planned.

A clerk-stenographer for three years, Mrs. Pauline Hoepner, will enter private business with her husband. Miss Mary Halfand, a clerk-typist for five years, will be married.

Bus Stops

from points originating and terminating on or within a reasonable walking distance (⅛ mile) of any of the bus lines."

Other than time control points the buses will have no scheduled stops, but will stop for any person who hails them. An exception is the Fort Baker Loop bus which will not make pickups between Gorgas Gate or Lombard Gate and Bunker Hill Road except at the Golden Gate Bridge Toll Plaza.

The first time check point for the Business Loop Shuttle run is the Post bus stop where the bus departs on the hour, 20 and 40 minutes after the hour. Second check point is the Commissary which the bus leaves at 10, 30 and 50 minutes after the hour. Building 920 at California Military District Heaquarters is the third control point which the bus leaves at 15, 35 and 55 minutes after the hour.

This "whistle stop" shuttle bus is expected to provide especially useful service for personnel having business at CMD. Housewives and other persons on shopping missions are expected to take full advantage of the Commissary stop.

The Business Loop Shuttle bus runs Monday through Friday between the hours of 0700 and 1720. During its first morning of operation it carried 55 passengers, and the passenger load is expected to increase markedly as soon as Presidio personnel become familiar with this new service.

Detailed bus schedules for all four of the new bus runs have been published in the Daily Bulletin.

Education Center Class Earns 800 College Hours

It was report card time recently for 75 lieutenants and warrant officers pursuing educational objectives through the facilities of the Presidio Army Education Center.

In the case of these military students the annual reports on their off-duty studies go to their commanding officers who in turn take academic achievements into consideration when preparing individual efficiency ratings.

As a group the warrant and junior officer "class of '56" completed the equivalent of nearly 800 college semester hours either through the United States Armed Forces Institute or by attending the on-post college classes sponsored by the Post's TI&E Division.

Three of the 75 during 1956 received baccalaureate degrees from San Francisco State College. They are: 1st Lt. Allen C. Troutman, 6700 SU TU; 1st Lt. Fred H. Irvine, Personnel Movement Division, Ft. Mason; and CWO Frank M. Shimamoto, 60th MP CID.

To cope with the increasingly complicated problems of modern military organization, the Army since World War II has found it necessary to increase the academic standing of its personnel by providing expanded educational opportunities. The Army itself set new ideal goals for its members—two to four years of college for warrants and officers; and high school education for all noncommissioned officers and specialists.

Through the Presidio Army Education Center, for instance, both enlisted men and officers are encouraged to attend school off duty and are provided with a variety of means for pursuing study from the intermediate level through high school and college.

In the cases of the three recent graduates from San Francisco State, they combined courses taken through USAFI with a number of evening classes taught on the Presidio by San Francisco State instructors. Some took classes at other local colleges and universities, for which the Army provided tuition assistance. The rate of progress, of course, is an individual matter.

Take for example the academic careers of three outstanding students: CWO Andrew Francis Kitts, Headquarters, 46th Ordnance Group; CWO George A. Goodrich, Sixth Army Special Services; and CWO Clifford Beisel, 30th Engineer Group. All earned about two years' college credit in about 12 months.

In the past year Beisel completed 39 units in on-post college classes along with 21 units through USAFI. This is the equivalent of more than four semesters of full-time college work. Kitts combined 27 units earned in on-post classes with 35 units from USAFI. From November 1955 to November 1956 Goodrich completed 36 units in the on-post classes and 24 units from USAFI. All three warrant officers earned B averages or better.

Their curriculum ranged through history, government, sociology, English, psychology, the physical sciences, anthropology, mathematics, and most of the general and technical subjects offered by the nation's universities.

To help with their college studies, a number of the "class of '56" enrolled in the rapid reading course also offered by the Presidio Army Education Center. Several earned high school diplomas or the Army equivalent by taking the high school General Educational Development Test before going on to college work.

Summaries similar to the recent report on warrant and junior officers are made at various times throughout the year on all ranks from warrant officer through Colonel.

Civil Service To Celebrate 74th Anniversary

Brucker Asks Top Efforts For AF Day

The date for Armed Forces Day has been set for 18 May, 1957, the Secretary of the Army reported this week.

A slogan descriptive of national policy — but not yet announced—will again be used this year. "Open house" programs and other activities demonstrating service operations will be scheduled for the purposes of both internal and external education as well as recruitment.

"I am particularly anxious that all echelons of the Army, to include reserve components, cooperate to the fullest possible extent with the appropriate Armed Forces Day area commanders, appointed by the Secretary of Defense, to insure adequate advance planning and the best possible participation by their respective units in the day's activities," stated the Secretary.

Recruiting Float Wins Top Prize In Rose Parade

A flowered replica of the Nike missile entered in the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena by the U.S. Army Recruiting Service won top honors in the Armed Forces classification.

The float received loud applause from the 1,500,000 parade watchers and was seen on color and black and white television.

Col. William M. Cohoon, MPPO, Sixth Army, Project Officer for the float, and the Recruiting Service have received many favorable comments from Army personnel.

"While the float was developed under the guidance of Sixth Army personnel, it was an Army-wide Recruiting Service project and we are most pleased that it has been received with such enthusiasm by all Army personnel," said Colonel Cohoon.

Library Supervisor Mrs. Elizabeth Bock was awarded a $200 check and Performance Award Certificate for her superior work with the Sixth U.S. Army Reference Library, library depot and Post library system which is composed of the main library, the Fort Scott, Baker and Cronkhite libraries and the Book Mobile. DPC Colonel Carl E. Lundquist presented the award.

Librarian, Two Others Win Cash Awards, Certificates

Mrs. Elizabeth Bock, Supervisory Librarian, Post Special Service Section, has been awarded a Performance Award Certificate and $200 check. The presentation was made this week by Col. Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

Mrs. Bock, who began her Presidio career more than 12 years ago, received the award for her superior performance of duty from 1 July, 1954, to 31 August, 1956.

Two Post Quartermaster employees were presented with $10 checks and Suggestion Award Certificates. Mrs. Constance O'Brien, supervisory accounting clerk, and Mrs. Eula E. Kovacic, administrative clerk, received the honors. Lt. Col. Jesse M. Johnson, Post Quartermaster, made the presentations.

Mrs. O'Brien, a Presidio employee since 1942, suggested an integrated stock fund and financial inventory accounting form for her second suggestion award.

Wife of a Chief Warrant Officer stationed at Fort Cronkhite, Mrs. Kovacic submitted a revision of a Sixth Army form used in Army command management. She worked with the quartermaster section in the Panama Canal Zone before transferring to the Presidio.

AG Officer Wins First Military Suggestion Cash

Captain Richard G. Fazakerley, Chief, Reports and Accounts Division, Sixth Army Finance and Accounting, has received the first military suggestion award at the Presidio.

The captain, a veteran of 14 years' service, was awarded $25 for suggesting a crosswalk on Graham Street near Buildings 38 and 39. The walk alleviates traffic hazards for personnel going to parking lots during the rush hours.

Graduated from Artillery OCS and the Finance School at Indianapolis, Captain Fazakerley has been on post since September, 1955. He holds a Masters' Degree in business administration from the University of Southern California.

Engineer Unit Joins Desert Survey Project

Members of the 537th Engineer Co. (Base Survey) will go south this week to participate in the Southern California Survey Project.

An advanced detachment of about 35 enlisted men and officers will leave the first part of the week for the Marine Corps training base at Twentynine Palms, Calif.

Approximately 100 officers and men, about 10 helicopters and four fixed-wing aircraft will follow as soon as real estate reservations are completed with the airport at Thermal, Calif.

The men will do field survey work in Pinyon Wells quadrangle. While on the 60-90 day project, the company will set up a field camp and live in tents at Thermal. The helicopters and aircraft will be provided by the 521st Engineer Co. (Aviation).

Local AA Officer Joins Army's New Satellite Program

Captain Warren L. Hurst, until recently Electronic Warfare and Communications Officer, 30th AAA Group, is on his way to the Pentagon to participate in the Army's earth satellite program.

A native Californian and ex-Marine, Captain Hurst was the only Presidian selected by the Department of the Army for the "Project Vanguard."

Captain Hurst reports to Washington, D. C., 1 February for a five-month briefing. He then will undergo more than a year's training at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The captain has been designated a radar maintenance officer for the project. He served at Fort Barry for two years and was responsible for the repair of countermortar radars while in Korea.

Government Careerists Rated High

About 3600 Presidio Civil Service employees will join Federal employees working in the United States and overseas in observing the 74th anniversary of the signing of the Civil Service Act this week.

The Act which became law on 16 January, 1883, created the Civil Service Commission to "regulate and improve the Civil Service of the United States."

When first established, the Civil Service covered 13,900 jobs or 10 per cent of the Federal positions. Today more than 2,000,000 persons or 85 per cent of the Federal employees are working under the merit system. Nearly half of this total are employed by the Department of Defense.

About 12,000 individuals are employed in the entire Sixth Army area, about 230,000 in the state of California and about 45,000 in the Bay Area.

"Without the zealous assistance of this fine and dedicated group of career employees, our daily tasks would become almost insurmountable," summed up Col. Carl E. Lundquist, deputy post commander.

Last year competitive Civil Service became worldwide when 20,000 jobs held by American citizens in foreign countries and island possessions were brought under its coverage. Ten thousand jobs in Alaska were brought into the system in 1955.

Employing the merit system in selecting civilian government employees has been lauded by Presidents from 1906 to the present. Theodore Roosevelt said 51 years ago:

"I am inclined more and more to feel that the observance in letter and spirit of the civil service law is the first requisite in obtaining clean, decent, efficient government service in any branch or bureau of the government."

"Nowhere in the world have I met more efficiency, more dedication, more readiness to put in hours without counting them on the clock . . . than I have among the Civil Service," President Eisenhower added his praise.

Impact of the Civil Service system has reached into other countries. During the first nine months of 1956, 136 visitors representing 40 different countries came to study the system. Among the results are competitive examinations in Turkey, position classification in Costa Rica and a national personnel council in Japan.

The first threads of Civil Service reform were evident in President Lincoln's second term when several bills were introduced in Congress and when Lincoln refused to completely rotate offices between his first and second terms.

Under Ulysses S. Grant a commission was established, but lasted only four years due to lack of funds. In July 1881, sentiment for the merit system rose when President Garfield was assassinated over a patronage dispute.

Since the Civil Service Act was signed by President Chester A. Arthur, it has remained basically unchanged except for its expansion and the attempts to continue its modernization for efficiency and economy.

Occultation Team Due In South Pacific

Assignments to Alaska's icy hinterland or the mid-East's waterless deserts are pretty much commonplace for the men of the 30th Engineer Group, but when 21 men get sent to the lush tropical islands of the South Pacific for six months of star gazing, that's news!

Lieutenant Marlin J. De Hass and 18 enlisted men took off from Travis Air Force Base the day after Christmas on the first leg of their flight to the Philippine and Mariana Islands. Their mission is to complete ties between Saipan, Guam and the Philippines as part of the world wide occultation program.

Lieutenant John Farrow, officer in charge of the team, and Sp3 Pietro S. Clara, left here 1 December for discussions in Tokyo, Japan, and to make arrangements for the arrival of the main body at Clark Air Force Base outside Manila.

During the Philippines-Marianas operations, which are to last for six months, the team will be broken down into smaller parties and stationed at remote locations in the two island groups. The troops may be isolated at the lonely outposts for as long as a month and a half at a time.

Surveying by occultations is a method of position determination by observing, electronically recording, and timing a series of predicted star occultations with the moon from previously selected sites on the ground. This method has the advantage over ordinary surveying techniques by permitting the measurements of great distances—even when the points are separated by impassable terrain or a wide expanse of water. It furthermore is free from the usual disturbing effects of gravity.

As the moon traverses the skies, it passes in front of many stars, obscuring them from the view of an observer on the ground. The phenomenon of a star obscured by the moon from any point on earth is known as Star Occultation.

Several days prior to the scheduled occultation, a party, usually consisting of an astronomer, radioman, and surveyor, occupies a site. A 12-inch telescope, radio, and electronic equipment are set up. The equipment is thoroughly checked to insure that all component parts are in working order. The electric power is supplied by a portable generator or dry cell batteries.

The time of occultation or the instant of the star's disappearance (immersion) behind the dark edge of the moon, or its reappearance (emersion), is photoelectrically recorded on tape. Simultaneously, the time signals, which are broadcast around the clock by the Bureau of Standards, are received by the radio and are also recorded on the same tape. The end product of the operation is a tape with two traces, registering time and star signals. From this, the time of occultation at the selected site can be accurately determined.

When the same occultation is observed and successfully recorded from two sites—one in the Philippines and one in the Marianas—this is called a tie. Three or more successful ties and the mission is a success.

Usually there are only about three scheduled observations per month since it takes so long to pick the best sites and set up the equipment and even then a hundred and one things can go wrong; rain, haze, clouds, dim stars, mechanical failures—these are just some of the things that give the occultation personnel grey hairs.

At any rate the team is due back at the Presidio—well tanned and full of bananas and coconuts some time in July. Lt. Farrow is sure they will be successful in the South Pacific Operation.

Army IG Smooths Area Problems

"I'm going to comb the lyce out of the Army and skin off its pants," remarked the first Inspector General to a friend after his appointment in 1777.

Inspector Generals and their staffs have come a long way since that statement 179 years ago and presently concentrate their efforts on resolving complaints, conducting constructive inspections and undertaking necessary investigations.

The Headquarters, Sixth Army, IG section processes about 50 complaints and inquiries a month, including those problems referred to it by subordinate Inspector General sections in the Sixth Army area. The section reports directly to the Commanding General.

Each year about 40 constructive inspections are undertaken in Sixth Army major Class I installations in an attempt to help unit commanders, efficiency- and economy-wise. In addition, approximately 685 National Guard units and all Sixth Army Reserve activities are inspected. Staff studies are also conducted. A file of official staff visits and inspections is maintained in the headquarters office.

Col. David A. Watt, Inspector General, and Lt. Col. Raymond C. Ball, executive officer, direct the Sixth Army IG operations. Lt. Col. John E. Hendry, Jr., is Chief, Inspections Branch and Mr. John Graca is the Administrative Officer.

The first Inspector General was appointed as the result of George Washington's dissatisfaction with the state of training and the lack of uniform regulations. A French-Irish Major General Conway was the first assigned to the office, but his ideas on inspection were the reverse of what Washington had expected.

After Conway was relieved of his assignment, Baron von Steuben, a former lieutenant general in the Prussian Army, was appointed Inspector General and given a rank of Major General. His qualifications included the satisfactory preparation of a drill manual for American soldiers.

Baron von Steuben was esteemed by Washington, who wrote von Steuben a letter of commendation as his last official duty in the Army.

Post IG Section Stays Busy With Key Studies

The Post IG office, a staff section under the Deputy Post Commander, handles complaints beyond the resources of the first sergeant, unit commander and other interested officials on the Post and 6th Regional Command levels. Reports are taken in confidence.

The office also undertakes Post investigations into such things as mismanagement and fraud charges and personnel problems. In addition it inspects about 60 Post units a year.

Post IG was established in December, 1953, by Lt. Col. Willett Ware, Jr., the present Post Inspector General. Assisting him are Maj. Lester Kuhr, M/Sgt. Frank J. Hybil and Miss Phyllis Chamberlain, secretary.

Colonel Ware, a veteran of 14 years' service, served with the Camp Roberts IG office before coming to the Presidio.

Big Shoulders are a prerequisite for Post IG officials as shown by Post Inspector General Willet Ware, Jr., who listens to the problem or complaint voiced by an enlisted man. Inspections and investigations on the Post level are the other facets of the program.

Presidio Aero Club Still Growing, Says Ex-President

The Presidio Aero Club is growing in "zooms and glides," according to retiring club president Captain Douglas A. Huff, who announced this week that the club's strength has in two years grown from 6 members and one airplane to 34 members and three airplanes.

The club's success is attributed by Captain Huff to its ability to accomplish three primary goals. These goals include flying for recreation, practicing for CAA ratings and keeping up Army personnel enthusiasm in aviation.

Both military personnel and Department of Defense employed civilians may join the club. All Army ranks from private first class (Pfc. John Dreibholz, CMD) to colonel (Sixth Army Chaplain Colonel Edward DeMars) are represented in the club. In addition almost every unit at the Presidio has at least one representative in the flying organization.

At the present time there are no women members, but there have been in the past. "They are welcome now," says Captain Huff, who explains that while the club has limited membership, there are a few openings at this time.

Information on membership in the flying club can be obtained by calling Captain Huff at 3316 or Captain Arthur Cox at 2674.

Splendid winter weather and member enthusiasm has resulted in a great deal of flying during the past months, according to the club's president. One airplane logged over 400 hours in three months.

Most of the hours logged by the club members are in pursuit of a CAA rating, such as private pilot, commercial pilot or instructor. Five members on the verge of receiving their pilot's license are Don Wilson, Marine Corps Reserve; Lt. Col. Winston Jones, 6th Army G-3 section; Sp3 John Smith, 60th Military Police Det.; John Sacka (Lt. Col. USAR), and Chester Forsberg (Maj. USAR).

A number of club members are planning to take advantage of the General Aeronautics course offered by the Post's Army Education Center which starts Monday. This basic course, which is calculated to stimulate general aviation interest on Post, may be followed by more technical courses in meteorology, navigation and aircraft maintenance.

Aero Club members group in front of their three airplanes. The club is open to all military personnel and civilians employed by Department of Defense. Primary aims of the club include recreation flying, training for CAA certificates, and stimulating Army personnel enthusiasm for aviation.

Visions of Grandeur danced in the heads of Presidio WACs this week when they viewed a picture of the new dress blues authorized for their wear. The sneak preview of the uniform, printed in a recent "Army Times," revealed that the dress is authorized for wear immediately by officers and enlisted women. The shade 150 blue uniform is an optional item that must be purchased.

9-Week Aero Course Starts At Ed Center

A nine-week course in General Aeronautics will begin Monday, 14 January, under the joint sponsorship of the Presidio Army Education Center and the Adult Education Center. M/Sgt. Cecil E. Bartholomew, Army Education Center, Ext. 3100, is handling registration.

The class will meet Monday and Wednesday from 1830 to 2100 hours in Building 240. Tuition is free and textbooks are furnished.

Mr. Edward Spalding, retired Air Force major and certified teacher, will conduct the class. Mr. Spalding has piloted multi-engined and light aircraft.

The course includes history of flight and aircraft, aerodynamics of propellers, control in flight, loads and stresses and materials in construction.

Those who successfully complete the course, including the USAFI end-of-course examination, will receive three ACE college semester hours or one-half Carnegie high school unit.

If sufficient interest is indicated, courses in Aeronautical Meteorology and Air Navigation will be offered under the same conditions. These three courses meet some of the requirements for a CAA pilot's license.

Woman's Club Will Hold Dessert Bridge Meeting

Reservations for the bridge meeting may be secured by telephoning Mrs. Karl Rudser, extension 3424. Deadline for such reservations is noon on Tuesday 15 January.

A February Coffee meeting is also being planned by the Presidio Woman's Club group. It takes place on the afternoon of the 13th and the program includes a phonetic workshop demonstration which would be of particular interest to mothers whose little girls or boys are unable to read.

"H-m-m, I don't know?"

"Wow, dig that hat!"

Local WACs View New Dress Uniform With Mixed Emotion

A spark of delight could be noted in the eyes of many Presidio WACs this week. Their enthusiasm stemmed from an announcement of a new uniform addition—the first in seven years—of dress blues.

Authorized for wear immediately, the new uniform for both officers and enlisted women would be a single shade 150 blue. It is to be trimmed in gold and topped off with a cape, according to a preview announcement in a recent Army Times.

WACs were generally enthusiastic over the idea of wearing the dress uniform while traveling. Most concede that they looked better in blue, and the color was felt to have a certain strong appeal to men.

Some of the Army women doubt whether the cape which goes with both uniforms would enhance the total effect. There were a few lukewarm comments on the visored dress hat.

Gold braid will adorn the officers' hat and the sleeves of both officer and enlisted women.

A spokesman for Post Quartermaster gave little encouragement that the uniforms would be available soon through this agency. Post QM has received no directives or authorization on the subject of this new uniform.

It was generally conceded that the WACs that want to wear the new dress uniform in the near future had better see a tailor.

"Well, it's kinda cute!"

How Things Have Grown

The first Regular Army service school was established at Fortress Monroe, Va., in 1824. It was called the School for Artillery Practice.

PX Costs May Be Upgraded; Some Items Would Increase

Suggestions for expanding lines of merchandise and raising some prices in exchanges are now before the House Armed Forces Committee under the chairmanship of Rep. Carl Vinson (D.-Ga.).

A joint Army, Navy and Air Force committee has drawn up a list of merchandise to be added to items sold by the service stores. It also requested that wholesale price limits be increased in some cases, in order to allow stocking of broader lines of merchandise.

According to the January issue of the Military Market, the military business journal, the merchandise and price limits followed by the exchanges reflect the economy which prevailed in 1949.

Items to be added if the bill is passed are portable typewriters; sports coats; children's clothing and accessories up to age 12; maternity dresses, brassieres, girdles and garter belts; watch straps and attachments made of precious metal; electric blankets; tires; and baby furniture.

Wholesale price limits would be raised on military cuff links; civilian sweaters; white shirts; rings; cleaning and maintenance supplies; dinnerware; electrical appliances; flatware; drinking glasses; radios; record players; cameras; projectors; automotive accessories; and sports and recreational equipment.

Salary Limit Off

Military personnel employed part-time in exchanges will no longer face a $90 monthly salary limit, according to George Elliott, general manager of Post exchanges. The local announcement follows a national change in the Army and Air Force Exchange Service personnel policy.

What Good Old Days?

Revolutionary War officers and privates received life pensions of $20 and $8 per month, respectively.

YouthVespersWill Aid Hungarians

A "Help the Hungarians" clothing drive by members of the Presidio Youth Vespers takes place tomorrow morning between the hours of 0930 and 1200. Clothing will be collected by truck from the service entrances of quarters on the Presidio, Fort Scott, Letterman Army Hospital and Wherry Housing.

Personnel residing off the post may deposit items for the clothing drive at the Presidio Teenage Club. All outgrown but still usable clothing for children and adults is acceptable. It is asked that such clothing be clean at the time they are donated to the drive.

Joyce Freeman, Conni Long, Barbara Enmeier and Dave Parsell, of the Youth Vespers group, are directing the clothing drive for destitute Hungarians.

Neophyte Star-Gazers Are Learning Fast

The wonder and enchantment of the night sky is now being unfolded to 75 men and women of the Presidio through a San Francisco State College extension course in astronomy presented here by Associate Professor Maurice R. Amsden, of the college's Physical Science division.

A chemistry instructor by profession, astronomer by hobby, Doctor Amsden was chosen to conduct the Presidio course by Professor William Golden, director of the Military Extension Division at San Francisco State College. A similar astronomy course is being conducted at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Slightly more than half of the local students are officers, some from Letterman Army Hospital, from Sixth Army Headquarters, and from the NIKE sites in this area. There are enlisted women from Company D, hospital corpsmen of various rank and professional calling, men of the Navy, the Air Force and the Marine Corps; all drawn in unison from the routine of their earthbound sphere—to pursue again a study as ancient as the Pleiades themselves.

What keeps the stars shining? How far is the sky? Who and what are Cassiopea, Mercury, Jupiter and Capella, Bernice's Hair or Orion, Aldebaran or The Dove? Professor Amsden can tell his students something about all of them. And tell them he does, in a showcase of witticisms that sparkle like the constellations he describes. His lectures are two hours long, yet not nearly long enough to suit the growing fascination of his students.

During the war Professor Amsden instructed Naval Aviation cadets in the study of Meteorology, Atomic Energy, and Man. His course at the Presidio is the second of two given here since the inception of the Army Education Center at this garrison.

The professor voices surprise at the increasing interest of the students in the astronomy course and of the exceptionally high scores being achieved in their test papers. They are unanimous in the opinion that it is because of his professional qualifications and his ability to bring added luster to the stars that "school night" at the Letterman classroom is the most looked-forward-to of any in the week.

The astronomy course is eight weeks long, two nights weekly. Apart from its particular appeal as a hobby, for its cultural interest and its college credits, it is of prime importance to military students preparing for navigational careers, either nautical or airborne.

During the final phase of the astronomy class, the students and their instructor are to make field trips to some of the outstanding observatories in the San Francisco area. The course covers The Purpose of Astronomy, The Earth and Astronomy, The Telescope, Members of the Solar System, Time And The Calendar, Eclipses, Tides, The Sun, Comets, Meteors, Star Distance, Kinds and Groups of Stars, and Motions of the Stars.

Regs On 1957 Photo Contest Set By DA

An all-Army contest for professional and amateur photographers has been announced by the Department of the Army.

Area command contests, including the six continental Armies and the major overseas commands, will be held. The all-Army finals will be held at the DA level. Class I, II and III installations have been "encouraged" to sponsor competitions.

Pictures must be taken after 1 January, 1957, and individuals must have been in the Army at least 90 days before entering the contest.

Three judging categories have been established for both professional and amateur photographers. Category I includes black and white single pictures at least 8 x 10 inches and not more than 16 x 20 inches.

Category II covers picture stories. Three to seven 8 x 10 pictures, which together tell a story, may be entered. Category III includes 35 mm color transparencies.

"ZARAK" casts Victor Mature as the son of Haji Kahn, ruler of a frontier district in Northwest India. He is banished by his father because of his interest in Anita Ekberg, the Kahn's favorite wife. Mature becomes a bandit and arouses his followers against the British.

"THE KING AND FOUR QUEENS" features Clark Gable as a scoundrel with fancy clothes, quick mind, cool courage and a way with a six-shooter. When he arrives at Wagon Mound he learns that a $100,000 gold hoard has been missing since a bank holdup in which three of four bandit brothers were killed. The widows of the bandits guard the area awaiting the return of the missing brother. Gable searches for the gold while trying to escape the wiles and charms of the scheming widows.

"THE GUNS OF FORT PETTICOAT" takes place in the Texas territory during the Civil War. Audie Murphy portrays an Army lieutenant who opposes his ambitious Colonel's attempts to punish the peaceful Sand Creek Indians. Murphy deserts to warn the Territory that, with the troops away, the aroused Indians will retaliate. The women and children form a defense brigade to ward off the Indians.

"THE NIGHT RUNNER" features Ray Danton as a semi-cured patient who is released from an overcrowded mental hospital. Danton, who once attempted murder when under extreme pressure, finds difficulties in adjusting to life when his friends fail to give him sympathy and understanding.

Top Driver is M/Sgt. Ray Decker, who recently departed the 99th Engineer Company (Repro, Base) for the Far East, where he took first prize in a "Skill Driving" contest at Dalat in South Viet Nam. Sergeant Decker proudly holds the silver cup he won competing against both French and Viet Nam drivers in a contest held to help celebrate South Viet Nam's Independence Day or Republic Day holidays.

Marjorie, Mame Favorites Of Presidio Fiction Readers

The past few weeks book review sections of the magazines and newspapers have been full of lists of the best books of 1956. After reading several of them one comes up with a consolidated choice of the books which the nation's reviewers think are the best. With a slight leaning toward the west coast reviewers, here are the five best fiction books of 1956:

(1) THE LAST HURRAH by Edwin O'Connor — a unanimous choice of all the nation's critics, (2) A SINGLE PEBBLE by John Hersey, (3) THE QUIET AMERICAN by Graham Greene, (4) H.M.S. ULYSSES by Alistair MacLean, (5) BANG THE DRUM SLOWLY by Mark Harris—this book by a San Francisco author rates very high with the west coast critics.

The non-fiction selection for best books is as follows:

(1) THE OUTSIDER by Colin Wilson, (2) HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH SPEAKING PEOPLES Vol. I and II by Sir Winston Churchill, (3) OLYMPIO: THE LIFE OF VICTOR HUGO by Andre Maurois, (4) GALLIPOLI by Alan Moorehead, (5) PROFILES IN COURAGE by John Kennedy.

Interesting to note are the books which have been popular at the Post Library the past year and to compare them with the critics' best book list. Here in order of popularity are the ten books which were read the most by Presidio readers in 1956. Fiction:

(1) AUNTIE MAME by Patrick Dennis, (2) MARJORIE MORNINGSTAR by Herman Wouk, (3) THE LAST HURRAH by Edwin O'Connor, (4) ANDERSONVILLE by Mackinlay Kantor, (5) H.M.S. ULYSSES by Alistair MacLean.

The non-fiction top five included:

(1) THE SEARCH FOR BRIDIE MURPHY by Morey Bernstein, (2) PROFILES IN COURAGE by John Kennedy, (3) AGE OF THE FIGHTING SAIL by C. S. Forrester, (4) EISENHOWER, THE INSIDE STORY by John F. Kennedy, (5) THE OUTSIDER by Colin Wilson.

How many of these books have you read? They are all in the Post Library so why not read and see if you agree with the critics and your fellow public. (M. Anderson) for your pleasure!

Local Hoopsters Continue Unbeaten

PRESIDIO'S TORRID TORERO CAGERS BOAST A 13-0 SEASON.

Toreros Carry Win Streak Southward

Continuing their winning ways the Torero cagers journeyed to Humboldt to down the Lumberjacks of Humboldt State by an 85-54 margin.

Highlight of the encounter was the performance turned in by the former San Jose State wizard, Carroll Williams. The little man was constantly dogging the opposition when they were in possession of the ball and setting up the plays of the Torero quintet while he was collecting 24 counters for the locals.

Williams was by no means the only thorn in the 'Jacks side. Norm Ellenberger garnered 15 tallies, Ronnie Reynoir pitched in 13 points and Tor Hansen collected 12 points.

The Lumberjacks were heir to a 21-9 deficit with 2:35 minutes to go in the first quarter. At half-time the Torero lead had been increased to 50-32.

When the final buzzer had sounded the Toreros had hit a scorching 52.6 percentage of their shots from the floor and made good 25 of their 38 charity attempts.

Hampered by the local's tight defense, the Lumberjacks managed to hit a 29.3 percentage of their court trys and picked up 20 tallies of a possible 32 from the foul line.

The local quintet will return from a journey to southern California Monday, where they have been for the past week. They will play Marine Recruit Depot of San Diego, Naval Training Center of San Diego, El Camino Junior College, and possibly some other teams in that vicinity before returning to the Presidio. The Toreros move to Castle AFB the day after their return to carry on their conference play.

Bouncing back from a single point defeat, 54-53, at the hands of Headquarters Company, the Honor Guard's Company A carried off first place and the handsome winner's trophy in the Holiday Tournament sponsored by Post Special Services.

Post Gun Club To Sponsor Jr. Safety Class

All juniors, up to 17 years of age, who have received BB guns, pellet guns, and .22 cal. rifles or pistols recently are invited to attend a marksmanship principles and safe gun-handling meeting Sunday, 13 January.

BB gun, pellet gun, and .22 cal. pistol marksmanship will be conducted at the Presidio Pistol Range, located near the Post Motor Pool and .22 cal. rifle marksmanship will be conducted at the Presidio Gun Club Range, Building 1369, Ft. Scott.

The Presidio Gun Club is sponsoring the program and will furnish experienced rifle and pistol instructors. Individuals are instructed to bring their own weapons and ammunition.

Each junior is to be accompanied by a parent to help supervise and assist in maintaining range safety. Capt. John F. Kallam, president of the Presidio Gun Club, also states that it is beneficial to the parent to see for himself the safety measures that are recommended to the youngsters when handling firearms. This will enable the parent to properly supervise the use and handling of weapons by juniors in the future.

Netmen Begin Practice Call For More Players

Spikers and setmen, you have the opportunity to play for the defending All-Army Champion volleyball team. Coach Bob Jones' '56 champ team has resumed practice sessions after a holiday lay-off in anticipation of the up-coming San Francisco Central YMCA Tournament to be held at the Stonestown YMCA at 1100 hours Saturday, 19 January.

Coach Jones has three returning members from last season's title winning roster of 11 men. The veteran netmen are setmen, Dick Godino and Catalino Ignacio, and spiker, Bob Jones.

The Torero netmen hold practice sessions after duty hours every Monday afternoon at the Ft. Scott Gym from 1745 until 1915 hours. The team also schedules practice sessions with local teams during week nights.

Coach Jones announced that all personnel interested in playing with the varsity team should get in touch with him as soon as possible or come to the Ft. Scott Gym for the Monday night workouts. Capt. Jones can be contacted at Ext. 4223.

Bob Simpson, a 6-1, 225-pound guard and linebacker for the Alameda Naval Air Station Hellcats, who topped the all-Navy-Marine-Coast Guard polls and failed to win a mention on the Armed Forces Press Service All-Star Team, has been signed by the San Francisco 49ers.

This marks the second time in the past eleven years that the local pros have signed a topflight player from the Alameda team. Last time it was Jolting Joe Perry, who went on to become one of professional football's all-time great fullbacks.

WAC Hoopsters Tackle League Leaders

The Post's lady cagers will have an opportunity to avenge their only loss of the season when they meet Mather AFB at the LAH Gym tomorrow at 1630 hours.

A win tomorrow would be doubly sweet since it would also put the locals in a tie for the number 1 spot now held by the Mather quintet.

Boasting a 6-1 season record, five non-conference games and two regular games, the female hoopsters tackle their third opponent tomorrow with 7 conference games yet to be played.

The local quintet will be under the guidance of Sgt. Julian Kite, who replaces Sp3 Purcell, recently separated from the service.

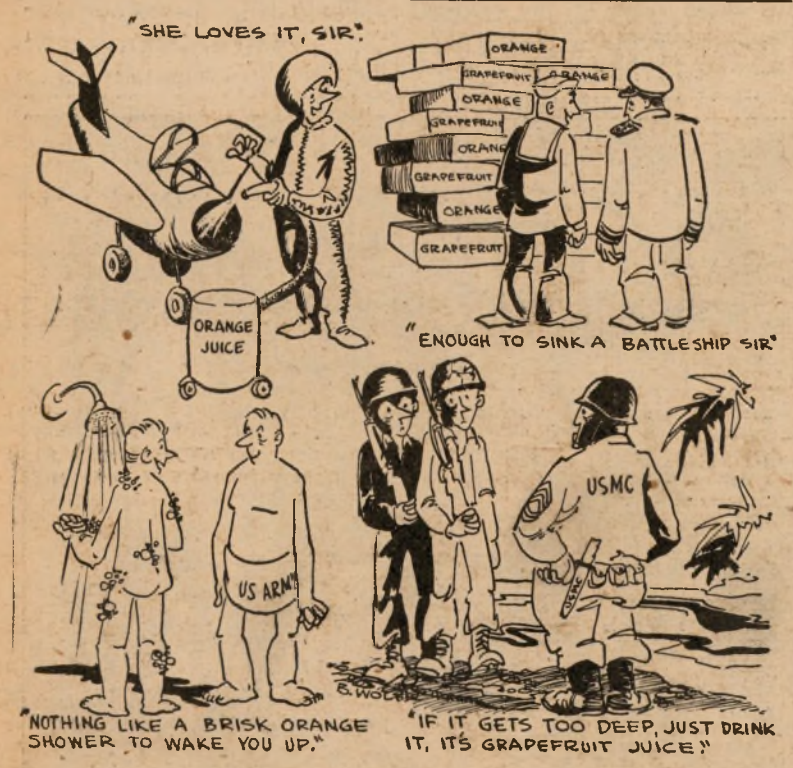
Captain Holbrook and his wife, Ina, who have been married for seven years, were afraid the twins, their first children, would miss the 1956 deadline. Army's Oldest Troop Unit In New York Parade Today

Washington (ANS)—Picked as the Army's representative for the Alexander Hamilton Bicentennial celebration in New York City today was its oldest troop unit, Battery D, 5th Field Artillery Battalion, historically known as "Alexander Hamilton's Own."



Battery D, composed of officers and men from the famed 1st Infantry Division, Fort Riley, Kans., will be flown to New York to participate with other state and civic organizations celebrating the bicentennial.

The Battery was organized in March, 1776, as the New York Provincial Artillery Company and was commanded by 19-year-old Captain Alexander Hamilton. The unit fired its first shots against an enemy on July 12, 1776, from the southern tip of Manhattan Island, then called Fort George and since referred to as "The Battery."

Battery D has been retained as the only "D" Battery in the Regular Army Field Artillery in recognition of more than 180 years of unbroken Army Service. The 5th Field Artillery coat of arms is that of the Hamilton family crest which depicts an oak tree with 13 acorns and a saw severing the trunk.

Library Going Up!

New building going up near the Officers' Club is the Post Library which is scheduled for completion sometime in August. First step in the construction, driving in the piles to support the foundation, is underway.

Set Operation Big Drink

Services will be literally overflowing with juice, specifically orange, grapefruit and orange-grapefruit, during the coming year. A combined total of 16,586,000 pounds of the versatile beverage has been ordered for the Armed Forces, according to the Army Quartermaster.

About 6,807,000 pounds of the orange and grapefruit combination will be around to quench thirsts. It is closely followed by straight orange juice, 6,589,000 pounds, over the rocks with grapefruit juice, 3,190,000 pounds, bringing up the rear.

Local Bible Class Living Memorial To Former Captain

The Kenneth McDaniel Memorial Bible Class meets every Sunday at 1930 hours in the Enlisted Men's Service Club. The class is open to all Protestants.

In addition to its weekly study meetings, the class holds frequent social gatherings for members and their families. The members have also undertaken several projects such as the mail adoption of a Korean orphan.

MOS Change

As in past reclassification drives, the new program aims specifically at those enlisted personnel, grades E-5, E-6 and E-7, who have a surplus primary MOS, but hold a secondary MOS which is on the shortage list. Enlisted personnel records are presently being screened to determine this information.

Personnel who possess "only an overage MOS are strongly urged to make application for a service school or request transfer for retraining in a shortage MOS."

The directive places special stress on reassignment to ARAACOM, to which upper three graders may transfer if their primary MOS is on the overage list.

The following major Army-wide MOS overages were listed: 073 Recreation Specialist, top 3 grades; 321 Lineman, E-5, E-6; 411 Ammunition Storage Specialist, top 3 grades; 518 Construction Foreman, E-5, E-6; 524 Utilities Foreman, E-5, E-7; 542 Duty Foreman, top 3 grades; 553 Subsistence Storage Specialist, top 2 grades, and 621 Engineer Equipment Mechanic, E-5, E-6.

Other surpluses are: 631 Wheel Vehicle Mechanic, top 3 grades; 635 Automotive Repairman, top 2 grades; 643 Truckmaster, E-5, E-6; 714 Postal Clerk, top 3 grades; 715 Medical Records Clerk, top 3 grades; 716 Personnel Specialist, top 2 grades; 717 Administrative Specialist, E-7; 762 Engineer Supply Specialist, top 3 grades; Ordnance Supply Specialist, top 3 grades, and 764 Quartermaster Supply Specialist, top 2 grades.

Also considered overage are these MOS's: 765 Signal Supply Specialist, top 3 grades; 767 Medical Supply Specialist, top 3 grades; 768 General Supply Specialist E-5, E-7; 942 Meat Cutter, top 3 grades; 943 Bread Baker, top 3 grades; 951 Military Policeman, top 3 grades, and 952 Confinement Specialist, top 2 grades.

14,000 Due Draft

The Army has requested 14,000 men be drafted in February, 3,000 less than the January call, the Department of Defense has announced.

The decreased call is attributed to high enlistments usually recorded in January and February.

The other services did not place manpower calls for February.

Most Top Grade Promotions Still Frozen Fast

The Star Presidian

Vol. 5, No. 32 PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA Friday 18 January, 1957

One E-7 and two E-6's are the only top three grade promotions authorized for the Presidio during the quarter, January, February and March, according to information released by Sixth Army this week.

The picture is brighter, however, for those enlisted men eligible for an E-4 rating. Quotas for E-4 promotions are as follows: Post, 329; Hq., Sixth U.S. Army, 42; USA MRU Augmentation (56th & 102nd), 32; 6700 Training Unit, 3; and Hq. Sixth U. S. Army Rctg. Dist., 5.

It is again recommended that all E-2's be promoted to private first class as they complete 10 months of Army service.

Promotions for the whole Sixth Army for the first quarter of 1957 are broken down as follows: E-7, 32; E-6, 86; E-5, 585; and E-4, 1955.

New Library Underway; Due August Completion

Foundation cement was poured this week for a new $172,000 Post library located on Moraga Avenue between the main post exchange and the Presidio Officers' Club. The building is scheduled for occupancy in late August of this year.

In keeping with other Presidio architecture the building will be of modern Spanish design. Most striking aspect of the project will be the side facing the parade ground and San Francisco Bay which will be all glass.

Besides the spacious 38- by 80-foot central reading room, the library will also have a special children's room and a military science study room. Three soundproof listening booths will be located just off the central reading room. Work room, office, storage room, lavatories and staff room complete the list of library facilities.

The latest in fluorescent lighting will be installed. In addition to the book shelves located adjacent to the reading room, X shaped shelves will be situated right on the floor of the reading room, with the effect of breaking up the big room into smaller, more private areas. The boomerang shaped check-out stand is of the most modern library design.

Benches will be built-in below the large side windows. The earthquake factor has been considered in the building's construction of reinforced concrete. Mission-type tile will be used on the roof.

Mrs. Elizabeth Boch, Presidio chief librarian, rates the new project as "the most important library development in Presidio history." She explains that present facilities incorporated in the Post Service Club are now simply inadequate to provide some services.

An additional selection of children's books will be acquired before the library opening, said Mrs. Boch. She also anticipated the purchase of new furniture for the library.

Original announcement of a new library came in March of last year, with construction tentatively scheduled to be completed at the end of 1956. However, all of the bids received at that time exceeded the alloted funds so that the Post Engineers found it necessary to revise the plans.

Will Visit President

Five winners, representing each of the services in the annual Freedoms Foundation letter writing contest, will be honor guests at the Presidential inauguration in Washington, D. C., on 21 January. Following ceremonies they expect to visit briefly with the President.

Combat Commander To Retire This Month

Brigadier General Charles A. (Albert) Sheldon, 57, Assistant to the Commanding General of the Sixth U.S. Army, will be retired 13 January, 1957, after more than 31 years of active service.

In the post-war years, General Sheldon returned to the Orient in 1950, serving two years as U.S. Army Attache for Thailand, and later as Chief of the Thailand Military Assistance Advisory Group (MAAG), with headquarters in Bangkok.

Prior to being assigned to Sixth Army Headquarters, he commanded Camp Irwin, California, and the Armored Combat Training Center there. His promotion to the rank of brigadier general was announced on 5 October, 1954.

The Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant will be presented to Lieutenant Bush. The award is in recognition of meritorious service from 1 June, 1955 to 7 December, 1956, while serving as technical advisor on matters pertaining to radiological defense in the Plans, Organization and Training Division of the Chemical Section, Headquarters Sixth U. S. Army.

Marching in the first battalion will be Company D, USA Garrison; Headquarters Company, Sixth U. S. Army; and Company A, USA Garrison. The second battalion includes Battery B, 740th Missile Bn.; 549th Engineer Company; and 561st Engineer Company (Port Const.).

In command of the 6th Regional since last August, General Tarrant has been ordered to report for duty with Headquarters, Sixth U.S. Army, by 3 February. His assignment to be announced.

General McGaw is no stranger locally, having commanded the now defunct Western Antiaircraft Command, headquartered at Hamilton Air Force Base, in 1953.

'Salad King' M/Sgt. Arnold J. Harmor, E Company mess steward, has been selected as the Sixth Army nominee for all-Army "Most Fanciest Chef" honors. Above, the Sergeant is shown working on his specialty, salads, which he presents to his men in from five to 11 varieties each day. This master chef has had the privilege of serving Duncan Hines—and being complimented by him—while serving as senior instructor for the Sixth Army Food Service sub-schools.

Local Salad King Will Vie For Army's Top Chef Title

If a staff of culinary experts agree with gourmet guide Duncan Hines and half a million satisfied soldier stomachs, M/Sgt. Arnold J. Harmor, E Company, USA Garrison, Mess Steward, is a cinch to become the Army's first "Chow King."

Sergeant Harmor is the Sixth Army's nominee to the All-Army title of "The Army's Fanciest Chef." Winner will be announced in Washington, D. C., after a thorough review of the worldwide competition.

Many gustatory triumphs color Sergeant Harmor's past including the time he served a meal to Duncan Hines which was rated as "food as fine as you will find anywhere." When asked to name his own greatest culinary achievement, the Sergeant cited the Thanksgiving Dinner he prepared for the 11th Car Company here in 1949. This Goliath feast boasted 85 food items and was displayed on tables which stretched clear into the hall.

But at the Presidio Sergeant Harmor has achieved fame and a following for dispelling the favorite soldier complaint—"You can't get a decent salad in the Army." This man—known fondly by his men as "The Salad King"—doesn't just turn out a decent salad, he turns out scads of them, 5 to 11 at each meal.

The men at "E" Company have been truly "salad happy" since Sergeant Harmor became their Mess Steward. In addition to the more common salads such as lettuce wedges, tossed green salad, Waldorf salad, molded salads, etc., this magnificent Mess Steward creates many new, attractive and tasty salads and dressings of his own.

Sergeant Harmor, who has spent 19 of his total 22 years' service in the Quartermaster Food Service, first learned to cook while assigned in the Philippines where he served on Corregidor until November 1937. There he started cooking the hard way, using the old coal ranges and rolling kitchens of that era.

The Sergeant was assigned first as a student and later as a cook at the Sixth Army Food Service School. He assisted in organizing Food Service sub-schools at Camp Cooke and Camp Roberts in 1950 and 1951.

In June 1952 he was sent to Korea and served as Mess Steward for a transportation truck company. Later he was transferred to Japan for similar duty with the non-commissioned officers' club at Kure.

In September 1954, he returned from Japan and was stationed at Fort Lewis prior to returning to the Presidio and his assignment with "E" Company.

Army Holds First Test Of New Division Setup

An assault force of 1,800 paratroopers of the 187th Abn. Inf. Combat Gp. of the 101st Abn. Div. from Ft. Campbell, Ky., took part in a tactical exercise dubbed Operation Market II.

About a million pounds of equipment—including howitzers and trucks—was brought in by parachute and assault aircraft in the first hour of the four-day exercise.

The exercise was planned as a test of the Army's concept of a smaller, more flexible division with superior firepower and rapid maneuverability.

Pentana is a word coined to indicate the structure (pentagonal, or five-sided) and mission (atomic and non-atomic capability) of the new unit.

In contrast to the traditional, three-regiment division, the Pentana division consists of five smaller, but heavily armed combat groups.

Under the Pentana plan, the infantry division has about 13,700 men, a reduction of 3,700, and the airborne division has some 11,500, a cut of 5,600.

Changes in the armored division are minor, but armored units in the infantry division are centralized in one battalion, which will serve a "divarmor" function, similar to divarty.

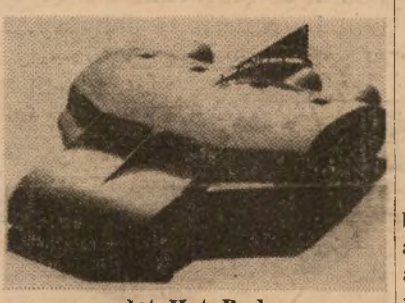
New Reps Named

To increase participation in the Incentives Awards Program, one individual from each major organizational segment of Post headquarters will be named Liaison Representative of the Local Incentive Awards Committee, according to Post memorandum number 10.

Where a section chief or commanding officer has been designated as Management Improvement Officer, he will also assume the responsibility of Liaison Representative, the memorandum adds.

Commissary Revamped Will Close On Monday

The Army Commissary Store will be closed Monday, 21 January, to complete the renovation work in the west end of the building which has been in process for the past two weeks.



A new check out location removed from the main store area will be the main result of the construction work. Removing the check out area from the main store will allow for the construction of additional shelving and the widening of aisles. In addition, rearrangement of present shelving will permit a smoother flow of traffic.

A new ramp is being constructed at the west end of the commissary. This will enable patrons to wheel their groceries directly to the parking lot from the check out stand.

Fifty new parking lot carts have been ordered for this purpose. An area in the parking lot will be set aside where the carts may be left after unloading.

This new system will not eliminate the present facilities for picking up groceries from the bins on the ramp.

Four-Jet Hot Rod Now Used in Tests On Carrier Gear

Jet Hot Rod

Wilmington, Del. (AFPS)—A jet-powered car, painted bright red, is currently racing at speeds of more than 200 miles a hour in testing aircraft arresting gear.

The All American Engineering Co. is using the car, powered by four jet engines, to test the strength of gear built to stop high speed jet aircraft on landing.

The car can attain the speed of a landing jet plane and at the same time push a load comparable to the weight of a twin-engine bomber, a company statement said.

DA Asks Sound Handling For EM Science Personnel

Troop commanders are urged to employ "sound, imaginative management techniques" where dealing with the Army's enlisted scientific and professional personnel, by DA circular 616-3, published 11 December 1956.

The directive pointed to the decreasing input of scientific and professional personnel and called for maximum utilization of their services.

"While it is not intended that enlisted scientific and professional personnel be exempted from their equitable share of nontechnical duties such as kitchen police, interior guard, barracks orderly, and charge of quarters," the circular emphasized that "assignments to such details be so scheduled as to insure the least possible interruption of their scientific and professional duties."

Commanders were further called upon to thoroughly review their manning tables making certain "that the spaces designated by a scientific and professional MOS are appropriate for such personnel."

Where positions do not warrant the assignment of scientific and professional personnel, the appropriate manning tables are to be changed and requests for scientific and professional personnel are to cease.

Army Commander Will Inaugurate New AUSA Unit

Top Names Will Show Army How

The Presidio's long awaited Arts and Crafts shop — two years in the planning—formally opens Sunday, Bldg. 122, 2000 hours, making available to Army personnel one of the most complete craft centers available to Army personnel anywhere.

"We're set up for almost every craft imaginable," reported Bill Zacha, Post Craft Director. "But if there's something you want, and we don't have it, we'll get it!" he promised.

Shops in the new craft center include a woodworking shop, a room devoted to the arts, a room devoted to the crafts, a photographic laboratory and a store for dispensing expendable craft materials.

"The woodworking shop has," according to Zacha, "every available type of woodworking equipment." This list includes an arbor saw, table saws, a band saw, 3 scroll saws, a belt and disc sander combination, grinders, polishers, planers and a lathe.

"We're set up to build anything from a cigarette box to a boat," said the Craft Director.

The main floor will also have an area set aside where welding equipment will be available for everything from auto repair to modern sculpture. The tool shop in the main floor will have all varieties of hand tools which may be checked out.

The dark room has two main compartments, a negative processing room and a print room. There is complete equipment for roll and sheet film processing including negative developing, washing and fixing, enlarging and contact printing. A 35 mm film loader will be available for those wishing to use bulk film loads.

A camera club may be organized around the dark room facilities if enough interest is exhibited, said Zacha. Those interested in this project are urged to leave their names and suggestions with the dark room attendants in the coming week.

Besides the dark room the second floor also contains the art shop, the craft shop and the store.

The room devoted to the arts will have the facilities for painting in all media, sculpture and ceramics. There will be three potter's wheels and a six cubic foot ceramics kiln in this room in addition to the modeling stand. There is already a still life painting class meeting in this room and plans have been made for a life drawing class with live models.

The crafts room will have facilities for all general crafts such as weaving, enameling, leather work, block printing, wood carving, bookbinding and graphics such as silk screen and wood block printing. Equipment in this room includes two 40-inch looms and an enamel kiln. There is a hand printing press and all the minor tools for general crafts.

In the near future Zacha expects to install a lapidary and jewelry work shop.

The store will carry such reimbursable supplies as craft kits, lumber, tile, leather, plastic, clay, paint, paper, canvas, and other expendable art supplies.

During the shop's opening week, a Pakistani art and craft dislay will be exhibited in the main upstairs hall. This will be the first of a series of international art and craft displays to be exhibited in the coming months. Also on display for the opening week will be a weaving exhibit submitted by the San Francisco Weaver's Group.

The new Presidio Arts and Crafts Shop is the fruit of two years' work and planning by Post Special Services. The plans were completed last summer and renovation of the old Presidio gymnasium, Bldg. 122, started shortly thereafter. Cost of the renovation is estimated at $13,800. The building now contains approximately $20,000 of craft equipment, according to Zacha.

Pottery Demonstration by Marin County's Louis Ferrario, one of the area's leading pottery and ceramics artists, will take place Monday night at the new Presidio Arts and Crafts Shop. This demonstration, which starts at 1930 hours, is but the first of five craft displays to be held, one each night, during the coming week. Welded sculpture, enamels on copper, building with wood and bookbinding are the other crafts to be demonstrated.

Experts Will Display Crafts At New Center

Graphic displays of art and craft in action will be available for Presidio personnel during the coming week when five of the Bay Area's leading artists—one each night—will visit the new Presidio Arts and Crafts Shop to demonstrate their particular talent.

Each demonstration will begin at 1930 hours. Welding sculpture, pottery making, binding books, enameling on copper and building with wood are the craft techniques to be demonstrated.

The potter's wheel will spin Monday night, 21 January, when Louis Ferrario, one of Marin County's leading artists, shows his audience the fine points of this craft. Ferrario, who is also skilled in the art of ceramics, has exhibited his work at the De Young Museum, City of Paris, Sacramento and Pamona state fairs and the San Francisco Art Festival.

When Robert Bruckman visits the Presidio on Tuesday night, he will be motivated by a desire to preserve the dying art of bookbinding. He is rebelling against the "nonsense notion that books must be bound in Europe." This craft, which he says "may be an art," has a definite practical application, too. It provides a means for persons to preserve important, loose papers they have lying around.

When Bruckman demonstrates the 17 basic steps in bookbinding, he will be using Presidio craft equipment that is available to any soldier or dependent. He will also have fine examples of his work to display.

John Lynch, past president of the Marin Society of Artists, will demonstrate his skill in wood working on Wednesday evening. During the opening week of the Presidio Arts and Crafts shop, part of Lynch's work will be displayed.

This artist, who did graduate work at San Miguel Allen deMexico and Instituto Politecnico in Mexico City after graduating from Bradley University with a B.F.A. in 1952, left school at the age of 14 for full-time employment. He returned to school after World War II.

The building with wood demonstration, which is scheduled for Thursday, will feature John Livingston Ihle, instructor of Art at San Francisco State College. Ihle's wood engravings and prints have been exhibited nation-wide at more than 20 exhibitions. Presently, his work is represented at the Library of Congress, Brooklyn Museum, New York Public Library, Philadelphia Print Club and the Oakland Public Library.

Without a cutting torch and welding equipment it would be impossible for Harry Crotty of the College of Marin to demonstrate his specialty techniques in welded sculpture Friday night. This artist, whose work is well represented in private collections all over the country, also specializes in magnesite sculpture.

Bill Zacha, Post Craft Director, points out that Presidio personnel will have equipment and material available to them for trying any of the craft projects demonstrated in the coming week.

In the sixty-nine chapters, each written by an author preeminent in his field, you will find practical instruction in the writing of fiction, non-fiction, verse, radio-drama, plays, juvenile, etc. This book offers assistance in choosing what to write about, how to write it, and where to sell the completed manuscript. It is packed with valuable suggestions to help all writers create publishable material.

New Film Hits HardAtEnemy Propaganda

Washington (ANS)—A new hard-hitting Army film named "Defense Against Enemy Propaganda," which supports the Code of Conduct and other Troop Information programs, has been approved by DA for general world-wide release in the immediate future.

The 28-minute film setting is in an exhibit room containing examples of enemy propaganda media. In showing the various methods an enemy disseminates propaganda, the film creates an awareness in the soldier of the many ways a hostile nation may attempt to influence him.

Using both stock footage and original shots the film shows the use of enemy (i.e. Communist) propaganda during war and in peacetime situations. Some of the footage points out that the best defense is the knowledge of the truth, and that our country can never taste defeat as long as we act like Americans, remember, and observe the soldier's Code of Conduct.

According to the film, America is founded on democratic ideals and truth. Our best defense against enemy propaganda is to recognize it for what it is—lies and distortions with little or no basis in fact.

The film, which also may be used to support advanced individual training instruction, has been designated as Army Information Film (AFI) No. 1.

New Auto Craft Shop Popular With Troops

By furnishing the tools by which they can "do it themselves," the Presidio Auto Craft Shop, open since September, has provided Army personnel with the opportunity to save dollars and learn auto mechanics all in one operation.

Special equipment is available at the shop for body repair work and engine tuneups. And all kinds of general tools can be checked out for general repair work on motors, brakes and other auto areas.

Directors of the shop, Sgt. Herman Racinowski and Sp3 John Bohl, are trained mechanics and can answer most of the questions that come up on the fine points of auto work. Sgt. Racinowski is a former Military Police motor sergeant. Before entering the Army Sp3 Bohl had his own repair shop for two years, and before that he worked for Chrysler Corporation.

The shop, which has stalls for nine cars, has been running at near capacity since it opened. Shop hours are 1800 to 2200 on weekdays (closed on Tuesday) and 1300 to 1700 on Saturday and Sunday. All Presidio Army personnel are welcome.

Equipment for body work includes a welding unit, hammers and dollies, body jacks and a paint sprayer. At least one man, Sp3 Eugene Neugent, 163 MP Company, has painted his whole car.

For engine tuneup the shop provides a spark plug cleaner, compression gauge, timing lights and vacuum gauge. There is a drain pan for oil changing and a hand grease gun for lube jobs.

"We've got the tools to do most of the jobs on most of the cars," according to Sp3 Bohl. He points out that the shop does not have all the special tools required on some of the later model cars.

But some of the men have tackled major repair jobs, Sp3 Bohl reports. Pfc. Ronald McCracken, E Company, USA Garrison, overhauled a Buick Dynaflow, and Sp3 Frank Puzzo, 163d, replaced a clutch.

Local Military Union

Pfc. Carolyn M. Greene, one of a pair of identical twins assigned to the Presidio, became the recent bride of Sp/3 Dorman H. Jacobsen of the Headquarters Detachment, Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command. The bride's twin, Pfc. Carole R. Greene, was married in mid-summer to Jim Hazzard, formerly a servieeman assigned to the Sixth Army Honor Guard.

A fatal fire in their apartment building, in which the handyman is killed, confirms the mother's fears of the child's guilt. A dramatic climax provides a shocking ending to the plot. Southern Cal Foes Fail To Stall Locals

Presidio's rampaging Toreros returned from their Southern California jaunt with four more victories under their belts to run their string of wins to 17 against no defeats this season.

Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Naval Training Center, San Diego, Pasadena Junior College, Pasadena, and El Camino Junior College all had an opportunity to halt the winning ways of the local quint but failed to muster the necessary buckets.

Offering more competition than anyone the Presidio has encountered this season the Marines gave the Toreros something to play for when they overhauled a 13-point lead that existed with 10 minutes to go in the game. The Marine quint held on to their one-point margin for the remainder of the game, only to see their win go out the window when Carroll Williams sank a close-in basket with one second remaining and give the game to the Toreros 64-63.

Williams collected 17 points, besides the bucket that saved the day for the locals, to take high score honors. Griggas of the Marine quint was top scorer of the night with 29 points.

Leading the scoring on the southern junket were Jim Cummings, former All-Southern selection from Vanderbilt College, with 76 points, and Carrol Williams, San Jose State's, All-CBA selection three years running, with 87 tallies.

The locals scuttled the Navy quint, 84-70. The sailors picked up the same number of counters in the second half as the Toreros, 44, but they had failed to keep pace in the first half and that was the difference in the game's outcome.

Williams again grabbed high point honors with 17, followed by Jim Cummings with 16, Norm Ellenberger with 13, Tony Psaltis with 11, and John Blackwell with 10.

Next the Toreros took on the collegiates of Pasadena Junior College. Showing no mercy, they trounced them, 85-67. The college quint managed to stay in sight of the local five in the first quarter with the score reading 17-14.

When the first half ended the Pasadena cagers had slipped to a 15-point deficit with the score reading 46-31. They could manage only 10 markers in the third stanza while the Toreros were picking up 20 to extend their lead to 66-41.

Williams paced the local five again, this time with 28 points, to make it his biggest night of the trip. Cummings was a short distance behind him with 20 counters and Reynoir came up with an additional 13 for the local scoreboard.

El Camino was the fourth and final victim of the road trip. El Camino Junior College offered little to slow the Torero juggernaut. The encounter ended with the locals on the topside of an 89-40 score.

This time Jim Cummings took the honors for high score with 24 points. Williams was not laying down on the job. He picked up 23 points at the same time Cummings was assaulting the opposition baskets.

Tough Marines Will Test Undefeated Locals

Scratch Two More— A futile effort is made by a Letterman lass to block the shot, already in the air, from the fingertips of the hard-charging WAC guard.

Local Female Quintet Fails To Gain Top Spot in League

Winning one, dropping one, the local ladies of the court are holding down second spot in the Northern California Armed Forces Women's Basketball League.

Wednesday night the WAC hoopsters took a 59-32 decision from the LAH quintet with little difficulty. Earlier in the week the locals lost a hard-fought battle to the women of Mather AFB, 54-51.

Presidio's WACs had no cause for concern in their conquest of LAH. They took a 13-6 lead at the end of the first quarter and lengthened it to 22-9 by intermission time. Georgia Kelly was the backbone of the local scoring with 35 tallies.

Returning from the half-time the locals continued to romp away from their opposition. They carried their lead to a 24-point margin by the end of the third quarter and an even greater deficit existed when the final buzzer sounded with the score standing at 59-32.

In the earlier game between the WACs and WAFs, the out-of-towners called the tune and the Presidio quintet did their best to keep up. They managed to tie the score, 37-37, at the end of the third quarter but couldn't quite hold the pace set by the lady airmen. The final score was 54-51.

Florian Vieira and Georgia Kelly were the mainsprings of the WAC quintet's scoring efforts with a respective tally of 26 and 23.

Journeys North To Invitational Meet

Presidio's lady hoopsters journey to Sacramento to participate in an invitational tournament to be held at Mather AFB, Saturday and Sunday, 13-14 Jan.

Teams from Offut AFB, Omaha, Nebraska, McCord AFB, Seattle, Washington, and Mather AFB will furnish the opposition for the locals.

Ace— Pvt. Alex Sutton and Sp3 John Edgar check the first hole, to make sure they are seeing correctly, at the Pitch and Putt course where Sutton fired a hole-in-one.

Young Pro Fires Ace On 2nd Go At Green

"Where did it go?" Alex Sutton, CMD, and his partner had just teed off on the first hole of the Presidio Pitch and Putt course. John Edgar wasn't wearing his glasses and, being handicapped by near-sightedness, he wasn't sure that he hadn't lost sight of the ball.

The ball was lost from sight alright—it had just rolled into the number one cup of the pitch and putt course. Sutton's hole-in-one was the first he has shot in his six years of golf.

Sutton, only 21, was traveling the pro circuit when he was called into service five months ago. Although he had been on the circuit only six months he was managing to pay his own way and was not being sponsored as a number of the pros are.

Completing one semester at Palomar Junior College, Sutton decided to turn to the links as a livelihood. As a linkster he has won the Los Angeles County Tournament and County Men's Tournament, Pomona Country Club, in 1955.

Trying to find the time to practice his sport is the linkster's biggest problem right now. Every afternoon after duty hours you will find him on the pitch and putt course until it is too dark to play any longer. "I try to play every weekend and get in about 30 minutes of play in the afternoons during the week," said Sutton. "You have to keep practicing."

Firing his ace on his second time around the pitch and putt course, Sutton wound up the nine hole trip with a card of 26. The first time he went the rounds, he fired a 27.

At present, Sutton is looking forward to the Sixth Army Golf Tourney which comes up 5-9 August.

Face MCRD Five On Home Ground

Pfc. Perry B. Wolfe
Star Presidian Sports Writer

A rugged Marine Corps Recruit Depot quintet will be out to upset a "lucky" Presidio five and avenge a recent one-point loss when they tangle with the undefeated Toreros on the LAH Gym hardwood tomorrow night at 2000 hours.

Boasting a roster replete with former top college stars, the Leathernecks are considered one of the nation's toughest service teams and are top favorites in their own league.

This will be local fans first chance to see the Toreros in action against a really top flight five. The local quintet holds a 64-63 home court victory over the Marines.

When the Toreros left the court Wednesday night, the baskets were smoldering and the Camp Pendleton Marines were wandering around trying to discover what had hit them.

Coach Hal Fischer's crew had been told that the Marine quint could offer some stiff competition. Working on that assumption, the Toreros were prepared mentally and physically for the encounter. The results of the local quint's preparation left the Marines a little dazed.

The half time score read 57-31. The worst of the storm was yet to descend upon the Marines. As the game progressed, the local quint continued to pelt the basket. Playing a game of catch-up, the visitors never stopped trying, they were simply outmanned.

Five of the Toreros swished the nets in double figures. Leading the attack were Jim Cummings and Carroll Williams with 20 tallies apiece. Ron Reynoir, Norm Ellenburger, and Hubie Brown all hit for 15 points.

Free tossess accounted for 41 of the Presidio's markers, while the Marines picked up 30 points on charity tosses.

Crash Survivor's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Glenn, reassure each other after a Wednesday morning visit with their son, Sp3 Marvin Glenn. The Glenns arrived from Bakersfield early Wednesday morning. Specialist Glenn was in a state of shock and had had a ruptured spleen removed. The Glenns went home Wednesday afternoon to be with their two youngest sons and hoped to be able to return to Letterman Army Hospital this weekend.

Crash Survivor's Parents Visit Him At Letterman

Although Specialist Glenn had had a ruptured spleen removed and was still in a state of shock, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Glenn were able to see him a few times Wednesday morning.

"Why don't you go out on the town tonight?" the specialist murmured to his mother from his hospital bed. He is motor sergeant with Battery D, 9th AAA Missile Battalion, Angel Island, and works in the Angel Island PX in off-duty hours.

Due to be separated May 18, Specialist Glenn was a mechanic before entering the Army. He took basic training at Fort Ord and was stationed at Fort Baker for a few months before his assignment to Angel Island.

The 21-year-old specialist, who has two younger brothers, was last home on Thanksgiving. He had been hoping to get a pass to go to Bakersfield this weekend.

Born and reared in Kansas, Specialist Glenn moved to Bakersfield with his family when he was a high school senior. They arrived in Bakersfield in the midst of an earthquake.

Mr. Glenn, a plumber, described his son as "level-headed and not afraid of anything."

The Glenns returned to Bakersfield Wednesday afternoon to be with their other boys. They hope to make another trip to Letterman this weekend.

Don't Delay

Individuals running into delay in obtaining documents required for RA office integration applications should submit applications with whatever documents are available by 31 January, according to DA Circular 601-26.

A list of the missing documents should accompany the application. Deadline for submitting the documents is 12 March. The applications will be held at major command headquarters until the missing documents are received.

POW Ed Program Set

A new "punch-packed" educational program, linked to the fighting soldier's code, is being tested by the Defense Department, to simplify knowledge of the principles of democracy in the Armed Forces.

The program is a series of seven 15-minute color film strips contrasting the free way of life with that of Communism. It backs the Code of Conduct, which was born as a result of the experiences of captured U. S. servicemen during the Korean War.

AG, Engineers Top Army Awards Program Locally

Suggestion and performance awards totaling $17,739 were presented to Presidio civilian and military personnel during 1956, according to Mrs. Elizabeth Giglio, Incentive Awards Committee secretary.

Ninety-two civilian and 10 military suggestions were adopted. Fifty-one sustained superior performance recommendations were approved. An estimated $74,792 was saved by the adopted suggestions.

The Sixth U. S. Army Adjutant General Section lead in participation by submitting 53 civilian and three military suggestions. The Engineer Section, U. S. Army, came in second with 43 civilian and one military suggestion. Post Engineer Section was third with 39 entrants and was closely followed by Post Signal Section with 35 submitted suggestions.

Col. Thomas S. Bienvenue, Post Comptroller, is Incentive Awards Committee chairman.

Tax Notices Due Troops, Civilians Late This Month

Withholding tax statements will be distributed to military and civilian personnel the end of this month.

The military will receive their W-2's on 31 January. Personnel Officers will handle the officers' statements and Class A Agent Finance Officers will pass out the forms to enlisted personnel.

Civilians working for Headquarters, Sixth U. S. Army, and Headquarters, USA Military District, Calif., will be given their W-2's with their 28 Jan. time cards. Post civilian employees will receive the statements with 29 Jan. checks.

Crash Scene of the commercial helicopter which crashed Tuesday in San Francisco Bay killing the pilot and injuring a Presidio soldier is pointed out by William Grossman, the helicopter pilot who rescued the soldier survivor. Viewing the scene from Crissy Field are, from the left, Grossman, Sfc. Robert J. Mabee, helicopter traffic control director; Lt. Col. J. J. Speciale, Post Transportation Officer, and James S. Ricklefs, president of Rick Helicopters, Inc.

Injured Soldier Improving; Passenger Haul Suspended

Pilot of the helicopter, Noble Stark, who was killed when the aircraft crashed into San Francisco Bay near Fort Baker, flew the pioneer passenger flight from the Presidio parade ground on 5 December when the Army became the first military in the Bay Area to utilize this commercial air taxi service.

Tuesday's crash occurred during a second experimental project in which the Army is utilizing commercial helicopter service. On 7 January the Army started a 30-day period of using civilian helicopters to transport cargo and passengers between Crissy Field, Fort Baker and Angel Island.

During the seven working days preceding the crash, commercial helicopters transported approximately 374 passengers, and 11,750 pounds of cargo between these three points. Three hundred flights were made with an average time of five minutes per flight.

Helicopters make the trips approximately eight times faster than the Army's T-boats or LCMs. Completed figured for the trial period are expected to show considerable saving in both time and money over the Army's present water transportation.

Passenger service has been temporarily suspended by the DPC, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, until the cause of the crash has been determined. Cargo flights will continue on a regular basis.

Hospital Heads, Doctors Plan Conference Here

More than 20 hospital commanders and post surgeons from the Sixth Army area will hold a conference here 24-25 January. Colonel Henry W. Daine, Sixth U. S. Army Surgeon, will host the meeting.

Sixth Army hosptials not under the direct command of the Surgeon General, the Bay Area Army Terminal at Fort Mason and the Army Terminal at Seattle, Wash., will send representatives. Meetings will be held in the Letterman Army Hospital conference room.

Topics will be introduced by local hospital authorities. Discussion periods will follow introduction of the topics.

Colonel Daine will speak on the recent Conference of Army Surgeons held in Washington, D. C., and the Medical Care Bill.

Command Management System, program and funding and reports and reporting will be discussed by the Comptroller. AAA support, mobilization planning, reserve training and hospital operations will be introduced by a representative of the Operations Branch.

Personnel representatives will discuss the personnel situation and procurement activities. Preventive Medicine staff members will introduce Epidemology and disease control, environmental hygiene and occupational health services.

Physical examinations, surgical practices and consultant activities will be discussed by Professional Services. The Supply Division will speak on stock control, financial inventory accounting and stock funding, and equipment modernization. Army Nurses Corps and Veterinary Corps activities will also be discussed.

New Policy Sets Basic Plus For Reserve Units

Army Reserve and Army National Guard members who have not completed an active duty enlistment will receive a minimum six-month active duty training, according to an order issued by Secretary of the Army Wilbur M. Brucker.

The new policy becomes effective 1 April and does not effect those enrolled in Army Reserve Components before that date.

In addition, National Guard and Reserve members must serve four and one-half years before being transferred to the Stand-by Reserve for an additional three years. This cuts the previous pre-Stand-by Reserve obligation.

The six-month training provision was recommended to the Secretary of the Army by General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff. In announcing the change, Secretary Brucker stated that the Army has made much progress in improvement of the Reserve Force under the Reserve Forces Act of 1955, and that these measures are part of a continuing program to further improve their effectiveness.

Secretary Brucker also announced that enlistees who complete normal two-year training periods can volunteer for an Army National Guard unit to fulfill the remaining reserve obligation. Enlistees will have 60 days after separation to join a National Guard unit before the Army assigns them to a Reserve unit.

This is the breakdown for Army during the quarter: E-7, 643; E-6, 2,287; E-5, 13,113: and E-4, 40,168.

The Army said promotions will not be made to pay grades E-5, E-6 and E-7 during the quarter in the following MOS's: 073, 411, 542, 553, 631, 714, 715, 762, 763, 765, 942, 943 and 951.

In addition, no appointments will be made in the following grades and MOS's: To E-7: 524, 635, 716, 717, 764, 768, 952. To E-6: 321, 518, 621, 635, 643, 716, 764, 912, 952. To E-5: 321, 518, 524, 621, 643, 768.

The Army adopted the quarterly promotion system last November with the first quotas covering the last two months of 1956.

Another Army First

The War Department accepted its first airplane in December, 1909. The final test flight was made at Fort Myer, Va., by Orville Wright and Lt. B. D. Fulois. The plane was built to military specifications by the Wright Brothers for $25,000.

ARMY POWER—KEY TO PEACE

Sixth U.S. Army Activated Fourteen Years Ago

This was the giant step, the avenging of Bataan and Corregidor, the liberation of a people who had placed their trust in us. It was that, and the beginning of a base so mighty its shadow would lay across the map of Japan.... The date was 9 January 1945.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Ceremony, Messages To Highlight Birthday

The Sixth U.S. Army, mature and powerful guardian of America's eight-state western frontier, today marks the 14th anniversary since its activation at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, in 1943.

At the Presidio this event will be commemorated at 1600 hours with a parade to which the public is invited. Congratulatory messages will be read and Major General Riley F. Ennis, Deputy Commanding General of Sixth U.S. Army, will review the maching troops.

This peacetime defense force, now occupied with numerous non-combat activities ranging from reserve training to military research, has come far since those hot months of 1943 when, on the request of General Douglas MacArthur, then Commander-in-Chief, Southwest Pacific, it was activated to spearhead his return to the Philippines.

General Krueger

This was the beginning of a series of island hopping actions that culminated with the liberation of the Philippines and the total defeat of Japanese forces in the Pacific.

The bitter battles on Leyte, Mindoro and Luzon Islands in the Philippines, the capture of the western end of New Britain, seizure of the Admiralty Islands Group, the battle of Cape Gloucester, the Hollandia-Aitape operation, the seizure of Biak Island and the final New Guinea landings are but a few of the 15 amphibious operations which included 22 major assault landings.

General Stillwell

At one time during Sixth U.S. Army action in the Pacific, General Krueger commanded 203,608 officers and men from the following units: six Army corps, one Marine amphibious corps, 18 Army divisions, four Marine divisions, one Army airborne division, three Army engineer special brigades, five antiaircraft artillery brigades, three separate regimental combat teams, one armored group and three engineer construction brigades.

The Sixth U.S. Army's victory over the enemy in the Philippines did not earn it a rest. Instead it relinquished control of the Islands to the Eighth U.S. Army and immediately went into training for "Operation Olympic"—the invasion of the Japanese home islands.

But a few short weeks before the scheduled invasion the atomic bomb forced the Japanese into an unconditional surrender. Instead of attacking Japan, the Sixth U.S. Army became the first American occupation force to land on the islands.

After performing the transitional phases of the occupation under General MacArthur for four months, the Sixth U.S. Army was inactivated on 28 January, 1946, and General Krueger and the members of his staff returned to the United States.

General Wyman

Then on 1 March, 1946, the Sixth U.S. Army was reactivated at the Presidio of San Francisco under the command of another veteran of the Pacific campaign, General Joseph W. Stillwell.

Since General Stillwell's death in October, 1946, Sixth U.S. Army commanders have been General Mark W. Clark, General Albert C. Wedemeyer, Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, whose 11th Airborne Division was part of the wartime Sixth U.S. Army, General Willard G. Wyman, and its present commander, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young.

As the western component of the Continental Defense Command the Sixth U.S. Army today is vitally concerned with providing defense facilities for the eight western states. From the Nike batteries that guard the skies to the massive armed strength of the 4th and 5th divisions, Sixth U.S. Army is ever alert fulfillling its defense mission.

But this modern army is also actively employed in numerous peacetime activities. Fine Army hospitals care for military personnel, dependents and veterans. Engineer units are involved in mapping projects both in the Army area and as far away as Iran and the Philippines.

General Young

Medical research is carried out in the Army hospitals and research laboratories. Military research is going on in research centers and testing grounds.

And finally, Sixth U.S. Army stands alert and ready to make its contribution to the eight-state community around it. From the liberal money contributions of the charity drives to the technical contributions of demolition experts called to handle "bomb scares," Sixth U.S. Army personnel are continually involved in some phase of community service. When muscle is needed, such as the Yuba City flood disaster, the Army is able to perform especially vital and dramatic services.

Ord, Lewis Are Sixth's MajorTrainingCommands

New soldiers are made from green rookies and seasoned soldiers are maintained in peak condition at Sixth Army's two infantry centers, Fort Lewis, Washington and Fort Ord, California.

These installations — the two largest in Sixth Army — each are currently operating with a strength of between 25,000 and 30,000 personnel. The largest troop concentration at Fort Ord is the 5th Division and at Fort Lewis the 4th Division.

Last September, Fort Ord was selected as the location for the new Combat Development and Experimentation Center which will devise and test new Army organization possibilities including the "Pentomic" concept. While CDEC is still in its preliminary stages, it is expected to become increasingly important.

Fort Ord's 28,600-acre reservation consisting primarily of rolling and rugged hills is the location of Sixth Army's most extensive basic training operations. Just recently a packet of several thousand freshly trained troops were shipped — in the first experiment of its kind — from Monterey Bay directly to Germany via the Panama Canal.

This training center, located approximately 115 miles south of San Francisco, is one of seven centers in the United States where the 18-year-old RFA trainees undergo the concentrated six-month course. In March, 1956, the first RFA trainees in the nation completed their half-year course at Fort Ord.

More than two dozen pale green cement barracks, each large enough to house an infantry company, have been erected at Fort Ord providing it with some of the most modern Army housing facilities in the nation. A master plan calls for eventually replacing all wooden structures at Fort Ord with permanent buildings.

Fort Lewis, home of the battle-ready 4th Infantry Division, has a primary mission of providing training facilities which will keep this combat division in top shape, ready for any emergency. Units of Alaska's 2nd Division are also Stationed at Fort Lewis.

Sometimes known as Washington's fourth largest city, Fort Lewis is a mammoth military concentration located between Tacoma and Olympia, Washington on Highway 99. Fort Lewis, by itself, covers an area of more than 87,000 acres. Its sub-post, Yakima Firing Center, extends over another 260,000 acres in eastern Washington.

Sixth Army's two largest military centers have the additional mission of providing support for reserve summer training.

CG's Message

Fourteen years ago, on the 25th of January, 1943, and in a time of deepest national peril, the Sixth United States Army became part of the fighting forces of the United States and found a permanent place in our nation's history.

From the beginning, it wrote its own great pages of that history: In combat, only 90 days after activation; and then, triumphantly, across 2,500 miles of ocean and jungle to the climax of victory in the Japanese homeland.

Today, the Sixth United States Army guards the Pacific shore and the reaches of the eight westernmost States of the Union. Its 14th year finds Sixth Army combat-trained and ready to do its share if called on, so that our country may continue secure and free.

But Sixth Army is more than an entity in the defenses of the United States. It is men and women, military and civilian alike, doing their jobs devotedly and without acclaim, who are Sixth Army's main strength and its spirit.

I am proud to command such men and women, and happy to express my thanks for what you have done and will continue to do during your Sixth Army tenure.

My heartiest congratulations to you all on this day, your anniversary.

ROBERT N. YOUNG
Lieutenant General, USA
Commanding

Best Barracks Award of the 30th Engineer Group is presented by Col. Lawrence R. St. John, Commander, to Capt. John E. Fleming, of the winning 549th Engineer Company. The 549th spent a month in the field on the Clear Lake Survey Project and participated in the Annual Training Exercises last month.

EM To Get MOS, Leadership Tests

A spokesman for Sixth Army AG Personnel indicated this week that the headquarters is in receipt of preliminary information regarding the establishment of a test system to better evaluate the enlisted man's duty qualifications, his knowledge, technical skill and leadership qualities as they affect over-all performance.

Later Department of the Army directives will outline for the Command where, when and how the MOS proficiency and leadership tests will be administered. Military technical services will also outline the Adjutant General system of scoring, construction, distribution of the tests in accordance with approved policies.

Chiefly, the MOS and Leadership tests are being prepared and administered to bolster vital phases of the enlisted personnel management program in need of more streamlined methods of coverage.

As far as can be presently determined, the newly-launched Proficiency and Leadership program will be governed by DA, Adjutant General Section, in relation to places, dates and working schedules where the plan will be administered. AG will also provide the guidelines and technical assistance on the content of each test and its particular construction. Scope of coverage and conformity to regulation will also be supervised by AG before the major commanders will be made responsible for test administration in the approved fields.

Within each Command, tests will be administered at the lowest workable area, considering such factors as security, availability of equipment, and convenience to the service.

Methods of scoring and processing the MOS and Leadership tests will be announced in the Star Presidian with later more localized information on the program itself.

DEADLINE IS WEDNESDAY NOON

NCO-Specialist Analysis Due On Post

Discrepancies and injustices in the NCO Specialist Program at the Presidio are being rectified in the near future through establishment of a Board of Officers to determine to which of the two categories the enlisted man or woman rightfully belongs.

It was pointed out by the Post Personnel Section this week that Classification and Assignment Branch has recorded numerous complaints from Post personnel to the effect that the 1955 conversion of their military rank status and designation was not carried out according to existing regulations at that time.

Initial phase of the NCO/Specialist grades adjustment is being launched through a complete combing of all enlisted records on hand at the Post Personnel office this week. Pertinent information regarding the individual job assignment and qualifications at the time of the change-over will be submitted to the special Board with any signed statements by the enlisted man or woman indicating whether or not they consented to the change in specific military title at the time it was administered.

In cases where no signed statement exists on record and there is no indication of a formal preliminary Board hearing to determine the 1955 status of the soldier's category, the specialist will be required to complete an acceptance form or make a request for his return to NCO rank. In turn, such request will be referred to the newly-appointed Classification Board for final decision on proper grade and primary MOS.

Conditions governing the change-over to Specialist or NCO grade include whether the soldier holds a grade in either category which is higher than approved for his Primary MOS. For instance, if an NCO skill level digit is authorized in his or a higher pay grade and he wants to qualify for that skill digit, he will be reclassified and reappointed to NCO status in his current pay grade.

When the skill level digit is not authorized at appropriate MOS pay grade, or should the soldier not wish to be requalified for NCO status, he will be permitted to take a primary MOS test in which he is qualified and in which his pay grade is authorized, such action to be preceded by request for Board action and formal acceptance of his Specialist status.

In cases where the enlisted man or woman is not qualified for any MOS approved for their grade, Post Personnel promises that every effort will be made to retrain them in a skill commensurate with the grade held. If, however, the soldier is found incapable of qualifying for another MOS within reasonable time, he is faced with a reduction in grade in accordance with AR 624-200.

Other conditions listed in the NCO/Specialist analysis include varying degrees of individual skill as indicated by MOS digit, pay grade and the current list of MOSs, whether surplus or understrength on Army-wide basis.

At no time will reclassification action be taken when an individual soldier's primary MOS is listed as understrength on an Army-wide basis.

After the Classification Board meets and the desired change in NCO/Specialist has been approved —or disapproved — a notation to that effect will be entered permanently on his service record. The final decision will preclude any further desire of the enlisted man or woman to secure Board action on his or her NCO/Specialist designation.

More detailed information on the NCO/Specialist Program adjustments may be secured from DA Circular 611-27.

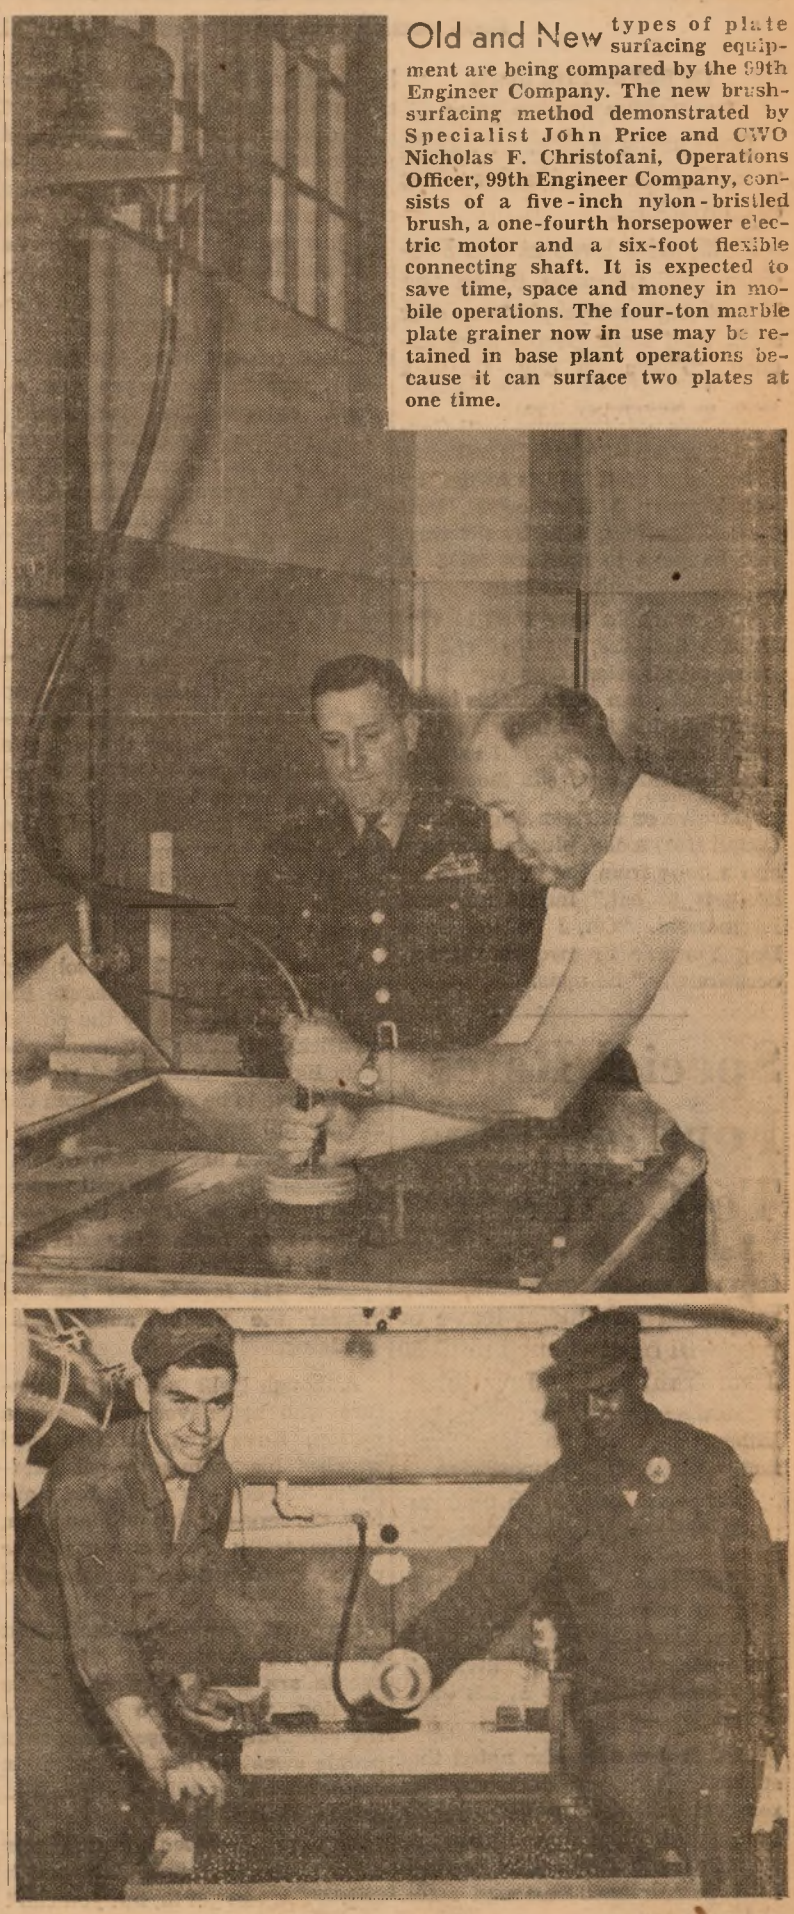
Two Engineer Companies Test Recently Developed Products

Two 30th Engineer Group companies are conducting tests on two new Engineer Research and Development Laboratories products. The 21st Engineer Company (photomappers) and the 99th Engineer Company (reproduction men) are doing the testing.

The Base Reproduction men, directed by Capt. James R. Seufert, are testing new plate-surfacing equipment which could replace the four-ton marble grainer. The new equipment consists of a five-inch nylon-bristled brush, a one-fourth horsepower electric motor and a six-foot flexible connecting shaft.

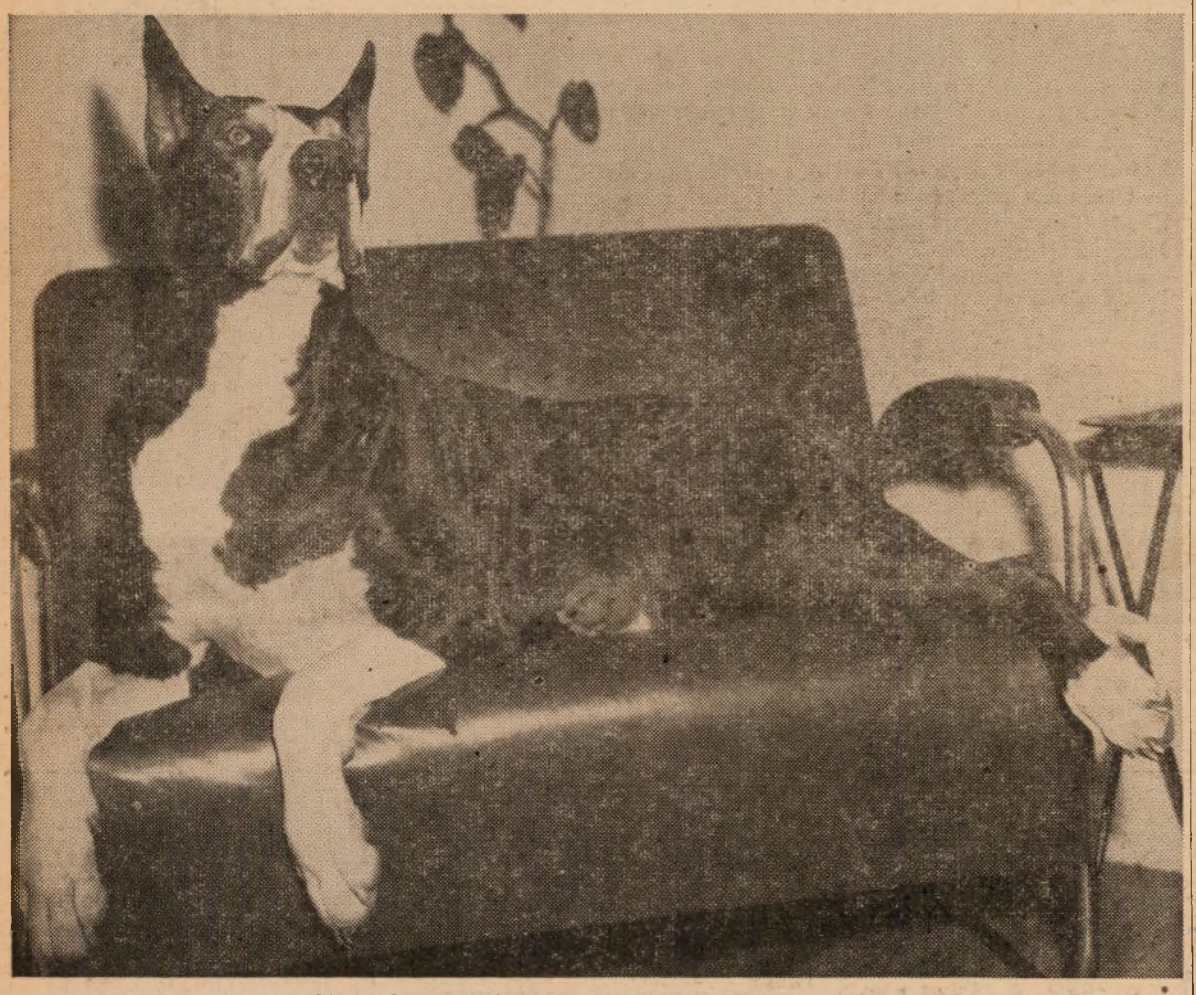
If adopted, the new system could eliminate one reproduction van and a grainer operator, would be easier to carry in combat situations and would save time in resurfacing plates. According to preliminary tests, a plate can be surfaced in ten minutes with the new method; whereas the process now takes 30 to 45 minutes.



Graining, a procedure by which aluminum or zinc plates are given ink and water-receptive surfaces, is necessary in the lithographic process. Although the new process saves time in mobile operations, the present marble grainers may prove best in base plant operations. Two grainers, holding two plates each, can be operated simultaneously at present, but only one plate can be surfaced at a time with the system being tested.

The 21st Engineer Company, commanded by Capt. Milton S. Saunder, is testing Polyethylene terepthalate for use as a stable cartographic base.

Cartographic bases now in use shrink or become distorted in adverse climatic conditions. Laboratory tests show that the new substance complies with all military requirements and is suitable for all but the most extreme climatic conditions.



The sheets must be durable, able to stand up under erasure, translucent and have a smooth, even surface suitable for drafting with pencil or ink before they can replace the currently used vinyl chloride acetate. If the new substance passes the testing process, it is expected to increase the accuracy of detailed maps.

Old and New types of plate surfacing equipment are being compared by the 99th Engineer Company. The new brush-surfacing method demonstrated by Specialist John Price and CWO Nicholas F. Christofani, Operations Officer, 99th Engineer Company, consists of a five-inch nylon-bristled brush, a one-fourth horsepower electric motor and a six-foot flexible connecting shaft. It is expected to save time, space and money in mobile operations. The four-ton marble plate grainer now in use may be retained in base plant operations because it can surface two plates at one time.

Presidio's Most Colossal Canine Is Actually A Most Dainty Eater

Dolfi reclines on private couch. Any objections?

By Sp3 Richard Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

Dolfi stops traffic. . . . Dolfi turns heads. . . . Dolfi evokes exclamations.

Dolfi, who lives at the Presidio just happens to be the biggest dog most people have ever seen. And some people have argued, "That's no dog, that's a horse."

But he's not; this pure bred German Duetsche-Doggen is all dog, 150 pounds of it. He is owned by Sgt. Herman J. Racinowski, Post Special Services, who, by the way, just happens to hold an MOS in dog training and handling.

"But what do they feed him?" is the first thought that enters most minds when they view this pooch who can stand on his hind legs, put his front paws on the shoulders of his 6'1" tall master and look him square in the eye.

"Twelve or thirteen dog biscuits (small size) a day, plus table scraps and a bone from the butcher is all he gets to eat," insists Sergeant Racinowski. "Oh, I do toss in a Dog Yummie or two for dessert occasionally," he adds.

One thing Dolfi's modest diet has done is make him keenly aware of the dinner hour. When Sergeant Racinowski gets home at noon, his pet bounds up to meet him, licks his master's face, and then clamps his jaw (gently) on the sergeant's arm and leads him off to the kitchen cupboard where the dog biscuits (small size) are stored.

Dolfi (named after Adolf Hitler), who is now seven and a half, entered the Racinowski family when he was four. Prior to that he had been owned by a colonel who was transferred to the Far East from his German station. So the colonel left his pet with Sergeant Racinowski, because he knew his pet would find a good home.

Dolfi is a house dog. "But not," the sergeant emphasizes, "a lap dog." Actually he's sort of an in-and-out dog. During the day the door to the house is left ajar and Dolfi has access to a small fenced enclosure in the back yard. The fence isn't high, and Dolfi could just about step over it if he wanted, but he doesn't because he is well trained.

In the house Dolfi is absolutely well mannered. But, because his wagging tail has nearly the power of Micky Mantle's bat, some objects like floor lamps and rickety tables have to be removed from the mighty tail arc.

Dolfi even has his own couch. Occasionally a visitor will make the mistake of sitting on what belongs to Dolfi. The dog is gentle but firm with the erring guest. He inserts his muzzle under the visitor and starts nudging.

Although Dolfi is a gentle creature who has never once hurt a person, Sergeant Racinowski watches his mammoth pet carefully. The dog has only three masters, the sergeant, his wife and son, and generally reserves a complete unconcerned attitude for the rest of humanity.

Sergeant Racinowski admits that he has few uninvited guests. Most people are frankly scared of the big dog. "This is too bad," says the sergeant, "because fear makes people sweat on the back of their hands and a dog will smell this and become unfriendly."

At night, or when the family is away, Dolfi is a first-class watch dog. "You can get in, but you can't get out," says his master recalling the time a friend came over when nobody was home. "Dolfi let him in and was very friendly and glad to see him. But when my friend decided to go, our dog stood between him and the door and wouldn't budge. My friend had to wait several hours until we got home," says the Sergeant.

One day recently the Sergeant and his dog visited Post C & A causing a near panic. Sergeant Racinowski leaves for Europe next month to serve in his dog handling MOS, and he was concerned about transportation for his pet. So he took his dog up to C & A where they could get a first hand look at the problem. If things work out, Dolfi and his master may take a pet ship across the Atlantic.

On the whole, Dolfi likes soldiers and vice-versa. He accompanied his master, then in the 505th MP Bn., when he went on Operation Sagebrush. B Company Commander Capt. Francis Hoskins was especially proud of the big dog. Every time the convoy enroute to Louisiana would stop, Captain Hoskins would call the locals over and say:

"I want you people to take a look at a Mexican Chihuahua grown in California!"

Special Rates For Rail, Bus To Continue

Rail and bus coach round-trip reduced fares for military personnel on official leave or pass will be continued until 30 June (rail) and 31 July (bus), respectively, according to Mrs. Lyn Rubenstein, Chief, Passenger Traffic Section, Post Transportation.

Personnel must be in uniform and traveling at their own expense to take advantage of the furlough rates. The reduced-fare tickets cannot be purchased when traveling at Government expense, except if the individual is taking a side trip at his own expense.

Mrs. Rubenstein also noted that scheduled air coach and first-class reservations and tickets can be procured through Post Transportation, Room 108, Bldg. 220. The airlines do not have furlough rates.

New Requirements For Language School

Changes in the length of active military service required after completion of the Army Language School course have been announced through Change 1-AR 611-82.

Commissioned officers and warrant officers are required to remain on active duty for three years after completing the course. Formerly the requirement was two years for commissioned officers and 15 months for warrant officers. Reserve component officers and warrant officers who cannot meet the three-year requirement can request an extension of active duty service with their applications.

Enlisted personnel must now serve 18 months after completing the course instead of the former 15-month requirement. Enlistments can be extended or the individual can accept discharge and reenlist under AR 601-210.

Additional entrance requirement changes are that personnel with credit for non-English-speaking high schools only must have a standard score of 45 or higher on GED tests 1 and 2, high school level, and that officers selected by DA for language training to qualify for assignment to MAAG, mission or attache duty are not required to attain a raw score of 22 on the Army Language Aptitude Test, ALAT-1.

Tuition Aid Available For Education Courses

Qualified military personnel who plan to attend off-post, non-duty time college classes are eligible for tuition assistance through the Army's General Educational Development Program for Military Personnel.

Up to $7.50 per unit is available. M/Sgt. Eulin L. Kinsey, Ext. 3100 or Bldg. 232, handles tuition arrangements. College program counseling is available through Mrs. Kathryn Mason, Ext. 3189 or Bldg. 232.

Instruction begins at the University of San Francisco, Golden Gate College and the California School of Fine Arts on 11 Feb. San Francisco State College's semester opens 18 Feb. Prospective students should enroll before these dates.

Military personnel who plan to enroll at any of the tuition-free junior colleges in the Bay Area are eligible for counseling at the Presidio Army Education Center.

Overseas USO Clubs Okayed By Sec. Wilson

The USO will operate off-station servicemen's clubs in overseas metropolitan areas, which may become leave and liberty centers for large numbers of military men, according to a memorandum signed by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson.

The agreement with USO president Emil Schram authorizes the organization to set up off-station clubs in the ZI, Panama Canal Zone, Alaska and Guam "as may be deemed necessary."

The Armed Forces are now allowed to supply the USO with limited overseas support such as extension of commissary store and PX privileges, including permission for the clubs to purchase food for resale in snack bars.

Other supplies and services which may be extended include use of the Armed Forces postal service, reimbursable emergency hospitalization and medical care and use of recreational facilities.

Engineer Wives Slate Special Travel Luncheon

Guest speaker at the luncheon will be Mary Gordon, travel advisor for TransWorld Airways. Miss Gordon will demonstrate how one can take a two to six-week vacation in the United States, Europe or Asia, with only one suitcase.

The guest speaker will also discuss wardrobes and the art of dressing to accentuate a good figure or underplay a poor one.

Mrs. John D. Holm is chairman of the luncheon. The Engineer Wives will be hostesses.

Classes, Craft Work To Start Monday

Formal Opening for the new Presidio Arts and Crafts Shop Sunday night was attended by more than 250 persons. Above, Deputy Post Commander Col. Carl E. Lundquist, cuts the symbolic ribbon and opens the new shop for the use of Army personnel and dependents. After a week of craft demonstrations, the shop will be open Monday for work in all crafts.

The new Presidio Arts and Craft Shop—loaded with equipment for all types of arts, crafts, photography and woodworking — will be open for business starting at 1800 hours on Monday night, Bldg. 122.

A special class in ceramics—the first of a series of craft instruction periods—also begins on Monday at 1600 hours. All techniques for working with clay, including the slab, coil, wheel and modeling methods, will be taught.

A life drawing and painting class will be featured on Wednesday night. This class, which will use a live model, will be taught by Bill Zacha, Post Craft Director, and Pete Thomas, a graduate of the Rhode Island School of Design. On Thursday starting at 1400 hours weaving will be taught at the new craft shop. The San Francisco Weavers Assn., who sponsor the class, will furnish both instruction and free wool.

"The classes are free and open to all military personnel and dependents," emphasizes Zacha. Another class now under way, but open to newcomers, is the women's painting class on Tuesday mornings from 0900 to 1200 hours.

The formal opening of the Presidio Arts and Crafts Shop Sunday night was attended by more than 250 people who saw the Deputy Post Commander, Col. Carl E. Lundquist, cut a ribbon to culminate two years of planning and preparation to bring Presidio personnel a fully equipped art and craft shop.

During the past week Presidio residents have had the opportunity to see expert craftsmen in action. The series of demonstrations—one each night—included ceramics, bookbinding, wood working and enameling on copper. Tonight, 1930 hours, the final demonstration will feature Harry Crotty of the College of Marin doing a welded sculpture.

The tentative schedule for the new Presidio Arts and Crafts Shop is as follows: Monday through Friday (Thursday excepted), 1800 to 2200 hours, Saturday and Sunday, 1300 to 1800 hours. The present schedule calls for the shop to be closed on Thursday evening.

Harry (The Horse) Gallatin, now in his ninth year with the New York Knickerbockers of the National Basketball Association, has yet to miss a game. Prior to this season he played in 594 straight. . . . Have you ever tried boxing—with a kangaroo? Pvt. Louis (Buzz) Casazza of Ft. Carson, Colo., has, and he likes it. Matter of fact, he and his sparring mate, Sydney, who comes from Melbourne, will renew their association when Buzz completes his Army stint. They met in San Francisco in 1955 and made the rounds on the West Coast for awhile. . . . Yale coach Jordan Olivar was guest speaker at the annual awards dinner at the San Diego MCRD, Calif.

J., under the Reserve Forces Act. . . . Richie Ashburn, Phillie centerfielder, made 503 putouts in 1956 and in so doing established an all-time major league record which reads: "Most years 400-or-more putouts by an outfielder, seven." . . . Bill Russell, star of the National Collegiate Champion San Francisco Dons, completed a spectacular college career, helped the United States gain the Olympic gold medal for basketball, and then turned professional when he signed with the Boston Celtics, all within 12 months. (AFPS)

Ex Cage Star Back To Coach

A very familiar figure to the basketball fans of the Bay area, O'Neill was a standout of the Presidio's varsity team for two years. Prior to that the 6'4" guard was voted to AAU All-American honors for his playing efforts with the Oakland Bittners, an industrial league team.

O'Neill came to the Oakland team from the University of California where he had served as co-captain of his team and was also selected as All-Pacific Coast Conference guard.

Now as a civilian, O'Neill has returned to the scene of some of his former triumphs as a serviceman.

Diamond Time—

It is not too early to begin thinking of baseball. Players who wish to play for the varsity Torero nine should notify the Post Sports Office now. Hal Fischer, director of the post sports program, made the announcement at this time in order to organize his prospects at as early a date as possible.

The sports office is located in Bldg. 122 and the phone number is Ext. 3968.

Combined Male-Female Tourney Scheduled

February 25-28 is the scheduled date for the combined Sixth Army Central Male Basketball Tournament and the Sixth Army WAC Basketball Tournament. This will be the first time the two tourneys have been held on the same date and at the same place.

Tournament play will be held in the Letterman Army Hospital Gym, and games are scheduled to be played in the morning, afternoon and evening.. Male and female games have been scheduled to be played alternately throughout the day.

Goodwill Tour Of Africa By Olympic Star

San Diego — Olympic hurdler Jack Davis is currently on a two-month State Department tour of African countries.

The 26-year-old Navy lieutenant junior grade, a member of the spiked-shoe set for 11 years before retiring from active track competition, finished second in the 110-meter high hurdles at both the 1952 and 1956 Olympic Games.

Davis, holder of the listed world record of 13.4 seconds for 110-meter hurdles, will stop off at Casablanca, French Morroco; then visit French West Africa, the Belgian Congo, Rhodesia, Ethiopia, and British South Africa. The goodwill junket will end with a visit to Athens, Greece.

The former University of Southern California athlete will conduct coaching clinics and compete in several track exhibitions. He will be separated from active duty soon after his return from the tour.

Rugged Marine Quint Fails In Final Stanza

Believing their own publicity, the rough and ready Marines invaded the Presidio only to discover that the Army can be rougher and readier.

While the referees had a field day blowing their brains out, the Toreros repelled the Leathernecks by a 80-71 score. When the game ended, the referees had sounded off for 41 fouls and numerous traveling offenses.

The referees were not the only ones who were winded when the game ended. The local quintet had the Marines' tongues hanging out trying to keep up with their fast breaks. Not always good for points, the locals' fast breaks did run the Marines down. The Marine mentor was forced to play his reserves during the last few minutes of the game even though the first team was within a few points of the locals. His first team didn't have a deep breath left in them.

Carroll Williams, former San Jose State speedster, staged a one-man dribbling exhibition in the last quarter. The Toreros held a narrow margin and played a stalling game to hold onto their lead. Dribbling circles around the Leathernecks, Williams put on quite a show for the small attendance.

Prior to his bouncing stage show Williams glued his eye on the bucket to hit 15 out of 17 charity tosses. Five shots from the floor ran Williams' total to 25 for the night to top scoring for both teams.

Jim Cummings took control of the backboards for the Toreros throughout most of the night. The 6'8" former Vanderbilt standout managed to slap down numerous shots from opposition fingertips. He also picked up 18 markers while turning in his defensive performance.

Tony Psaltis was the man who hit when the Army needed them. When the locals' offense was lagging and the out-of-town quint seemed likely to overtake them, Psaltis supplied the shot in the arm needed to spark another attack.

Griggas, of the Marine quint, who scored 29 points on his home court a week ago against the Toreros, was held to 9 points.

Intermission time saw the San Diego crew leave the court on the short end of a 43-36 reading. Returning to the tussle the Marines closed to within one point, but could not hold onto their advantage.

The rough and tumble game saw the locals draw 19 fouls and the Marine quint called for 22. Undoubtedly the referees were too breathless to call any more.

Female Marksmen Organized On Post

Much to the pleasure of their instructor, M/Sgt. Wayne K. Steward, the newly organized WAC Rifle Team is doing extremely well for the short time they have been organized.

The ladies team is an outgrowth of the Presidio Gun Club that was organized to compete with the other women's teams in the Sixth Army area. The women practice with small bore weapons, .22 cal. rifles, at the Ft. Scott rifle range.

The eight members that comprise the team now are expected to attract more members within the coming weeks.

Two peach baskets fastened to a gymnasium balcony in the winter of 1891 provided the origin of one of the major sports in the world today and gave the game its name, basketball.

Gun Club Will Hold MonthlyCompetition

Four trophies each month will be awarded to the winners of the latest competition series scheduled by the Presidio Gun Club.

The competitive matches will be for pistol and small bore rifle fire. Each of the classifications will be divided into two groups, the tyro through sharpshooter and expert through masters or open matches.

Matches will be held and judged on the same basis as NRA classifications. Members not holding NRA recognition will be judged by the officers of the club. Matches are open to members of the club only.

Pistol competition will be held on Monday night when the regular meeting is held, for pistol firing and rifle firing on Tuesday nights at their regular meeting time.

A fee of 25 cents will be charged for each night of firing to cover expense of the trophies. Shooters must fire a minimum of twice a month and a maximum of four times per month to qualify for the awards. The winners will be determined by averaging the two highest scores per month of the individual firers.

Monthly winners' names will be engraved on the trophies and the individual whose name appears most often at the end of the year will receive the trophy permanently.

Roll-Off To Pick Keg Reps 6A Bowl Set

Highlight of the bowling season, Post Bowling Tournament "Roll Off" to select six representatives of the Presidio to the Sixth U.S. Army Tournament has been set for 2, 3 February and 9, 10 February.

All male military personnel desiring to enter must submit their name to the Sports Office, Ext. 3968, prior to 1200 hours, 31 January. All expenses will be borne by the individual.

The "Roll Off" will consist of 18 lines total pins. The six top scores will represent the Presidio in the Sixth U.S. Army Tournament. Location of the tourney is not yet definite. The "Roll Off" will be at the Presidio Bowling Alleys, EM Service Club.

All female personnel who wish to participate in the female "Roll Off" must submit their names to the Sports Office prior to 1200 hours, 31 January.

Ring Great Is Recruiter Of Reservists

"Hardest hitter in the annals of boxing," Ring Magazine described former world lightweight champ, Lew Jenkins, now M/Sgt. Jenkins, with over 14 years of military service.

Recently arrived at Ft. MacArthur from Hawaii, Jenkins has been assigned as a recruiter with the Reserve Recruiting Division to tour southern California enlisting men for the new reserve units being formed during the year.

Lew is best remembered for the night in May of 1940 when he took the lightweight title from Lou Ambers at the Garden in New York City.

Not so publicized, but just as notable, is his magnificent record on the combat field. Because of his record as a platoon sergeant in the Korean conflict, Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, his division commander, requested that he return to the United States with him to serve at the Infantry School, Ft. Benning, Georgia.

Awarded the Silver Star for heroic action on Bloody Ridge in 1951, as a Coast Guard coxswain in World War II landing troops at Sicily, Salerno, and Normandy beaches, Lew has fought some tough battles during his tenure of service.

He began his ring career as a carnival fighter taking on all comers, as many as four in one night. At the time Lew weighed in at 126 pounds and never lost a fight.

Advancing to the big time, Lew won the world's lightweight crown when he was only 23. This took place at a time when good fighters were as thick as the cattle from his home state, Texas.

Lew has been in and out of military service many times during his lifetime. "This time I'm going to stay," he said. "I like the Army and it has liked me. I'll stay for 30 years before I retire."

Ft. Polk, La., will employ the tight "T" this year with former Michigan State All-American Tommy Yewcic filling the quarterback slot.

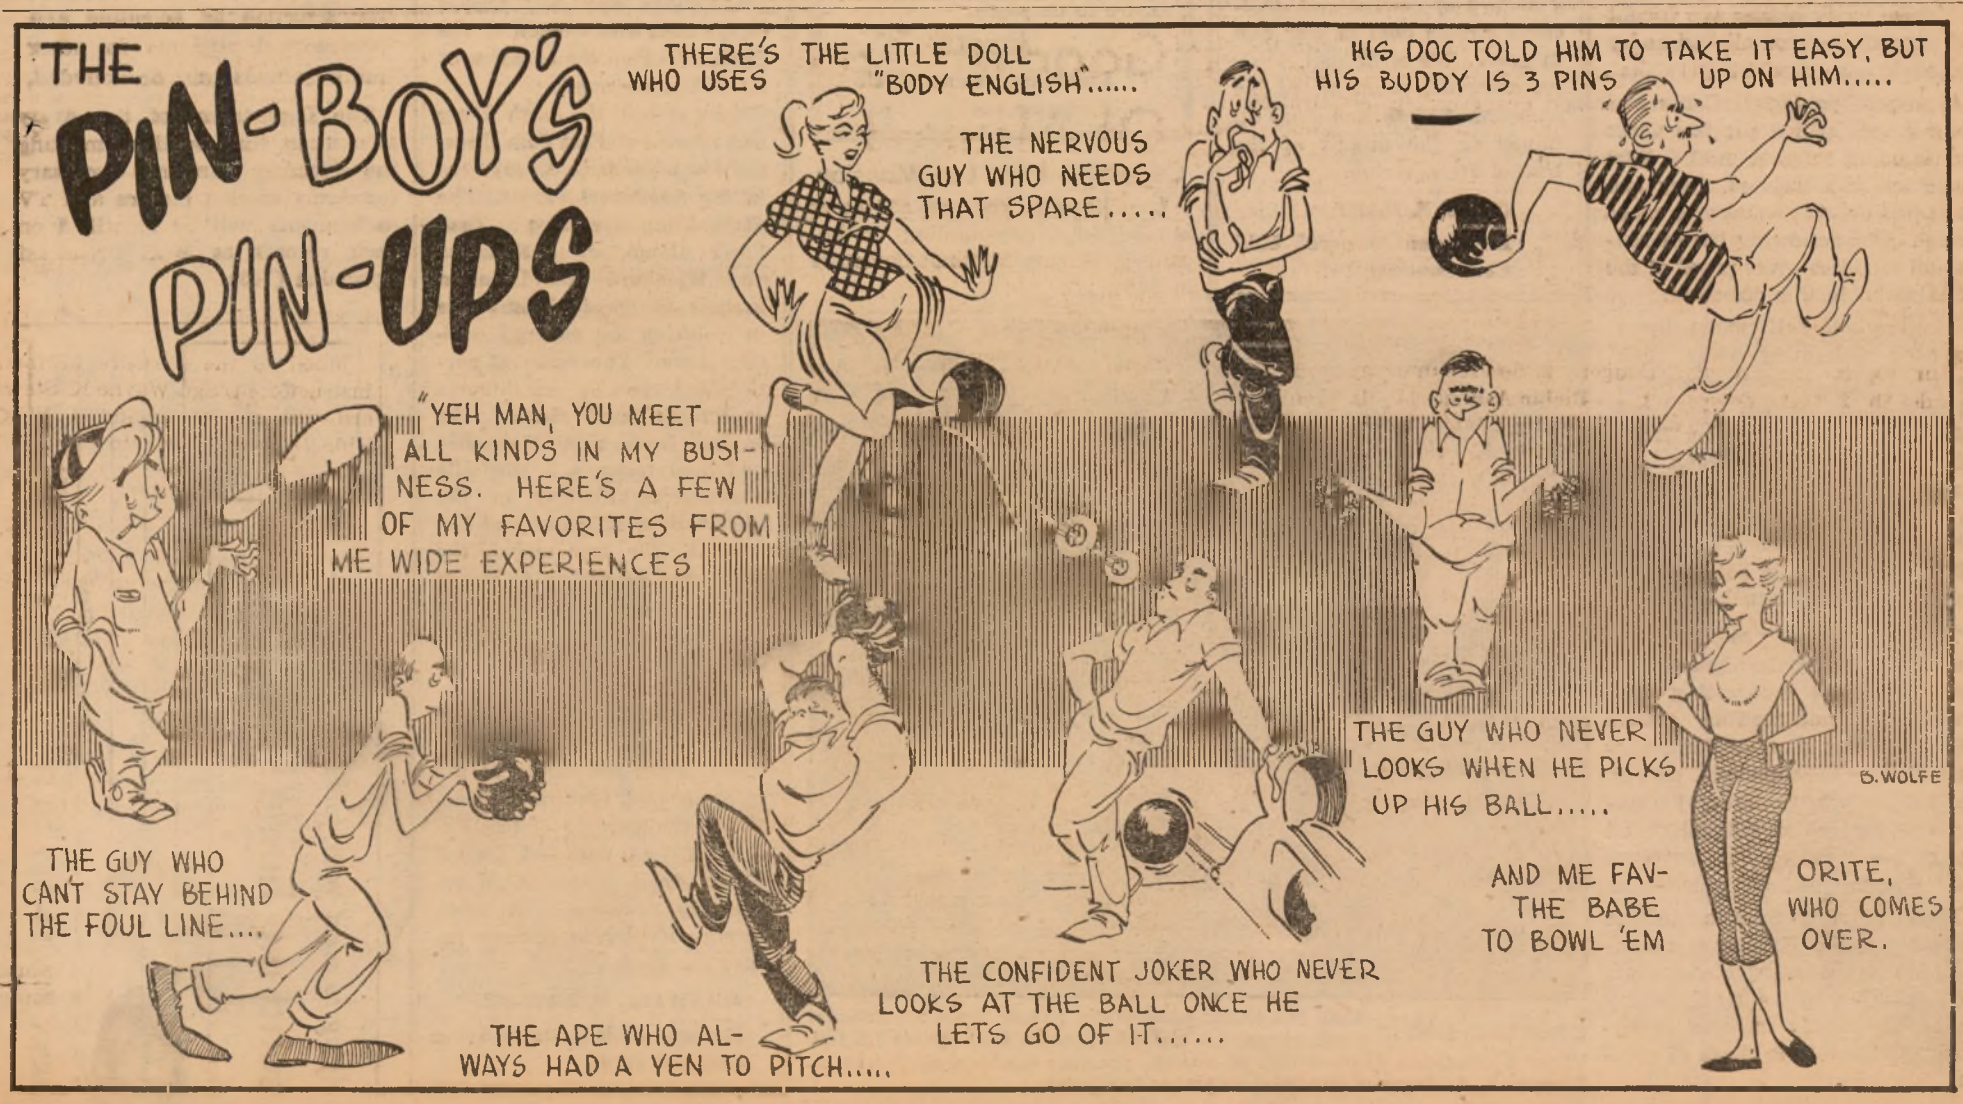
Post Netmen Fail To Place In Stonestown YMCA Tourney

Presidio's defending All-Army Volleyball championship team won two and lost two in their first tournament play of the '57 season at the Stonestown YMCA.

Coach Bob Jones said the team surpassed his expectations since this was its first opportunity to take part in tournament play as a team. Only three members of last season's championship team are present for this year's play.

Gordon Peak and Dick Godino carried the load as setmen. Jones said that George Lynch, Phil Kilmer, and C. Garancs were inconsistent in their first tourney play but show promise of rapid development as consistent performers in the future.

Catalino Ignacio, experienced setman and one of the three returnees from last year's team, also served as an official at the Stonestown tourney. Ignacio is a nationally recognized official in the United States Volleyball Association.



Although there is much work to be done before there is any hope of defending the title, Coach Jones was well pleased with the showing his team made in the tourney. Workouts are held every Monday from 1745 hours until 1915 hours in the Ft. Scott gym. Jones is still interested in seeing anyone who would like to play for the Presidio team.

The Presidio netmen are scheduled to journey to Sacramento for their second tourney of the season on 2 February.

Urgent Need For Boxers, Wrestlers

Response to the call for boxers and wrestlers has been very poor to date, says Hal Fischer, Special Services sports director. With the Sixth Army Boxing Tournament scheduled to take place at Ft. Lewis, Washington, 19-23 February and the Sixth Army Wrestling Tournament set for 3-6 March at LAH Gym, the need is urgent if the Presidio is to be well represented.

Prospective sluggers and grunt'n groaners should get in touch with the Sports Office, Ext. 3968, or come by personally to the office in Bldg. 122 to see Hal Fischer.

Sixth Army's Ft. Huachuca Tests Signal Corps Devices

Just three years ago Fort Huachuca, Sixth U.S. Army's most isolated military installation, was noted for little more than the fact that over its 70,000 acres of open reservation grazed America's largest single buffalo herd.

Today, Fort Huachuca, designated the Army Electronic Proving Ground, is undergoing a multi-million dollar expansion program; 6,000 military personnel and 1,800 civilians are presently engaged there in testing and developing the latest Signal Corps communication and surveillance devices.

This onetime desert outpost—first established in 1877 as a base from which to control Apaches and renegade whites—appears to have just begun its period of growth. Last week an $8 million contract for Capehart housing was signed which will provide 575 units for Army families.

It has also been announced that plans are 80 per cent complete for a new multi-million dollar technical building. This three story structure, expected to cost $10 million, will cover 406,000 square feet. Instead of rooms this reinforced concrete structure will have moveable partitions to provide greater flexibility of office space.

When completed the $15 million housing program will total 1315 units. A new million-dollar field house is also under construction. It will include an Olympic size swimming pool, two handball courts, a boxing ring, a weight-lifting area, basketball court with two cross courts, and space for volley ball, tennis and badminton courts.

But one fact remains that cannot be erased by building programs and population increases—Fort Huachuca is one of the most isolated military installations in the United States. Located in southern Arizona, almost on the Mexican border, it is 100 miles from the nearest city, Tucson.

This very quality of isolation makes Fort Huachuca an ideal location for an electronics testing station. Commercial radio and TV broadcasting centers and airport radio facilities must be far enough from the Signal Corps test and experimental transmissions to escape jamming. And the 77 square miles adequately provide areas for a variety of test ranges on which miniature mock battles are fought and test firings accomplished under electronic control and supervision.

Although the Signal Corps and Sixth Army, which provide Class one support, cannot make Fort Huachuca less isolated, they can make this desert testing area more livable. The following list of recreation facilities gives proof of the effort taken in this direction:

A nine hole golf course, three outdoor swimming pools, nine tennis courts, numerous softball diamonds, a football field, and picnic facilities in nearby Huachuca and Garden canyons. An art-craft shop, a bowling alley, a service club, three libraries and three movie theaters offer off-duty amusement for both civilian and military personnel.

This installation provides three major services for the Signal Corps. First, it allows the testing of a practical communications system with all elements under simultaneous scrutiny by engineers. It also provides an educational and training site for senior officers of all arms and services for nowhere else is there such an installation.

Finally, it provides a definite place where a contractor or manufacturer may demonstrate his electronic product by testing it directly under the rigidly imposed conditions comparable to those of combat.

General Wyman's Greeting

On the occasion of the 14th anniversary date of the activation of Sixth Army, 25 January, please extend my congratulations and best wishes to the members of your fine command.

Sixth Army's record in the Pacific during World War II is one of which all of its members may be justly proud. During this period it planned and directed 15 amphibious operations, including 22 assault landings, from New Guinea to the Philippines, following which it was prepared to play a decisive role in the assault on the Japanese mainland, had that empire not surrendered in 1945. In the initial occupation of Honshu, it performed with great distinction.

Sixth Army not only has an outstanding wartime record, but its contributions to the forces in being since the end of World War II have shown that it can still maintain those high standards of performance it demonstrated in wartime.

Having commanded Sixth Army myself, it is a personal privilege on its anniversary for me to salute you and your command and to express my confidence in its continued success under your direction.

W. G. WYMAN
General, U.S. Army
Commanding

Second Army Greeting

On the occasion of the 14th Anniversary of Sixth Army, I wish to extend the sincere congratulations of Second Army to all members of your command.

Since its activation in 1943 at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, the Sixth Army has established a history of valiant and dedicated service both in war and in peace. We of Second Army are extremely proud of the fine record that Sixth Army has attained in the annals of the United States Army.

Sergeant Reitz was commended for work in organizing, training and improving the War Room or Battle Command Post of the headquarters and the personnel who run it. His suggestions "drastically modified certain functions within the center," according to the citation accompanying the certificate.

Fifth Army Greeting

The 14th Anniversary of Sixth Army, 25 January 1957, affords me welcome opportunity to extend my best wishes and congratulations with those of all Fifth Army to you and the members of your command.

The illustrious combat record of Sixth Army is one to which the American Soldier can always point with pride. Sixth Army's continuous battle across the Pacific is marked by some of the most difficult and brilliant operations of World War II. The battle performance of its thousands of fighting men assured the early return of the American Flag and freedom to the Philippines.

Today, the rest of the Army shares Sixth Army's pride in its heritage of honor. I am sure that the officers and men of your command will ever cherish its proud history and add lustre to its pages.

Movie, TV Skills To Be Earmarked For Special Duty

Post Classification and Assignment Section announced this week that future military movie and TV specialists will be earmarked for duty in the given fields before they leave their Reception and Training centers.

Through the process of screening the basic trainee's preparatory record prior to his departure for a duty station, it is anticipated that a current and critical need for Army movie and TV skilled workers will be alleviated—a red tape of preliminary processing cut considerably, and the problem of frequent mal-assignment by-passed by the individual serviceman.

The required specialties include movie and television producers, as well as writers and film editors in both categories. However, personnel already committed to military assignments, those who have already volunteered for special training or special duty, and those qualified for selection as scientific and professional students in other military fields must be excluded.

The Department of the Army announces that soldiers meeting the selection standards necessary for Army motion picture and TV assignments will be identified on their records as MOS Broadcast Specialist (743).

General Taylor's Greeting

On behalf of the United States Army I extend congratulations and best wishes to the men and women of the Sixth Army on the occasion of its 14th anniversary.

Born of war, the Sixth Army was formed at Fort Sam Houston for immediate deployment in the Southwest Pacific. The Sixth Army, operating as Task Force Alamo, seized Kiriwina and Woodlark Islands as a prelude to its significant role in crushing the enemy's military power. Thereafter, it participated in 15 amphibious operations and cleared the enemy from rugged jungles and mountains in a 2700-mile advance terminating in the liberation of Mindoro and Luzon. As the war ended, the Sixth was preparing to attack the Japanese homeland. Instead, it carried out successful occupational duties in Japan until January, 1946.

Today, in support of our war-deterrent role, members of the Sixth Army contribute to the strength and readiness essential to the security of this Nation. I join with all United States Army personnel in expressing confidence in Sixth Army's ability to achieve future successes.

CMD Personnel Receive Awards

Cash awards to the extent of $1100 were won by seven civilian employees of the California Military District this week.

Major General Frank N. Roberts, district chief and commanding officer of Fort MacArthur, presented the checks given for sustained superior performance in line of service.

Awards of $200 went to Mr. James Lansford, Mrs. Edith K. Berke, Mrs. Vlasta DePeu and Mr. Samuel Dows. Awards of $100 were presented to Mr. Leslie Weber, Mrs. Thelma Randle and Mrs. Helen McKernon.

Cost Studies To Determine Helicopter Use

The future prospect of commercial freight and passenger helicopter service at the Presidio will be determined by a study of comparative cost figures collected during this month's trial period of helicopter utilization, Col. Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, revealed this week.

While the peacetime use of helicopters will be determined on the basis of getting the most for the money, Colonel Lundquist expressed concern over the problems of re-supply that might arise during an emergency, or war time situation. "With refugees clogging the roads and the bridges out, we'd just about have to move supplies by air," he stated.

The ability of the helicopter to re-supply a Nike site was graphically demonstrated to nearly 100 Presidio officers and civilians Wednesday at Crissy Field when a sausage-shaped, skeleton-framed Piasecki twin-rotor HRP1 took off with the major component parts of a Nike missile jutting out from its sides like stubby wings.

The Piasecki, which easily lifted 1,800 pounds of Nike parts, did have to leave several hundred pounds of equipment on the ground for a second run or a second helicopter. This limited lifting capacity was cited by the DPC as a major disadvantage of today's helicopters.

He also felt the machines were still at a disadvantage in night, foggy and windy flying; "times when we don't like to use the machines, but sometimes have to." But the helicopter industry, he predicted, would soon solve these problems.

"The real saving factor for present day operation is the fact that the 'copters need only be used when they have a pay load. Many surface vehicles such as buses and ferries must be operated on a schedule basis with the result that they often run empty."

Transportation of a plumber to an outlying Nike station to do an hour job was offered by Colonel

Top General Leaves For Third Army

A thirteen-gun salute will today boom a farewell to Major General Riley F. Ennis, Deputy Commanding General for Reserve Forces, Sixth U.S. Army, in honor of his departure to Third U.S. Army Headquarters, Fort McPherson, Ga.

A colorful ceremony featuring 62 United Nations flags will honor General Ennis at 1100 hours in the parking area just north of the Presidio Officers' Club. The Sixth U.S. Army Band and Pipe Band will play and the Presidians, precision marching unit, will march at this funtion which is open to the public.

Last October General Ennis, who originally succeeded Major General William F. Dean here as Deputy Commanding General, was placed in charge of Reserve Forces activities by Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth U.S. Army Commander.

General Ennis

In this capacity he has done much to strengthen the supervision and support of training for National Guard, Army Reserve and Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) units in the Sixth U.S. Army area.

A reserve officer himself prior to receiving a Regular Army commission in 1920, he has been keenly interested in coordinating the ac-

Revamped Service Pay Program Released By Cordiner Committee

The wraps came off the Cordiner Pay Committee recommendations this week clearly revealing intentions to increase the quality, but not necessarily the quantity, of the nation's armed forces.

A pay hike for technicians—the men who maintain and operate guided missiles, jet planes, nuclear submarines and other "new" weapons—was highly recommended to correct Armed Forces compensation practices that are "so clearly" out of step that they can be called a "major impediment to national security."

Although each service will determine how the retention program will be implemented for its own personnel, the plan definitely would not give all members a pay raise. However, individuals now serving would not receive a pay cut if the proposals are eventually approved.

Fundamentally the recommendations have four objectives: (1) Relieve the "tight" pay structures of both officers and enlisted men; (2) Revise the present compensation system to provide rewards for merit and performance instead of longevity; (3) Place career pay grades on a competitive basis with industry, and (4) Establish "workable" procedures that will guarantee quality personnel for the Armed Forces.

Shaped to become completely effective over a four-year period, the recommendations would establish an eighth and ninth pay grade for enlisted personnel and a ninth and tenth grade for officers above brigadier general.

The committee recognized the inconsistency of the longevity pay system which often enables men of lower rank to receive more money than their superiors. For instance, 18,000 E-3s received more money than 333,000 E-4s.

Post Firemen Win Top Spot In Prevention

The Presidio won first place in the Army division of the recent 1956 Fire Prevention contest conducted by the National Fire Protection Association. Last year the Presidio took second place.

Fire Chief George Geller credits the top award to improved alarm systems, increased hydrants and larger water mains and the installation of sprinkler systems in warehouses and other large buildings.

The Department conducts a daily training program of the newest developments in fire fighting techniques for military and civilian members of the Post. In addition, it sponsors lectures and demonstrations in fire prevention techniques for youth and adult groups.

Colonel James R. Rundell is Fire Marshal and Post Engineer.

Red Cross Aid Depends On Certain Key Factors

Military personnel who need financial assistance to meet an emergency situation are eligible for help from the American Red Cross or Army Emergency Relief.

The first step in gaining assistance is to contact the Red Cross either directly or by Unit Commander referral. The degree of need and the amount of assistance will be determined by an interview with Red Cross personnel.

If the individual situation does not fall within Red Cross authority, the Unit Commander will be notified. The Unit Commander can then interview and refer the individual to Army Emergency Relief.

When referring an individual for financial assistance, the Unit Commander must include the purpose for which the money is requested; what depleted the applicant's personal resources; financial statement of gross family income and gross family expenses; approximate amount of relief recommended; how a loan is to be repaid; and a certificate that all statements have been investigated.

The equivalent of the cost of clothing for more than six million Army trainees went up in smoke last year.

Fires in the United States caused a record $1,250,000,000 damage in 1956, according to an estimate by United Press.

And this estimate doesn't take into account the loss of that possession on which no value can be set—human life.

Fires can be prevented.

You can do your part by being careful with cigarettes and matches, checking for faulty electrical wiring, avoiding use of flammable liquids, and observing fire regulations at your station. (AFPS)

At Presidio

Army Association Chapter Formed For Local Areas

About 200 civilian and military personnel in the area took steps toward establishing a local chapter of the Association of the United States Army at the Presidio last week.

According to the membership petition, the local chapter will include San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Clara (to San Jose), Marin and Sonoma counties. Membership is open to both civilians and military. The next meeting will be called in either February or March.

The Association is a consolidation of the former U.S. Artillery Assn., the U.S. Infantry Assn., and the U.S. Field Artillery Assn. The journals of the three associations have been combined into a single publication known as "Army."

Mr. Frank E. Marsh, executive vice-president of the Bay Area Council, was named temporary chairman by the group. Mr. Marsh is a member of the Army Advisory Committee for San Francisco.

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth U.S. Army Commander, said the Association was founded in 1953 for the purpose of "contributing its full resources and capabilities to advancing the security of the United States."

2 Million Gallons of water daily flow from San Francisco's Lobos Creek to the Presidio reservoir near Baker Beach. Here Alfred Mosher, chief of the sanitation branch of Post Engineers, points to the dam spillway where the water officially becomes part of the Presidio water system. Lobos Creek water, which was first used by the Army to supply old Fort Point, now supplies all the needs of the Presidio, Fort Scott and Fort Mason.

Presidio Has Automatic Internal Water System

By Sp3 Richard Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

If San Francisco's Sierra Nevada water supply were to dry up today, Presidio residents could still enjoy their Saturday night baths, as they are served by the city's only internal water system.

Nearly two million gallons of water each day gush up from underground springs in the vicinity of the Marine Hospital, course down the mile-long Lobos Creek bed and spill into the Presio water system's collecting reservoir at the 25th Street entrance by Baker Beach.

The Army first utilized Lobos Creek water in the middle 1800's when it constructed a flume to supply Fort Point in case of siege. Then when Fort Point closed, a private company took over the supply and started selling it to city users.

A court hassle that finally wound up in the Supreme Court developed when the Army, who wanted to supply the Presidio, claimed it had prior rights on this source. The highest court decided in favor of the Army and in 1910 a permanent system was installed which has since been satisfying the needs of the Presidio, Fort Scott and Fort Mason.

Two years ago tne system achieved automation when modern machinery was installed which made the water treatment process completely automatic.

"Presidio water meets higher sanitary standards than San Francisco city water," according to Alfred Mosher, chief of Post Engineer's sanitation branch. "We work directly under the medical department of the Army."

The water first runs into settling tanks. Then it is swirled in rapid sand filter tanks, sterilized with chlorine gas, settled, sterilized again, and only then is it ready for consumption. The processed water must also pass a color comparison test with distilled water.

For the past three months Army personnel have had the additional benefit of fluoridation. The Presidio and Fort Lewis were the first two Sixth U.S. Army installations to add this service after a survey proved that the largest number of dependent children would be reached at these posts.

This chemical, which is mixed with the water in the ratio of one part fluorine to one million parts water, can only benefit children. Once the enamel of the permanent teeth reaches maximum hardness the beneficial effect ceases.

In the summer time "when every doggone drop is used," Mosher reports that the system receives additional water flow from five auxiliary wells which last summer pumped 600,000 extra gallons a day. "But the lack of rain this winter may make things pretty dry next summer," he predicts.

From the processing station Presidio water is pumped to a six million gallon tank located near the new MARS transmitting station. This reserve could always be utilized in case of emergency.

In addition the Baker Beach pumping station has high pressure emergency outlets which could be turned on to quell any fire at the Wherry project.

"And don't forget the Letterman swimming pool," says Mosher. "Today swimming pools are more than luxuries, they are important sources of water that can be used whenever needed."

On 7 December, 1941 the importance of a military installation's water system was brought home with striking clarity to Mosher, who has been at the Presidio for 22 years. On duty at the pumping plant, he first heard of the Pearl Harbor attack when the Post Engineer called to inform him of the aggression and to say his first act was to send guards to protect the water supply.

Army Helps Build State Armories

The Army has released more than $12.5 million in federal funds to build 106 National Guard armories in 30 states and Alaska.

The funds authorized represent 75 per cent of the cost of construction. The balance will be furnished by the states receiving new armories.

Early Release Policy For Reserve Officers Affects Thirteen Here

About 13 Presidio officers will be affected by the current DA decision to retire 1700 Reserve Officers at the end of the month following that in which they are eligible for retirement, according to a Sixth U.S. Army official.

The officers will be retired rather than kept on active duty until their present term categories expire. Six are assigned to headquarters and seven to post.

It was indicated by the headquarters that most of the officers slated for early release here under the advance release program are family men whose children are attending local schools. Such officers may choose to remain on active duty until the end of the month following that in which the school year is completed. Officers due for separation, who hold Regular Army Warrants are also being given the option of continued active duty as Warrant Officers.

Provisions affecting .longevity status for the Reserve Officers being released have not yet been announced by DA.

Meanwhile, the Army has made advance announcement that it will keep on its active duty status for varying periods of time some 399 Reserve Officers eligible for retirement during the fiscal year of 1958.

It is believed that the unexpected rapid release of 1700 Reserve Officers from Army service is one of a series of moves already underway to cut overloaded payrolls and adhere to the strength quota of the Army as agreed on by the Defense Department, the White House and the Budget Bureau.

A selection board in Washington considered more than 2100 Active Duty Reservists to determine how many could be held under the new release plan. Of that number, some 399 were selected to remain on active duty, 98 of whom are designated "outstanding" officers who may look forward to the completion of 30 years' active duty under existing conditions. The remainder being held are classified as specialists, augmentation prospects or vital to the Army's branch grade structure.

Of the 1700-plus, not selected for further active duty, 1000-plus were scheduled to retire at the end of three-yearn term categories during 1958. Those originally scheduled for retirement this year or in 1958 will be released either this spring or in the month following their completion of 20 years active service.

Every officer concerned will receive individual notification of his newly-established separation date and a minimum warning period of 60 days stateside and 90 days overseas before actual separation.

Students Eligible For New Exams

Civil Service examinations for student trainees offering GS-3 and GS-4 ratings have been announced by the local Civil Service director. Starting salaries are $265 and $285 a month, respectively.

The examinations are open to college freshmen, sophomores and juniors who are preparing for careers as an accountant, architect, chemist, economist, engineer, entomologist, fisheries biologist, food and drug inspector, landscape architect, metallurgist or wildlife biologist.

Medical Needs Confab Topic

Local nurses, physical therapists, occupational therapists, dieticians and students enrolled in accredited schools in these fields will be considered for prompt employment by the U.S. Army through a conference being held in San Francisco next Monday, 4 February.

Procurement officers attending the conference are to submit the names of women in the given skills who have denoted interest in the project through interview with Major Fietta Rosenberger, Sixth U.S. Army Nurse Procurement Officer, and Captain Margaret E. Radke, Medical Specialist Procurement Officer. Appointment and interview with either of these officers may be arranged by calling Ext. 4200.

Expansion of the food service in Army hospitals has increased the need for graduate dieticians, while modern therapy in various types of rehabilitation opens a larger field for occupational therapists.

Continuing need arises for all the Army nursing specialties, notably in anesthesia, obstetrics, neuropsychiatry and pediatrics.

Best meals prepared and served in the 30th AAA Group during the last three months were credited to Sfc. Ray W. Harris, Mess Steward, Battery "C," 740th AAA Missile Bn. The Best Mess plaque was presented by Col. Daniel A. Ranney, 30th AAA Group Commander. Sp2 Charles L. Larabee, Assistant Mess Steward, also participated in the presentation.

Individual Giving

National Agencies Campaign Deadline Slated 15 February

Envelopes have been distributed for individual donations to the National Health Agencies Campaign, according to Capt. Herbert M. Youngdahl, co-chairman. The drive will continue until 15 February.

The drive includes contributions for Muscular Dystrophy Assn. of America, Inc., San Francisco Branch; The National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, San Francisco Branch; CARE and Crusade for Freedom.

Two envelopes, one for CARE-Crusade for Freedom and the other, Muscular Dystrophy-Crippled Children's campaign, are given to each person. Envelopes can be mailed by the individual or returned to the Funds Custodian Office, Bldg. 20, by 16 February.

Massachusetts is the one state in the union still governed under its original constitution.

Superior Service in the Sixth Army's G-2 Section won a $200 check and a Performance Award Certificate for Miss Mary C. Costello, supervisory clerk-stenographer. Miss Costello is shown with Col. Calvin A. L. Dickey, assistant Chief of Staff, G-2. She has been a Presidio employee since 1951.

Army Releases Blueprints For Dependent Housing

Washington (AFPS)—A new Army regulation blueprints the design for quarters to be built under housing programs for service families.

According to the directive, no units will be substandard in either size or quality and there will be no difference in the construction of officers' and enlisted men's housing.

Designs call for two-, three-, and four-bedroom units with a maximum number of three-bedroom homes being provided within the cost ceiling of $16,500, a unit fixed by Congress.

Single and duplex units will be built wherever possible, with three-bedroom houses having one-and-one-half baths, four bedroom quarters, two full baths.

Where costs or real estate prices prohibit single or duplex construction, four-unit, two-story family apartment buildings will be erected.

Other multiple housing designs will be used "only under most compelling cost circumstances," according to the regulation.

Under present Joint Defense Department directives, floor space allowances for officers range from 1,080 to 2,100 square feet depending upon the rank of the sponsor.

Enlisted families are authorized maximum space of 1,080 feet. However, Defense officials have proposals pending to increase this allowance to take care of those having requirements for more than three bedrooms.

The new Army specifications generally will apply both to units built on-Post with funds appropriated by Congress and to living quarters constructed adjacent to military installations with private capital under the Capehart Housing Act.

IBM Computer Checks Satellite

A special high-speed IBM electronic computer to calculate and predict the orbit of the earth satellite is being launched by the Navy during the 1957-58 International Geophysical year in Project Vanguard.

The man-made moon will be hurled 200 to 300 miles above the earth sometime between next 1 July and 31 December, 1958, from a site in Patrick Air Force Base, Fla.

Of beach ball size, the satellite will weigh 21½ pounds. After its launching, the Computation Center in Washington will go on 24-hour alert, calculating the orbit by using data received from tracking stations in the Western Hemisphere.

Deadline Set

New Uniform Required Soon For Officers

October of the present year marks the time when it becomes mandatory for military officers to wear the new Army Green Uniform, shade No. 44, currently authorized for optional off-duty wear.

The Presidio QM Clothing Sales store in Bldg. 265 has a large stock of matched uniforms on hand, as well as the separate coats and trousers, 16-ounce wool serge. However, officers' caps are not authorized for sale in QM clothing sales outlets, but they may be purchased in civilian stores. A list of such sources may be obtained at the Presidio QM Clothing Sales store.

Limited staff and facilities generally at the QM store make it advisable for officers to purchase the new uniform at the earliest possible date. It is anticipated that a rush of purchases will be made just before the October deadline.

Matched uniform	$36.70
Separate coat	24.40
Separate trousers	7.55
Braid for coat & trousers	.79
Sewing braid on coat	1.25
Sewing braid on trousers	1.50

Cordiner Committee Suggestions

In the new pay proposals, although there would be in-grade pay steps every two years up to six or eight years in the top four EM grades, no man of lower rank would receive a bigger pay check than those in the next higher grade.

The proposed "proficiency pay," equivalent to a one or two-pay grade advancement, would go to a relatively small percentage of enlisted personnel, probably no more than 15 per cent of total strength.

It would be possible for an E-5 to be advanced on a proficiency basis to the lowest pay of an E-6, and in a later step move up to the bottom of the E-7 pay bracket while retaining his original E-5 rank.

While this would apply only to selected technicians and leaders, similar provisions have been drafted for the officer pay structure. Proficiency pay would be authorized only in grades E-4 to E-8, principally in areas where shortages of skilled personnel exist.

The policy for proficiency advancement would be established by the Secretary of Defense and the allocation of each of the services would be included in their annual budgets.

Increased emphasis would be placed on MOS conversion and retraining in areas where high skills are needed and to insure against buildups of excesses in easy-to-learn jobs.

Coast Guard Neighbors Perform Frequent Sea Rescue Operations

By Sfc. Debra O'Hanlon
Star Presidian Feature Editor

Nearest in inter-service neighbors to the Presidio are 21 men on Coast Guard duty at the Fort Point Lifeboat Station adjoining Crissy Field. Here in the shadow of the Golden Gate Bridge is a mammoth sea-blue "eye" set in a tower from which a 24-hour vigil is maintained by members of the Nation's oldest, smallest service branch.

Small in point of size but listed among the greatest in disaster action, the Coast Guard unit on the Presidio is one of a chain of similar stations extending like a giant hand along the coast from Monterey to Southern California and northward to Seattle where it meets the Coast Guard 13th District boundary.

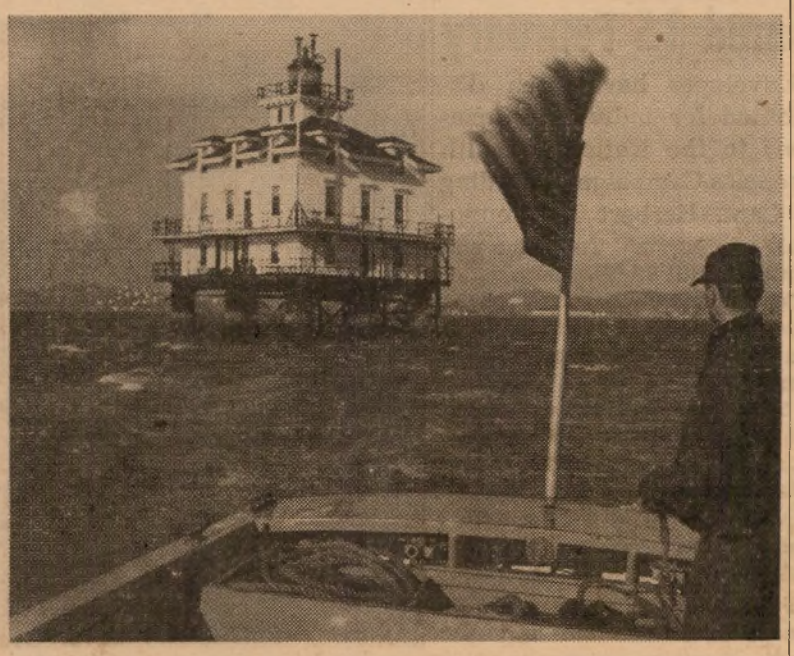
Under direction of Rear Adm. R. E. Wood, commanding the 12th Coast Guard District, San Francisco, and commanded by CHF/BSN B. A. Barr, the local unit carries on a sea rescue tradition conceived at the Presidio at the turn of the century when the garrison itself was only a baby.

Since about 1898 the fiscal year average of rescue and assistance reports by the lifeboat station here runs to about 376.

Outstanding in wartime history is the Fort Point Station's rescue of 400 military and civilian passengers from the sinking hospital ship Benevolence, after collision with a Luckenbach liner in San Francisco Bay in 1952. Of the given number saved, over 40 are credited to an elderly man on a fishing boat who dumped his catch to make room for survivors he had taken from the water.

Military rescues from pleasure boats are fairly common to the men on duty at Fort Point. The majority are attributed to unseaworthy craft, sudden squalls and inexperience on the part of "Sunday Sailors."

The Fort Point Coast Guards have taken part in two recent helicopter rescues. During the past six months they recovered 16 bodies from the waterway below the Bridge.



A sister-in-service to one in Monterey, Point Piedras, located near San Simeon and Point Reyes, the Presidio Lifeguard Station is the parent to four lighthouses; one each on Angel Island, Alcatraz Island, Lime Point and Point Bonito. The lighthouse keepers serve out a three to four-week vigil on each remote rock, for the purpose of rescue or radio contact with the shore station when trouble strikes ships on the open sea.

The Fort Point Lifeguards extend their service to include regular daily logistic sea runs and the maintenance of mechanical processes by which navigation of vessels adhere to a definite pattern. Likewise, they work in unison with the California Highway Patrol, the San Francisco Northern Police Station and with the city coroner's office in cases of rescue from accidents or recovery of missing bodies.

In time of war the Coast Guard comes under direction of the Secretary of the Navy. In peacetime it is directed by the Treasury Department.

Traditionally proud of their position as a separate entity, distantly related to the Navy by common heritage—the sea, the Coast Guard Serviceman is quick to point out his unique position in Federal Service. The story goes that the greatest joke played on their calling occurred recently when the Coast Guard vessel Ponchartrain rescued the passengers and crew of a crippled airliner on the Pacific. Coming aboard the Ponchartrain from the downed aircraft, a Navy commander was heard to say "Thank God for the United States Navy."

Honor Guard Plans Full Civic Calendar During This Month

A full February calendar of civic events participated in by the Sixth U.S. Army Honor Guard at the request of municipal officials in the San Francisco area, begins tomorrow with the marching unit from the Presidio appearing in the Chinese New Year parade at 1830 hours.

On 10 February, the Honor Guard takes part in a Boy Scout Day Parade in Broadmoor Village, South San Francisco, in ceremonies marking the anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America.

The Honor Guard marches in an Eagles Freedom Day observance to be held at Seals Stadium, San Francisco, on the same day, while on 15 February the unit participates in a Washington's Birthday Citizens' Committee celebration at City Hall, 1300 hours.

USOs Procure Free Tickets For Services

More than 35,000 Bay Area servicemen and women received free admission tickets valued at $87,500 to theatrical, sports, and other entertainment events during the last year.

Secured through efforts of the USO Admissions Committee and the cooperation of local citizens in the entertainment field, the free tickets included attendance at movies, swimming meets, opera, concerts, plays, musical comedies, radio and TV programs, ballet and major sports events.

Free tickets for service personnel are distributed through San Francisco's four USO clubs.

Dogs were first inducted officially into the Army on 13 March, 1942.

Local Civil Service Vacancies Announced

Openings for a male administrative clerk, program coordinator and security specialist and a female librarian have been announced by the Civilian Personnel Section.

The administrative clerk position requires a GS-5 rating and offers $3,670 a year. Men who can qualify for GS-9 ratings are eligible for the program coordinator and security specialist vacancies. Starting pay is $5,440 a year.

The librarian position, which pays $4,525 a year, offers a GS-7 rating.

Further information is available at Bldg. 36 or Ext. 2349 or 4233.

Bonanza

Private James L. Bevan, Post C&A branch, is still muttering to himself following receipt Wednesday of a letter from the Department of Internal Revenue: "Ha ha ha . . . I can't believe it . . . ha ha . . . impossible . . . ha . . . a bolt from the blue . . . fantastic . . . utterly fantastic . . ." His state of shock is understandable when it is revealed that his letter contained $130 tax refund (including interest) for a time two years ago when he tried to claim zero dependents. He hasn't decided what to do with this bonanza, but his room mates at Hq. Co., USA Garrison, have a suggestion: "LET'S HAVE A PARTY!"

Disposal Confab Completed Here

Delegates attended from Department of the Army agencies, Hawaii, Alaska, General Services Administration, each installation operating a property disposal activity and the Associated Surplus Dealers.

Col. Arthur L. Bivens, Quartermaster Sixth U.S. Army, gave the welcoming address and Col. Raymond R. Guehring, Quartermaster Section, Hq. Sixth U.S. Army was the conference coordinator.

Subjects discussed were merchandising techniques with emphasis on auction and spot-bid sales, contracting, Army Command Management System, the Property Disposal Management Course, administrative procedures and the Surplus Dealers viewpoint.

New Resuscitator May Work On Nerve Gas

Washington (ANS) — The Army Chemical Corps in collaboration with the Surgeon General is developing a mask-to-mask resuscitator which the medical services may be able to use as an artificial respiration device and for the first time enable aid men to treat nerve-gas casualties in contaminated air.

Experiments last summer with a prototype resuscitator show that it can outperform any manual form of artificial respiration. The tests have demonstrated that by substituting a mouthpiece for the mask and removing the canister, the resuscitator is readily adaptable to civilian uses in normal atmospheric conditions where artificial respiration is necessary.

Primarily developed to treat casualties during an actual gas attack, the device also can be used to give artificial respiration in drowning cases, electrical shock, suffocation, and similar accidents.

The resuscitator utilizes the power developed by the aid man's breathing, to supply purified air to the casualty's lungs even though treatment is being given in a toxic atmosphere.

Further experimentation also demonstrates that it would be possible to give artificial respiration to a casualty while he is being carried on a stretcher — now an impossibility—through the use of a tube connecting the trachea with the mask-to-mask resuscitator.

He led his unit through 171 days of fighting that took the "Hellcats" from the Maginot Line and across Germany to a union with the Allied Forces beyond the Inn River in Austria.

Assignments since World War II for General Ennis have included Director of Intelligence, Military Intelligence Service, Washington, D. C., and military attache in Ottawa, Canada, and Mexico City. During the Korean conflict, he held top intelligence posts in the Far East. Prior to reporting to the Sixth U.S. Army, he was commander of the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Jackson, S. C.

His awards and decorations include the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster and numerous foreign decorations.

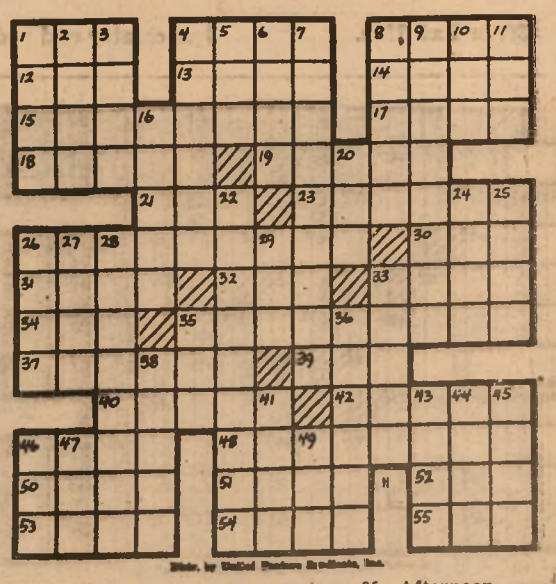
Lundquist as an example of the helicopter's advantage. By land, the plumber would spend (and be paid for) five hours in transit; by air his travel time would be 20 minutes. In addition, it is possible that the plumber would service several Nike sites in the same area during the one afternoon.

Accumulated cost figures of the current 30-day experimental contract to date, indicate that helicopter operation may be cheaper than like operating costs for harbor craft presently being utilized by the Presidio. To date, helicopters have carried 423 passengers and 22,890 pounds of cargo.

The Angel Island run takes five minutes by helicopter and 30 minutes by boat. While the helicopter takes only five operating personnel, the boats take 30.

The ban restricting military personnel from riding in the commercial helicopters, initiated on 15 January, following a crash which killed the pilot and injured the soldier passenger, has been lifted. The DPC removed the ban after both military and civilian investigators found the personnel, equipment and maintenance procedures of Rick Helicopters, Inc., to be "of the highest standards."

When military personnel fly, however, it has been specified that there must be at least a 200-foot ceiling and two-mile visibility along the entire course.



Long Time Coming!

Francis Scott Key's "Star Spangled Banner" was written in 1814 and adopted as the national anthem 117 years later.

Kick-off for the show was launched at the Girl Scout House last night. This evening tryouts for the performance will be conducted at the Girl Scout headquarters, Bldg. 566, next to the Post Nursery.

Presidio young people are urged to turn out for the meetings and to participate in the show planned for their benefit.

Military Titles Highlight New Post Library Books

First, we have Lt. Col. Walter D. Lasly who has written TURN THE TIGERS LOOSE as an outgrowth of personal experience as director of operations for a wing of night bombers in Korea. This is his first novel and was written following his return to the United States as a tribute to the men with whom he served. It is a tensely exciting novel of the fearless combat crews who fought as Night Intruders in the Korean war. Col. Lasly has written a monument to their courage in performing an unheralded, difficult and extremely perilous job.

Another Air Force author is Maj. Winston M. Estes who has penned a book about the Pentagon called WINSTON IN WONDERLAND. This is not a collection of jokes about the "funhouse on the Potomac" but a clever satirical poking of fun at officialdom and its whimsical ways. Estes gives his observations straightfaced which coupled with his delightful sense of humor and sharp appreciation of human nature provides a chuckle on every page and belly laughs on many.

Perhaps one of the Army's best known authors is Brig. Gen. S. L. A. Marshall. PORK CHOP HILL is his latest addition to his long list of war epics. Gen. Marshall pinpoints the 1953 action on Pork Chop Hill in a stunning account of men in action. The battle began on April 16, 1953, and lasted 48 hours. It was an impressive artillery duel but Marshall's chief interest and emphasis are always on the men themselves. He interviewed patrols before they went into the lines; he talked with the survivors when they came out. He reports action from the point of view of these men, giving their names and companies. Aside from furnishing on-the-spot military information, these personal reports make the book a deeply moving human document.

Bridge Party Planned By Presidio Women

An afternoon bridge party is planned by the Presidio Woman's Club to take place at the Officers Open Mess, Thursday, 21 February, at 1300 hours.

Reservations for the February bridge party may be secured by calling Mrs. Leland Esh at SKyline 1-0806 or Mrs. Curtis D. Hindman, SKyline 2-1913.

Tryouts For Musical

Casting for "High Yank," Army musical presenting the saga of Sad Sack, is slated to begin at Fort Baker Service Club, 14 February, at 1930 hours.

Singers, dancers, scenery designers, stage hands and musicians are needed for the show. Prospective entrants are asked to come to the tryouts at Fort Baker Service Club or to telephone the club, Ext. 58-239 for an appointment.

Deadline for reservations is 1200 hours, Tuesday, 19 February.

Chapel Award

The Fort Baker Chapel Attendance Award for outstanding chapel attendance for the months of November and December has been presented to Headquarters Battery, 9th AAA Missile Bn. Chaplain (Lt. Col.) John R. Strevig made the presentation.

Boy Scouts Schedule Display, Honor Court

In conjunction with the Nation's observance of American Boy Scout Week, 6-12 February, Troop No. 77 of the Presidio is featuring a display stressing "Patience And Coordination" at the main Post Exchange during this week.

Designed in wood and plastic, the artistic theme features a series of panels carved, painted and assembled by the local scouts as a means of conveying to the public the value of the Boy Scout program as it pertains to the qualities of self-reliance, leadership, citizenship and service to society.

The Boy Scouts' birthday is celebrated all over America by the Nation's more than four million members and in the Bay Area by approximately 90,000 Scouts and their leaders.

Lt. Col. Willett Ware, Post Inspector General, is institutional representative for the Presidio Boy Scouts. An adult committee for supervision and governing authority is composed of Col. B. M. Kitchen, Col. Henry M. Greenleaf, Maj. Francis D. Ivey, Col. Robert L. Ford, W/O Thomas B. Delaney, M/Sgt. F. O. Campbell and M/Sgt. John D. Veckich. Sgt. George K. Freedman is Troop Leader for Troop No. 77.

The Presidio Boy Scout Troop No. 77 is sponsored by the Sixth U.S. Army. It has been under charter by the National Boy Scout Council for the past 15 years.

Williams Leads Toreros In Conference Win

Castle Airmen Trampled By Toreros In Conference Tilt

High arching set shots, low, straight, jump shots just clearing the rim, and charity tosses; Carroll Williams, former San Jose State record-breaker, was hitting everything he threw at the bucket. After sinking his first shot in the opening seconds of the second half, Williams was pulled in an effort to make a contest of the Torero-Castle AFB encounter.

Eight shots from the floor for 16 markers and 7 attempts from the free throw line for an additional 7 tallies, without a miss, were rung up by the Torero star before mentor Hal Fischer pulled him. With Williams benched for the remainder of the game, the locals went on to blast Castle, 90-53.

Replacing Williams at the right guard slot was Hubie Brown, former team captain at Niagara University. Brown was very little comfort to the Airmen as he followed in Williams' footsteps to rack up 17 points for the local quint and capture second place scoring honors for the night.

Tor Hansen, teammate of Williams at San Jose State, set some sort of record when he missed 9 consecutive free throws before sinking a "jump-shot" from the charity line. Hansen's unorthodox charity toss was one of 7 points garnered by the 6'4" forward during the night.

Every man on the Torero bench scored in the rout of the Castle Airmen. The game was a clean one with the locals sustaining only 15 personals while the Airmen were called for 18 violations.

AAA Champs To Be Decided First Time Under New Setup

Basketball champions from antiaircraft installations in the San Francisco area and the entire West Coast will be named during the next two months in tournaments at Letterman Army Hospital Sports Center.

First to be named will be the San Francisco defense area champion in the 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group tourney 18-22 Feb. The titlist will be picked in competition among NIKE and antiaircraft gun battalion teams from the Bay Area, plus the Army antiaircraft units guarding Travis and Castle Air Force Bases.

Champion of that meet will take on the titlists of the Los Angeles, Seattle and Hanford, Washington, defense areas in the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command tournament, 18-23 March.

Fort Barry's 30th AAA Group will be host for the 6th AA Regional Command Tournament, whose winner will compete against representatives of the other four regional commands for the Army Antiaircraft Command cage title 25 March-2 April at Fort Devens, Massachusetts.

Each champion will be the first winner of its kind in the sports program set up last year to name AAA champions in four sports.

Softball and volleyball champions have already been named, and tennis titlists will be picked in tournaments next summer.

Fort Scott's 752nd AAA Gun Battalion won the 30th Group softball tournament but lost out to Los Angeles' 865th AAA Missile Battalion in the 6th AA Regional Command tournament.

The 752nd went all the way in volleyball competition, grabbing the 30th AAA Group, 6th AA Regional Command and Army Antiaircraft Command titles in that order.

Record Record

Oklahoma's coach Bud Wilkinson's career record now stands at 90 wins, five defeats and three ties in regular season play for a whopping 92.7 per cent. He has a bowl record of 4-1. His Oklahoma teams closed his first decade of coaching undefeated in Big Seven conference play with 57 wins and two ties out of 59 games.

Sword Men Take First And Fourth

LAH-Presidio fencers slashed their way to a first and fourth place win and an opportunity to participate in the coming Pacific Coast championships at the Stanford fencing strips.

Fencers from Stanford, Berkeley, Halberstadts and the LAH, Presidio, fought for the first four places in intermediate foil championships. The top four spots are eligible for the Pacific Coast Championships.

Every Letterman and Presidio fencer thrust and parried his way to the finals where Capt. Kait (USN) was judged first. Fourth spot honors went to Leo Galvin of LAH.

Jose Tafoya and Lawrence Brownlee placed fifth and sixth in that order.

After finishing competition at 0230 hours, the LAH-Presidio team rose and returned to the fencing strips at 0900 hours for the Letterman invitational sabre competition.

Eliminating teams from Berkeley, Ft. Bliss, San Francisco State College and a fellow team from LAH, an LAH team composed of Brownlee, Tafoya and Severs Pasol placed second to the SF Olympic Club team. The Ft. Bliss, Texas, team took third place honors.

A third swordsmen encounter found Lawrence Brownlee in possession of a first place gold medal. Letterman fencer Herb Rhodes placed third.

Intramural Champs To Be Decided Today

The Post championship will be decided today in intramural basketball play. Today's game will wrap up the 1956-1957 intramural basketball season with the post-wide champs being selected from the two top teams from each of the three intramural leagues playing this season. Beginning at 1400 hours in the Fort Scott Gym, this contest should prove to be an exciting one.

The six teams with the best records for the regular season have been participating in the play-offs for the past week.

One of the contenders of the final tilt has already been decided. By virtue of taking all opposition in the play-off, the Honor Guard has already cinched a crack at the championship.

The second team for the finale rests between Hq. Co., 30th Engrs., and D Btry., 9th AAA. The winner of that game (not yet played at press time) earns the right to meet the Honor Guard in the finals of the double elimination tournament.

Tournament play began with Hq. Co., 30th Engrs., losing a hardfought battle to D Btry., 9th AAA, in overtime play, 52-57. The next game saw the Honor Guard drop the 740th AAA team, 63-57. Hq. 30th AAA and 537th Engrs. drew a bye in first round pairings.

Next the Honor Guard eased by Hq. 30th AAA, 46-38, for their second win. Following that game the 537th Engrs. overhauled 740th AAA by 5 points, 61-56, in another overtime contest. Hq. Co., 30th Engrs., eked out a 41-40 victory over Hq. 30th AAA.

D Btry., 9th AAA, felled the 537th Engrs., 85-59, then dropped from tournament play when they lost an 82-78 decision to the Honor Guard. This game put the Honor Guard on the slate for the final.

Wednesday afternoon's game saw Hq. Co., 30th Engrs., drop the 537th Engrs. from the tournament by virtue of a 56-40 win.

Female Quint Travels South

The WAC basketball team departs today for Los Angeles where they meet the Fort MacArthur female quint in a non-conference tilt. The Presidio women are holding down second spot in conference play.

Tentative arrangements for more than one game on the southern journey have not definitely established any other opponents for the local lasses before their return to the Presidio Sunday.

An Alabama biologist reports that he has discovered that when fish are overcrowded they produce a substance that inhibits spawning, a built-in birth control system.

Correction

An error in computing the season's leading scorers cost Morris Storseth, Hq. 9th AAA, 14 points. His season total should have read 101 rather than 87 to place him in second spot among intramural scoring leaders.

Overtime Tipoff— The jump that signaled the beginning of overtime play to break the tie existing when the buzzer ended regular play between Hq. Co., 30th Engrs., and 740th AAA. 740th took the contest when they picked up 6 points in the overtime period to none for the Hq. Co., 30th Engrs.

Sgt. Makes Second Home In Any Alley

After duty hours there is only one place you need look for M/Sgt. Edward Kiersztian—a bowling alley. Kiersztian, first sergeant of Hq. Co., USA Garrison, regularly spends five nights of the week in one bowling alley or the other.

On Monday nights Kiersztian holds down a slot on the roster of the Sneakers in the Presidio Bowling League. He maintains a 184 league average while bowling with the Sneakers.

Every other week Kiersztian can be found kegging with the Dueces of the Frisco League on Tuesday nights. The league meets on Friday nights on alternate weeks. This arrangement leaves Kiersztian free on every other Tuesday and Friday night. Kiersztian has a league average of 169 in this league.

Wednesday nights the sergeant bowls for the Anonymous Club in a mixed doubles league. One of the two male bowlers on the team, Kiersztian bowls with three women in the only league that he participates in that is not connected with Post activities.

A few weeks ago Kiersztian discovered that he had nothing scheduled for his Thursday nights so he scouted around and found an open berth on a team that is composed of civilian engineers employed by the Presidio. The team is allowed to use military personnel to fill out their roster, so the sergeant accounted for his Thursdays. For the two weeks that he has bowled with this league, Kiersztian is maintaining a 176 average.

With the Post "Roll Off" to select six representatives from the Pfesidio to the Sixth U.S. Army Tournament beginning tomorrow and continuing Sunday and the weekend of 9-10 February, Kiersztian will have an added opportunity to add to the callouses already existing on his bowling hand.

The ardent kegler has been haunting alleys all over the globe since 1934. He picked up two trophies in the Camp Drake mixed doubles in Tokyo where he was stationed until he returned to the states on 12 September, 1956.

Stationed in Korea for two years, the sergeant was forced to forego his favorite pastime because at that time there were no bowling alleys in Korea. According to the sergeant, the armed services are erecting facilities for keglers throughout South Korea now and have completed some beautiful lanes at Seoul.

Highest game to date recorded by the sergeant is a 249 and his highest series is a healthy 645. Recently he rolled three games and marked in every frame. Two frames of the 30 were splits and are not counted as a miss. His average for the series was 185.

Maintaining a 177.5 average in four leagues is no small accomplishment as any kegging enthusiast can verify.

Pettit Top Pro Scorer In NBA

New York — The midway point in the 1956-1957 National Basketball Association season found defending champions in command in four of the five individual races, but they're being forced to record or near-record performances to hold their positions.

Last season's champs, who are again setting the pace half-way through the current campaign, are Bob Pettit of St. Louis in scoring, Neil Johnston of Philadelphia in field goal accuracy, Bill Sharman of Boston in free throw efficiency and Bob Cousy of Boston in assists.

Only Maurice Stokes of Rochester, in rebounds, has been able to break the grip on leaderships by last year's title winners. Pettit, the '56 backboard king, is running second.

Pettit, scoring ace of the Hawks, forged ahead in his battle with Paul Arizin, former AFPS All-Star, who now plays for Philadelphia, with 982 points, to the Warrior star's 977. Pettit's 27.3 average a game is topped in all-time records only by the 28.1 racked up in the second half of the 1950 season by George Mikan of the Minneapolis Lakers.

Johnston is third in scoring with 908 points, marking the first time in NBA play that three players have totalled more than 900 points by mid-season. Johnston's field goal percentage is .463, making 304 out of 656.

Sharman, the pro loop's leading foul shooter, sank 190 of 206 free throws for a .922 percentage. Sharman's teammate, Cousy, considered by many as "Mr. Basketball" since Mikan's retirement, came up with 263 assists. Stokes ruled the backboards in the first half with 683 rebounds.

Probably America's oldest native game bird, the mourning dove, may have been a contemporary of the sabre-toothed tiger and giant sloths. Remains of the dove have been discovered in Arizona's Pleistocene cave deposits.

Frisco League Leaders— Robert Wilmoth, rolling for Hq. Sixth Army bowling team, and Robert Burch (left), of the AG Reserve keglers, are holding down the majority of the individual high records in the Frisco Bowling League. Wilmoth possesses individual high series and individual high average with 596 and 180, respectively. Individual high game belongs to Burch for his 236 game.

Post Pinmen Continue League Play With Eye On Presidio Roll-Off

Highlighting Post keg activities, the Frisco Bowling League has been the scene of some outstanding bowling feats. Byron Griffiths picked up a 2-7-10 split at the Presidio lanes while rolling for the Ichi Bans.

A new high series for the league, 596, was posted by Robert Wilmoth, Hq. Co. Sixth Army team. Wilmoth dropped 185-197-214 pins for his high series total.

Ed Kiersztian of the Deuces rolled three games without a miss. Kiersztian marked in every frame but two; those two frames not counting against the kegler since they were splits.

League competition this week saws the league-leading Sky Busters idle while second place CMD split 2-2 with the fifth spot Deuces. Virgil Dodson, Deuces, rolled a 232 game to take second place in the individual high game column of league play.

Third place Hq. Co. Sixth Army took four games from the sixth place Phils. The Topoteers in seventh place took the cellar-dwellers, Ichi Bans, 3-1. Eighth and ninth spot teams, Missileers and the Fireballs, split a four-game encounter down the middle, 2-2.

Action in the Presidio Bowling League saw the league leading Hilltoppers take the third place King Pins 3-1. Leonard took high series for the Hilltoppers with a 565 series and a 211 high game of the night. High series for the King Pins went to Harry Hoffacker with 547 and high game of 189.

Ed Johnson kegged a 596 series and 211 game while his second place Keystone Kops were making a clean 4-0 sweep of their battle with the cellared Radicals. Taking the Dental Clinic 3-1, the Hardnoses pulled into a tie for third spot with the King Pins. Krause's efforts for the night yielded him a 532 high series.

Fifth spot in the league, held by Hq. Co. Sixth Army, remained solidly in their hands when they split 2-2 with the Sneakers. Robert Wilmoth rolled the high game and series for the Hq. Co. team with 191 and 557. Edward Kiersztian was high for the Sneakers with 507 and 190.

Pin-toppling time in the Pacific League saw first place G-1 grab 4 out of 4 in their encounter with ninth place Honor Guard. Daujant of G-1 spilled a 560 series including a 204 and 205 game for eight 200 plus games in league competition.

Second place 6A Signal split 2-2 with fourth spot QMers. Mahon of the Hilltoppers picked up his second 200 game of the season while the Hilltoppers were outkegging the JAGS 4-0.

Tomorrow is the first day of activity in the Post "Roll Off" to select six representatives to the Sixth Army Bowling Tournament. The "Roll Off" will be held tomorrow and Sunday of this week, Saturday and Sunday of next week.

Local Engineers Produce 3-D Plastic Relief Maps

Map history was made at Fort Scott this week when the 171st Engineer Detachment of the 30th Engineer Group produced a three dimensional plastic relief map. Heretofore such maps had only been printed in the Army Map Service in Washington, D. C.

The map, which graphically reveals an area's contour at a glance, is the first of seven such maps assigned to the 30th Group by Sixth U.S. Army Headquarters. Never before has an Army TOE unit embarked on such a project. The assignment calls for the construction of two plastic relief maps of Fort Ord and five of the Hunter Liggett Military Reservation.

"Other attempts, such as terrain models, have been made to introduce a third dimension to area studies," said Lt. John Cleveland, 171st Commander, who explained that "these models have the inherent disadvantages that they cannot readily be duplicated in quantity and can only depict a relatively small area. The new plastic relief maps, on the other hand, are formed on a press and can be produced in any quantity."

The intricate procedure of making the original map form may take as long as two months. With the completion of the form the previously printed flat plastic maps can be stamped out in quantity on the vacuum forming press.

According to the 171st Commander, Operations Sergeant Sfc. Michael Moner is the "technical brains" behind the project. Sergeant Moner learned the detailed procedure for making these new maps during previous assignments at the Army Map Service.

To get started the 171st imported the printed plastic flat maps of the Fort Ord area from Washington. Now, however, facilities have been developed at the 99th Engineer Company for printing the plastic flat maps, and the five Hunter-Liggett maps will be printed here on Post. This will be another 30th Group first—the first plastic flat maps to be printed away from Washington.

To learn this technique Master Sergeants Joseph Maslany and Anthony Pascale were sent to the Army Map Service in Washington where they learned the process first hand.

Army Nurse Corps Slates Birthday Observance Here

The 56th anniversary of the founding of the U.S. Army Nurse Corps will be commemorated at the Presidio tomorrow afternoon with a reception at Letterman Hospital.

Sharing in the Presidio celebration will be eight male nurses assigned to hospital duty at this garrison since late 1956.

Col. Agnes A. Maley, chief nurse for the Sixth U.S. Army, and Lt. Col. Alice J. Robbe, LAH chief nurse, will head the receiving line at the nurses' recreation hall where the reception will be held. Sixth Army and Letterman staffers will join the heads of military and civilian nursing services and organizations in the Bay Area in honoring the Corps' birthday.

The Army Nurse Corps as a whole, numbers 3,600 members, of whom 400 are on duty in the eight western states comprising the Sixth U.S. Army. Since recent legislation opened the Army Nurse Corps and the former Women's Specialist Corps to male members, a total of 13 male nurses have been assigned in this Command.

Nurses have been with the Army since Revolutionary War days when General George Washington pursuaded Congress to employ a matron "to supervise the care of stricken members of the Continental Army." Nurses won military status as a component in 1901, at which time their pay was $40.00 a month and the nurses held no military rank.

Today, the Corps is a commissioned service in which its nurses hold both Reserve and Regular Army status. Highest authorized rank for a nurse is that of colonel, the rank now held by Chief Nurse Agnes A. Melay, of Letterman Army Hospital.

New Rubber Bag Tested For Bulk Fluid

Washington (ANS) — The Army is experimenting with an outsized rubber "bag" which may be the answer to its increasing transportation requirements for rapid mobility and simplier handling of bulk liquids.

In cooperation with the rubber industry the Transportation Corps is testing a device dubbed "the rolling fluid transporter." The "bag" is inflated with liquids such as water, oil or gasoline instead of air and it may prove to be the first major improvement in transportation of bulk fluids since the development of the steel drum.

Component parts of the "transporter" are a series of collapsible fabric reinforced rubber bags centered with appropriate axles which are connected to a towing yoke. Several can be towed behind Army equipment with no loss of the truck body's cargo space.

The transporter, which has a capacity of 500 gallons and weights 4100 pounds fully loaded, presents no greater problem of maneuverability than the conventional auto trailer. An Army jeep can two six transporters on level ground.

Nine Complete Active Service At Fort Mason

Six officers and three enlisted men retired from the Army yesterday at Fort Mason. Traditional ceremonies were held last weekend.

Enlisted men who retired are M/Sgt. Harry Cohen, M/Sgt. Corliss H. Eaton and Master Specialist Paul P. Green.

Twenty-Three Retire

CWO Edward G. Blackmore, 441st Missile Bn., came to the Presidio from a Korea duty station. Sfs. Edgar E. Couch, Co. C, U.S.A. Garrison, who attended the ceremony has served in England, Germany and Formosa.

Those military personnel, who retired yesterday, but did not attend the ceremony are Col. Thomas F. Donahue, Deputy Ordnance Officer for the Sixth U.S. Army Headquarters; Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Elmer P. Gibson, Letterman Army Hospital; Lt. Col. Jack L. Grubb, Headquarters Sixth U.S. Army; Lt. Col. Archie R. Trainer, Post S-1; Maj. Richard H. Duenow, California Military District; Major Paul L. Kelley, Post S-4; Maj. Walter Tobias, Sixth Army Ordnance; CWO Roy H. Edgcomb, Headquarters Sixth Regional Antiaircraft Command; M/Sgt. George W. Dickie, Headquarters Company, U.S.A. Garrison, and M/Sgt. Seth T. Rogers, Headquarters Company, U.S.A. Garrison.

Yesterday had special meaning for Sergeant Dickie, who not only marked his retirement from active service, but celebrated his 62nd birthday.

Formal Dinner-Dance Planned Next Saturday

A formal dinner-dance honoring Valentine's Day is planned for the Presidio Officers' Open Mess, Saturday, 9 February. The main dinner dish will be New York steak at a cost of $2.50 per person, and the meal will be served from 1930 to 2100 hours.

Dancing at the club begins at 2100. Reservations must be made by 1200 hours, 8 February.

Signal Devises New Spotter

A new long range, high speed mortar locator, which can pick up enemy positions and transmit the information to artillery units in seconds, has been developed by the Army Signal Corps' Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth.

Technically knows as the AN/MPQ-4, this electronic spotter uses a new beam technique transmitted from a fixed bulldozer-blade type antenna. With previous models, the antenna moved back and forth on its pedestal while scanning.

The locator is compact and mobile. Everything needed to operate it but a power supply is mounted on a single, easily-towed two-wheel trailer. Bulkier machines need four-wheel trailers and additional vehicles for plotting equipment and operating console.

The newest spotter can be operated either on the trailer or with the console in a foxhole 150 yards away for remote control and safety of the operator in case the set itself comes under fire.

Superior speed of the latest spotter results from a new beam technique in which the projectile appears as blips on the screen. The operator centers hairlines on the blips and the computer gives him a direct coordinate reading of the enemy position.

Two Win Silver In Comptroller

Two Sixth U.S. Army Comptroller officers were promoted to first lieutenant this month.

Lt. John D. Nichols and Lt. Robert O. Dehlendorf II are the recipients of the promotions. Lieutenant Nichols has been with the section since February, 1956, and Lieutenant Dehlendorf since November, 1955.

ARMY POWER—KEY TO PEACE

New Plan Reshuffles Many Post Sections, Units

Changes Will Eliminate Tight Parking, Housing

A series of office and personnel moves, almost completed, will result in a more efficient and convenient Post headquarters organization where the staff sections are concentrated in one area and the personnel service branches in another, Deputy Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist announced this week.

Ample parking space under the Golden Gate Bridge approach was one of the major factors prompting the move of the personal services from buildings 200 and 220 to a group of buildings located at the east end of Crissy Field.

The Billeting Office, Signal Cashier, Post Funds Custodian and I.D. Cards are now located in building 232 at the corner of Mason and Mitchell Streets. Post Transportation has moved from building 220 to 251 and 259, both located on Mitchell Street across from the east end of Crissy Field. The baggage section is now at building 250-A.

The Army Education opens for business as usual, Tuesday, at its new location in building 258, next to the NCO Mess on Marine Drive. Only the central office counseling and testing facilities have moved from building 232. Information briefings will continue to be held in building 240.

Post staff sections concentrated in building 220 will result in an "improved headquarters flow working plan," reports Capt. Robert F. Glynn, Assistant Post S-4. S-4 will occupy room 210 and S-3 will move to rooms 214 and 215. S-2 will move to building 220 from 1239. The Administration Branch, C. & A. and the Transfer Point have moved to rooms 210 and 215 in building 220. Recruiting is located in room 213, building 220.

Some unit movements are also under way presently. E Company, USA Garrison, is moving from buildings 271, 272, 273, 277 and 278 to building 103-A They will continue to mess at 238 until about 19 February. Sixth USA Communications Center has moved from 271 to 103-A. Sixth U. S. Army Flight Det. has moved from 271 to 101.

PO Returns Trucks

More than 700 Sixth U.S. Army vehicles borrowed by the Post Office Department for the Christmas rush are now being returned, according to Col. Calvin L. Whittle, Sixth U.S. Army Transportation Officer.

The vehicles range in size from one-half ton pick-up trucks to five-ton tractor and 10-ton trailer units.

Vol. 5, No. 35 | PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA | Friday 8 February, 1957

Seek Capehart Housing For Presidio's Vital Acres

About 133 acres of the Presidio stretching from Arguello Boulevard to the Julius Kahn playground may be covered with Capehart housing if the request for 303 units now pending before the Department of Defense is approved.

In addition, Fort Baker has requested 114 Capehart units and Fort Barry wants 54 units. Fort Funston, located in southwest San Francisco, has asked for enough units to cover about 17 acres.

The Pacific Coast's first family housing contract, providing for 189 units at Fort Ord, was signed this week by Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth U.S. Army Commander, and Mr. James C. Belda, Director, Federal Housing Administration, San Francisco. Total cost including "off-site" utilities will excees $3,300,000.

The Fort Ord units will be constructed by Sun Gold, Inc., and Inland Empire Builders, Inc., of Riverside. The California Bank of Los Angeles is financing the construction.

Additional projects in Arizona, California, Utah and Washington already approved or awaiting approval total an estimated $100,000,000. The approved list includes 575 units at Fort Huachuca; 209 at the Yuma Test Station; 173, Camp Irwin; 88, Oakland Army Terminal; and 52 in the San Francisco Defense Area.

The Presidio units would be two, three and four-bedroom houses for both non-commissioned and commissioned officers. Maximum cost per house would be $16,500. If approved, construction would not begin for about a year.

Key Staff Will View New Tactics

Presidio officers will be briefed on "the new problems encountered in the tactical employment of atomic weapons in support of Army operations" on 5 March, 1957, when a team from Headquarters, CONARC, conducts a course of instruction entitled, "Model Corps Map Exercise," at Harmon Armory from 0800 to 1630.

The exercise will depict a Corps in the approach march, attack and defense. They will demonstrate the impact of atomic weapons on the battlefield and their influence upon tactical formations.

The exercise will be presented to commanders and key staff officers of Headquarters, Presidio of San Francisco; Headquarters, 30th Engineer Group, and Headquarters, 46th Ordnance Group. Company commanders of these units are also scheduled to attend. It is desired that other officers deemed advisable who can be spared from their duties attend.

IDPC Confab At Presidio Next Week

About 75 representatives of the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense and the Department of the Army, Navy and Air Force will attend an Industrial Defense Program Conference at the Presidio this Tuesday and Wednesday.

The conference completes a four-part series of regional meetings. The others were held at Mobile, Ala., with the Air Force as host and at Philadelphia and Chicago with the Navy as host.

Objectives of the conference are to review present industrial defense activities, to evaluate the effectiveness of the industrial defense program and to emphasize the necessity of industrial defense to national preparedness.

Brig. Gen. Legare K. Tarrant, Deputy Commanding General of the Sixth U.S. Army, will welcome the group.

Army Gets First New Transport

The first U.S. Army L-23D command transport has been delivered by the Beech Aircraft Corp. in Wichita. The transport is part of a $2,800,000 production contract for several of the new aircraft.

The L-23D is the Army version of the Beechcraft E50 Twin-Bonanza, first shown last December. Deliveries will continue through this spring.

New Post Theater Rules Ease Guest Restrictions

New rules governing admission to local post theaters were released this week by Sfc. William L. Fox, Post Special Services.

Among the changes is the elimination of advance written permission formerly required for civilians who accompany military personnel to the theaters. Authorization is now available at the ticket windows.

Another local addition is a three-cent admission cost cut for children under 12 years. Children will now be charged fifteen cents instead of the former eighteen-cent charge.

Families of active duty or retired members; unmarried widows; and minor children of deceased members may now attend Post theaters with proper identification. The theaters have also opened their doors to civilians and their families who reside on Post.

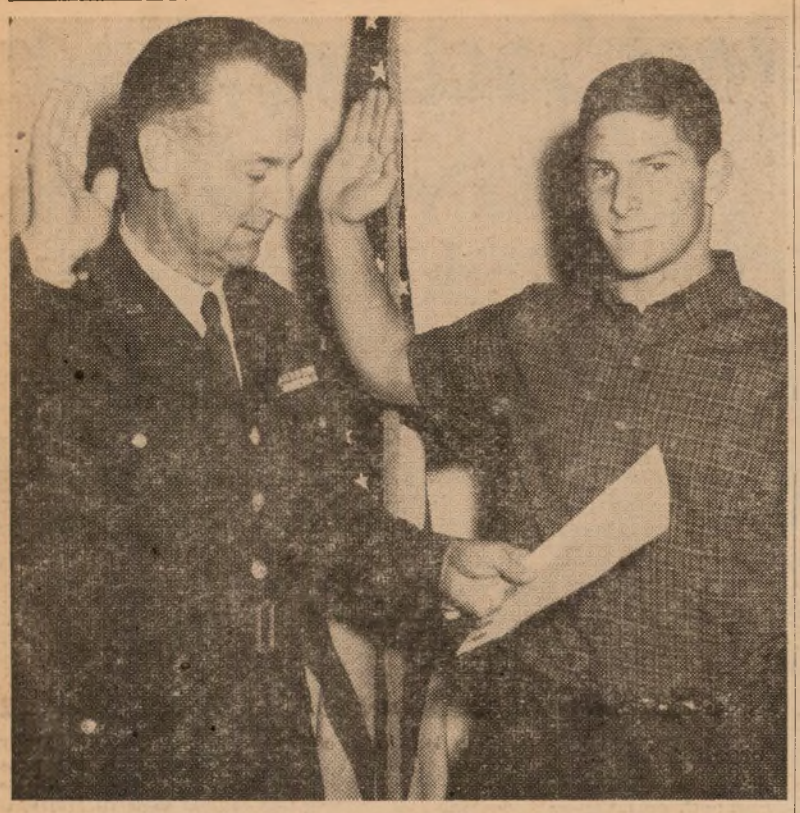
Others eligible to attend Post theaters are active duty and retired military personnel; reserve officers on active duty for a period requiring assignment to quarters overnight; and totally disabled veterans accompanied by one person not otherwise eligible for admittance.

Rubber-Tired Buddy

Dig, Dig, Dig That Crazy Ditch!

Mobile ditching machines capable of digging four-foot deep trenches at more than 20 feet a minute are being tested at the Corps of Engineers' Research and Development Laboratories at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Manufactured by the Owen-Pewthers Co. of College Station, Tex., and the Barber-Greene Co. of Aurora, Ill., the rubber-tired units may prove useful to the Army and the Civil Defense Administration.



AnnualCPX Starts Here Next Week

"Friendly" and "enemy" armies—both equipped with atomic, chemical, bacteriological, radiological and electronic weapons — will battle it out during operation Breakthrough II next Saturday and Sunday.

More than 2,700 Regular Army, National Guard and Reserve personnel from the seven western states will be involved in the command post exercise. However, troops will not take part as this is a paper exercise for commanders and their staffs.

Major General Frank N. Roberts will command the Sixth U. S. Field Army during the exercise. The training plan calls for an attack against "Aggressor" forces to seize an objective deep in "enemy" territory.

During the exercise the headquarters at the Presidio, Fort Ord and Fort Lewis will be in continuous contact by means of radio and telephone communications.

New Role for Brig. Gen. Legare K. Tarrant is exemplified as he swears in Northern California's 1,000th enlistee under the Reserve Forces Act of 1955. General Tarrant became Deputy Commanding General of the Sixth U.S. Army this week after serving as commander of the 6th AAA Regional Command since last August.

Formal Ceremonies Welcome AA General To New Assignment

Brigadier General Legare K. Tarrant, former commander of the 6th AAA Regional Command, became Deputy Commanding General of the Sixth U.S. Army this week. Formal military honors welcoming the general were held Wednesday.

The general is being succeeded in his Fort Baker command by Major General Edward J. McGaw.

Born and reared in Newberry, S. C., General Tarrant attended Newberry College for two years before his appointment to West Point in 1924. He was graduated and appointed a second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Corps in 1928.

In 1935 the general entered the Coast Artillery School at Fort Monroe, Va., and was assigned to the 51st CA Regiment upon his graduation.

In 1950 General Tarrant became Antiaircraft Artillery Officer of the Alaskan Command with headquarters at Elmendorf Air Force Base, and two years later was assigned to command the 102nd Antiaircraft Artillery Brigade, later redesignated the 52nd, at Fort Wadsworth, N. Y.

Prior to his Fort Baker assignment, the general was appointed Deputy Chief of the Army Forces Special Weapons Project in Washington, D. C., and served at Sandia Base, Albuquerque, N. M.

On Film

Chief, Students In New Series

A panel discussion between Army Staff Chief General Maxwell D. Taylor and students of the Armed Forces' Staff College on "The Mission Of the United States Army," is the subject of Officers Conference Film No. 12, now available at the Post Signal Section.

In consideration of the timeliness of the film it will be of particular interest to officer and enlisted audiences, as determined by installation commanders. During the panel discussion encompassing the film, General Taylor introduces current military ideas and policy in an informative and forthright manner.

Defense Bill May Stop Some From Taking Old Ranks

A Defense-sponsored bill that would deny officers receiving general discharges the inherent right to take up a former enlisted grade has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Rep. Arthur Winstead (D., Miss.).

At present, a Reserve or temporary officer whose discharge is under honorable conditions is entitled to reenlist in the grade he held before taking a commission.

Under the proposed bill, the right to former enlisted status would be extended to Reserve and temporary officers with honorable discharges, but not those with general discharges. The Army could grant enlisted status to those with general discharges if they are found fit.

Casting!

Local Musical Seeking Talent

Theatrical-minded servicemen and women are asked to attend the casting try-outs for "Hi Yank!" the Army's latest musical comedy introducing the saga of Sad Sack, "the greatest" in military laughgetting. Singers, dancers, musicians, stage hands and handy men generally are needed for the show, which begins casting 14-15 February.

Local Press To Feature Post Wac Of The Month

Pfc. Mollie Bruhn, a 24-year-old San Francisco girl, is Company D "WAC Of The Month" for the Presidio. Extra honors were bestowed on her by the San Francisco Call-Bulletin this week when the newspaper prepared a feature on the senior enlisted women's new billets by the Lombard Gate.

Mollie was photographed in the billets by way of illustrating the advantages awaiting servicewomen in her present category after they achieve Noncom rank.

Assigned to the Sixth U.S. Army's G-2 Section here, Pfc. Bruhn prepared for her present work through a preparatory course at the Military Intelligence School, Fort Holabird, Maryland. She was one of a group of enlisted women graduating from basic training school whose qualifications met the requirements of the Intelligence course.

An enthusiastic participant in Presidio social and recreational activities, Pfc. Bruhn is a valued player on the Post's Enlisted Women's bowling and basketball teams.

Army Will Sponsor Flight Study Of ROTC Students

Sixth U.S. Army Commander, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, announced this week that negotiations are being conducted with seven colleges and universities in this Army area to offer aviation flight training to selected ROTC students.

Contracts have been signed with Oregon State College at Corvallis and the University of Washington at Seattle. Instruction is scheduled to begin during the Spring term of the present academic year.

Contracts have been submitted to the University of Santa Clara, Utah State Agricultural College at Logan, Utah, and Arizona State College at Tempe, Ariz., and are being studied. Both schools expect to start the training program as soon as the contracts are accepted.

Two other institutions, the University of California at Los Angeles and the University of Idaho at Moscow, have been selected by the Department of the Army for flight training instruction, but have elected to defer the program until the 1957-58 school year.

In all, the Department of the Army has chosen 40 schools throughout the country to offer this training, and the program is designed to produce 400 ROTC graduates with aviation training during the first year.

The quota for schools in the Sixth U.S. Army area is divided as follows: Oregon State College, 15; Utah State Agricultural College, 12; University of Santa Clara, 8; University of Washington, 8; Arizona State College, 7.

The purpose of the program is to encourage college ROTC students to seek a career in Army aviation and to create a reserve pool of qualified pilots who may be utilized in the event of a national emergency. It is anticipated that the first year quota of 400 will be increased to 800 for the second year, and probably remain at that figure annually.

The flight training program will consists of 70 hours of instruction, one-half being devoted to ground instruction and one-half to in-flight instruction. The course is extra-curricular for those selected and will be accomplished on the student's own time. The course is the standard flight instruction approved by the Civil Aeronautics Administration (CAA).

Instructors will be provided from civilian sources on the subcontract basis with CAA-approved flying schools. The course is under the direct supervision and administration of the school's Professor of Military Science and Tactics (PMS&T).

The course is limited to fourth year ROTC students. All students accepted must pass a rigid physical examination and aptitude test. Those successfully completing the course are qualified for a CAA private pilot's license.

Model Making class will be held tonight at the new Presidio Arts and Crafts shop in preparation of the Army-wide model airplane meet sponsored by the Adjutant General and sanctioned by the Academy of Model Aeronautics. Instructor for the class, Pete Thomas (above), gets the jump on his students by completing the wing assembly of the twin-engine Beech that he is building. A Presidio model airplane contest will be held in June and the Sixth Army finals, also at the Presidio, will be held in July.

Model Makers Program Slated For Craft Shop

Model airplane enthusiasts will have kits and free instruction available to them tonight at the new Presidio Arts and Crafts shop, Bldg. 122, 1700 hours.

All Army personnel, on active duty more than 90 days, are encouraged to prepare for the Army-wide model airplane meet sponsored by the Adjutant General and sanctioned by the Academy of Model Aeronautics which will be held in August.

The Presidio will have its own model airplane meet sometime in June, and this will be followed by the Sixth Army meet at the Presidio, 6-7 July. This meet, most likely, will be held on the main parade ground with representatives from the Academy of Model Aeronautics officiating.

"The Army's really going all out on this contest, and it's a great chance for model airplane fans to actively participate in their hobby," says Pete Thomas, LAH Special Services, who will be instructing the hobby class. He adds, "There's lots of room for beginners; we've got a wide variety of model kits and all the necessary facilities."

For the Army-wide grand finals in August each area level command may enter a team with a maximum of 12 members.

Another phase of the Adjutant General-sponsored contest is a "special scale models of Army aircraft" event which will be conducted and judged in Washington, D.C. Each area level command can submit three entries.

Scale models of either Army airplanes or helicopters currently in use by the Army will be limited to 12-inch minimum and 24-inch maximum. The three winning models will be retained by the Department of the Army for display in the Pentagon and use by Army Aviation.

Contestants are not restricted as to number of events entered.

Diver Wins E-7 Promotion

The only man in the Presidio area to be promoted to E-7 during the current quarter is Master Specialist Charles W. Holland of the 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction), commanded by Capt. Charles F. McCurdy.

Master Specialist Holland, who has been diving for the Army during six of his 12 years in the service, served as NCOIC of the 561st diving crew during the Letterman pier project completed this winter. He has also recently worked on a pier destruction project in Sausalito.

He achieved his greatest depth while diving for an American construction firm in Japan. On leave from the Army at the time, Master Specialist Holland descended to a depth of 324 feet to inspect the work being done by a Japanese salvage firm. The wreck inspected was a Russian cruiser sunk during the Russo-Japanese war which reputedly contained $53 million. "But I didn't see a penny," he adds.

Specialist Holland, who has been at Fort Baker for 17 months, is married and has two children.

Civilian School Teaches English To Post Troops

"No hablo ingles, sir. No comprendo."

What can a company commander do when 20 of his men speak little English and understand at best only the most elementary Army vocabulary? — like "chow," "pass," and "pay."

Even if the officer and his NCO's spoke Spanish, they would have to issue all orders in two languages. Confronted with a consignment of 20 Spanish-speaking troopers fresh out of basic training, 1st Lt. Richard Pardo, executive officer, 549th Base Survey Engineer Company, decided his men would have to take Basic English.

The problem was how and where? Through the cooperation of M/Sgt. Cecil E. Bartholomew of the Presidio Army Education Center, arrangements were made with the Benjamin Franklin Adult School to begin an experimental class for non-English speaking Army personnel. While the plan was being organized other engineer units, the 99th, the 561st, and Headquarters Company, 30th Engineer Group, all with non-English speaking enlisted men, assigned personnel to the new classes.

Monday a group of 28 Spanish-speaking enlisted men, most of them from Puerto Rico, attended their first day of instruction from three experienced adult education teachers at Benjamin Franklin High School. The 28 students have been divided into three groups of nine or ten each to provide a maximum of personal attention to individual problems.

Between now and late May the classes will meet from 0815 to 1000 hours five days a week. (In cooperation with the Presidio Army Education Center, the Benjamin Franklin Adult School also presents the on-post, evening high school program.)

From the company commander's point of view the experiment should be well worth the time and effort, according to Sgt. Bartholomew.

Second Win

Engineers Award Barracks Plaque

The 99th Engineer Company has been awarded the 30th Engineer Group Best Barracks Award for January. It was the second win in four months for the company.

The presentation was made by Group Commander Col. Lawrence R. St. John to Capt James R. Seufert, who in turn presented the plaque to First Sergeant Poston H. Tapp.

Others instrumental in winning the award were M/Sgt. Joseph Maslany, M/Sgt. Juan Francisco, Sfc. Francis Murphy and Sfc. Michael Moner.

Did-it-themselves!

Engineer Unit Installs Giant Repro Camera; Saves $5,000

An electronically controlled camera equal in size to about two average rooms has been installed by 99th Engineer Company enlisted personnel in their reproduction plant. It is believed to be the first time that a camera of this size has been installed in a topo-survey unit by men of the unit.

Do-it-yourself installation effected about a $5,000 savings. The work was directed by Sgt. Clifford Schultz and Spl Howard Foust. They were assisted by Sp2 Charles Ramsey, Pvt. Fred Levy and Pvt. Grady James.

Dismantling the old camera and installing the new took the men more than a week. Among the problems encountered was the lifting of a 25-foot beam which weighed about 5,000 pounds and was eight feet high.

The camera, which is largely push-botton operated, can produce a 40- x 40-inch negative. It can be operated by one man and is used to copy material needed to print maps, half-tone photographs and continuous tone negatives.

Another camera which can produce 24- x 30-inch negatives is also scheduled for installation by the crew. Mr. Walter S. Lotus, Inspector of Topo Maintenance from the Granite City Engineer Depot, supervised the initial installation.

Electronic Computer Memorizes Pertinent Data On Army Officers

By Sp3 Dick Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

There's a hungry electronic computer in Washington, D.C., currently at work digesting the pertinent data on every officer in the United States Army.

Not only will the Department of the Army's Electronic Digital Computer (705) memorize the names of some 120,000 Army officers, but it will record on magnetic tape from 200 to 300 important facts relating to each officer. This information will be available at a moment's notice and can be revised and continually updated.

The job of keeping the 705 up to date by daily feeding it thousands of new facts falls to the MRU divisions of Army commands all over the world.

In addition to supplying and receiving information on its own men, Sixth Army MRU units transmit and receive Army personnel information for Alaska, the Pacific and the Far East and relay it to DA.

Key to the system are two brand new data transceivers which have only been in operation at the Presidio since the first of January. Still on an experimental basis they will be used in a parallel operation scheduled to start in March. For six months the new and the old systems will both be used. At the conclusion of this period the Machine Accounting Branch should be wholly on the new system.

During each 24-hour period the Sixth Army Machine Accounting Branch at the Presidio makes scheduled contact with Forts Lewis and Dix, DA, AFFE, USARPAC and the other five continental Armies. Three two-person teams handle the operation on a round the clock basis. Capt. Bradd D. Coons is chief of the branch.

Hawaiian Punch cards are received at the Machine Accounting Branch of Sixth US Army AG section at the Presidio over newly installed transceiver units. The new machines can receive officer personnel data punch cards from identical machines sending identical cards thousands of miles away. The Presidio receives cards from the Far East as well as Hawaii. Above, Sfc. Vivian Brill, supervisor, operates the machine while Capt. Bradd B. Coons, Chief, and Sp3 Katherine Hopfe, operator, observe.

Either of the two data receivers in operation at the Presidio can be switched to send or receive punch card data. On the continent the information is transmitted over telephone lines. A radio hook-up is utilized to send and receive material to AFFE and USARPAC. A teletype system is used with the overseas transmission to insure the compatibility of both sending and receiving machines.

While the present transceiver system is only set up to handle officer data cards, Captain Coons explains that eventually the Army will install a similar system for enlisted men. "Why, we even have the plugs installed in the room for additional machines," he notes.

"This new system of personnel accounting could never have been accomplished except for private business which lead the way," reports Major Robert D. Jones, Sixth Army AG. He adds that the Army is ahead of other major services in its utilization of modern personnel accounting techniques.

A demonstration of the new system's capabilities will be held as soon as the MRU division completes the renovation now under way, says Major Jones.

Toreros Vie In Las Vegas Tourney

Honor Guard Takes Intramural Title Tilt

A neck and neck game right down to the final buzzer with the victors winning by three points wound up the '56-'57 intramural basketball season as "A" Co., better known as the Honor Guard, eked out a 83-80 victory in the last 90 seconds of the championship tilt over "D" Btry., 9th AAA. The high scoring offensive game was a nip and tuck battle all the way.

Center Tor Hansen, Honor Guard, and D Btry. 9th AAA guard Lloyd Parks waged a two-man scoring duel throughout the encounter. Hansen won by the same margin as his team, with 31 points to Parks' 28. Hansen picked up 20 of his 31 markers in the first half. Parks spread his buckets a little more evenly over the two periods with 15 in the first half and 13 in the second stanza.

Crowding Parks for scoring honors on the AAA quint was forward Don Duede with 25 buckets. Duede dumped only 8 free throws in the second period.

Bill Newsham garnered 12, Glen Crass potted 10, Gerald DeVaney 2, and George Giba 3 tallies for the losers.

Hansen was aided in the scoring column by teammates Ken Armbruster with 13, Bob Bondanza, guard, with 17, Gene Guerra with 10, John Behling with 7 and Bill Soderquist, 5.

Guerra was the only man to leave the game via the personal foul route. A total of 19 fouls was called against the Honor Guard and D Btry. collected 15 personals.

The quarter-final meeting between Hq. Co., 30th Engrs. and 537th Engrs. dropped the 537th from the intramural championship contenders when they lost a 56-40 decision.

Ed Johnson, rangy Hq. Co. center, dealt the Surveyors misery under the backboards and in the scoring column throughout the encounter. Johnson garnered 8 points in the first half and 10 in the second half. Johnson and the towering Robert Payne took control of the rebounding for Hq. Co.

Philip Jeske, Hq. Co. guard, who played a real cool offensive first half, one free throw, caught fire in the second half to sink six shots from the floor for 12 tallies.

Lowell Bassett hit for 11 points in the first period and cooled off to pick up only 6 in the second half. Keith McNeil added 6 more for Hq. Co.

Muril Vincelette was high for the Surveyors with 14 counters and Marion Efaw dropped in 9 for the 537th quint.

John R. Cobb has the distinction of being the first person to travel more than 400 m.p.h. on land. The run was made at Bonneville Flats.

Pasadenans Downed By Locals, 25th Win

The red-hot Presidio Toreros will be gambling an unblemished record of 25 straight wins, against a chance to gain national recognition when they tangle with some of the best service and industrial basketball teams in the nation at the Southwest Invitationed Tournament in Las Vegas this week.

Currently the locals, despite their impressive win streak, have failed to gain top echelon regard because of the relative weakness and calibre of their victims. In the Vegas competition they will be meeting their stiffest opposition to date.

The largest turnout this season, estimated to be 1,100-1,200 strong, crowded their way into LAH Gym to witness the Toreros defeat Pasadena College 77-59.

Offering more competition than any other opponent thus far this season the collegiate quint stayed within two or three points of the locals for the majority of the first half. The intermission score stood at 36-32 in favor of the Toreros.

Presidio's center, Jim Cummings, potted 17 markers to top the post quintets' scoring efforts. Carroll Williams and Ron Reynoir, each picked up 14 points a piece and Norm Ellenberger was right behind them with 13 more counters.

Pasadena's 6 ft. 6 in., 259 pound center, Eric Pyle, hogged the backboard during most of the game and captured scoring honors for the night with 19 points. Pyle was assisted on the backboards by Jim Bond, the highly touted All American from Pampa, Texas. Usually high scoring, Bond was held to a mere 12 points by the locals tight defense.

By the middle of the third quarter the fast-breaking Toreros had winded the Pasadenans and began to increase their lead to a healthy margin. The final buzzer caught the Pasadena quint with an 18 point deficit and the score reading 77-59.

Army Athletes Set All Time Olympic High

Washington (ANS) — The greatest number of athletes in Army history won berths on the 1956 U. S. Summer Olympic Team and led the parade of Service participants with 34 individuals in 14 events at Melbourne.

Some 500 applicants, representing every major Army command, applied for tryouts for the various Olympic teams. In addition, approximately 900 Army athletes participated in All-Army and Inter-Service elimination competitions as a means of qualifying for the Final Olympic Trials.

The other three services qualified 46 athletes for the Olympic competition as follows: Air Force 24, Navy, 15 and Marine Corps 7.

WAC Quintet Walks Over McArthur Five

The locals smothered the opposing five in the first stanza with a 31-3 half time showing. While the Presidio quint dunked 18 more, MacArthur could muster only three points in the third quarter.

Georgia Kelly was the big gun for the local lasses with 20 and Florian Vierra tallied 18. Mary Phillips accounted for 12 additional markers in behalf of the Presidio quint.

High scorers for the MacArthur five were Barham with seven and Maunce with four.

Credit for holding the opposition to 13 points goes to the locals hard working guards, Peggy Harris, Dorothy Miller, Mollie Bruhn and Patsy Schultz.

Lost to overseas reassignment are the services of Daphney Melson and Momi Domingo. Melson and Domingo departed the Presidio early this week.

The local female quint is second in the Northern California Armed Forces Women's Basketball League. They hold a three won, one lost record to the league leading Mather five who boast a 6-0 conference record.

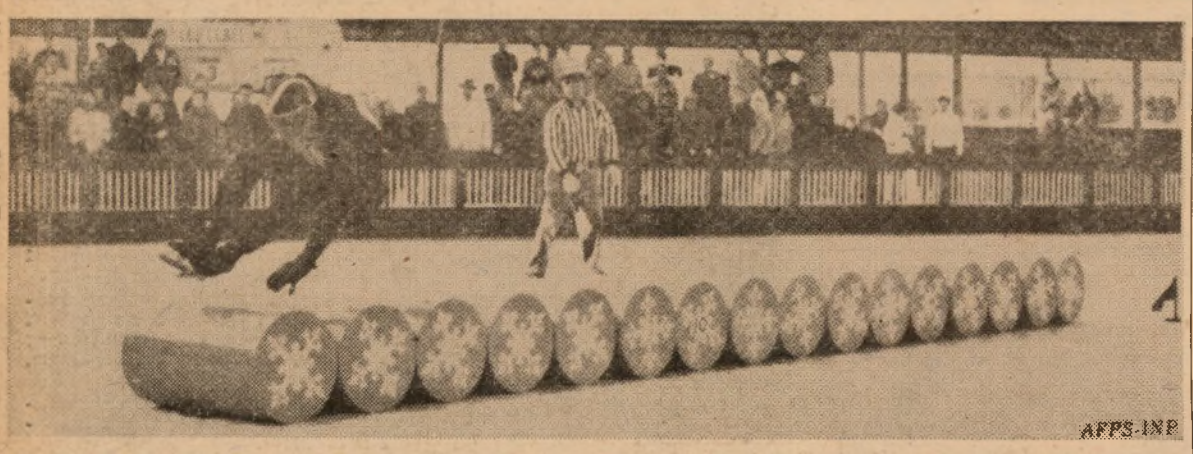
Former Star Cager Stationed Ft. Lewis

Two of the big reasons that San Francisco's Dons boast the longest string of consecutive wins in basketball history, 60, were their downfall. The two big reasons are the former Dons, Bill Russell and Pvt. K. C. Jones.

Jones is now stationed at Ft. Lewis, Washington, and Russell is playing professional ball with the Boston Celtics. The two of them recently returned from the land down under where they combined their talents to carry the United States through the games undefeated.

The Olympic champions met the Dons at the Loyola Invitational Tourney in Chicago on their return from the Games. The Dons' winning streak was cut off at the 60 mark.

"You build 'em up and then cut 'em off," was Jones reply to the question of how he felt about defeating the team that he had played for for the past four years.



Scot Was Fined For Damage To 'Hekkis'

If it's any consolation to California's angling law violators who get caught — they aren't the first ones. And they'll probably get off easier than did John Mangelous.

Mangelous was fined five pounds for salmon fishing out of season on the River Dee in Scotland on June 21, 1533, according to the record.

Mangelous and friends, defendants in one of the many Scottish angling law violation cases of those early times, were haled into court by one Henry Bishop et al., on charges of "fifhing in the water of Dee, under filence of night, and destruction of the fymmeris (frames) and hekkis (fish screens) thereof; and for ftriking their fervants."

The case was recorded by Robert Pitcairn in "Criminal Trials in Scotland, 1488-1624," published in Edinburgh in 1833.

'Roll Out the Barrel'— World barrel-jumping champion Leo Lebel, 27, of Hartford, Conn., sails over 16 (count 'em) barrels in a successful defense of his title in the seventh annual international competition at Grossinger's (N. Y.) Ice Skating Arena. Lebel, an electrical salesman and ex-eastern U.S. amateur speed-skating titleholder, won the title for the third consecutive year. His distance was 26' 5½".

Package Plan Offers Low Rates To Skiers

For those who hail from the southern states and who have never strapped on a pair of ski boots and those who were raised among the snowy slopes and are perfectly at home with a ski pole in their hand, opportunity is knocking at both doors. The Service Club has announced a low priced package-plan for three days of this bone-shattering pleasure.

On 8-10 March you can board a bus at the Presidio, have deluxe sleeping accommodations with bath for two nights, be served a box lunch Friday night en route, free cocktails upon arrival, two breakfasts and two dinners, and transportation to and from the ski area.

Free ski instructions on Saturday, reduced rates on tows and lifts, enjoy dancing and Get Acquainted night, and return to the Presidio Sunday night. All this is yours for $22.75.

Rental fees for boots, skis and tow charges will amount to approximately $7.00. Total expense need not exceed $30.00 for the three-day holiday. Quarters will be motel accommodations at Stateline and skiing at Heavenly Valley.

All persons interested in taking advantage of the low-rate package-plan should contact Miss Walker, Ext. 2000 by 28 February. A $10.00 deposit is required for the 8-10 March jaunt to the ski runs.

Response to this announcement will determine continuance of such a plan for future trips to the mountain slopes.

Skiing conditions are excellent at this time of the year and should provide more than ample opportunity for some hair-raising moments.

Third place CMD split 2-2 with the cellar-dwelling Ichi Bans. Hq. Co. Sixth Army, holding down the second slot in league standings, defeated seventh place Topoteers 3-1.

AG Reserve handed the Misileers a 3-1 drubbing and the Phills gave the Fireballs a 3-1 thumping. No team was able to white-wash their opponent in the Frisco League this week.

Top seated G-1 of the Pacific Bowling League skunked their opponents, the last place Sleuths, 4-0, to stretch their lead to 10 games over their nearest competitors, second place 6A Signal. Brown topped the G-1 keglers with a 528 series and 200 game while Bill Ogle rolled a 436 series for the hapless Sleuths.

The Hilltoppers downed 6A Signal, 3-1, to pull themselves into a tie for the second high spot in league standing. Aiding the Hilltopper cause was Charles Mahon with his 549 series which topped all league series for the night's kegging activity. A. F. Dennis felled a 507 series for 6A Signal.

Local Marksmen Win 3 Firsts In Southland Meet

The Sixth Army Pistol Team blazed their way to three first places and several individual honors in the Southland Pistol Tournament held last weekend in San Diego.

M/Sgt. James L. Wade from the Presidio, firing in the Master division, the highest class in pistol competition, garnered a third place in the grand aggregate, the accumulation of points from the .22, .38 and .45 caliber matches. Wade scored 2582 points out of 2700 possible, trailing the winning score of 2599 by 17 points.

M/Sgt. Wade also took a blue ribbon in the Centerfire, National Match Course. This consists of thirty shots, ten each in Timed, Slow and Rapid Fire with a .32 or higher caliber pistol. Wade scored a 295-point total out of a 300 possible.

In the .22 caliber four-man Master team match, the Sixth Army Blue squad ran away from all competition as they amassed 1170 points out of 1200 possible. The team effort was only seven points away from the world's record of 1177. Team members firing this match were M/Sgt. Wade, Sfc. Nelson H. Lincoln, Letterman Army Hospital; Sgt. Merriweather Jones, Fort Lewis, and M/Sgt. John L. Davis, Fort Lewis. A second place in the .45 caliber and a third spot in the .38 were also taken by the Sixth Army Master Team.

In the Expert class, the Sixth Army men won both the .22 and .38 caliber team matches and placed second in the .45 caliber team contest. An 1139 aggregate was the winning score in the .22 match while 1108 points was good for first in the .38 team match.

M/Sgt. George J. Kersting of Fort Lewis, firing on the Sixth Army squad, earned five firsts and one second in competition on the Expert level. He gained wins in the .45 caliber slow fire; the .45 caliber National Match Course; the .45 caliber aggregate, a combination of the slow, timed and rapid fire with the .45 pistol; the grand aggregate and the special NRA Building Fund Match.

Over 200 competitors fired in the two-day match which was sponsored by the San Diego Police Revolver Club.

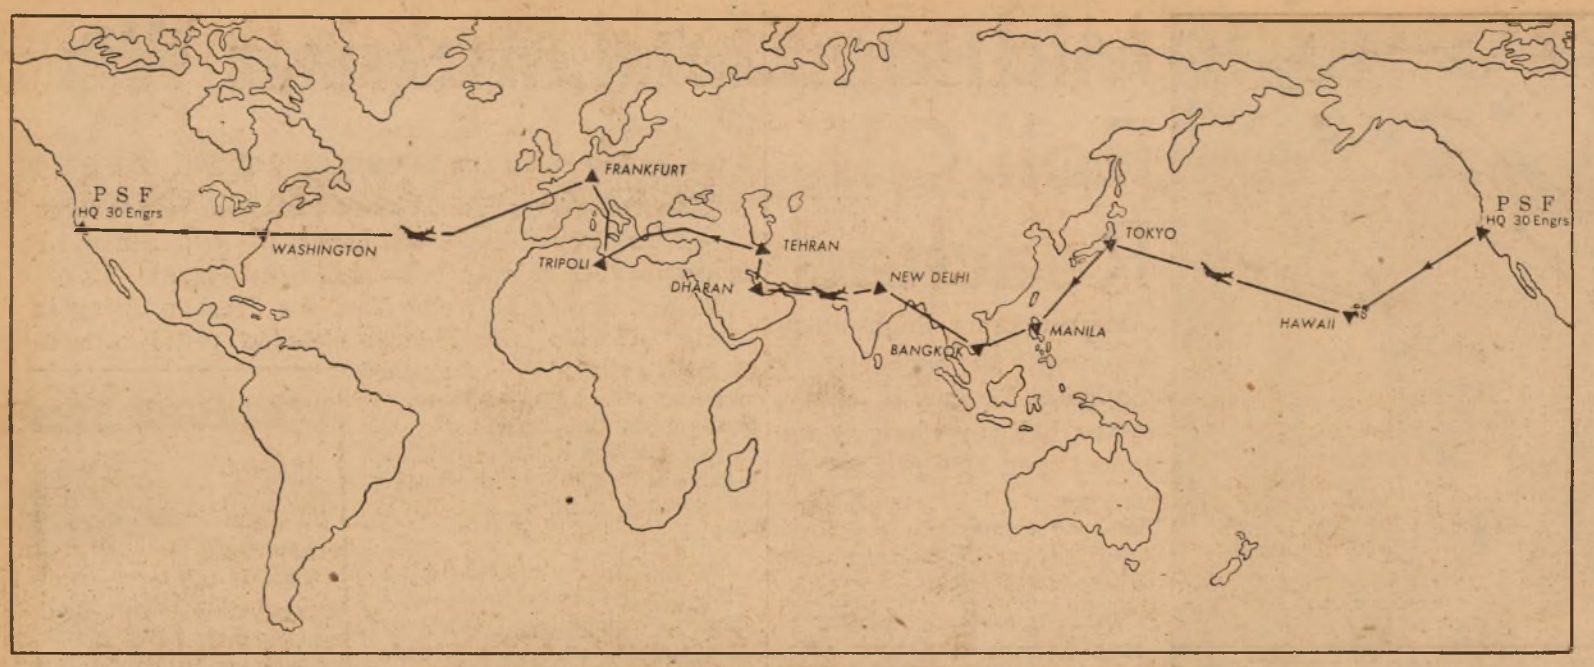
Australia beat India by an innings and five runs in Madras recently in the first match of the test cricket series between the two countries.

Locals Down Hamilton; Fall From Tourney

Presidio's Torero netmen, defending All-Army Volleyball champs, defeated their arch rivals, Hamilton Field, twice national service champs, at the Sacramento YMCA Volleyball tournament this past weekend.



Second game of their three-game match saw the locals drop a match to the San Jose netmen and their second loss in the tournament to the Olympic Club eliminated them from further tourney competition.

Bert Millard turned in an outstanding performance as spiker for the locals. Phil Kilmer, George Cowie, C. Garancs and Bob Jones filled out the roster in the hitters positions. Holding down the setmen positions were Gordon Peak, Dick Godino and Catalino Ignacio.

Team captain Bob Jones was particularly elated over the victory at Hamilton Field's expense, despite the outcome of the other two games. Jones also stated that the local netmen would be ready for the Sixth Army Volleyball Tournament to be held at LAH Gym, 22-26 April.

Southpaw shot by 'D Btry. 9th AAA cager was one of the many attempts loosed in the intramural tilt that saw the 537th Engineers lose an 85-59 decision to the AAA quint.

Retiring

CWO Wins Medal For Top Service

Before retiring last week CWO Roy H. Edgcomb received the Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant in ceremonies at Fort Baker.

CWO Edgcomb was commended for his work in the G-4 section of the 6th AAA Regional Command Headquarters, which controls the NIKE guided missile and anti-aircraft gun installations on the West Coast.

He received congratulations from Brig. Gen. Legare K. Tarrant and Col. R. A. Claffee, the command's Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4.

Certificate

AAA Captain Wins Award In Key Job

An Achievement Certificate for the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command was presented to Capt. Bernard C. Sanders, 441st AAA Missile Bn., by Col. Daniel A. Ranney, 30th AAA Group Commander.

Captain Sanders has been Battalion Supply Officer since August, 1955, and has "planned, coordinated and supervised all activities concerned with arrangements for supply, evacuation, transportation services and other logistical matters in a highly exemplary manner and contributed greatly to the success achieved by the 441st AAA Missile Bn. in accomplishing its mission."

Copter Helps Save Badly Burned Man

The commercial helicopter service presently being used by the Army on a trial basis met its first test of emergency recently when Joe Greer of the Post Engineer Section received a severe electrical burn across the face and neck while working at Angel Island.

Ten minutes after pilot William Grossman was alerted, he had completed the pickup and was setting down at Fort Baker where Greer received treatment in the dispensary. "And we could have done it even faster," reported Sfc. Robert J. Mabee, helicopter traffic control director, "but Grossman was in the air with passengers when we got the call."

Info Service Set To Guide Army Flyers

A global flight information service to insure aviators high quality flight data in critical world areas has been established by the Army's Aviation Flight Information Division.

Field detachments are planned for Heidelberg, Germany; Tokyo, Japan; Fort Amador, Canal Zone; and Fort Richardson, Alaska.

The Jeppesen Airway Manual, official document of Army Flight Information, includes navigation aids, radio facilities, airway routing, radio procedures, radar information, danger area data, instrument let-down and approach procedures. The manual is distributed to more than 3500 Army, National Guard and Army Reserve aviators and supplemented by weekly revisions.

Checking Those "far away places with the strange sounding names" that he will be visiting during the next month is Colonel Lawrence St. John, Commander of the 30th Engineer Group. He will check mapping and occupation operations in Libya, South Pacific and Iran. The map above traces the route and key stops.

Engineer Chief Will Circle Globe During Check Of Key Units

Colonel Lawrence R. St. John, 30th Engineer Group Commander, and Lt. Robert J. Wallace, Assistant Group S-3 Officer, will depart this week on a 40-day inspection tour of the Group's operations in other countries. The officers plan to make more than a dozen stops on four continents.

The trip will afford Colonel St. John his first opportunity to inspect the operations in overseas areas. Purpose of the journey is to check the progress of these units and to help iron out problems.

The desert mapping expedition in Libya, the Iranian Survey Project and the Occultation Program in the South Pacific Islands are the major projects to be visited. The officers will leave from Travis Air Force Base and make their first stop in Hawaii.

Their itinerary calls for stops in Japan; Clark Air Force Base in the Philippine Islands; Saigon, Indo China; Bangkok, Thailand; Calcutta and New Delhi, India; Karachi, Pakistan, and Dharan, Saudi Arabia.

Colonel St. John and Lieutenant Wallace will spend about one week in Teheran, Iran. They will inspect the headquarters, personnel and surveying operations there, in addition to confering with persons in the Geographical Division of the Imperial Iranian Army and the Iran National Cartographic Center.

The last overseas stop will be at Libya, where the officers will spend a week inspecting the Desert Mapping Force which recently left the Presidio.

Before returning to the Presidio, Colonel St. John and Lieutenant Wallace will stop in Washington, D. C., to present a progress report on the 30th Engineer Group's overseas projects to Army Map Service officials.

Dateline: Everywhere!

The Star Presidian will be carrying several foreign datelines in the coming weeks in conjunction with Colonel St. John's tour of the 30th Engineer Group's overseas operations. The colonel has agreed to relay photographs and up-to-date stories covering his major stops and highlighting the various projects underway.

New Insignia Adopted For Army Artillerymen

The traditional crossed cannons will be joined by a guided missile in forming the insignia of the Army's artillery forces, the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command announced this week.

The Army has adopted the insignia in recognition of the modernization of artillery weapons, according to information received from the Department of the Army.

The artillery cannons will remain crossed, but will have a composite guided missile placed vertically at the center, representing the surface - to - surface and surface-to-air missiles now in use.

It is the first change in artillery insignia since the present one was adopted in 1907.

Present plans call for the new design to be worn by all artillery officers as soon as it becomes available, sometime in 1958.

Enlisted men will receive the insignia according to their assignment within the artillery. Missile units, such as those NIKE organizations guarding the cities and defense installations on the West Coast, will receive the first shipments, with other artillerymen changing over as supplies become available.

Guidons and standards of artillery units bearing the present insignia will be replaced with the new style as they wear out.

6th Regional Shows High Re-up Rate

The 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command, with headquarters at Fort Baker, has finished second in reenlistment competition in the Army Antiaircraft Command for the third straight quarter.

Figures released from the Army Antiaircraft Command's Colorado Springs Headquarters placed the 6th AA Regional Command behind the 4th AA Regional Command but ahead of the other three regional commands.

Lieutenant General Stanley R. Mickelsen, Commanding General of the Army Antiaircraft Command, said the NIKE guided missile antiaircraft gun units of the nation improved their reenlistment records in 1956 over those of 1955. He credited improved housing and in-service recruiting programs with the increase.

DA Program Shifts Some Arty Officers

Washington (ANS) — The Department of the Army is currently cross-assigning outstanding artillery officers to guided missile units to meet the increased requirements of the mushrooming missile program.

Under this plan several artillery members of present War College classes, whose previous experience has been with field artillery units, can expect future assignments with surface-to-air missile units.

This effort is designed to ensure an increasing number of technically - trained, outstanding senior officers in the Army's present and future artillery fields. In addition, artillery officers with missile training and high leadership qualities are being placed in selected positions to motivate certain career officers to enter the GM field.

The program allows a proportionate number of missile-trained officers to be assigned to the United States Military Academy staff and faculty, Reserve Officer Training Corps duty, and the Department of the Army's Career Management Division. Also, selected graduates of the Artillery Advanced Course without previous missile experience are being assigned to missile units and the Army Antiaircraft Command's staff, under the new plan.

Break Through II Begins Tomorrow

Command Post Exercise Will Test Top Staffs

The world situation is grim: A sneak aggressor attack, June 1954, by a coalition of Eurasian states has overrun almost the entire land mass of Eurasia. Japan, the British Isles and part of Northern Europe are still under Allied control, however. India is neutral.

NATO controls the sea and has encountered Aggressor atomic attacks with its own air strikes which have severely damaged enemy industrial areas.

The first successful counter-offensive came during Break Through I when the 17th, 18th and 19th Army Groups struck south from the Netherlands to cut off and destroy Aggressor forces west of the Rhine. NATO's air and atomic superiority caused the Aggressor to suffer heavy losses.

This weekend 1,500 Army and USAR personnel at the Presidio and another 1,200 at Fort Lewis and Fort Ord will fight the next phase of this paper war—Exercise Break Through II. They will attack south; their objective: Munich and Augsburg in Germany.

Of course, this battle will be fought only by staff officers and their support personnel. But the players will face realistic problems which they must solve by utilizing the latest Army tactics and the most modern Army equipment.

The objective of this Command Post Exercise is to "provide training for commanders and staffs in tactical, intelligence and logistical operations under assumed conditions of extensive atomic, chemical, bacteriological, radiological and electronic war-

CPX Schedule

Orientation for Exercise Break Through II takes place today at the Post Theater, 2125 hours. At this time a voice conference network will be open between the Presidio, Fort Lewis and Fort Ord. The program will open when Col. J. H. Gilbreth, Deputy Maneuver Director, introduces Maneuver Director Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, who will make the welcoming address.

The exercise which starts at 0800 hours on Saturday will run until 2000 hours. It will start again at 0800 hours on Sunday and run until 1200 hours.

Roberts Elected President First Local ROA Chapter

An active-duty chapter of the Reserve Officers' Association was formed for the Presidio area last weekend at the Fort Scott Officers' Club. Major Andrew Bretz, Jr., Sixth U.S. Army Information, is area chairman.

Purpose of the chapter is to bring into closer social and professional contact those members of the national Association who are currently serving on active duty in this area. Membership is open to all officers and enlisted men who hold commissions as Reserve Officers and are members of the ROA.

Officers elected for the coming year are CWO Theodore J. Roberts, (Lt. Col. USAR), Post S-1 Section, president; Maj. Herman G. Kleikamp, Post JA Section, senior vice-president; M/Sgt. Cecil E. Bartholomew, (Lt. Col., USAR), Post Troop Education Section, junior vice-president; Capt. Charles A. Wells, (Major, USAR), secretary, and Capt. (Chaplain) Robert J. Plocki, Post Chaplain Section, chaplain.

Committee chairmen named were Capt. George J. Reuss, Post Provost Marshal Section, membership, and M/Sgt. Floyd R. Alexander (Lt. Col., USAR), Information Activities Section, Sixth U. S. Army, publicity.

Holiday Ahead

Presidio military and civilian personnel will enjoy a holiday 22 February in honor of George Washington's birthday. Because of the holiday, the Star Presidian will be distributed on Thursday next week. Deadline will be moved up to Tuesday noon.

Military Postmaster

Army Lt. Col. Emanuel Combs, Jr., has replaced USAF Col. Robert P. Muhlbach as director of the Army-Air Force Postal Service. The switch between Army and Air Force directors is undertaken every two years.

The Postal Service, supervised by the Army, has 459 APOs which transport 150,000,000 pounds of mail to and from service personnel overseas each year. About 14 million dollars of stamps are sold a year.

New AR Lists Assignments Range For Enlisted Aliens

Aliens enlisted in the Army will be restricted from assignment to specific sensitive duties until a background investigation is successfully completed, according to AR 614-280.

As soon as an investigation which discloses no unfavorable information is completed or when derogatory points are resolved, an alien is eligible for assignment to any duty for which he is qualified. The restriction applies to aliens naturalized before entering the service if investigations have not been undertaken.

Aliens will not be assigned to officer candidate schools as candidates or members of the staff; to military assistance program (MAP) activities overseas; to classified cryptographic systems or equipment; or to information, education and orientation of troops or the educational reconditioning of troops.

Also included in the restricted list are duties connected with classified research and development projects; duties affording access to information or equipment classified as Confidential, Secret or Top Secret; and other duties designated as sensitive by the commander concerned.

When enlisted aliens are reassigned, personnel officers will notify the new installation or unit intelligence officers of the pending arrival and former assignment of the individuals.

Another Tradition Fades

The time-honored caisson and the "caparison" horse will give way to motorized military funerals at Arlington National Cemetery on 1 June.

In an economy move 16 matched greys for the caissons and the black, riderless horse will be replaced by motor hearses. The horses and ammunition wagons have required the care of 15 soldiers of the 3rd Infantry Regiment at Ft. Myer, Va.

The caissons have carried military dead to graveside for more than 92 years. The riderless horse has led general officers and cavalrymen to interment.

According to the Army about 10 per cent of the 91,000 funerals held at Arlington since 1864 have been by horse-drawn caisson. The caisson is limited to burial of officers of all services when requested by next-of-kin.

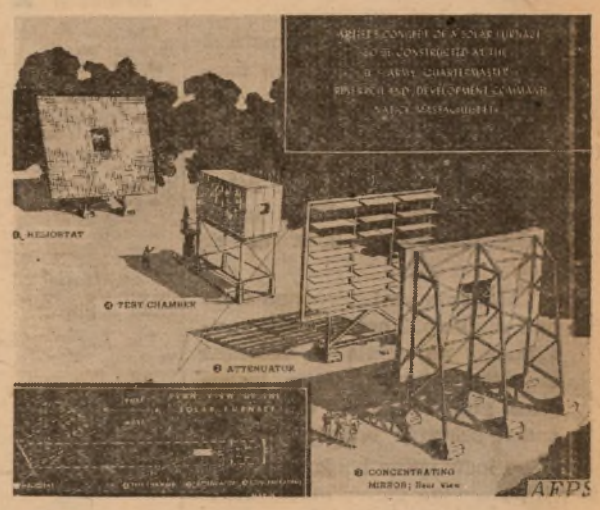
Army To Construct Solar Furnace

Concentrates Rays Of Sun Into Small 'Target Area'



Washington (AFPS)—A giant solar furnace that can concentrate the sun's rays to produce temperatures comparable to those of an antomic explosion will be erected at the Quartermaster Research and Engineering Center, Natick, Mass., the Army has announced.

Designed to test materials intended for protection against the thermal effects of nuclear weapons, the furnace is expected to reduce the time and cost of development.

A solar-furnace collects the sun's rays and concentrates them into a small target area as a magnifying glass produces a hot-point focus.

Present standard sources of intense heat, such as high-current electric arcs, gas-fired panels, and burning magnesium are not adequate for the experiments, the Army said.

Consisting of four elements occupying an area 125 feet by 40 feet, the sun furnace has an automatic positioning device keeping the system aimed directly at the sun at all times.

At one end of the assembly is a 40 by 36 foot flat mirror which receives the sun's rays and reflects them 96 feet to another bank of mirrors, 180 curved surface reflectors, each 23.5 inches in diameter.

The rays are finally channeled into a chamber in a four-inch beam where articles can be exposed to the heat, the Army said.

G2 Employee, Mrs. Robert P. (Dorothy) Smith, has been awarded a $100 check and Performance Award Certificate for superior performance of duties as a clerk-typist with the Investigations Branch. Col. Marvin V. Johnston, Executive Officer, G2, made the presentation. Mrs. Smith, who began her Federal Service in 1951, received an "outstanding Efficiency Rating" the latter part of last year.

Mistakes On Tax Forms Cost Taxpayers Plenty

(This is the first of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. The articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants.)

Between now and April 15 more than 60 million Americans must file a tax return to report 1956 income to the federal government. On the basis of past experience, one out of every four returns filed will contain an error of $2 or more. Last year these errors totaled more than $100 million.

The mistakes most often made by taxpayers fall into these four groups:

● Incorrect listing of income. Individuals made mistakes by leaving out such items as interest on savings accounts, dividends and contest winnings, or by including items that are exempt.

● Errors in personal deductions. Important deductions from income are state and local taxes, interest paid on loans, charitable contributions, medical expenses, losses from storm, fire, flood or theft.

● Claiming too many or too few dependents. Exemptions are allowed for the taxpayer, himself and for certain persons he supports, if they fit the definitions in the instruction book.

● Faulty arithmetic. This is the cause of the fewest number of errors, but approximately 30 per cent of these arithmetical mistakes are made by the taxpayer against himself.

It is important to remember that all income is not taxable. You should not include in your return any income that is listed in the official instruction book as exempt.

This includes interest on state and municipal bonds, most government payments to veterans and their families, life insurance proceeds upon death and social security benefits.

The instruction book that comes with your tax forms gives further information. Help is also available by telephone or at the office of the Internal Revenue Service. The revenue service urges you to consult a properly qualified advisor if you decide to seek outside help. (AFPS)

Chief Tells House Group Key Reasons For 6-Month Plan

Washington (ANS)—Army Chief of Staff General Maxwell D. Taylor, speaking recently before Subcommittee Number One of the House Armed Services Committee, pointed up four major reasons why National Guard and Army Reserve enlistees should take six months continuous active duty training.

According to the General, the six month program has the following merits:

● It complies with Public Law 51 which requires that a soldier receive four months basic training before being sent overseas.

● It gives additional time, beyond the so-called survival training period, to permit basic unit training for our combat soldiers and extended specialist training for the individual technicians.

● It is the most efficient from the teaching point of view, allowing for an essentially continuous period of instruction given by some of the best trainer personnel available to the Regular Army.

● Its dollar cost is moderate in consideration of the quality of the end product.

General Taylor stressed also that either in the case of general atomic war or military operations short of a general atomic war, there is an urgent requirement for reserve forces of increased readiness.

"The conditions of modern warfare place the highest premium on completely trained civilian components not only for combat duty but also to help preserve their communities from chaos resulting from the use of modern weapons," he said.

Implying that half trained troops cannot win modern wars, General Taylor stated that the training requirements for warfare is constantly increasing with the added complexity of weapons, and the increased pressures bearing upon the individual soldier. "Training levels must be geared to this trend," he declared.

"The day of deliberate mobilization and unhurried training is past," he said in explaining the Army's views on six months continuous training. "The accent is on readiness on D-Day or as shortly thereafter as possible."

"I am aware that there is concern lest this six months training program adversely affect the strength of the National Guard," General Taylor told the Committee. "Obviously, I do not believe that it will, otherwise I would not support the program. I am thoroughly convinced that this program will benefit the Guard, in fact, is indispensable for its continued development as an effective instrument of national defense."

In conclusion, he said positively: "I know of no other way for the National Guard to reach and maintain the level of training and combat readiness which is essential if it is to play a part in future conflicts commensurate with its proud contributions in the past."

"What has saved us as a nation in the past from despotism and the denial of human liberties is primarily our religious, ethnic and cultural pluralism. And the only way by which such pluralism can be retained is general recognition that each group enriches rather than impoverishes the American scene and the national tradition, and that while learning to respect one another's peculiarities, all should learn to cooperate in the responsible tasks of American citizenship."*—Carlton J. O'seas Indefs To Re-up Now Under New Reg

Soldiers overseas with more than six years on indefinite enlistments now may resign for immediate reenlistment in the same command without serving two years in current tours, according to change in AR 625-220.

Options for reenlistment in overseas commands will be limited to Regular Army unassigned or choice of specific branch of service.

Such reenlistees are not authorized a choice of initial assignment to an overseas command other than that in which they are serving and must complete a normal foreign service tour before reassignment to another overseas area, the Army said.

Besides the story about the cherry tree, it would be well for us to remember more about George Washington, whose birthday we celebrate 22 Feb.

General Washington, our first President, had this to say in his farewell address in 1796:

"Citizens by birth or choice, of a common country, that country has a right to concentrate your affections. The name of American, which belongs to you . . . must always exalt the just pride of patriotism . . .

"This Government, the offspring of your own choice uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles . . . and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and support.

"Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws . . . are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty."

(First of a series on state income taxes.)

The fact that you're in service doesn't necessarily mean you don't have to pay state income tax.

Laws vary from state to state.

Federal law provides that a serviceman doesn't have to pay tax on military income outside his home state.

Thus, a man who owns a home in Iowa but is stationed in North Carolina doesn't have to worry about filing a return to North Carolina on his service pay. But he must check Iowa's laws.

No state taxes are collected in Ohio and Pennsylvania, but certain municipalities tax personal income.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

You must file a return if you are single and earn more than $1,000 or are married and have more than $2,000 combined income. A single man is entitled to a $1,000 exemption; a married man gets a $2,000 exemption, plus $500 for each dependent.

Your payment and return must be sent by April 15 to District of Columbia Income and Franchise Tax Division, Room 2033, Municipal Center, 300 Indiana Ave., N. W. Washington 1, D. C.

Servicemen overseas are granted a deferment on return and payment until six months after returning to this country.

HAWAII

You must file a return on any income from rents or a profession. You must file if you are single and earn more than $1,100, or married and have combined income of more than $2,200.

You must file if gross income from compensation and/or dividends exceeds $2,850 if you are single, or $5,900 if you are married. Service pay is excluded from gross income.

Return and payment on net income are due by April 20. Return and payment of compensation and dividends tax are due by the 20th day of each month.

They should be sent to Bureau of Income and Miscellaneous Taxes, Territory of Hawaii, Department of the Tax Commissioner, P. O. Box 259, Honolulu 9, Hawaii.

Servicemen may defer payment until six months after discharge if ability to pay is impaired by military duty.

NORTH CAROLINA

You must file a return if you are single and earn more than $1,000 or married and earn more than $2,000. A joint return is not permitted unless income is from jointly owned property. You must file on gross income of more than $5,000 from a business or profession.

A single man receives a $1,000 exemption. The head of a household receives $2,000, plus $300 for each dependent.

Return must be filed by April 15 with State of North Carolina, Department of Revenue, Individual Income Tax Division, Raleigh, N. C. Payment may be made with return or in installments.

There are no special regulations for military income. (AFPS)

Set Ft. Baker Review To Greet Gen. McGaw

A 750-man review by Army and Air Force troops and a reception at the Presidio Officers Club Friday will mark Major General Edward J. McGaw's assumption of command of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command here.

Troops from the four Army antiaircraft battalions guarding the Bay Area will be joined by airmen from the Western Air Defense Force at Hamilton Air Force Base near San Rafael and the Sixth Army Band from the Presidio of San Francisco at the 1000 hours review at Fort Baker.

The public is invited to the review.

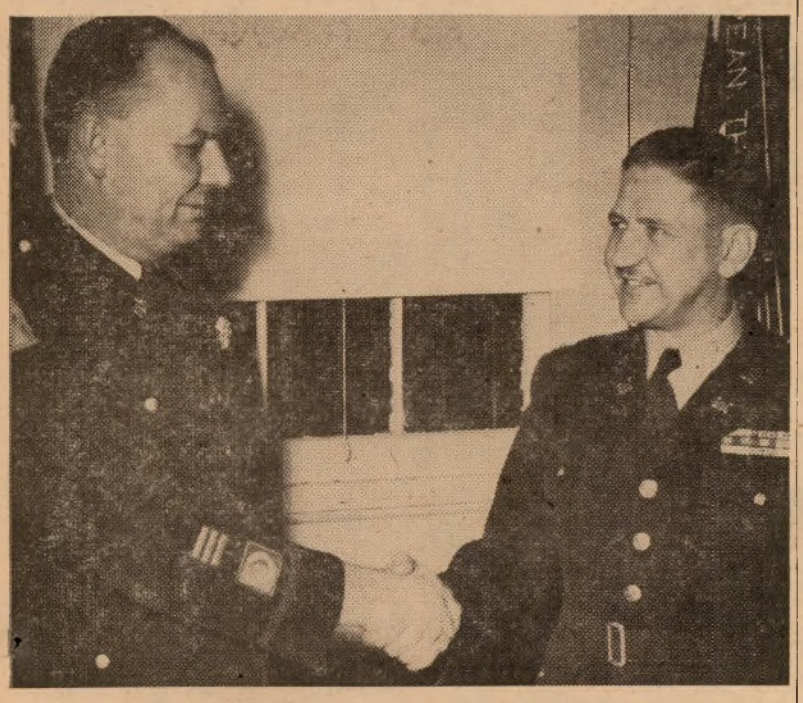
Military leaders present for the ceremonies will include Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Commanding General, Sixth Army; Brig. Gen. Legare K. Tarrant, Deputy Commanding General, Sixth Army; Brig. Gen. Louis J. Rumaggi, Sixth Army Chief of Staff; Brig. Gen. Monro MacCloskey, Western Air Defense Force Commander; and Brig. Gen. Edwin L. Tucker, Vice-Commander, Western Air Defense Force.



General McGaw replaced General Tarrant as commander of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command this month. The command controls the NIKE guided missile and antiaircraft gun installations guarding the key cities, defense areas and Air Force bases on the West Coast.

Prior to coming to Fort Baker, General McGaw commanded the First Cavalry Division in Japan. He and Mrs. McGaw reside at Fort Scott.

Foreign reports will reach "Star Presidian" readers through the pen and camera of Lt. Robert J. Wallace, who left this week on a 40-day around-the-world inspection tour of 30th Engineer Group operations with Col. Lawrence R. St. John, 30th Engineer Group Commander. Lieutenant Wallace is Assistant Group S3, Chief of the Photomapping and Reproduction Branch and Officer in Charge of the Sixth U.S. Army Map Depot.

"To discriminate against a man because of race, color, creed or national origin is antithetical to democracy and dangerous to America."*—Bernard M. Baruch.

New Duties for Maj. Luther Payne (left), and Maj. Lloyd Stromgren have been announced by the 30th Engineer Group. Major Payne, former Commander of the 660th Engineer Battalion, will take over the Group's surveying activities in Iran. Major Stromgren, former executive officer of the 660th, will become the battalion's commander.

Stromgren Replaces Payne In Engineer Assignment

Major Lloyd Stromgren, a veteran of more than 18 years of Army mapping and topo work, has replaced Major Luther Payne as commander of the 660th Engineer Battalion (Base Topographic) of the 30th Engineer Group.

Major Payne will take over the Group's Iranian Survey Project. He replaces Capt. John South, who has been Officer in Charge of the project since operations began there last July.

On his third tour of duty with the 30th Engineers, Major Stromgren has been executive officer of the 660th Battalion since August, 1956. He was assigned to the Group when it was activated on 1 Sept., 1939, and served at that time under General Louis J. Rumaggi, present Sixth U. S. Army Chief of Staff. He also served with the Group in Hawaii from 1949 to 1950.

Major Stromgren was graduated from the Engineer Officer Candidate School at Fort Belvoir, Va., in 1942. He has served at various times as operations officer of the 960th Engineer Topo Company in the South Pacific during World War II; Chief of the Cartographic Branch, Historical Division, General Staff; Chief of the Military Branch, Army Map Service; and Chief of the Plans Branch, Intelligence Division, Office of Engineer Headquarters, AFFE.

Woman's Club Honors Lady Scout Leader

Mrs. James Enmeier, a member of the Presidio Woman's Club, was honored this week with an award for her work in Girl Scouting over the past 15 years.

Institutional representative of the Presidio Girl Scouts, Mrs. Enmeier received the award at the annual meeting of the San Francisco Girl Scout Council held in Temple Emanuel Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Enmeier registered as a Girl Scout in Vincennes, Indiana, in 1925. She later became a troop committee member and an Intermediate leader in that city. During 1948 she worked with a Brownie Troop at Fort Knox, Kentucky. She later moved with her family to Germany where she became a member of the Nurnburg Council, ultimately becoming Western Area Command Commissioner of Girl Scouts in Germany.

The highest award given to a volunteer in Girl Scouting—the Blue Thanks Badge—was achieved by Mrs. Enmeier at that time.

After the Enmeier family rotated to the United States, Mrs. Enmeier became leader of a Senior Scout troop in San Antonio, and a member of the San Antonio Senior Advisory Committee. She was last year's Presidio Girl Scout chairman.

Mrs. Enmeier is currently a member of the San Francisco Senior Advisory Committee and the San Francisco Program Committee as well as being active with the Presidio Girl Scouts.

Scott Dinner Highlights Scout Event

Members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine and Coast Guard units in the Presidio area attended this week's Blue and Gold annual dinner for Scouts and Cubs—held in the Fort Scott Gymnasium.

Prominent in the social get-together which featured a Court of Honor, were fathers and mothers of boys attached to Scout Pack and Cub Pack No. 178 which encompasses sons of the garrison's officers and enlisted men. Nearly 300 people came to share in the special ceremony honors in which several awards were presented for achievements in Scouting and Cub activities.

Speaker at the Blue and Gold Dinner was Mr. Merritt Barnes of San Francisco. He discussed Charter renewal and summer plans for the local Scout Troop and Cub Pack.

RMC Fred S. Kingston, San Francisco Naval District, chairman and acting Cub Master for Pack No. 178, and M/Sgt. William G. Lucas, Scout Master for Troop No. 178, were also present at the dinner.

Among guests seated at the head table at the Fort Scott banquet were Lieutenant Colonel Willett Ware, Jr., Post Inspector General and institutional representative for the Boy Scout movement at the Presidio, Commander J. B. McKenzie, of the San Francisco Naval District, and other ranking officers from the Presidio and Bay Area service units.

Final Phase Of Family Quarters Rehab Started

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Deputy Post Commander, announced today that the Presidio phase-out of a Sixth U.S. Army architect-engineer project involving remodeling and general rehabilitation of family quarters throughout the area is now under way here. A local firm is currently engaged in preparatory survey of 28 buildings on the main Post, Forts Barry, Baker and Cronkhite.

A similar project to modernize kitchen and bathroom facilities in Infantry Terrace has just been completed at a cost of $140,000.

Bids for over-all renovation of housing units in the given areas were thrown open to civilian contractors as a means of expediting the job in hand and of lessening an already top-heavy work load imposed on the Post and Sixth U.S. Army Engineer Sections through existing maintenance projects.

Authorized and financed by the Department of the Army and opened to public contract bids by the San Francisco District Engineers, the contracts included one for major renovation of Letterman Army Hospital Surgery Supply Section, a commitment now in process of completion.

A Post Engineer official said today that the remodeling of the 28 family quarters in the immediate locality should be completed in about six months after the contractors take over. The initial phase of the renovation and remodeling of military housing units in the Western Area was begun early in 1956.

New Reg On Flag

The flag will be flown at half-staff in case of death of the President-elect of the United States, according to a change in AR 600-25. Presidents and ex-Presidents in addition to several other officers have previously been honored in this way.

Seek AFD Suggestions

Presidio personnel who have suggestions to offer regarding the coming Armed Forces Day displays here are invited to contact the planning staff now located in Building 238. The telephone extension is 3478.

Need Teachers

Protestant Sunday School teachers are needed to bring the Post Sunday School Staff up to strength and to serve as substitute teachers. Persons interested are asked to call the Post Chaplain, Ext. 2110 or 2698.

Presidio Fencers Displays Talents For Civic Group

The origin and the history of Fencing, with demonstrations on the use of the foil, the epee and the saber, were presented by the Presidio Fencing Club before community groups and Cub Scouts in Saint Stephen's Church Hall recently.

Commemorating the third anniversary of the Cub Scout Packs, the fencing display in San Francisco was directed by Mr. William O'Brien, coach of the Letterman Hospital team. Colonel Laurance H. Brownlee, chief of the Sixth U. S. Army G-4 Supply Section, represented the Presidio at the meeting.

The Presidio group's demonstration at the civic event was well received by the exceptionally large audience. It marks the second time that the Presidio Fencing Team has been invited to appear before civic groups in San Francisco.

Nike Battery Finds Local Answer For Skill Problems

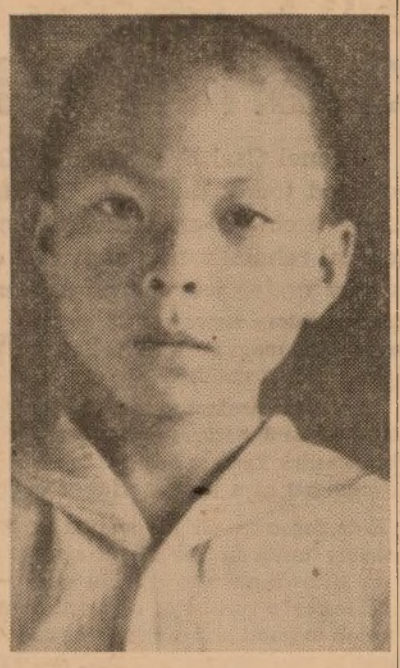
Battery "A" of the 9th Missile Battalion recently opened its own campaign against the current service-wide shortage of trained radar and missile maintenance specialists.

A NIKE-firing unit, "A" Battery is frequently called on to supply men for the Fort Bliss radar and missile repair schools. But to qualify for any of the nine-month courses, a man must first pass the electronics placement exam, administered locally by the Presidio Army Education Center.

"Unfortunately, too many of our men flunk out on the section of the test calling for some knowledge of electricity," said 1st Lt. George W. Milligan, executive officer of Battery "A."

After screening the records of potential candidates for the Fort Bliss schools, Lt. Milligan decided that a short refresher course in math and the fundamentals of electricity would probably give many of them the boost they need to score.

Although such a course is taught at Oakand Army Base, "A" Battery, short on manpower, can't spare its personnel long enough to send them to Oakland.



Three weeks ago, Lt. Milligan, who holds a B.S. in Engineering from West Point, began his first on-duty classes for a group of about 25 men. Meeting from 1300 to 1430 hours three days a week, the class has just completed a three-week brush-up in math and has begun a short seven or eight-week course in the fundamentals of electricity.

Through the Presidio Army Education Center, Lt. Milligan secured study manuals from the United States Armed Forces Institute.

If the experiment is successful, "A" Battery may have gone a long way in meeting its own manpower shortage. Many of the potential trainees are three and four-year enlistees, who if trained early in their military careers will be that much more useful to the Army. In addition, each man can receive three units of college credit.

"There is also an element of self-interest involved," said Lt. Milligan. "When these men have completed the course at Fort Bliss, we can request that they be returned to their original unit, Battery 'A,' 9th Missile Battalion."

Army Doctor Adopts Pair In Overseas Aid Program

By Marian Comfield
Star Presidian Staff Writer

Two orphans from India and Korea are receiving food, care and training in their native countries because they have been adopted by two Americans they have never seen, the Presidio's Captain and Mrs. Maclyn B. Somers.

The captain, who is assigned to the Post Dispensary as Assistant Post Surgeon, and his wife first added an Indian girl to their family about three years ago. A year and a half later they decided to adopt a Korean boy.

Advertisements in religious publications persuaded the Somers to look into the Christian Children's Fund, the largest Protestant orphanage organization in the world. In selecting their first foreign child, they requested a girl about 11 years old from the country of India.

A month later they received a picture of the girl, a biographical sketch about her and their first letter from her. Since that time they have received several letters and pictures from their Indian "daughter." The letters written in her native language are sent with typewritten translations.

Impressed with the worthiness of this "personal contact" type of charity, the Somers then adopted their Korean son. He is now ten years old and living in Mokpo, Korea. In addition to corresponding with the children, Dr. and Mrs. Somers send $10 a month to ensure them good care and training in a trade or profession.

Captain and Mrs. Somers have encouraged their friends and various organizations to adopt children in one of the 27 countries housing CCF orphanages and as a result, the Presidio's Kenneth E. McDaniel Bible Class has adopted a Korean child.

The Somers, who have reared her twin 17-year-old brothers since they were six and have three children of their own, feel that their children are deriving many benefits from such close contact with helping others.

Captain Somers, who has been at the Presidio for 15 months, was graduated from the University of Southern California Medical School; interned at Santa Clara County Hospital in San Jose; and took his residency at Monterey County Hospital in Salinas. He has been in the Army for 17 months.

Omnibus Will Feature Combat Test System

Tests used by the Army to determine soldiers' combat potential will be demonstrated in a special report presented by "Omnibus" on KGO-TV, Channel 7, at 2100 hours this Sunday.

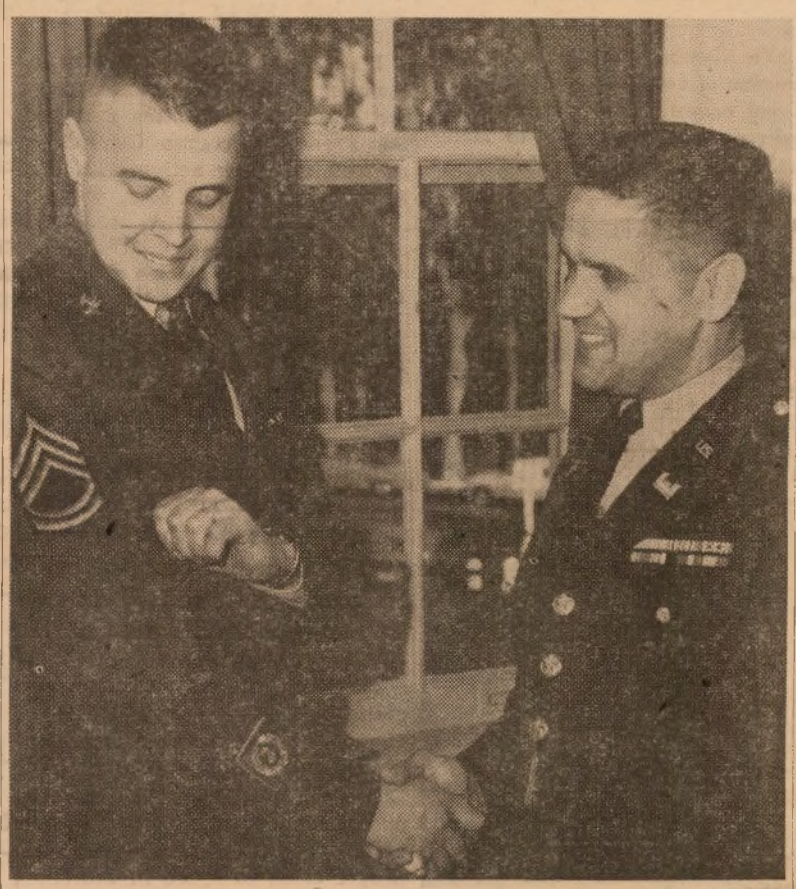
Senator John Kennedy, Democrat from Massachusetts, will introduce and discuss the subject. Senator Kennedy is the author of "Profiles in Courage," a study of political courage.

One of the two Army tests, the physical stress examination, was filmed at Fort Ord. These exercises measure the reactions of soldiers confronted with simulated battle conditions.

The second phase which is designed to provide a complete profile of the soldier will be portrayed by actors. The tests, given to inductees at Army centers across the country, touch on the inductee's intelligence, his mental and emotional adjustment to life, his sense of humor and his physical structure.

The Army's program to determine the combat potential of its men before battle was started in 1953 with a group of 310 veterans of Korea's Pork Chop Hill. By analyzing the results of these tests, the Army hopes to point up existing weaknesses in the soldiers' make-up and prescribe corrective measures wherever possible.

E. J. Cahn wrote the script for "Omnibus." The show will also include battle scenes from the Korean War.



JAG Legal Aide Will Join State In New Position

Lieutenant Kenneth G. Nellis, trial counsel with the Sixth U. S. Army Judge Advocate section, will become a State of California employee upon completion of a three-year tour of duty this month.

A prosecutor in general courts martial, Lieutenant Nellis' new position will be with the Department of Public Works, Division of Contracts and Rights of Way.

Graduate of the University of Illinois law school, the lieutenant has passed the bar in Illinois and California. He took the latter bar while serving at the Presidio.

Lieutenant Nellis attended the Infantry Officers Basic Course at Ft. Benning, Ga., and the Judge Advocate General School, Charlottesville, Va.

E-6 Stripe is admired by Sfc. Charles E. Smith, operations sergeant, Photomapping and Reproduction Branch of the 30th Engineer Group, as he receives congratulations from Capt. Anthony Alonzo, Commanding Officer, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 30th Engineer Group. Sergeant Smith was awarded the only top two grade promotion for the current quarter at Fort Scott.

Founders' Day Fete Set

The Winfield Scott P-TA will celebrate Founders' Day at the school on 19 February at 1330 hours. A delightful program has been planned by Mrs. Derek Levin, chairman, that honors the P-TA founders, past presidents, and retired principals.

Refreshments will be served during the P-TA Founders' Day meeting.

New Books Trace Man's Early Life

Who was Adam? Who were our first human ancestors? The discovery of the truth about the origin of mankind is the greatest of all stories of detection. The detectives were the most remarkable minds of their time, philosophers, scientists, explorers and writers. Their problem was the most fundamental of all—the nature of man and his place in the universe. If you are curious about what these men found out about you, the Post Library has a large selection of books on the subject which are both interesting and informative.

Among them is MAN ON EARTH, by Jacquetta Hawkes, in which we watch the unfolding of events in time past and the emergence of the human species. Onto the cold body of modern scientific theory, the author has added the flesh and blood of a lively and persuasive imagination. The synthesis of technical knowledge with her own unique poetic imagery has produced a beautiful and highly informative book.

MAN, TIME, AND FOSSILS, by Ruth Moore, was planned as a companion volume to GODS, GRAVES AND SCHOLARS. This book tells the whole story of man's evolution in the same effective manner in which that book told of man's earliest civilization. It is made even more interesting by the generous use of photographs and line drawings.

An absorbing outline of the story of man's progress through time is BACK OF HISTORY, by William Howells. It traces human origins from the days of the old hunters into the time of Greek and Roman civilizations. There are discussions of the vital steps in mankind's coming of age, such as the dawn of language, the discovery of tools the beginning of agriculture and the organization of society.

In spite of the deep subject matter of all these books, they are written in a simple, clear and enjoyable style. Why not go to the Post Library and discover yourself?

Locals Finish Second In Nevada Test

Toreros Dump Navy; Psaltis Top Scorer

Returning to their home stomping grounds the Toreros resumed their winning way by defeating the San Diego Naval Training Center 70-45 at LAH Gym in a non-conference tilt.

Tony Psaltis, Torero guard, broke the ice with a driving lay-up four and one-half minutes after play had gotten under way. Psaltis went on to score 18 of the Presidio's first 21 points in a one-man scoring spree.

The Navy quint, captained by Bob Blake, former University of California captain, held the Torero lead to 12-10 at the end of the first quarter. By the end of the first half the score read 28-23 in favor of the local quint. The sailors managed to tie the score at 21 all with 5 minutes and 44 seconds to go in the first half and again at 23 all with 2 minutes and 36 seconds to go but could not keep pace thereafter.

Second half scoring saw the Presidio pull away from the winded Navy quint who fell to a 48-27 deficit by the end of the third quarter.

Carroll Williams came alive in the second half to score 10 points for the Presidio and take up the scoring where Tony Psaltis had cooled off after his firing outburst.

Coach Hal Fischer played two new additions to the Torero roster in the absence of two of his regulars. Hubie Brown was out with an injured back and Norm Ellenberger has been released from active service. New to the roster are Ed Johnson, Hq. Co., 30th Engr., and Robert Kemp, 6th Medical Detach. Both men saw considerable action and turned in very promising performances.

Tony Psaltis was high scorer of the night with 26 points, of which 18 were bucketed in the first half. Williams was second with 11 points for the Toreros.

The league leading Toreros will host the Central Basketball Tournament at LAH Gym 25-28 Feb. Winners of this tournament will journey to the Sixth Army Basketball Championship Tournament to be held at Ft. Lewis, Washington, 4-9 March.

Single Entry

Presidio's lone entry, David E. Brown, 21st Engr. Co., in the boxing tournament at Ft. Lewis, Washington, departed yesterday with the Ft. Ord boxing team for the bouts.

Brown weighs in at 132 pounds and has made a very commendable record for himself as an amateur boxer in the lightweight division.

Wac Five Tops 2 League Foes, Vies For 2nd

Presidio's WAC quintet added two more victories to their record this week by downing the Ft. Ord lasses, 53-35, and then taking the Parks AFB women, 48-25.

Mary Phillips was tops in the Parks encounter with 17 tallies followed by Florian Vierra and Georgia Kelly with 15 points each.

Phillips and Kelly tied for scoring honors in the Ft. Ord tussle with 17 points apiece. Julian Kite, player-coach, was second in the scoring column with 12 counters and Vierra made nine points.

The local lasses met the LAH quint last night in the final conference game of the season. A win in this game would place the WAC's in second place in the final league standings.

Toreros Fall Before Potent Pasadena Five

Presidio's Toreros' victory skein came to a screeching halt, after 27 successful starts, at the hands of the star-studded Mirror Glazers of Pasadena. The Glazers defeated the Toreros 65-59 for the championship trophy of the Southwestern Invitational Basketball Tournament at Las Vegas.

The Toreros brought home the runner-up trophy from the tournament which hosted the top service teams and industrial league teams of the West Coast. Service teams included San Diego Marine Recruit Depot, Camp Pendleton Marine Base, Pt. Mugu, and the Presidio quint. Industrial teams came from Salt Lake City, Las Vegas, Southern Alberta, Canada, Flagstaff, Pasadena and Los Angeles.

The sudden death elimination tourney saw all service teams but the Presidio fall from contention at the end of the second round of play.

San Diego Marine Recruit Depot was the first victim to fall before the Torero onslaught. The battling Marines made a heated contest of the game right down to the final buzzer with the score reaching 71-69.

At the end of the first quarter the locals held a slim two-point margin at 20-18. The Marines held the Toreros to that same two-point lead when the first half ended with the score at 39-37.

By the end of the third quarter the Marines had dropped the Army lead to one point with the score at 61-60. The heated fourth quarter saw both teams struggling to take possession of the game, but neither could manage a substantial lead. The game ended at 71-69.

Jim Cummings turned in a fine performance at the post slot to garner 20 points for high scoring honors. Carroll Williams was second with 14, followed by Norm Ellenberger and Ron Reynoir with 10 points each.

The Toreros literally blasted the Salt Lake quint from the court. Ahead 28-12 at the end of the first quarter, the Presidio lengthened their lead to 46-31 by half time. The gap was widened to 66-49 at the end of the third quarter and when the slaughter was finally halted the scoreboard read 90-64.

High score honors were shared by Williams, Hubert Brown and Cummings with 14 each. Tony Psaltis garnered 13 points and Reynoir tallied 12. Three more Toreros, Ellenberger, Blackwell and Hansen, bucketed 7 points apiece.

The championship game matched the Pasadena Mirror Glazers against the Presidio quint. The Glazers boast such players as Morris Taft, All-American, UCLA; Roy Irvine, All-American, USC; Jim Powell, Pan American Olympic Team; and John Davis, All-American, AAU.

The Glazers defeated last season's Army All Stars and former AAU Champions, the Peoria Caterpillars, during the 1955-56 season.

Jumping into a short-lived lead the Toreros held a five-point advantage at the end of the first quarter at 16-11. By intermission time the lead had changed hands and the locals were on the short end of a 31-24 score.

Stretching their lead, the star-laden Glazers commanded an 11-point lead at the end of the third quarter. Coming down the home stretch the locals put up a stiff rally but could close the gap no more than six points. Their rally was good for 22 points in the final period to the Glazers 17 points. The game ended with the score at 65-59, to hand the Toreros their first defeat in 28 games.

Tony Psaltis was high man for the locals with 14 points followed by Carroll Williams with 12 and John Blackwell with 10 points.

Roy Irvine, former All-American from USC, was high for the Glazers and the game with 17 tallies followed by Powell with 16. John Davis, All-American AAU, and Dick Cartwright hit for 12 points each.

Personal fouls amounted to 27 called against the Presidio and 16 against the Glazers.

GOLF—Although the 53rd Western Open Golf Tournament at the Presidio Golf Club last year wasn't any smashing financial success—the sponsoring Junior Chamber of Commerce dropped $15,000—it was a grand success from the spectator's standpoint. Locals got a chance to see top pros and amateurs in action, many of whom went on to dominate the balance of the winter tournament circuit. Names like Hebert, Ford, Finsterwald and Casper, all low scorers over the Presidio course, stayed hot right down the line. So we are happy to report that the J of C is interested in sponsoring the Western again. Martin Pray, executive manager for the JCers, indicated this week that they might sponsor the tournament again in 1959. "We would liked to have signed a three-year contract with Western Open officials last year; however, previous commitments by them made this unworkable. Since this year's Ryder Cup matches will be played in England and most of the name golfers will be abroad, it wouldn't be practical to stage a fall tournament here. Detroit will host the Western Open this year. Next year San Francisco is planning to host the U.S. National Amateur Championships here, and the site for the '58 Western Open has not been decided. However, in '59 we may try to return the Western Open to San Francisco."

BOXING—Viewers of tonight's television slugfest between Spider Webb and Neal Rivers, Channel 4, 1900 hours, may be watching the next middleweight champion of the world in action. We mean, of course, Ellsworth "Spider Webb," who has won 17 straight, dropping only one of 20 fights. A crafty combination boxer-puncher, Webb has revealed a devastating right counter in his recent KO's of British Empire Champ Pat McAteer and Bobby Boyd. He also scored good wins over Rory Calhoun and Holly Mims. In Rivers he meets a crowding puncher who has won 33 of 38 and scored 18 KO's. Should the "Spider" score a decisive win over Rivers he would be the hottest prospect around for the middleweight crown, with only such over-the-hill names as Robinson and Tiger Jones standing between him and a shot at the title. Of course cagey Marv Jensen, Fullmer's manager, might dodge the rugged Spider for a while, but in the end public opinion (necessary for a lucrative gate) might force a title shot for Webb. When that day comes, we're betting Fullmer's style will suit the Spider right down to a KO.

Topo Trackmen Dick Immenhausen and Jim Mahoney, men from the S3 Section of the 30th Engrs. Group Headquarters, believe in getting an early start in conditioning for the coming track season. Both men are distance runners who hold impressive records on numerous cinder paths in the East and should prove to a valuable asset to the Post track team.

Post Track Team Led By Distance Runners

Jogging around the parade grounds at Ft. Scott and in Golden Gate Park these days are two distance runners, Dick Immenhausen and Jim Mahoney, of the Post track team. Both men work in the S3 Section, 30th Engineer Group (Topo Survey) Headquarters and both are representing the Presidio for the first time.

Mahoney, veteran of the cinder path, holds numerous records. He has run for his high school team, Iona College, and for the Pioneer and New York Athletic Clubs. Drawing attention while still in high school, Mahoney placed second in the Cardinal Spellman Invitation Mile at Madison Square Garden in New York. Upon graduating from high school, Mahoney had four college track scholarships to choose from.

Choosing Iona College, New York, Mahoney set a school record for the freshman cross-country course during his first year of collegiate competition. In his junior year he set the Collegiate Conference cross-country record and followed through in his senior year to break his own mark for the previous year and establish a mark that still stands.

Running under the colors of the New York Pioneer Club, Mahoney placed fifth among a field of 100 in the Baltimore cross-country club meet 12-mile run and sixth out of 70 runners in the ten-mile Berwick Marathon. Mahoney also held down a spot on the New York Athletic Club Metropolitan AAU Championship Team.

Dick Immenhausen, also a man who has shown his heels to his opponents on numerous occasions, has run for Waller High School in Chicago, Wright Junior College, Carthage College, and the Gebrewers Athletic Club of Chicago.

Immenhausen was a medal winner in the Senior National 15-kilometer race held in Chicago and he placed third in the two-mile run at the Illinois State Junior College meet while running for Wright.

The two-mile is Immenhausen's specialty whereas Mahoney is at his best in the cross-country events. Despite this fact, both men will probably be called upon to run the two-mile event in the Sixth Army Meet to be held 7-8 June at Ft. Ord.

Wins at the Sixth Army meet would advance Immenhausen and Mahoney to the All-Army Finals to be held in Texas in June. The All-Army Finals will be Immenhausen's last opportunity to run in Army competition as his active service expires in June.

March 2-3 and 9 have been designated as the dates for a challenge bowling tourney. The challenge tourney is open to any person who was TDY during the "Roll Off" or any person who has been assigned to the Presidio since 1 January, the date for applications to be submitted to the Sports Office to take part in the "Roll Off.'

Esh rolled six 200 plus games while capturing the number one spot to lead the field in that category also. His games include a 200, 202, 211, 223, 217, and 217. Tushiki Sakurada and Harry Hoffacker each had five 200 plus games while Howard Dickey, Martin Barm, Harland McInturff and Glenn Bolton kegged four games at 200 or above.

High game of the tournament was posted by Arthur Palomares during the first two days of the meet when he toppled a sizable 268. James Leonard took second high individual game with 256 and Glenn Bolton placed third with 245 pins.

Originally there were 42 keglers participating in the "Roll Off" but only 26 completed the tourney. Latest formula for a hole-in-one is offered by Captain William Morgan, Sixth Army Quartermaster, "Practice 28 years and then get lucky as heck." Morgan fired his ace on the 169 yard fourth hole of the Presidio Golf Course. He has been playing golf since the age of nine and this is the first time he has ever come close to an ace. "It kinda shook me up. I was two under par when it happened and I wound up with a six over par." Captain Morgan said that he usually played about a five handicap game. He is a native of New Paltz, New York.

Rifle, Pistol Matches Due Top Emphasis

$6,000 In Prizes Set For Roberts Marksmen

More than 800 persons are expected to compete in the Sixth U.S. Army Rifle and Pistol Matches scheduled 25-30 April at the Camp Roberts firing site. Prizes valued at $6,000 will be awarded.

A Small Arms Firing School will be conducted 8-19 April. The school is required for Army personnel planning to compete in the Sixth Army Matches and is open to civilian competitors who wish to attend. The best Sixth Army shooters will act as instructors and will be assisted by personnel from the Army Marksmanship Unit at Fort Benning, Ga.

The program is designed primarily for the combat soldier, not only to emphasize, promote and expand the spirit of competition but also to provide advanced marksmanship training for selected individuals.

At least 50 per cent of each team entered in the matches will be individuals who have never fired as a member of a team which has competed in an Army Area or Major Overseas Command Match.

In addition to the Army and civilian personnel, Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, has invited Navy, Marine, Air Force and Coast Guard teams to compete.

Col. Donald L. Coates is Match Executive Officer and Lt. Col. Walter E. Andrews, Deputy Match Executive Officer.

The Lacrosse is the Army's new surface - to - surface missile. The Lacrosse was designed for close support operation on the battlefield, with emphasis on accuracy and mobility. The essential parts are the missile, a launcher mounted on a standard Army truck and a guidance station.

New System Will Aid Battle Commanders

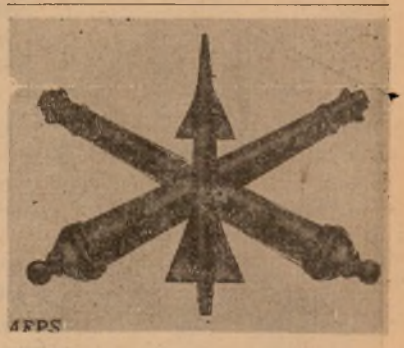
A combat surveillance system for troop commanders soon will be developed and coordinated by an agency in Washington, D. C., the Department of the Army has announced.

The Army Combat Surveillance Agency will use improved electronic equipment and techniques to aid commenders in gaining battlefield information about the enemy.

Initial tasks of the agency include research, development and test of techniques and equipment; production of equipment and systems: development of doctrine and procedures for its employment; and training of necessary technical personnel.

The agency, which will employ five officers and seven civilians, will be directed by Brig. Gen. Francis F. Uhrhane, former Chief of Research and Development of the Army Signal Corps. It will be under the jurisdiction of the Chief Signal Officer.

CONARC Plan Calls For Top Marksmanship



Four major changes in the Army's competitive marksmanship program have been introduced for the 1957 shooting season by Headquarters, Continental Army Command. The changes are mirrored locally in announced plans for the Sixth U.S. Army Rifle and Pistol Matches.

The innovations include establishment of small arms firing schools in each Army area preceding the area rifle and pistol matches; and encouragement of new shooters by requiring that half the members of any team be shooters who have never before entered matches of that level.

The shooter classification system has been revised to establish a better balance of competition. Under the new system, shooters will be rated as master, expert, sharpshooter or marksman and compete against men with the same ratings.

A central file of individual cards on each shooter will be maintained by the Army Advanced Marksmanship Unit at Fort Benning, Ga.

The changes are part of the Army's new program to develop new shooters, provide more training time, allow shooters to compete for awards against men of their own caliber and to have in a single place information on Army shooters wherever stationed.

Education Sets New NCO Series

First in a newly-launched series of training programs for senior non-commissioned officers in the Presidio servicewomen's detachment takes place on the coming Saturday, 23 February, when Major Earle K. Stewart, Post Education officer, will speak to the women on the educational program available at the Presidio.

Other subjects being introduced during the special non-com training periods, include Personnel Records, Insurance, and Finance, retraining in new MOS fields and similar projects related to the present over-age problems in particular assignments.

Signal Corps Seeks Trainees For Specialists

The Signal Corps has issued a call for trainees in electronic specialist fields. Many of the shortages exist in the top three noncommissioned grades.

Applications should be submitted to the Chief Signal Officer through command channels for courses in microwave radio equipment repair, MOS 281; radar repair, MOS 282; carrier equipment repair, MOS 294; and field radio repair, MOS 296. These courses are taught at signal schools in Fort Monmouth, N. J., and Fort Gordon, Ga.

In addition, special training courses to train television cameramen, meteorological technicians and air traffic controllers are being conducted.

fare capabilities of both friendly and enemy forces." It will further provide schooling in newly adopted concepts, organizations, doctrine, procedures and techniques for active and reserve officers.

During the exercise the participants have been called on by Sixth Army Commander Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, who is Maneuver Director for the Exercise, to think for themselves and use imagination in hopes that new ideas and techniques may stem from the play.

And it should take some hard thinking to solve the problems of Break Through II for a permanent staff of 10 officers and 14 enlisted men, headed by Deputy Maneuver Director Col. J. H. Gilbreth and his Chief of Staff, Col. Frank H. Stone, have been developing the problem since last July.

The actual play calls for the Sixth U.S. Field Army, commanded by Maj. Gen. Frank Roberts, to attack with two corps abreast, following atomic preparation. Field army headquarters at the Presidio will have both telephone and radio communication with the II Corps at Fort Lewis and the VII Corps at Fort Ord.

National Guard and USAR command groups will be participating along with Regular Army staffs at Fort Lewis and Fort Ord. Chief of Staff for the Sixth U.S. Field Army is Col. J. G. Ondrick.

At the start of the play commanders of Sixth U.S. Field Army units will be told the location of their own units and given their objectives. Their intelligence will supply some—but not all—of the Aggressor positions. As the play continues the Sixth U.S. Field Army forces may run into hidden enemy resistance.

The Maneuver Director Staff who serve as referees and also play the aggressors, will be ready to penalize troop commanders who commit tactical errors. For example, any commander who allows his troops to concentrate may be hit by an atomic artillery shell.

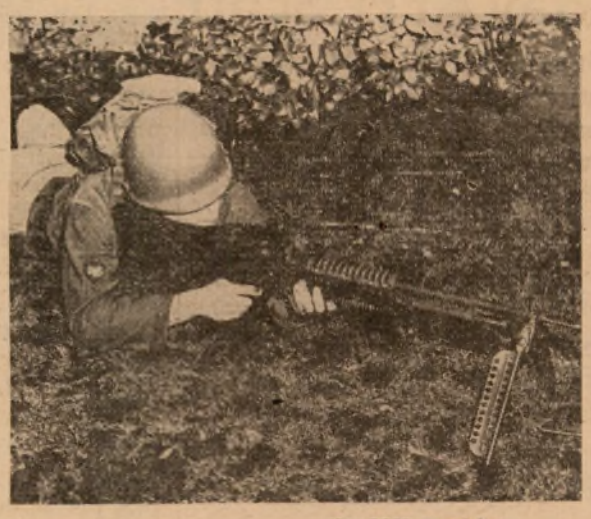
It is emphasized that "Exercise Break Through II is a regular tactical training exercise designed to train staffs of units to function as a team and is not based on any existing 'War Plans' of the U.S. forces or any forces with which we might be allied."

Army Adopts Lighter Machine Gun

7.62mm Will Replace Familiar 30 cal. Weapons

Washington (AFPS)—The Army will adopt a new lightweight weapon to replace the three .30 caliber machine guns familiar to American fighting men since WWI.

The new machine gun, which uses the 7.62mm NATO approved cartridge, may be fired either from a light bipod or tripod mount or from the hip or shoulder. It will be issued in 1959.



To be known as the M60, the weapon will take the place of the Army's present two air cooled and the water cooled .30 caliber machine guns.

Also being tested in Marine Corps amphibious operations, the M60 weighs 23 pounds with bipod as compared to the 32 to 42-pound guns used in both World Wars and the Korean conflict.

The Army said the new machine gun is as effective as the heavier water-cooled weapon and has a barrel and gas system that can be changed in a matter of seconds.

In addition, the M60 has a chrome plated, stellite-lined barrel that greatly increases its life. Stellite is an alloy used in surgical instruments.

Firing 600 rounds a minute, the M60 is 43 inches long, has a rotary locking bolt, is air cooled, and gas operated, and feeds with a dintegrating metallic-link belt.

New Machine Gun is the M60 machine gun, a lightweight general purpose weapon adopted to replace all three present Army .30 cal. machine guns. The weapon can be fired from the shoulder, from the hip, from a bipod or from a newly developed aluminum tripod mount. It is chambered with the standard 7.62-mm NATO cartridge.

It was developed by the Army Ordnance Corps in cooperation with the Inland Division of General Motors Corp., at Dayton, O., and the Bridge Tool and Die Works, Philadelphia, Pa., and tested at Ft. Benning, Ga., and Ft. Greeley, Alaska.

The Army said current plans call for initial issue to the 101st Airborne Div., Ft. Campbell. Ky.

New Army Plan Would Reduce Auto Accidents

A plan to reduce the number of automobile accidents among military personnel operating privately owned vehicles on and off-post was announced by Sixth Army this week.

The program includes utilizing the "open hour" devoted to Commanders' Problems in the Troop Information Program; integrating safe driving principles into the Chaplain's Character Guidance Program; and scheduling demonstrations in safe driving procedures in cooperation with State Highway officials.

Information regarding safe driving practices will be disseminated to personnel through Post newspapers and publications, films and film strips.

Still Basic Weapon

It is believed that U. S. Army soldiers used the bayonet more often in Korea than in any war since the War between the States.

Break Through II Termed "Very Successful!"

Successful Exercise is the opinion of these members of the Headquarters Maneuver Director Staff who review one of the battle area maps following Break Through II held on Saturday and Sunday. Col. CPX Proves "Excellent" Staff Plan

Enthusiasm and sincerity on the part of the players and good, realistic planning on the part of the directors were cited by Sixth U.S. Army Commander Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young Sunday as prime reasons for the "excellent results" of Exercise Break Through II held at the Presidio, Fort Lewis and Fort Ord last weekend.

Speaking at the conclusion of the exercise, General Young, who also served as Maneuver Director, praised the CPX as a vehicle whereby "commanders and their staffs may learn—and even make mistakes, thus learning more—without necessarily involving the troops."

"The taxpayer got his money's worth," he said, comparing the $175,000 cost of Break Through II with the one million dollar cost of a single division maneuver.

Allowing that the exercise was designed to give the participants experience in atomic warfare, General Young still cautioned against "over-killing" with atomic weapons. He reminded the players that there are still many cases where conventional weapons will do as good, or better, job.

DA Waives Pilot Time In Instrument Classes

The first class of Army aviators enrolled in the new Sixth U.S. Army Instrument Flying Course will be graduated 1 March, according to Col. Frank G. Forrest, Chief of the Sixth U.S. Army Aviation Section.

The 18-member class has been in training since 7 January. A new class is scheduled to begin 4 March, and the course will be offered at eight week intervals to succeeding classes. The quota for each class is 18 students.

A former prerequisite of 420 hours of "pilot time," has been waived for future classes by the Department of the Army. This will make many more Army aviators eligible for the school.

Purpose of the course is to qualify Army aviators as "Instrument Pilots" in accordance with CAA standards. Four other Army areas have established instrument schools to help increase the number of Army aviators with instrument flying certificates.

The Talao Academy of Aeronautics at the Oakland International Airport conducts the Sixth Army school through a contract with Transocean Air Lines.

The course is open to commissioned officers on active duty who hold a currently effective designation of Army aviator or senior Army aviator, are qualified in the operation of fixed wing aircraft, and are on flying status.

Radford Talk Set

Admiral Arthur W. Radford, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Department of Defense, will address the Commonwealth Club of California at a luncheon at 1200 hours, 25 February, at the Garden Court of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel.

Top Changes Due In 104th Infantry Div.

Retirement of the Commanding General and Assistant Division Commander of the Pacific Northwest's 104th "Timberwolf" Infantry Division, U.S. Army Reserve, has been announced by the Sixth U.S. Army.

Major General Lamar Tooze, Commanding General, and Brig. Gen. Wesley B. Hamilton, Assistant Division Commander, have planned retirements on 28 February. Col. Eugene G. Cushing, Commanding Officer of the 413th Infantry Regiment (USAR) and Col. Snyder L. Peebles, Commandant of the Seattle USAR School, are their successors.

Another key post in the division is being filled by Col. Wardell S. Duggan, who has been appointed acting commander of Division Artillery. He is replacing Gen. Ninian L. Yuille, who moved from Seattle to Los Angeles.

Wish You Were Here!

A TWX from Presidio's round-the-world travelers, Colonel Lawrence St. John and Lt. Robert Wallace, has brought a change in their schedule. Col. St. John reviewed and inspected all Army Map Service personnel in the Far East at a reveille review in Tokyo on 20 February. He departed on the same day for Okinawa and following four hours there spent a day at Clark Air Force Base. The engineer pair will leave Clark for Bangkok on 22 Feb. and leave Bangkok for New Delhi on the 23rd. So far, the trip has afforded fine weather and, reports of the Tokyo review in story and pictures may be available for the next issue of the Star Presidian.

MOS Board Convenes Here; Will Aid Careers

First in a series of military boards to counteract existing overage in specific MOS and to arrange for retraining of enlisted men and women affected by surplus areas convened at the Presidio this week.

The MOS Boards, established through a pilot roster of local officers — convening for working purposes in groups of from three to six—will be augmented in the near future with non-commissioned officers sharing the Board responsibilities.

Far from being detrimental to the individual soldier's chances of advancement, the current process of re-evaluating military assignment potential could be considered a springboard to prompt improvement in rank status after the soldier is found equally proficient in his secondary MOS or in a new one recommended by the Board after review of his records.

"Our purpose," says Captain Webster Parker, Post Personnel officer, "is not to down-grade either by rank or assignment, any man whose job calls for review in accordance with current department of the Army policy—but to give him every chance to find his proper level in a new skill."

To date, a total of nearly 100 enlisted men and women at the Presidio have been referred to the Board for analysis of their skills as determined by their job area potentials when they first entered military service.

When a man or women approves of having an MOS change made in the military record without their personal appearance before the Board, the convening officers see that the change is effected and placed on permanent record. Should the enlisted man desire to meet the Board in perosn he is notified of the time and place so that he

Horses To Stay

The sixteen matched greys and the black riderless horse that have been a part of the Army's 92-year-old traditional military funerals for officers at Arlington National Cemetery won't be mechanized, it was announced this week.

Following widespread public opinion that supported the keeping of the colorful burial ceremonies, the Army has dropped an economy move that would have motorized all military funerals.

ArmyDrivers Must Watch Speed Limits

Off-post speed limits for military vehicles operating in the Sixth U.S. Army area have been released by Sixth Army spokesmen. Drivers are to be alert to state and local speed limits and road signs which are lower than the normal limits.

Cargo-carrying vehicles, military and civilian type, are not to exceed 45 m.p.h. Buses must observe a 50 m.p.h. speed limit. Military passenger cars are to observe a 40 m.p.h speed maximum.

Commercial passenger cars follow the state speed limit of 55 m.p.h. Speed limits for combat vehicles and special purpose equipment are listed in the vehicle.

Selecting Correct Form May Save Tax Dollars

(This is the second of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. The articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants.)

The government gives you the alternative of using the simplified income tax form 1040-A, the "short form" 1040 or the "long form" 1040, depending on the amount and circumstances of your income. Selection of the wrong form may cost you unnecessary tax dollars.

The easiest form to file is the 1040-A, and according to Treasury records, one out of four taxpayers use it. To be eligible to file a 1040-A form your total income must be less than $5,000, consisting entirely of wages subject to withholding (or of wages, dividends, and interest, providing not more than $100 of such income came from a source outside that listed on your W-2 slips).

The simplified form makes no provision for "Head of Household" status or itemized deductions. If you use this form the government will figure your tax and send you either a refund or a bill, if you so desire.

However, for the first time this year, you can compute your own tax on form 1040-A and either send in the balance due with the return or show thereon the amount of refund you have coming.

Should you decide to use the regular form 1040 you still have the choice of itemizing deductions or using a standard deduction which amounts to about 10 per cent of your income. If your income was less than $5,000 and you use the standard deduction, you determine your tax from the special table given in the instruction book.

You are likely to save by itemizing deductions if you:

- Own real estate.
- Had unusual medical expenses.
- Had deductible child - care expense.
- Suffered losses from fire, storm, accident or theft.
- Made fairly large contributions.

It is important to remember that if you incur such expenses as transportation, meals or lodging in connection with your work, check carefully the instruction book to find how these expenses may be deducted even though you decide to use the standard deduction.

If your deductions are close to 10 per cent, it is wise to itemize them and figure your tax both ways to see which results in the smaller tax. As the Treasury Department has pointed out: "The law expects you to pay your correct tax—no more—no less."

Most married couples save tax dollars by filing a joint return instead of separate returns. This is because the tax is figured on a joint return as if the husband and wife each had one-half the total income (even though the wife may actually have had no income). Income-splitting, as it is called, may bring the couple down into a lower tax bracket.

Watch for the exceptions, however. If you had capital losses or unusually high medical expenses, you will be wise to figure both jointly and separately to see which results in less tax.

If you are supporting a dependent and maintain a home for that person although you are single, widowed, divorced or legally separated, you may be able to qualify as a "head of household," and figure your tax on a special table which gives you part of the advantage enjoyed by married couples filing joint returns.

Also, if your husband or wife died in 1954 or 1955, and you have as a member of your household a dependent child or stepchild, you are entitled as a "surviving spouse" to the same income-splitting benefits this year as you would have on a joint return — unless you remarried before the end of 1956.

The privilege to file as a surviving spouse applies to the first two years following the year in which your husband or wife died.

The instruction book which comes with your tax forms gives further information. Help is also available by telephone or at offices of Internal Revenue Service. You are urged to consult a properly qualified advisor if you decide to seek outside help.

MOS Board

may give the reasons why the change should or not be made.

In the event that men and women holding overage military occupational specialties cannot be absorbed into related assignments not designated surplus, within the local Command, they may request a Service school course in the recommended skill. Since such schools, however, are administerd according to quota and specific funds allocated for their function, a time lapse should be expected before the potential student reports for the designated course. Should a prescribed school course exceed 26 weeks, the soldier is reassigned on DA Orders.

It is not planned to separate a soldier completely from his specialty if there is an opportunity for him to continue in a related field. For instance, if an Information Specialist comes within the surplus list established by the Department of the Army, he may choose a Steno. School; likewise a man who shows mechanical skill, yet not working within that field, may be reassigned for on-the-job training within the Command in which he presently serves. In all cases, consideration is given to the individual soldier's preference as well as to his skill potential.

The Post Personnel officer announced that the present MOS Board reviews will be completed by the end of this month, after which a new series will be launched here to begin action on Non-Com versus Specialist designations.

KeyAAANCOs Confer With Top Command

Selected warrant officers and key enlisted men representing the five antiaircraft regional commands conferred with Lt. Gen. Stanley R. Mickelsen, Commanding General of the Army Antiaircraft Command, at Colorado Springs this week.

Purpose of the meeting was to air ideas on improving the reenlistment rate in the command.

Each command was represented by an electronics officer, an electronics material specialist, a launcher section crew chief and a fire control specialist. The participants were trained either in Army Service Schools or while working with operational units.

Personnel who attended from the 6th AAA Regional Command were CWO Robert L. Paine, 9th AAA Missile Bn.; M/Sgt. James F. Black, 83rd AAA Bn., Camp Hanford, Wash.; M/Sgt. Hershell F. Webster, 433rd AAA Bn., Seattle; and Sfc. Jasper G. Ison, Jr., 933rd AAA Bn., Los Angeles.

Illinois Soldier Named Best Of Battery 'B'

"Battalion Soldier of the Month" for the 752nd AAA 90-MM Gun Battalion at Fort Barry is Pfc. William E. Bridwell, of the unit's Battery B.

A native of the "Lincoln Country"—Springfield, Illinois, Bridwell is a gun crewman who joined his present battalion from the 2nd Gun Battalion Training, Battery A, Fort Bliss, Texas.

The 752nd "Soldier of the Month" holds the Marksmanship Medal for Carbine. He is a veteran of the Second World War and the Korean War, re-entering military service in 1956 when he decided to make it his career. The honor soldier is now being trained to assume clerical duties in his unit.

Paint, Too . . . says Sfc. Joe Kincannon, Headquarters Commandant Supply Sergeant, who is filling his shopping cart at the new Self Service Supply Center which officially opens Monday at Bldg. M-14. Assisting Sergeant Kincannon on his preview shopping tour is Harry Hersh, department manager. The store will stock approximately 1,600 items—from shovels to pencils.

New System Will Curtail Overloading

Supply sergeants may want to take a lesson from their wives in "the art of shopping" before Monday, when the Presidio's new Self Service Supply Center opens at Bldg. M-14 on Gorgas Ave.

The opening of this modern supermarket-like supply center marks the end of the traditional, cumbersome supply system involving issue slips, requisitions and due-outs. Instead of waiting days and sometimes months for needed supply items, the supply sergeant will now be able to get them immediately.

At the new store he will push a shopping cart around the aisles and take his pick from some 1,600 items stocked on the shelves. When he has what he needs, he will wheel up to the check stand and have his purchase rung up on a cash register just like at a grocery store.

Money is the brake that will prevent supply sergeants from going on spending sprees, however. Sixty-two parent agencies ranging from missile battalions to ROTC units will receive monetary credits on a quarterly basis. They in turn will allocate these credits to their composite units. Then the unit supply sergeant can spend the money as he sees fit—as long as it lasts.

"If a supply sergeant is prudent, he will have plenty of monetary credit to take care of his unit's needs," says CWO Everett L. Brazeale, store manager. He explains that the credits were issued after a nine-month usage study.

"The big thing," says Mr. Brazeale, "is for the supply sergeants to get it into their heads that the supply items will be available whenever they need them. It won't be necessary to stock up for months in advance—gone are the periods of feast and famine."

While the store is operating, 0900 to 1630 hours, Monday through Friday, the supply sergeants can go to the store as often as they like and buy whatever they need. If they need something that isn't stocked, they can order it.

A pilot supply center—one of two in the nation—was installed at Fort Lewis in February 1955. Now similar centers have been planned in the Sixth U.S. Army area for Camp Hanford, Camp Irwin, Fort MacArthur, Fort Ord and the Presidio.

The Fort Lewis test center proved that supply sergeants can be good shoppers, reports Mr. Brazeale who spent several days observing the operation. "Take rags, for instance. The Fort Lewis store sold them at 25 cents a pound. But the supply men soon learned that they could get rags laundered for free and stopped buying new ones."

The Presidio store will be established along commercial lines with departments for the following groupings: Office supplies, housekeeping supplies, general supplies, repair and spare parts, and sporting goods. At present no sporting goods have been stocked, but they are expected in the near future.

Officially the new center is expected to eliminate waste from hoarding by making supplies available at all times. It will also cut paper work and provide commanders with required supplies without restricting them to quantity.

Eleven Due Retirement Next Week

Eleven officers and enlisted men are scheduled to retire from active duty on 28 February. The group, one of the largest in recent months, follows last month's high when 23 persons retired.

Planning to complete their careers are Col. Mark H. Johnson, Sixth Army Quartermaster Section; Lt. Col. Wellington Glover, California Military District; Lt. Col. Frank V. Quillin, G-2; Lt. Col. Thomas C. Ward, Post Dispensary; Maj. Melchor V. Dionko, Camp Stoneman; and Maj. Lawrence H. Shackelford and Maj. Harry B. White, Headquarters Co., PSF.

Vehicle Registration Due Here Early Next Month

Military personnel, civilian employees and authorized civilians who bring privately owned vehicles to the Presidio and sub-posts must register their vehicles for 1957 at the Post Provost Marshal Office between 1 and 30 March.

The office will be open from 0800 to 1630 hours Monday through Friday and 0800 to 1130 on Saturdays. It is located in Bldg. 106, Lincoln and Montgomery Streets.

General registration will be handled alphabetically according to the first letter of the last name. Letters A through F are scheduled from 1-9 March; G through N, 11-16 March; and O through Z, 18-23 March. Those not registered during the above periods will be taken care of from 25 to 30 March.

Group registration for major units, sections and activities will be coordinated by the Post Provost Marshal.

When registering, owners must carry proof of ownership; valid state operators permit; and valid state registration for 1957. Insurance must include bodily injury liability of $5000 on each person and $10,000 on each accident in addition to property damage liability of $5000 on each accident.

The decals are 50 cents per vehicle. Two will be issued, one for the lower right corner of the windshield and one for the lower left corner of the rear window.

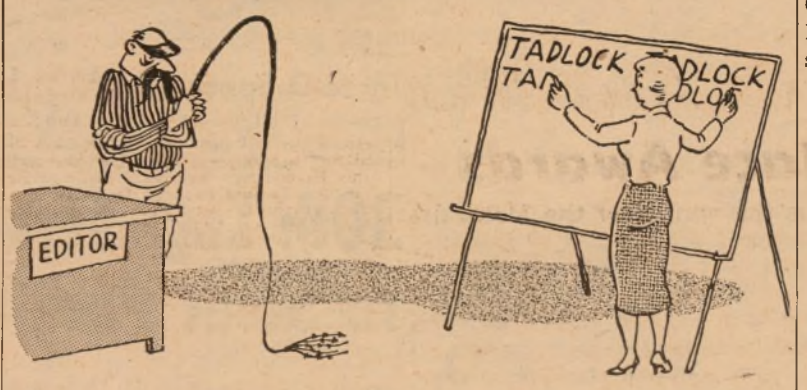
Talent Test

Fort Baker representatives in the Post All-Army Entertainment contest "live" competition will be selected at 2030 hours tonight at the service club. Service personnel from Fort Baker, Fort Cronkhite, 9th AAA Battalion and 30th Group headquarters are eligible.

The Presidio Service Club will hold its eliminations at 2000 hours, Tuesday, 26 February. The Post competition is 13 March.

Local Personnel Officers Will Clarify Benefits Act

For the first time in military history Army personnel are being offered security and family protection through a Social Security plan created by the Servicemen's and Veterans' Survivor Benefits Act. The act became effective 1 January.



The law makes Social Security and six-month death gratuity compulsory for both short-term and career personnel. The Indemnity Compensation clause is effective only for those who cancel waivers for premium payments on their Government Life Insurance policies before 1 May.

If individuals cancel the waivers but elect to continue their life insurance payments on a personal basis, their dependents still are eligible for the new indemnity compensation plan. Under this plan unmarried widows are paid $112 plus 12 per cent of base pay per month as long as they live or remain unmarried, if their husbands' cause of death is service-connected.

Children under 18 or 21 if in school or incapable of self-support and dependent parents whose income is below a stated amount are also eligible for payments under the plan. The act provides additional income for retired personnel when they reach 65.

Social Security payments withheld are added to the individual's record if and when he returns to civilian employment. Active duty personnel are taxed at the rate of two and one-fourth per cent a year up to about $94.50.

All personnel officers on Post are administrators for the program and individuals are advised to contact their personnel officer for further information. Post AG Military Personnel Division under Capt. Webster Parker is coordinating the program.

Whoever said "there's nothing in a name" is neither a friend of Lieutenant Colonel M. C. TADLOCK, Post Engineer Section, or of Kenneth S. Erwin, editor of the Star Presidian!

Something in the nature of a comedy of errors in proper names developed after the last issue of the Star Presidian hit the stands.

In a telephone conversation with Colonel Tadlock, a reporter later spelled the name—Padlock. The colonel was rightfully annoyed when he picked up the telephone to bring the matter of the misspelled name to the attention of the Star Presidian.

Nobody knows whether the colonel was being facetious or annoyed or both, when he asked for "Mr. Sherwin." No one in the Star Presidian office knew "Mr. Sherwin," but everyone knows Mr. Erwin. Of course the reporter, who had to write Tadlock a thousand times, is now equally familiar with the colonel's name.

Boxer Litter born by Caesarean operation were being cared for by members of 194th Ordnance Company at Fort Cronkhite. The Company's mascot, Amber, set a record by giving birth to 12 pups, all living. The men of the company attempted, without success, to keep the tiny pups alive. But by Monday the pups and the mother had died. Above, from the left, are Pvt. Robert Cole, Company Commander Capt. Hurbert Ford, and Sp3 Phillip Balcom.

Ordnance Mascot Dies From Record Delivery

When Amber, Boxer mascot of the 194th Ordnance Company at Fort Cronkhite, delivered 12 pedigree puppies by Caesarean operation last week, the company personnel were all delighted.

According to the veterinarian, Amber had set some sort of a record by delivering so many puppies by Caesarean and all of them living. Immediately the men began making plans for their new family. They decided to sell most of the pups to pay the mother dog's hospital bill.

But then the pups took sick. What had been an exciting, blessed event developed into a tragic battle for survival. The men in the orderly room cared for the pups during the day, and at night, the charge of quarters would assume the solitary vigil —washing, feeding and cleaning the ailing pups.

The orderly room took on the aspect of a hospital. The men with sad and serious faces, talked in subdued tones. But the care and hope could not help the pups who were taken from their mother at birth. By Monday afternoon all 12 were dead.

Completing the tragedy was word from the hospital that the mother dog had died.

So the men of the 194th have nothing left but the $100 debt they will assume for the mother dog's care.

The one positive note in the whole affair was voiced by Company Commander Capt. Hurbert Ford, who said "Everybody has worked together and no matter what has happened the men of the company are closer together because of it."

New Civilian Jobs

The real property assistant position carries a GS-7 rating and pays $4,525 a year. The wire communication cable splicer job requires a WB-16 rating and offers $2.41 an hour.

Further information is available at Bldg. 36 or Ext. 2349 or 4233.

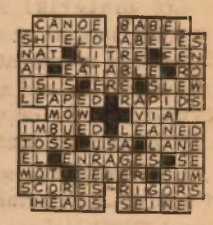
Socially Speaking

Bridge, anyone? Cup of tea? So nice of you to drop in for a short visit with our new weekly addition to the Star Presidian.

In the past the lack of funds and personnel has limited our opportunities in presenting a true picture of the Presidio's social activities from the informal get-togethers to the highly organized welfare projects. Starting today we are going to make up for lost time and compensate for the items we have been forced to reject by dedicating this column to you and your organization.

All military and civilian clubs, sections and informal social groups are urged to participate by keeping us informed of various coming activities. Meetings and luncheon announcements, programs, guests, elections, new members, special projects, engagement and wedding announcements and other general social news will be welcomed and used to the fullest extent allowed by space and funding.

Due to the infamous newspaper deadline, copy must be submitted by Friday noon preceding the desired date of publication. Since the paper is generally distributed on Friday, this means that copy must reach our office a week in advance.



Advance announcements are the most welcome because we feel it is to your best advantage if we can give you a boost when cooperation and participation are most needed. Follow-up items will be used sparingly, since, except for that rare occasion, there's no such thing as "old news."

Copy submitted in story or outline form can either be mailed to Mrs. Cornfield, Star Presidian, Building 87-A Presidio of San Francisco, or called in to Mrs. Cornfield at Ext. 3386.

If you are handling publicity for a group or a special project, please come in or give us a call. Let's get better acquainted so that together we can shape this column into a handy social guide.

Military Pay System Due Early Revision

(This is the first in a series of three articles explaining the Cordiner Committee's recommendations on the military pay schedules. Information is taken from Department of the Army news releases, Armed Forces Press Services and other official bulletins.)

The outmoded pay system which rewards length of service rather than skill and effort is the target of the Cordiner Committee's recommendations to revamp the military pay schedules.

The Cordiner plan, scheduled to be presented to the House Armed Forces Committee, stresses retaining good personnel and adding incentive for those who have needed skills and leadership ability.

The revised pay scales would give about 50 per cent of the officers and enlisted men some additional compensation. However, those who are now receiving more money than their superiors would be protected against pay reductions by a "saving clause" included in the proposal.

To illustrate the plan, take the case of an expert truck driver who has reenlisted after his obligated service and has advanced to grade E-5. With the accompanying pay allowances, he has taken on family responsibilities.

Since driving skill is not uncommon, the E-5 truck driver has ceased to be vital to the service because he can be replaced satisfactorily from a pool of less experienced men and at a smaller cost. In addition, his monetary progress in his skill is slow and his family obligations are mounting.

The proposed plan breaks the stalemate on both sides. If he insists upon remaining a truck driver, he can be denied reenlistment. However, if he agrees to be retrained in a more scarce skill, he could be advanced in pay grade through the "proficiency pay" clause and be more profitable to the service.

The program stresses ambition and progress for both enlisted men and officers. Although starting pay may not be greatly increased, advancement and worth will be recognized monetarily at nearly the same levels as offered in civilian life.

Three-D Specs are used by Cordell Shipman, Marin County Cub Scout, to examine aerial photographs at the 21st Engineer Company plant. The spectacles are part of the complicated multiplex instrument used by the engineers. Sp3 Richard Evola explained the instrument as Mrs. Shirley Shipman, den mother, and Michael and Thomas Wright look on. The Cub Scouts visited the 30th Engineer Group on Lincoln's Birthday.

30th Engineers Play Host To Scout Pack From Marin

Learning was turned into fun on a school holiday for a group of Marin County Cub Scouts who visited the 30th Engineer Group on Lincoln's Birthday. The afternoon's visit was climaxed with the boys participating in the traditional retreat ceremony.

Members of Pack 67, Terra Linda, were shown the detailed procedures involved in making military and civilian maps. They visited the 99th Engineer Company, 21st Engineer Company and 171st Engineer Detachment plants.

Maj. Ranald E. Steiner, Group S-3 Officer, hosted the tour, which was suggested by Maj. Herbert Haar, Engineer Section, Sixth U.S. Army. Major Haar is program chairman of the pack and is father of one of the boys.

Highlights of the tour included seeing maps compiled from aerial photographs, watching the letterpress, viewing maps run off the large presses, watching marble grainers which are used to surface metal plates to make them suitable for lithographic work and observing the production of three dimensional relief maps and scale models.

The 6th AAA Regional Command finished second in the Army Anti-aircraft reenlistment competition for the third straight quarter.

Lt. Col. Sanford J. Butler commands the 29th AAA Artillery Group.

Did you know? . . . that the two cannons mounted by the Lombard Gate were cast in Seville, Spain . . . in 1783 . . . seven years after the Presidio was established as a Spanish garrison? In line with old customs of naming weapons, each has an inscription bearing its title! The cannon on the right is "Agrablado"—meaning offended. The one mounted on the left is "Graciado"—grateful!

Both cannons bear a crest embodying a Roman numeral III, probably a tribute to King Charles III who was Spain's ruler at the time the cannon were forged.

The 115-foot 6-inch flag pole on the Parade ground is the biggest in San Francisco and rated one of the largest in the West. It weighs 2½ tons and sinks more than 10 feet into the ground. The pole flies a garrison flag measuring 20 x 28 feet. It was erected at a cost of $1200.

The Civil War was fought a long way from the Presidio but that conflict caused much anxiety to the military here! Old files carry Orders such as this, issued by Brigadier General E. V. Sumner in the Fall of 1861:

"No Federal troops in the Department of the Pacific will ever surrender to rebels!"

The Presidio records show another interesting highlight on the Civil War—the resignation of a brigadier general commanding, to take up the cause of the Confederacy. He was Albert Sydney Johnston who won fame as a "rebel" commander. General Johnston commanded the Department of the Pacific before the Civil War. Orders over his signature, April 9, 1861, three days before Fort Sumter was fired on to open the War Between the States, show that Johnston wrote to the War Department:

"I have the honor to tender my resignation of my commission and to request that it be submitted to the President for his action."

The general left at once and a terse order was sent out by the War Department: "The Secretary of War directs that you arrest General A. S. Johnston if he returns from California by overland route." He escaped to the Confederacy with other resigned Army personnel—by way of the southern route to Arizona in 1861.

Did you know? . . . that Pauline Cushman, a lovely actress, gave up her stage career to become a Civil War spy . . . for the Union Army. . . . She was ordered not to carry written notes relating to the information she gathered behind the Confederate lines. Pauline is buried in the Presidio National Cemetery, 30 paces east of the cemetery flag pole!

The first Roman Catholic Mass was conducted on the Presidio September 17, 1776. While the Nation was struggling for its independence Father Palou and Father de la Pena opened a new chapel here before the garrison's colonists and Indian converts. Officers entered the church chanting the Te Deum. Bells rang, volleys of pistols and muskets, and cannon salvos were fired. The guns of transports in the harbor boomed response. The chapel was destroyed by earthquake in 1812. It was then located near the present Officers Open Mess. The present chapel of Our Lady was built in 1873, with renovation taking place over the years since then.

Toreros Test Olympic Club In Benefit Game

Members of the hosting 9th AAA Btn. basketball team gathered for a group shot prior to the kick-off of the San Francisco Defense Area Championship Tournament, which began 18 Feb. and will be wound up today at Letterman Army Hospital gym.

Locals Try "Iron Team" Stunt For Youth Fund

Presidio's high-flying Toreros will try an iron-man stunt when they tangle with San Francisco's Olympic Club All-Stars in a Youth Activities Benefit Game at the Letterman Army Hospital Gym at 1930 hours on 28 February.

Already slated to vie for the Central Sixth Army Championships, 25-28 February, on the same court, they will be taking on the SF quintet with only a few hours of rest. However, the locals are convinced they can handle the visitors with one game tied behind their back.

Major Walter L. Carppi, the game's promoter, has scheduled what he believes will be the biggest halftime extravaganza in basketball history — a beauty contest.

He already has a promise that 21 of the post's most beautiful WACs will compete in the contest and is seeking more entries from the dependent and civilian ladies of the Presidio.

Entries are open until next Tuesday and may be submitted by phoning Major Carppi at Ext. 4174.

A $25 cash prize will go to the winner as well as the title of Presidio Youth Activities Queen. Each candidate will also receive an 8x10-inch photo of herself and the winner's picture will grace the pages of the Star Presidian.

Tickets for the contest will be available at the door for only $1.00 and all proceeds from the game will go to the Youth Activities Fund.

The Olympic Club may prove to be a more formidable foe than the locals have been led to believe. They boast a top array of college stars that numbers Barry Brown and Russ Lawlor (Stanford), Carl Boldt (University of San Francisco) and Ted Romanoff (College of Pacific).

Army Champs Finish Fourth In Net Meet

The Torero netmen dropped the tourney opener to the Berkeley crew by close scores of 12-15 and 13-15 in the best two out of three encounters. Returning to the courts the locals defeated Oakland, 14-12 and 12-10. Next, San Jose was forced to forfeit a game to the locals when they were unable to field a full team.

Embarcadero fell before the Toreros, 14-12 and 15-9, in what Coach Bob Jones described as their best efforts of the tourney. The Presidio crew were eliminated from further play when they lost to the Olympic Club, 8-10 and 6-12.

Handicapped by the loss of two of their outstanding players during tournament play, Jones said that he felt that the team did very well. Bert Millard was able to participate in only one match due to a recent illness, and ace setman Dick Godino was absent from all morning matches because of prior commitments.

Stockton, national champions '54-'55, placed first in the tournament, Olympic Club second, Hamilton third and the Toreros fourth.

Next scene of action for the Toreros will be the Northern California Championship Matches at Stockton, 16 March.

Personal Thanks

A personal letter to Lt. General Robert N. Young, Commanding General, Sixth U. S. Army, written by William M. Coffman, chairman of the United States Olympic Fund Committee, expressed thanks for the Sixth Army's contribution to the Olympic Fund Drive.

Mr. Coffman's letter states, "You will be interested to learn that your total contribution of $8,846.54 is just about quadruple any previous contributions made by the Sixth Army."

The Presidio of San Francisco donated the fourth largest amount in the Sixth Army area with $737.74. First among the contributors was Ft. Lewis, Washington, with $2,432.94. Second high contribution was turned in by Ft. Ord with $2,152.31 and third was Army Language School with $1,205.70.

Bay Area Winner To Advance To Regional AAA Champ Play-Off

Fort Winfield Scott's 740th AAA Missile Battalion and the 436th AAA Gun Battalion from Travis Air Force Base emerged as the teams to beat this week in early rounds of the first annual 30th AAA Group Basketball Tournament.

The cage action at Letterman Army Hospital Sports Center saw the 740th and 436th each grab first and second-round victories to stay unbeaten in the double-elimination cage meet.

The 740th opened the tournament with the most one-sided score in the early rounds, defeating the 52nd AAA Gun Battalion from Castle Air Force Base 71-47. Second win for the 740th was a 63-51 triumph over the 752nd AAA Gun Battalion, also of Fort Scott.

Experienced from extensive play in Air Force leagues at Travis AFB, the 436th moved past Fort Baker's 9th AAA Missile Battalion and Berkeley's 441st AAA Missile Battalion by identical 59-54 scores.

The 752nd, winner of the Bay Area championships in softball and volleyball, and holder of the national AAA volleyball title never got started in the cage competition. The Fort Scott gunners became the first team eliminated from the tournament when they suffered a 62-59 loss to the 9th AAA Battalion in losers' bracket play.

Champion of the meet will be determined either Thursday afternoon, Thursday night or Friday morning, depending on the outcome of earlier games. Since all teams but the champions must have been beaten twice to be eliminated from the tournament, the finalist could have to play two games to decide the title.

Winner of the tourney takes not only the Bay Area AAA basketball championship but the host team's spot in next month's 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command tournament as well.

The 6th AA Regional Command meet will match the San Francisco champion against AAA cage titlists from the Seattle, Hanford, and Los Angeles defense areas.

Winner of that competition, 18-23 March, will go to Fort Devens, Mass., 25 March-2 April, to compete for the championship of the entire Army Antiaircraft Command.

The tournaments are part of a four-sport program set up last year to build morale and encourage athletic participation among the men of the AAA commands. Softball and volleyball champions have already been named and tennis champs will be determined later this year.

Sixth Army Marksmen In Florida

The Sixth U.S. Army Pistol team left this week for participation in the National Midwinter Pistol Matches to be held at Tampa, Florida, 4-9 March and the Flamingo Matches in Coral Gables, Fla., 11-16 March.

The Sixth Army team, comprised of ten competitors, will be firing against some of the top shooters in the country including the U.S. Army Pistol Team from Ft. Benning, Georgia.

Team members scheduled to compete are: M/Sgt. James L. Wade, Presidio; Sfc. Nelson H. Lincoln, Letterman Army Hospital; Sp1 Dail Bailey, Fort Huachuca; 1st Lt. Tetsuo N. Takasumi and CWO Victor Maass, Fort Ord; M/Sgt. John L. Davis, M/Sgt. George Kersting, Sfc. Jackie Maple, Sgt. Merriweather Jones and Pfc. Fred Grant, Fort Lewis.

Upon completion of the matches, the pistol squad will return to the Presidio to begin preparation for the Sixth U.S. Army Rifle and Pistol Matches in April at Camp Roberts.

Marksmen

The Presidio Gun Club is seeking all persons interested in taking part in small arms rifle competition. The gun club participates in matches with the San Francisco Small Bore League on either Tuesday or Thursday of each week.

More small bore shooters are needed to best represent the Presidio in the weekly matches, stated Captain John Kallam, sponsor of the gun club. Interested persons are urged to get in touch with the gun club or call Capt. Kallam at Ext. 3961 for further information.

This Big! with its head on claims Sp3 Howard E. Sturdivan, Hq. Co. U.S.A. Garrison, who is extremely pleased with his 18 pound salmon, the biggest one landed at Fisherman's Wharf this past weekend.. Sp3 Sturdivan and 12 others—mostly Hq. Co. U.S.A. Garrison personnel—bagged 30 fish during their Sunday trip. The fishing trip was handled through Special Services.

Soldier Anglers Score For Big Salmon Catch

On the opening day of the salmon season, Sunday, seven men from Headquarters Company, USA Garrison, and three civilians sailed out from Fisherman's Wharf and returned with their limits, 30 fish.

Best of all the military personnel were able to take advantage of a Post Special Service program which paid half of their boat fee. As a result each man was able to go on an all day fishing trip for $4.25, instead of the usual $8.50.

Biggest fish was caught by Sp3 Howard E. Sturdivan whose 18-pound salmon was almost the biggest fish taken for the week. M/Sgt. Edward F. Kiersztian and Sfc. Joe T. Kincannon each landed fish that came close to the record.

Other Headquarters Company men taking part in the two boat trips were Company Commander Capt. Charles J. Monges, Sp2 Leon Roston, Sp3 Delbert Medford and M/Sgt. Frank S. Krupa, who made most of the arrangements.

Besides issuing permits which will cover half of the boat fee, Post Special Services also has a limited number of rods, reels and lines for the fishermen. However, Pop Lommis, Assistant Special Services Officer, warns that there are still small extra costs for leaders, bait, harnesses, weights and sinkers which must be paid by the individuals.

The only restrictions for taking advantage of the Special Services program is that only military personnel may have half their fee paid. Dependents and civilians must pay full price. In addition only service personnel who are in organizations which are based in the Presidio Post Fund are able to use the service.

Actually all Post Special Services does is issue half-price permits. It is up to the individual to charter the boat and make all other arrangements. Any fishing boat in the area may be chartered.

Yankee's Rebel Yell

A blood-chilling Confederate yell employed by Princeton to scare Rutger's players in a 1869 encounter between the two teams was the origin of today's custom of cheering the home team to victory.

Captain John E. Fleming, CO of the 549th Engrs., 30th Engr. Group, assumes an active role in company athletics as the mentor of the volleyball team. Fleming is pointing out some of the finer points of the game to his team at a practice session before the opening game of the intramural volleyball tournament at the Ft. Scott gym. An experienced man with the volleyball, Fleming played with the team that represented the state of West Virginia in the All Army Tournament while assigned to the Post Engineers of the West Virginia Military District.

On-Post Volleyball Season Under Way

The 1957 intramural volleyball season got under way Tuesday at the Ft. Scott Gym at 1800 hours.

Opening game of the post tournament saw the 752nd AAA team, captained by Phil Kilmer, down Hq. Sixth Army 15-0 and 15-10 in the best two out of three series. Observers of the games were impressed by the sharp-playing 752nd AAA outfit.

The second encounter on the evening's schedule paired the 549th Engrs. and the Hqs. 740th AAA team. The 549th Engrs. took the first two games 15-2 and 15-6 in a lop-sided contest.

Third on the card was Hq. Co. 30th Engrs. versus Honor Guard. The Honor Guard ran away with the first game of the series at 15-4. In their second encounter, Hq. Co. 30th led 11-4 at one time but faded in the stretch and lost 15-12 to the Honor Guard.

Next was the Vet. Det. and the Teen Agers. This series was the only series of the night that went the full distance of three games. The Teen Agers grabbed the first tussle 13-9 and dropped the second 15-6. The third game went to the Teen Agers 15-8 to give them credit for a win for the night.

Final encounter of opening night matched 21st Engrs. and C Btry., 740th AAA. The Engineers won the first encounter 15-5. The second encounter saw the score tied at 5-5 before the Engineers forged ahead to win the second game with an identical score to their first game, 15-5.

Catalino Ignacio, member of Presidio's defending All-Army Championship Volleyball team and recognized USVA official, handled the officiating duties in a very fair and closely watched manner. There was no room for complaint from the players concerning the officiating as was often the case last season.

Letterman Fencers Take Foil Championship At Stanford

The Letterman fencing team composed of Leo Galvan, Jose Tafoya and Herb Rhodes made a clean sweep of the meet at Stanford University to take the first place foil gold medals.

Represented at the meet were teams from Stanford, Oregon, Berkeley and several independent fencers. A second team from Letterman, Severo Pasol and Pete Schwartz, were handicapped by the fact that they entered competition with only a two-man team. Despite the fact that this automatically forfeited three of their bouts, the two captured third place in the meet.

A newcomer to Pacific Coast fencing strips, but known throughout the fencing world, is Thomas Olney of Hungary. Olney was recently engaged in the Hungarian fight against Communist oppression in the anti-communist uprising last fall.

Olney was eligible to compete in the Olympics by virtue of holding the title of world's junior sabre champion but chose to remain and fight as a member of the Hungarian underground rather than participate in the Olympic matches.

Now residing in San Francisco, Olney will take part in the fencing competition here on the Pacific Coast in the future.

LAH-Presidio Fencers Annex Sabre Title

Letterman-Presidio fencers narrowly defeated strong fencing teams from Berkeley and Stanford-Oregon to win the intermediate sabre championships held at Berkeley.

Representing the Presidio and LAH were Col. Larry Brownlee (Presidio) and Sgt. Jose Tafoya and M/Sgt. Severo Pasol of Letterman. Scorekeepers were forced to count separate bouts to determine the winners at the competition.

The Letterman-Presidio team was presented the gold medals on the basis of ten wins to Stanford-Oregon's nine bouts for second spot and Berkeley's taking third with eight wins.

Wildlife Confab Will Be Held In Washington

The 22nd annual North American Wildlife Conference will be held in Washington, D.C., 4-6 March, under the sponsorship of the Wildlife Management Institute.

The conference consists of three general and six technical sessions on problems relating to research, management, administration and conservation education activities in the field of fish and game.

Lloyd W. Swift of the Wildlife Society, an organization of professional fish and game workers, will be in charge of the technical sessions.

Ward Rolls 617 Series, Tops For Dental Clinic

The Hilltoppers top the Presidio Bowling League again this week by virtue of their 3-1 win over the Hardnoses. Last week's standings left the Hilltoppers and Keystone Kops tied for first place with 49 wins and 27 losses apiece.

The Keystone Kops dropped one game behind the leaders when they split their series 2-2 with Hq. Co. Sixth Army.

Harland McInturff was high man for the Kops with 580-195 series and game. A 578 series and 210 game put Robert Wilmoth in the top spot for Hq. Co.

The King Pins decisioned the Dental Clinic 3-1 with Harry Hoffacker leading the Pins with 584 and 203. Thomas Ward was big man for the Dental Crew with 617 series and 216 individual high game.

Last place Radicals thumped seventh spot Sneakers 3-1. Moore toppled high series for the Radicals with 545 and also kegged the highest individual game of the night with 222 pins. Edward Kiersztian led the way for the losing Sneakers with a 534 and 182.

Frisco League action saw the league leading Sky Busters blank the cellar dwelling Ichi Bans 4-0. Second place CMD was equally unmerciful when they white-washed the Phills 4-0.

Hq. Sixth Army continued the slaughter by dropping the Misseleers 4-0, and AG Reserve followed suit when they decisioned the Fireballs 4-0 also.

Only teams to depart from the 4-0 scores were the Deuces and Topoteers who split their series down the middle, 2-2.

Don Ryan, Sky Busters, and Don Hoogstad, Phills, are tied for the lead in 200 plus games with five apiece in the Frisco League. Four other keglers, Arthur Cox, CMD; Martin Bram, Sky Busters; Ed Kiersztian, Sneakers; and Ben Saunders, CMD, are credited with four games apiece of 200 or better pins.

G-1, leading the Pacific League, felled the second place Hilltoppers, 3-1. John Daujat kegged high series for G-1 with 568 and 243 individual high game of the series. High for the Hilltoppers was James Leonard with 538 and 191.

The Ivy Leaguers set the Sleuths 3-1 behind the rolling of Cranmer with 580 and 205. Charles Kirtley was tops for the Sleuths with 506 and 184. Hq. Co., 6000 SU, blanked 6A Signal 4-0 with the aid of Bauman's 517 and 183 while Dennis topped the losers with 499-187.

QMERS took their encounter with the JAGS 3-1. Thomas Delaney's 514-193 was high for the QMERS and Carl McAfee's 502-185 series and game topped the losing team. Wood's 437 series and 157 game led the Honor Guard to a 3-1 win over the TAGS. Morgan was high for TAGS with 410 and 167.

Sports Casting with Casey

CASABA — Last year's Sixth Army basketball champions and runners-up in the All Army playoffs, the Ft. Lewis Chiefs, have announced the return of K. C. Jones to the regular lineup. K. C. will be remembered by locals as the great All-American and Olympic shotmaker who teamed with Bill Russell to lead the University of San Francisco to an unprecedented win streak and top national basketball honors. Jones has been sidelined with a case of flu. The Chiefs, already considered a shooin in the Sixth Army tournament slated for 4-9 March at Lewis, recently dumped McChord AFB 117-70. Besides Jones they boast such top talent as Stan Glowaski (Seattle U.), Jerry Bird (Kentucky) and big Nick Clock, 6-5 center (Santa Clara). Of course our own Toreros are determined to extend the Lewisites and are firmly convinced they have a better than average chance to win.

HUNTING — California small game hunters will have to present a united and vocal front to beat off attempts to place its number one game bird on the protected list. A group identified as the Committee for Dove Protection are conducting a determined drive to effect such legislation. Their main contention being that the doves are valuable to the farmer in the control of weeds, however, fish and game experts say this and other facets of their drive have no basis in scientific fact. Federal and state studies over the years prove that mourning dove eat very little weed seed; are growing in population and not only can support present hunting pressures but probably additional pressure. In recent years the State Fish and Game Commission has set a 28 to 30 day season on the dove. In 1955 the local hunters bagged some 2,571,000 doves, second only to the annual bag in Texas.

FISHING—A good old-fashioned hassle is expected to take place when the annual Fish and Game Commission meeting gets under way in Sacramento today. Opponents will be sports fishermen vs. commercial fishermen who net shad and salmon in the lower reaches of the Sacramento river. The sportsmen contend that the commercial netters are destroying thousands of striped bass that are taken accidentally by their nets. Their opponents say this is an over simplification of the case and that the few bass that are taken are returned to the water unharmed. It promises to be quite a session.

Local Blood Bank Needs Are Urgent

Medicare Act Shows Early Trends Here

Dependents who are eligible for care and treatment under the Dependents' Medical Care Act enjoy free choice between military and civilian facilities in the Sixth U.S. Army area, according to Capt. Clement A. McGarry, Sixth U.S. Army Medical Section.

The captain, who administrates the act in this Army area, explained that the Surgeon General has included a clause allowing individual areas to request restricting the use of civilian facilities when military medical training programs are hampered.

The medical care identification cards, which must be used after July, have not yet been received here. Dependents may use commissary or Dependents' Identification cards until the new ones are issued.

Legal wives and children under 18, or 23 if in college, are the only ones eligible for civilian treatment under the act. Other dependents of active duty personnel or dependents of retired personnel are not eligible. The captain suggested that individuals check their eligibility before planning treatment.

Captain McGarry also reported that the billing and payment phases of the act are handled by civilian agencies such as Blue Cross, hospitalization, and Blue Shield, physicians. Bills are sent directly to these agencies which in turn bill the executive agency in Washington, D. C. The Army is the executive agent for all of the services.

Since the act became effective 7 December, early figures indicate that dependents may turn more to civilian obstetrical care. However, the captain stressed that the act had not been in effect long enough to determine definite trends.

According to Captain McGarry, the medicare legislation is the first legal attempt by the Army to provide medical treatment for its dependents. Until the act was passed Army doctors and hospitals served dependents merely as a courtesy.

IG Mob Group Solves Tough CPX Problems

During last weekend's exercise Break Through II, members of the IG Mobilization Group had to solve realistic problems encountered by Inspectors General in the field.

In developing the IG portion of the exercise, careful attention was focused on developing real problems that could be solved during the exercise and on supplying enough requirements to keep the Mobilization Group and the IG section busy.

The exercise included a cross-section of complaints, investigations and inspections, normal IG functions.

The Mobilization Group is made up of local reserves who are attached to the California Military District. Participating were Col. Eugene T. Severin, Lt. Col. Robert W. Gunn, Lt. Col. Carl Haugen, Maj. John F. Jackson and Capt. John Kelly.

Must Increase Average By 1500 pts. Per Month

If a national disaster hit San Francisco today between the normal working hours of eight to five, about 1,012,500 persons would be involved. It can't happen? That's what they thought in 1906 when the infamous earthquake and fire produced 2500 casualties.

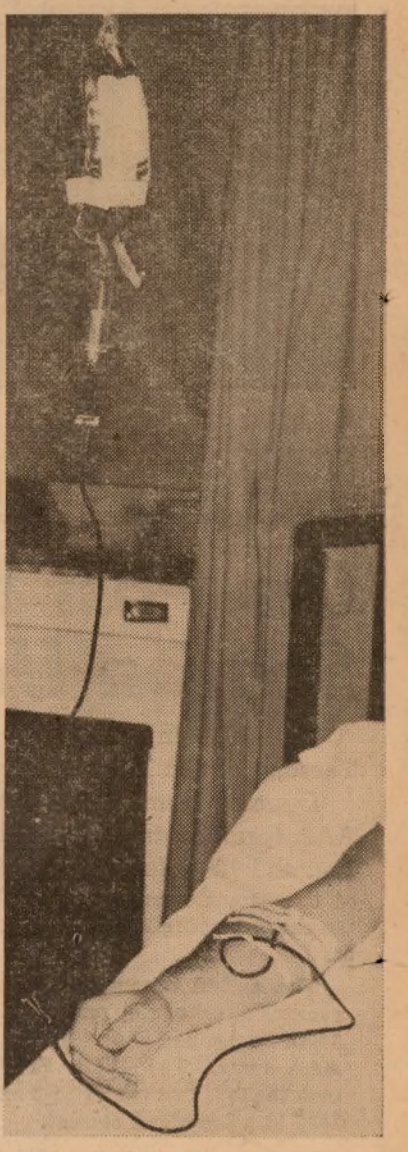
Blood is an indispensable life-saving factor. If a natural catastrophe strikes again, an estimated 63,281 pints of blood would be needed immediately. In the past 42,000 pints a year has been the maximum collected.

Mrs. Bernice Hemphill, executive director of Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, announced yesterday that her organization which stores and supplies blood for 52 hospitals must up its quota to 5000 pints a month. At present about 3500 pints are given.

To Presidians this urgent need for more blood hits close to home, for Letterman Army Hospital is one of the hospitals which look to Irwin Memorial for blood. In 1956 LAH used 2682 pints of blood, 2100 drawn here, 582 coming from Irwin.

Last year although three service groups exceeded their blood quotas, the Presidio fell short of its 1800-pint goal by 300 pints. Groups going over the top were E Company, USA Garrison; D Company, USA Garrison; and the 561st Engineer Company.

Donations will be taken either at LAH or at Irwin Memorial. Appointments will be made by the Letterman Public Information Office for group donations.



Individuals are eligible to give blood if they are between the ages of 18 and 60 and have no history of malaria, hepititis, ulcers or venereal disease. Those between 18 and 21 must have parents' consent.

Irwin Memorial is the first non-profit and the largest community blood bank in the United States. Established in 1941 by Dr. John R. Upton, Irwin is operated by the San Francisco Medical Society. Dr. Upton is now chairman of the California Medical Association's Blood Bank Commission.

About 200 pints a month were donated in Irwin's first six months of operation. During the first year 7362 pints were collected.

Up to the present Irwin has registered about 600,000 donors. According to current statistics, if all eligible blood donors were registered, each person's donation would be needed only once every 11 years. Irwin now receives about 3500 pints a month; it must increase this monthly average to 5000.

An average person's heart pumps 250,000 tons of blood in a lifetime—one pint is negligible to the healthy donor but the last hope to the critically ill or injured.

Army Commanders Praise CPX

Brig. Gen. John D. Phillips, VI Corps Commander, speaking during the same voice conference, brought out two lessons that had been learned from the play. He first stressed the need of rapid strike analysis following both friendly and aggressor atomic strikes.

This led to his second point which was the need of an alternate plan in case the atomic weapon did not do the job expected of it.

Commander of the Second Corps at Fort Lewis, Maj. Gen. William W. Quinn, emphasized the increased need of utilizing the terrain for dispersion of larger units—up to division size. He also noted the need for greater mobility where atomic warfare tactics are used.

Each of the general officers who spoke in the voice conference concluding the exercise agreed with Maj. Gen. Frank Roberts who said he had "rarely if ever engaged in a more realistic exercise." Literal realism was achieved by the Presidio where a cannon boomed every time an atomic cannon shell was supposed to land in the Army service area.

The paper advance made by the Sixth U.S. Field Army averaged 18 miles during the 16 hours of problem time, according to Lt. Col. Clarence Howe, Director, Staff G-2. He explained that some units advanced as far as 33 miles while others made only 10 miles.

Approximate casualties suffered by the Sixth U.S. Field Army came to 2,647 killed and 5,097 wounded. Civilian casualties numbered 9,500 killed and 15,000 injured. The high number of civilian losses was the result of atomic weapons striking in rear areas, said Lt. Col. Roger O. Williams, Director Staff G-1.

"The mass destruction possibilities of atomic warfare was a point brought sharply home to all of us," Col. Frank H. Stone, Headquarters Director Chief of Staff, remarked this week. He noted that during the play the unit replacement sysetem used when casualties were high had worked well and seemed completely feasible.

One of the requirements of the exercise was that friendly forces be subjected to attack from chemical, biological and electronic weapons by the aggressor. But the main destruction came from atomic explosion. One large air blast added the danger of fall-out to the other hazards.

Air Force participation in the exercise, which "added a great deal of realism," according to General Young, was directed by Lt. Col. K. Dempster from the Ninth Tactical Air Force. Altogether 25 Air Force officers took part in the problem.

Communication facilities used during the play were rated as "most unique and excellent" by General Young, who cited telephone company cooperation as one reason for the good results.

The use of pre-planned messages took a great deal of the load off the communications system, according to Colonel Stone. The messages, printed in advance, were issued to the various commands during the play. Had the messages started from a central headquarters, they would have seriously clogged the network.

ARMY POWER—KEY TO PEACE

Inside Story! Presidio Sergeant Spent Months Interviewing Hungarian Rebels

By Sp3 Dick Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

After two and a half months of interviewing Hungarian refugees—7 days a week, 14 hours a day—M/Sgt. Frank S. Datner is might glad this week to be back at his First Sergeant's desk at Headquarters Company, USA Garrison.

Sergeant Datner and M/Sgt. Peter Binder, also of Headquarters Company, were sent TDY to Camp Kilmer, N. J., on 13 December to help with the incoming Hungarian refugees.

Although Sergeant Datner hadn't spoken his parents' language for 20 years, it came back to him quickly and he was given a job of questioning the incoming refugees. The question "What was your part in the revolution?" brought some astonishing tales of heroism and daring.

Young boys, 14 and 15, spoke of trading rifle fire with trained Russian troops. Others dropped Molotov cocktails from the roofs of apartment buildings into the turrets of Russian tanks. Another boy told of stretching a cord from one basement window to another across a street. Attached to the center of the cord was a Molotov cocktail which would be manipulated under a passing tank and exploded.

Perhaps the most unique story told to the sergeant concerned a group of young Freedom Fighters living in a small town outside Budapest. The girls lounged outside their homes and enticed three Russian tanks to stop. The Russians climbed out of their tanks and were mowed down by the Hungarian boys lying in ambush.

The Hungarian youths, many of whom had received Russian military instruction, then climbed into the tanks, turned around and headed for the Russian support troops following a quarter of a mile behind. Once in the midst of the Russian troops, the tanks opened fire.

M/Sgt. Datner

Sergeant Datner praised the processing system set up at Camp Kilmer. When operating smoothly it was possible to completely process the refugees in four hours. This included health examinations, interviewing, identification and housing.

"All kinds of people arrived from Hungary," says Sergeant Datner. "There were single persons and families of 10. Some were dressed better than you or me; one man was found with six pounds of gold sewed in his clothing."

Sergeant Datner expressed surprise at the number of intelligent, educated people that fled from Hungary. This group included engineers, professors and a great many college students.

About half the refugees were able to escape in the period of confusion created when the Russians attacked Budapest following their original withdrawal. At that time the borders were open and people could just walk across.

Later it was necessary to escape at night with the help of guides. Sometimes those fleeing were forced to pay their life savings for direction to Austria. Some of the guides reportedly made millions from these desperate people.

But while most of these people risked their lives to escape, they told Sergeant Datner they would like to go back. They would like to go back as part of an Army to fight the Russians.

Atomic Warheads Due on Missiles Says DOD Chief

The United States has begun using nuclear weapons for air defense purposes within the national boundaries, according to Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson.

The first nuclear weapon added to the air defense system is an air-to-air rocket launched from an interceptor-type aircraft. The rocket is available in the Air Defense Command.

Nuclear weapons will also be utilized in the surface-to-air defense systems, including Nike-Hercules and Talos.

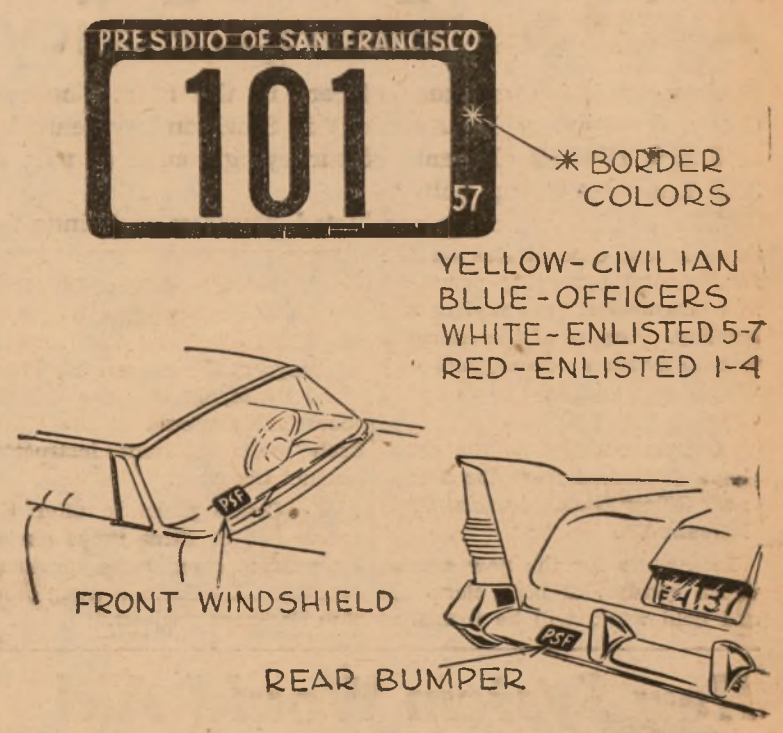
WO Board Set

Washington—A selection board will convene here March 26, to consider warrant officers for temporary promotion to grades W-3 and W-4, the Army has announced.

Zones of consideration for these grades were established in DA Circ. 624-4, dated Jan. 16, 1957.



Selections would be by the "best qualified" method, the Army said. The total number to be considered for W-4 is 513, for W-3, 853.

New DOD Film On Liberty Due Here Shortly

"In Honor of Liberty" — a new documentary-type film produced by the Department of Defense, shows an Army Corporal discovering the meaning of Liberty as he visits the Statue of Liberty, on famous Bedloe's Island, N. Y.

An inspiring and patriotic travelogue, the film has been cleared for public showing and recommended for large-scale presentation within the service and to interested civic groups.

It is expected by the Presidio Signal Section that the film, "In Honor of Liberty" will be available locally within a week.

Car Stickers Due This Month

New identification decals for privately owned cars operated at the Presidio will be issued to military personnel, civilian employees and authorized civilians during this month. All cars brought to the Presidio must be registered.

The stickers, predominately silver-gray, feature blue borders for officers, yellow for civilians, white for enlisted grades from E-5 to E-7 and red for the other enlisted grades. Two decals will be issued for each car, one to be placed on the lower right corner of the windshield and the other on the left side of the rear bumper.

According to the Provost Marshal, tags stating the change in year only may be issued next year. Estimated cost of the '58 is ten cents.

Persons whose last name begins with A through F are scheduled to register from 1-9 March; G through N, 11-16 March; and O through Z, 18-23 March. Those not registered during the above periods will be handled from 25 to 30 March.

Top Work by two enlisted men has been recognized at Travis Air Force Base with the awarding of achievement certificates for outstanding administrative skill, leadership and organization of personnel. Recipients are M/Sgt. Raymond C. Eichenauer and Sfc. Albert H. Harrison, Jr., Headquarters Battery, 29th AAA Group. Col. Sanford J. Butler, 29th AAA Group Commander, made the presentations.

Post Trans Needs Data On Students

The Post Transportation Office is seeking information on the number of students planning to take advantage of the after-hour language courses offered by certain San Francisco schools.

The office must determine the number of students involved before deciding whether bus transportation can be provided for the late students.

Parents of the children planning to take the course are asked to call the office no later than today. The name of the child, age, name of school and the hour that transportation will be required is the information needed.

29th AAA Group Sergeants Win Achievement Award

Two members of Headquarters Battery, 29th AAA Group, have been awarded achievement certificates for outstanding administrative skill, leadership and organization of personnel. The 29th AAA Group is stationed at Travis Air Force Base.

Award winners are M/Sgt. Raymond C. Eichenauer, Group Sergeant Major, and Sfc. Albert H. Harrison, Personnel Sergeant Major. Col. Sanford J. Butler, 29th AAA Group Commander, presented the awards.

Sergeant Eichenauer was cited for meritorious service from 12 May, 1953, to 17 December, 1956, first serving as Battalion Sergeant Major, 436th AAA Battalion, and in his present capacity. The sergeant assisted in helping his command maintain a high degree of administrative efficiency with a minimum amount of personnel.

Serving as Personnel Sergeant Major, 436th AAA Group, before assuming his present position, Sergeant Harrison was recognized for ensuring a high degree of efficiency in personnel actions although faced with heavy turnover. He helped organize the group personnel section while serving in his battalion personnel capacity.

New Course Will Teach Aviators Group Policy

Army aviation engineer officers in the 521st Engineer Company (Topographic Aviation) in Stockton have enrolled in a new 13-week elements of surveying course as part of 30th Engineer Group policy.

The course, which is conducted Tuesday mornings for three hours, concentrates on the fundamental surveying principles in triangulation, traversing and leveling. Purpose of the course is to help aviators who support surveying crews become more aware of the crews' problems.

Instructors for the new course, which consists of both classroom and field work, will be furnished by the 660th Battalion. Lt. Richard D. Each week different instructors conduct the class.

The Group plans to offer the course two or three times during the year to compensate for turnover and the officers away at other 30th Engineer projects.

New System Would Aid Post Savings Bond Holders

A system to help civilian Savings Bond holders permanently change the mailing address on their bonds has been devised by the 16th Base Post Office and the Post and Sixth Army Finance and Accounting sections.

Under the system individuals who wish to pick up their bonds at the Post Locator instead of having them mailed to their residence, must call the Post Locator before payday. CWO Isaac White and M/Sgt. William D. Whidden (Ext. 4431) will handle the information.

The Post Locator will then hold the bonds for 24 hours after the payday and the individual can pick the bond up there. Persons who do not call will receive their bonds in the mail as usual.

The service of holding bonds for 24 hours will be effective in March and April only. This period is designed to give bond holders an opportunity to effect a permanent change of address on the bonds with the Civilian Pay section.

Dental Corps To Celebrate Birthday

Army, Post Operations Illustrate Great Progress During 46-Year Service

About 6000 dental health records have been completed in the past two and a half months by Post Dental Corps officers, who will join all Army Dental Corps members in observing the Corps' 46th anniversary this weekend.

The goal of a complete dental history for each service person assigned to the Presidio is now in sight. The records include such data as X-ray examinations when required and a chart of the individual's fillings.

After the initial records for those on active duty are completed, service personnel will be checked upon entering and leaving the service. The dental histories will become part of the official record and will accompany the individual to his various assignments.

The Post Dental Clinic has just been remodeled, boasts several pieces of new equipment and this month is expecting a portable dental van to service AAA units. About 7000 operative dental procedures are completed by the clinic each month.

Seventeen Dental Corps officers, with an average of 8.1 years of formal training, man the Post Dental Clinic and the sub-dental clinic at Fort Baker. They represent 12 different universities.

Col. Clare T. Budge, Post Dental Surgeon, was graduated from the University of Oregon Dental School. He was commissioned a dental officer in 1935 and was Chief of Personnel for the Dental Corps in the Surgeon General's Office before receiving his present assignment two and a half years ago. During World War II he served in India and China.

Other dental officers are Lt. Col. Wendell T. Jackson, Lt. Col. Walter F. Kelso, Lt. Col. James E. Lancaster, Maj. Virgil Woods, Capt. Edward J. Hartmann, Capt. Norman J. Edwards, Capt. Sherman Bangert, Capt. Robert J. Kuhl, Capt. John E. Page. Capt. Elverne M. Tonn and Capt. Herbert A. Carpenter.

Dental Corps first lieutenants are Earl J. Krainik, Robert B. Dewhirst, Joseph G. Martin, Arthur M. Hartman and Calvin D. Burlison. CWO Finis C. Brannam is the administrative assistant.

The Sixth U.S. Army Dental Section, headed by Col. Kenneth P. Fulton, has 218 officers on duty Lt. Col. James M. Enmeier is the Army executive officer.

Although the need for Army dentists was mentioned as early as 1859, the Army Dental Corps was not established until 3 March, 1911. At the beginning of World War I, 86 Army Dental Corps officers were on active duty. This number expanded to 4620 by 30 November, 1918. The Corps' peak strength was reached on 1 November, 1944, when 15,292 officers were on active duty.

Between 1 January, 1942, and 31 August, 1945, the Dental Corps handled more than 69 million fillings, 16 million extractions, two million partial dentures and 500,000 full dentures.

First Soldier's Message

On behalf of the men and women of the Army, I extend congratulations and best wishes on the occasion of the forty-sixth anniversary of the Army Dental Corps.

The techniques of operative dentistry and oral surgery developed by the Army's dentists during the relatively short history of the Corps have contributed to higher dental standards throughout the Nation. Applying their professional skill, Army dentists have continued to improve the oral health of our soldiers and thereby help maintain the general health of American troops.

I wish each of you continued satisfaction in your indispensable duties which contribute to the well-being of the Army.

MAXWELL D. TAYLOR
General, United States Army
Chief of Staff

CG's Message

On the 3rd of March, 1957, your Corps will enter its forty-seventh year of service to the dental health of American Army personnel and their dependents.

The members of the Dental Corps are trained specialists who seek no reward beyond the satisfaction of knowing that they have always performed their duties in accordance with the highest standards of the dental profession.

I think it is entirely fitting at this time that all of us who have profited from your devoted services gratefully acknowledge the good you have done and continue to do in our behalf.

May I convey to you, the members of the Army Dental Corps, the heartiest congratulations and best wishes of myself, the men and women of the Sixth United States Army and our families, on your anniversary.

ROBERT N. YOUNG
Lieutenant General, U.S.A.
Commanding

Dental Chief's Message

On the occasion of the forty-sixth anniversary of the establishment of the Army Dental Corps, I extend to all of you my sincerest congratulations and best wishes.

The progress that has been made, through the years of war and peace, is outstanding. Much of it can be directly attributed to your devotion to the highest principles of the Dental profession and the Military Service which has earned for our Corps the respect and gratitude of the personnel you serve so well. Each of you can be justly proud of the vital contribution you are making to the health and welfare of the Armed Forces.

It would be a distinct pleasure and privilege, were it possible, for me to be present to personally greet the officers, enlisted personnel and the civilian dentists and assistants who are serving so well throughout the world.

It is with a great deal of feeling that I wish you continued success. I am confident that by your dedicated service you will continue to enhance the splendid reputation of the Army Dental Corps.

J. M. EPPERLY
Major General, D.C.
Chief of the Dental Corps

Chaplain (Major General) Patrick J. Ryan, Chief of Chaplains, former Chief Chaplain for the Sixth U. S. Army, is the subject of two magazine feature articles in current national publications.

First of the two features appears in the March issue of The Sign, now on the news stands. The second is carried in the April issue of Catholic Digest, available about 15 March.

Written by Paul Healy, free lance writer for The Saturday Evening Post, Coronet and other national magazines, the Ryan story, accompanied by a series of his war service pictures, gives a detailed account of the religious and military aspects which shaped the Chief Chaplain's Army career. West Point Preparatory School will move from Stewart Air Base, Newburgh, N. Y., to Fort Belvoir, Va., during July, 1957.

Socially Speaking

Packing, weighing suitcases for flight regulations and sorting belongings are generally bleak tasks, but seem to brighten up in a hurry when you are preparing to accompany your husband to a new position in London, England. Mrs. Carol Gibson, secretary to Col. Arthur Timboe, Chief of Sixth U. S. Army Information, is doing just that.

Going Abroad!

Carol's husband, Robert, will join the McGraw-Hill World News Bureau, which supplies all foreign news to some 33 McGraw-Hill publications. Mr. Gibson, now with Associated Press, won the Melville Jacoby International Fellowship for a year's graduate study at Stanford University in 1955.

The couple will leave work 9 March and stop in Idaho and Los Angeles before flying to New York and then on to London. They have a furnished apartment waiting for them in Regents Park, which Carol says is supposedly a fashionable section. She added that the British definition of "nice" and "fashionable" could be a little different from ours.

The Presidio played a big part in Carol's trip—she met Bob when his Army assignment brought him to the Information Section.

Record Job Wins New Task For Engineers

With the recent completion of the surveying of the Pinyon Well district, the 537th Engineer Company has finished surveying a large portion of Southern California, an assignment given to the 30th Engineer Group by the U.S. Geological Survey in 1950.

The group has been assigned three new quadrangles to survey by the organization. The Pinyon Well project, which was scheduled to take four months, was completed in about a month and a half.

Units from the 30th Engineer Group have been surveying various areas of Southern California during the winter months of each year since the project was initiated. The California operations train the men for the Alaskan Survey project which can be conducted only in summer.

A detachment from the 521st Engineer Company (Topographic Aviation) accompanied the surveyors to render aerial support.

Historian Likes New Column . . . but

First formal congratulations on the newly-launched Star Presidian column—Presidio Sketchbook—came this week in a letter from Major Earle K. Stewart, Post Historian.

"It should be a real help in acquainting newly arrived personnel with information about the Presidio," declared Major Stewart.

Added information in Major Stewart's letter referred to the Lombard Gate cannon and the Post Chapel of Our Lady, both mentioned in the column.

They were brought to San Francisco by General William R. Shafter, commanding General of the Department of California. These two guns, as well as as those in front of Stillwell Hall, were war trophies taken by the Army during the Spanish-American War at Santiago de Cuba.

General Johnson remained in command in the West until relieved by General Sumner, who arrived in April, 1861. "Most historians," said Major Stewart, "credit Johnson with equal good faith in his conduct that they accord to Robert E. Lee."

The Chapel of Our Lady was built in 1863, rather than 1873, which date is recorded in old files. It was part of the first major building program on the Presidio. The chapel and other buildings along Funston Avenue were built for the 9th Infantry Regiment, which, with units of the 3rd Artillery, was the only regular Army unit to remain in the West during the Civil War.

Spotlight on a lucky face! When this serviceman comes forward to identify himself he will receive two free tickets to a theater performance. SPOTLIGHT introduces an idea presented to the Fort Baker Service Club by its new Nom-Com and Specialist Advisory Board—to aid in planning and publicizing social and recreational functions. The new Board is drawn from men of the 561st Engineer PC Battalion; Sixth U.S. Army Medical Laboratory, 9th Triple A, 6th Regional Command, Harbor Craft, and from the Chaplain's Office.

Puppeteers for a day will be a new role for Presidio Girl Scouts when they present a puppet show as part of the coming Doll Show. The girls are making the puppets and stage. All military families are urged to enter their dolls in the show scheduled 10 March. Dolls must be registered no later than today, but do not have to be delivered until 9 March. The Doll Show is part of the Girl Scout birthday observance.

Pick Talent Finalists For All-Post Contest

Vocal soloists took the spotlight this week in the All-Army entertainment contest as service clubs selected their entrants for the Post finals scheduled 13 March at the Presidio Service Club.

Three vocalists, representing both the Presidio Service Club and the Fort Baker-Cronkhite Service Club competitions, will vie Wednesday. They are Sfc. S. W. McElhone, 61st Engineers; Sp2 Leroy Langston, Company C, USA Garrison; and Sgt. Hugh Allen, Letterman Army Hospital.

A western band group and an individual specialty act from the Fort Baker-Cronkhite area will also compete. The band is made up of Sp2 Raymond Cummings, 561st Engineer Company; Pvt. Buster Dozier, 9th AAA; Pfc. Leroy Vanover, 561st Engineer Co.; and Pfc. Curly Brown. Pvt. Richard Toscano, 561st Engineer Co., will enter as a record pantomimist.

Additional competitors named at the Presidio Service Club are Sp3 Horace Randolph, Headquarters Co., 6002, piano soloist; and a rhythm and blues quartet, "The Comets," composed of Pvt. Tommie Hawkins, Pvt. Donald Worley, Pvt. Robert Foster, and Sp3 Enoch Green, all in the 30th Engineer Group.

Did You Know . . . that without Army authorization or official permit to build, a new housing unit is under way at the Presidio this week? Colonists arrived here en masse. . . . They spoke in a foreign language . . . ate their food raw . . . and quarrelled over squatters' rights! The males whistled flirtatiously, and some kept sharp eyes out for rooms with a view. Yes . . . the Robin Housing Unit is under way. The lease is signed and spring has come to the Presidio. A flock of robins have delivered their own TWX to that effect.

Speaking of robins . . . did you know that the most enduring and the most haunting of European legends is connected with a robin—a legend which credits a little plain, grey bird with sharing in the miracle of Calvary? The story goes that as Christ was dying, a drab inarticulate creature lighted on the Cross and tried to sing a Requiem. No notes came from its throat, but in passing, the bird's breast touched the face . . . and the heart of Christ. His blood stained the dull grey feathers, bringing this scarlet stigmata to the breasts of all European robins since . . . and a singing voice that outdoes the skylark. The continuing belief is, that the robin is luckiest of all omens . . . that the redbreast is blessed and holds a permanent passport to any corner of the world. Perhaps that's why the Presidio robins build houses where San Francisco contractors fear to tred!

Still speaking of birds . . . did you know that the Presidio is a sanctuary for quail as well as for robins? When General Joseph Swing commanded the garrison, he made it mandatory for householders to bell their cats in deference to the preservation of quail. It isn't known whether Presidio cats still ring bells to announce their coming . . . but the quail family is still here. We saw a covey yesterday . . . feeding in a grove by the Lombard Gate.

While still airborne—let's take a trip to Crissy Field! Did You Know that it was once a race track—during the Panama-Pacific Exposition in 1915, and that it was later named after Major Dana Crissy who lost his life near Salt Lake City, Utah, during a trans-continental experimental flight in 1919?

And now for a bird's-eye view of Golden Gate Cemetery. Its dedication as such, took place in 1884, when President Lincoln's son, Robert T. Lincoln, was the Secretary of War. . . . Here by the entrance is the lovely granite monument and the bronze plaque bearing Lincoln's Gettysburg Address . . . deathless prose in a deathless setting. Here also is the grave of Private John Brown of the Second Infantry Regiment . . . the first soldier to be buried in the new cemetery. Farther on are the graves of Majors General Hunter Liggett, Frederick Funston and Irvin McDowell, for whom were named Hunter Liggett Reservation, Fort Funston and Fort McDowell . . . and the grave of Private William Hood, an engineer on the Central Pacific Railroad during its completion. Look at the headstone to "Two Bit" . . . an early-Indian interpreter for early-American soldiers!

But since "life is real, life is earnest . . . and the grave is not our goal," we will close our Presidio Sketchbook until next week's issue of the Star Presidian . . . when you make another tour with DEBBIE.

Toreros Dominate Central Division Tourney

Presidio's WACs Win Women's Championship

★ ★ ★

WAC Quint Unbeaten In Tourney

Presidio's battling WAC Cagers won the Sixth Army Women's Basketball Tournament and closed their 1956-1957 cage season with a 45-25 victory over the LAH female quintet behind the dead-eye firing of Georgia Kelly who racked up 20 points.

This year marks the first time the Sixth U. S. Army Women's Basketball Tournament has been held in conjunction with the Central Division, Sixth U. S. Army Male Basketball Tournament.

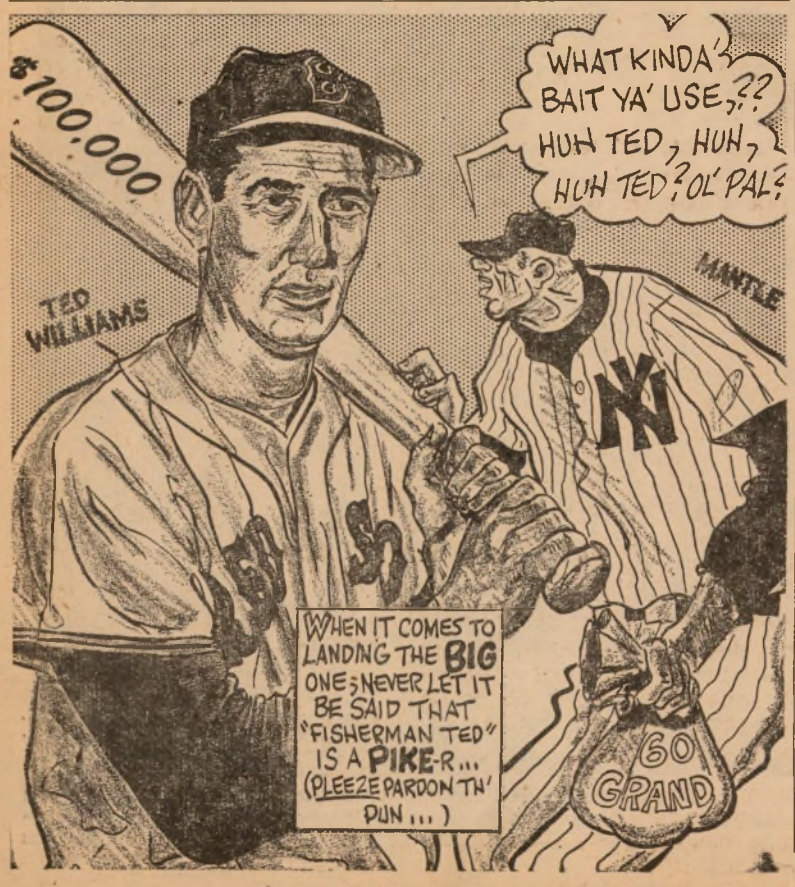
In the opening game of the women's tournament, the Presidio WACs downed the LAH quint, 44-24. The local female cagers took a 10-5 lead at the end of the first quarter and went on to make it 20-9 at intermission time. Third period play saw the score carried to 36-16 and finally 44-24.

Georgia Kelly spearheaded the Presidio win with 28 points. Second game of the tournament paired Ft. MacArthur's women and the Ft. Ord feminine five. Ft. Ord won the contest, 33-15, after commanding a 22-4 lead at half time.

The loser's bracket pairing faced Letterman's lasses with Ft. MacArthur's quint. Forwards Gibson and Morgan with 21 and 14 points paced Letterman to a 53-18 victory. Gannon topped the MacArthur quint with 9 counters.

In the winner's category, Presidio met Ft. Ord. The local lasses out-played the female Warriors to the tune of 40-25. Georgia Kelly again led the local scoring with 17 points closely followed by Florian Vierra with 15 tallies.

With one loss apiece in tournament play, Ft. Ord's lasses clashed with Letterman's women to decide who would meet the undefeated Presidio lady five for the championship. Letterman emerged as the Presidio's opponent by virtue of a 43-35 decision at Ft. Ord's expense.



Morgan scored 20 and Gibson 16 to pace the LAH attack. Tuggles bucketed 19 points for Ord.

Holding Up his end of the bargain is Jumping Jim Cummings, the Torero's great center. The ex-Vanderbilt star saw action last night when the Presidio quintet tangled with the Flying 'O' from San Francisco's Olympic Club. The ladies? Well, they were part of the bevy of beauties who vied for the title of Miss (or Mrs.) Presidio Youth Activities during the halftime beauty contest at the LAH Gym, by name: Charlotte King and Windy Nichols. The affair was a fund raising event for the local Youth Activities Program.

Campbell Drafted

Olympic decathlon champ Milt Campbell has been drafted to play pro football with the Cleveland Browns, and to date the world's best all-around amateur athlete hasn't decided whether he'll play for pay or not. When asked how he felt about playing for the Browns, he said, "I think it's a great honor." Temporarily stationed in the East, touring the indoor track meets, the Navy's star athlete has almost a year to go in the service. After that, Milt returns to Indiana for the last year of his scholarship and wants to regain his slot as first string right halfback for Bernie Crimmins.

Sports Casting with Casey

FISHING was more than a seasonal topic around the Star Presidian this week as our jack-of-all-jobs (reporter - photographer - associate-editor) Dick Lewis ventured out on his first salmon hunt. Did pretty well, too, landing two fish weighing 7 and 9 pounds. He also scored a minor beat on our sports editor with the intelligence that the really big salmon, 40 to 50 pounders, don't start running until the latter part of April through May.

BASKETBALL fans in the Seattle area viewed two outstanding contests with mixed emotions recently when the ever popular Ft. Lewis Chiefs suffered their first two defeats of the season. The Chiefs, last year's Sixth Army champs and All-Army runners-up, dropped a 3-point heartbreaker to the 1956 AAU national champions, the Buchan Bakers. Two nights later, the fabulous O'Brien twins, Seattle University college stars and now playing baseball with the Pittsburgh Pirates, scored 60 points between them as they led the semi-pro Tacoma Studs to a 103-94 victory. Jerry Bird, Kentucky All-American, continued as leading scorer for the Chiefs.

* * *

SHOOTING for a dream job, soldier? Well, don't give up, there are still a few around. Take SP3 Robert E. Kircher's, specialist in charge of the sports news section at Army Information, recent assignment—the poor boy has to spend a month in Florida covering the activities of the Sixth Army Pistol Team in the National Midwinter Matches at Tampa, 4-9 March, and the Flamingo Matches in Coral Gables, 11-16 March. Bob, a real North Hollywood native and a graduate of San Jose State, will have to earn his keep, though. He'll be filing almost daily dispatches on the standings of the numerous Army teams that will compete in the firing.

* * *

BOXING—We're still waiting to see the New Orleans "dancing master" Willie Pastrano tangle with a real heavyweight who has the hand speed to offset Willie's busy legs. His recent setto with slow-moving John Holman was no real test for the world's fourth ranking heavyweight, who has yet to meet a real good man in his division. Off hand, we can think of a half dozen good heavies who could give the dancer not only a busy evening, but might jolt him right out of his over-ranking. We were not surprised when Carmen Basillio, after unceremoniously dumping Johnny Saxton, announced the desire for a shot at the middleweight title, the money's there. However, a word of caution, Carmen — not only do middleweights punch harder, they also take better. We still can't forget seeing Carmen rubber-legged, at least twice, in his title-taking battle against tough Tony De Marco. True, Carmen went on to dump the unorthodox little puncher from Boston, but it indicated one thing, if he can be hit, and hard enough, he can be had. He can be hit.

Ord Quintet Makes Last Ditch Stand

By Pfc. Perry Wolfe
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Presidio's Toreros swept the field in the Central Division Sixth U.S. Army Male Basketball Tournament when they downed Ft. Ord for the championship, 55-50. The victory earned them the right to represent this area in the Sixth Army Tournament to be held at Ft. Lewis, Washington, 3-6 March.

Final score of the game was quite a contrast to the score of an earlier encounter, in tournament play, of these two teams which saw the Toreros trounce the Warriors 93-38. The Warriors profited from their earlier experience and kept the locals on their toes to stay ahead throughout the game.

Highlight of the game took place in the closing minute when Ord closed a nine-point lead to five points and missed an opportunity to make it 55-52 when they missed a shot after stealing the ball under their own basket.

The scoreboard stood at 11-8 in favor of the locals when the first quarter ended. By halftime the Toreros had increased the margin to 30-19, the largest gap of the game.

Jim Cummings topped local scoring efforts with 14 points, Carroll Williams garnered 11, and Ron Reynoir accounted for 10 markers.

Ft. Ord's stocky guard, Adams, was high man of the game with 20 points. Adams was aided by Goudlock and Elwell with 10 counters apiece.

The Warriors were hot on the charity tosses, missing only 6 out of 27 possibles. The locals were not nearly so warm, hitting only 17 out of a possible 31.

Dropping down in distance from his Olympic 800-meter effort, the Fordham graduate unleashed a world-record-equaling 600-yard race in 1:09:5. A former All-Army middleweight champion, Roscoe Elliott, who has grown into a solid-punching light-heavyweight, scored a rousing second-round TKO over Ft. Lewis' Gene Larson to lead Ft. Ord to the team championship in the Sixth Army boxing finals at Ft. Lewis, last Friday.

Ord won seven of ten team slots that included a close decision by current All-Army light-welterweight champion Chet Latimore over James Duncan. Other Ord winners were Featherweight Hilton Smith who decisioned Arcadio of Ft. Huachuca; Lightmiddle Theodore Mathis dec. William Bolin, Ft. Lewis; Middleweight Samuel Isabell dec. Lewis claimed two area titles as Flyweight Rogelio Rojas TKO'd J. C. Adams, Ft. Ord, and Bantamweight Marvin Stevens TKO'd Jose Montoya, Camp Irwin.

Presidio's lone entry, Lightweight David Brown, 30th Engineer Group, prevented a complete sweep by the big training installations when he decisioned Claude Jones, Ft. Lewis.

The team emplaned for Ft. Campbell, Kentucky, this week to complete in the All-Army finals on 3-8 March.

Presidio's Brown

Boxing pundits say this is one of the strongest teams that Sixth Army has sent to the finals in several years and predict at least two titles for the locals.

PostMatmen Vie For Sixth Army Titles

Presidio's mat representatives, James F. Frankenberry, 56th MRU, and Danny L. Elder, A Co., USA Garrison, leave tomorrow for the Sixth Army Wrestling Tournament at Madigan Army Hospital in Tacoma, Washington.

Frankenberry wrestled for his high school team at Uniontown, Pennsylvania, and for the West Virginia University mat team. Elder gained his mat experience with the Danville, Illinois, high school team and for a short time as a club wrestler prior to his induction. Suffering only seven losses during his high school career, he served as team co-captain during his senior year and took part in the state finals.

Both men are wrestling in the freestyle events, Frankenberry in the 147½-pound class and Elder in the 160-pound class. The Madigan tourney will begin 3 March and run for three days. Winners at the tourney will go from there to the All-Army Tournament at Ft. Bliss, Texas, to be held 10-15 March.

Winners of the All-Army matches will be sent from Ft. Bliss to the Amateur Athletic Union Wrestling championships in Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, on 3-6 April.

740th Wins Northern AAA Basketball Title

Fort Winfield Scott's 740th AAA Missile Battalion captured the basketball championship of the Northern California antiaircraft units last week with four straight victories in the 30th AAA Group Tournament.

The 740th whipped Fort Baker's 9th AAA Missile Battalion 66-51 in the finals to gain the title and nail down one of the four berths in the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command tournament 18-23 March at the Presidio of San Francisco.

That competition, bringing together champions of the Seattle and Hanford, Wash., Los Angeles and Northern California defense areas, will decide the West Coast representative in the Army Antiaircraft Command Tournament 25 March-2 April at Fort Devens, Mass.

The 740th was pressed only once in its four games in the 30th Group Tournament. The 436th AAA Missile Battalion from Travis Air Force Base held the Fort Scott cagers to a 50-47 triumph, in the semifinals. The 740th had whipped Castle Air Force Base's 52nd AAA Gun Battalion 71-47 and Fort Scott's 752nd AAA Gun Battalion 63-51 in the first two rounds.

In the finals, the 740th jumped to a 2-0 lead in the opening seconds, saw it tied 2-2 by the ninth, then moved ahead and never trailed again. The Fort Scott men ran the count to 8-2 before the 9th scored again. The Fort Baker crew closed the gap to 18-15 midway through the quarter, but slipped behind again and trailed 37-22 at the half.

Private Hubie Brown, former Niagara University player and captain of the 740th, led the champions with 22 points. Lloyd White topped the 9th with 12.

The 9th made it to the finals the hard way, bouncing back from a 71-56 first round loss to the 436th from Travis. The Fort Baker team whipped the 752nd 62-59, the 441st AAA Missile Battalion 60-57 and the 436th 59-47 in losers-bracket play.

The 441st, from San Pablo Ridge near Berkeley, won the other game in the double elimination meet, defeating the 52nd AAA Gun Battalion from Castle Air Force Base 61-51, after losing to the 436th 59-54 in quarterfinal play.

Hubie Brown admires the trophy presented to him as the captain of the championship 740th AAA basketball team, winners of the Bay Area Defense Tourney held at LAH Gym this past week.

Presidio Guns Welcome Spanish Schooner Here

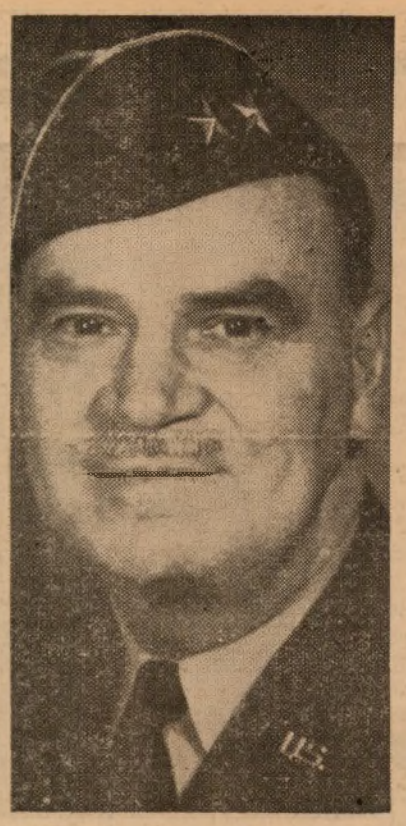
A 21-gun salute from the Presidio beach honored the arrival of the Spanish schooner Juan Sebastian del Cano in San Francisco Bay on Wednesday morning.

Named after the Ferdinand Magellan captain who commanded the Victoria, the four-masted, auxiliary - powered schooner last visited San Francisco in 1935. It has served as a training ship for practically every officer in the Spanish Navy. The first Spanish ship ever to visit local waters was the San Carlos, commanded by Lt. Juan Manuel de Ayala, arriving here on 25 August, 1775.

The ship, skippered by Commandante Gonzales Lopez, carries 56 midshipmen and a crew of 226 on her present voyage from Cadiz, Spain. She left home port on 1 September, 1956, sailing to Africa, Dakar, Rio de Janerio, Brazil; Recife, Trinidad, and Panama, en route to Treasure Island. The voyage was considered one of the stormiest in the schooner's history.

The Juan Sebastian del Cano holds open house to the public daily from today until Sunday when she leaves for Panama, Jacksonville, Florida; New York—thence to Brest, France, returning to Cadiz, Spain, about 10 July.

The vessel is now berthed at Pier 15, Treasure Island.



Lagging Conscience?

Finance Posters Stress Honesty

Persons in all Army areas who knowingly or innocently apply for expenses not due them will be gently nudged at finance desks by cartoon posters prepared by the Sixth U. S. Army Finance and Accounting and Comptroller sections.

The posters, mentally created by Finance and Accounting officers and artistically depicted by the late Mr. Jorge Wilson-Walker, former Comptroller artist, have been adopted as part of the Finance Validation Program by the Department of the Army. Local officers learned this week that DA plans Army-wide release of the posters.

The cartoons were first prepared last October and submitted to the Chief of Finance. The Finance Center in Indianapolis, assisted by the Provost Marshal sections, directs and enforces the Validation Program.

General Maglin

PM's General Maglin Visits Locally Today

Major General William H. Maglin, Provost Marshal General from Washington, D. C., will visit here today on the last leg of a quick tour of California cities. The general is scheduled to have lunch with Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth U. S. Army Commander.

In honor of General Maglin's visit, about 75 Bay Area Military Police officers and their wives will gather at the Letterman Army Hospital's Officers' Club for a dinner-dance tonight. The dance will begin at 1900 hours.

The general arrived in Los Angeles on 27 February. He then drove to Bakersfield where he addressed the Rotary Club and stopped at Fort Ord before arriving at the Presidio. His Sixth U. S. Army host is Col. Harold A. Davenport, Provost Marshal.

General Young Picks New Engineer Chief

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth U.S. Army Commander, has named Colonel Seymour A. Potter, Jr., as the new area Chief of Engineers. Col. Potter comes to his new assignment from Washington, D. C., where he completed two years as Special Assistant to the Chief of Engineers. He succeeds Col. J. D. Holm who has been acting chief since the retirement of Col. F. H. Faulkner.

"I am elated about being assigned here, and I mean it—those aren't just words," says Colonel Potter who is experiencing his first extended stay in the Bay Area.

The rain, however, serves to remind the Colonel of his most vivid engineering experience which took place in Korea, spring 1954. Trying to keep the roads open to the I U.S. Corps headquarters, the Colonel found it necessary during a six-day period to have his men dump 40,000 pounds of rock on a section of road less than a mile long.

"And we still didn't get to the bottom of that muck," he explains. "What we did was pour in so much rock, that our road bed was actually floating on top of the mud."

Colonel Potter started his military career as a reserve officer in 1930 upon graduation from the Pennsylvania Military College as a civil engineer. He went on extended active duty in 1940 and was integrated in 1946.

He spent three and a half years of World War II in Europe where he served as Chief of the Planning Division for the Chief of Engineers, European Theater of Operations.

Assigned as Post Engineer at Fort Lewis following the war, he next went to the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, first as a student and later as an instructor. He then stayed at Fort Leavenworth for two more years as Director of the Department of Joint Operations.

Then after a tour at the Army War College, he went to Korea where he served as Commander of the 1169th Engineer Combat Group, 1953-54. Following this assignment he stayed in Korea as Engineer Advisor for the ROK Army. He then served as G-4 for the Korean Military Assistance Advisory Group.

Col. Seymour Potter

Presently Colonel and Mrs. Potter are living off Post, but they plan on moving to the Presidio as soon as space is available. They have twin daughters, Barbara and Jacquelyn, who are attending college on the East Coast.

PM Officer Wins Award For Work At Lompoc DB

"Lieutenant Colonel Love has long been recognized as one of the confinement experts in the United States Army," read the Certificate of Achievement awarded at the Presidio this week to Lt. Col. Thomas M. Love, until recently Deputy Commander for Operations, U. S. Army Disciplinary Barracks, Lompoc, Calif.

The certificate was awarded by Col. Harold A. Davenport, Provost Marshal, Sixth U. S. Army, at an informal ceremony Monday.

Col. Sam F. Muffie, Commandant of the Disciplinary Barracks signed the certificate, which further noted that "as Deputy Commandant for Operations from 18 July '55 to 4 December '56, Colonel Love drew on his long experience in the correctional and confinement field to establish institutional policies and procedures that resulted in uniform ratings of Superior by inspection teams representing higher headquarters."

First Air Message

Radio messages were received in an Army airplane at a distance of 10 miles for the first time on 11 December, 1914.

Presidio's World Travelers Report

By 1st Lt. Bob J. Wallace

Flying from Travis Air Force Base to Hickam Field, Hawaii, aboard a MATS C-97 airplane takes about 10 hours and there's not much for the passengers to do but sleep and read; or look out of the window at the clouds and water—if you are one of the few window passengers.

After about five hours of sitting, I became restless and started to roam. While in the "galley" (that's where they keep the coffee), I started talking to our two flight traffic specialists. Although they have much more responsibility than meets the eye and are away from their home station more than 50 per cent of each month, they like their job and the travel that goes with it.

"My wife tells me I should stay home, clean house and wash the dishes once in a while, and let her take my place on a trip," commented S/Sgt. George F. Arroyo, the married of the two.

His wife has just reason to envy his trips for in the course of one round trip from Travis to Tokyo these two "passenger pleasers" MUST spend at least two days "resting" in Hawaii, at Wake Island and in Japan. If they should get weathered in at any of these hard-to-take locations—"Oh, well, another day in Hawaii isn't that bad!"

A/2c Edward Barnes likes Japan best and one reason is because he has all kinds of Japanese help to clean up the airplane after a flight.

Both Arroyo and Barnes are happy to say that in the year and a half they have been flying this run they have had no thrilling experiences while flying, which is certainly a credit to the MATS safety record. Flight traffic specialists are tested every six months to check their job proficiency as well as procedures used in "wet ditching." When I asked if they were swimmers, Arroyo stated they all had to be—in fact, he said, "Oh, yes, 'cause if you can't swim, you can't fly!" Oh, well, read it over, I'm sure it tells a story.

The only way this particular flight differs with other MATS flights is it keeps crossing the International Date line and sometimes can cause confusion. For example, in October, 1956, Arroyo lost his birthday between Hawaii and Wake—but it all evened out for during July the same year Barnes celebrated two birthdays by virtue of a fast round trip between the same two points.

At Hickam the Colonel was met by Captain Gerki, who represented Colonel Eckhardt, Chief of Staff, USARPAC, and by Lt. Colonel Bishop, assistant Engineer, USARPAC. They took us to dinner and then briefed Colonel St. John on USARPAC's role in the occultation program and other Pacific mapping projects.

Although we had only four hours there, I am sure Hawaii displayed her best weather for us. It was about 72 degrees as we ate dinner (under a cloudless sky crowded with stars and boasting a beautiful full moon).

Back in the plane at 2230 we took off for Wake Island. We slept through most of this 10-hour hop. The stop-over at Wake Island lasted two hours—long enough to have breakfast.

Then another 9½ hours of flying and we arrived at Tokyo International Airport in a cold, steady rain. This was the first poor weather we had encountered—and we hope the last.

We were met at the airport by Lt. Colonel Strickland, executive officer, U.S. Army Map Service, Far East. We then changed our greenbacks into military scrip, and were off through the streets of the world's third largest city to the Army Map Service, Far East Area. There we were met by Lt. Colonel Ahmajan, Commander of the United States Army Map Service, Far East. He and Colonel St. John discussed organizations and mutual friends. Later we were invited to a formal party being held that evening at the officers' club. At the party we had a chance to meet and speak with many of the topographic people here in Japan and their wives.

MOS Boards Reclassify Half Of Those Checked

Two military personnel programs, the review of Specialist-NCO status and the MOS reclassification to counteract overstrengths and shortages, are well under way at the Military Personnel Division, S-1 Adjutant Section.

More than 300 letters have been issued to specialists, who may feel an error had been made in their classification on 1 July 1955. Deadline for return of the letters is this week.

Boards will now review the cases and will announce their decisions by 31 March. According to Captain Webster Parker about 75 per cent of those queried are requesting restoration of NCO status.

About 50 per cent of the persons reviewed by the MOS boards have been reclassified from an overstrength to a shortage field. The program not only provides better utilization of personnel, but also helps the individual get into an MOS in which promotions are more promising.

When the big reclassification program is completed, the program will continue with newly assigned personnel.

Need Tax Aid?

The Post Judge Advocate section is available to help service persons solve income tax dilemmas, according to Major Herman G. Kleikamp. The office is open every day during normal duty hours, including the lunch hour.

The section also has forms for reporting TDY monies received and expenditures incurred. These completed forms must be attached to the income tax return.

Natives Boast Real Ingenuity

Residents living around occultation team activities at Clark Air Force Base in Manila have to be on guard against the native version of Yankee Ingenuity, according to an anecdote sent in by Lieutenant Wallace.

It seems as though an enterprising native watched one of the occultation teams set up a telescope. He then gathered all the necessary details and went into town to sell tickets to the residents. The ticket entitled the owner to view the occultation.

Selling tickets did not end his promotion, however. He then set up a soft drink and food concession near the occultation site.

A near riot developed when the people found out they had been swindled. They demanded their money back and the promoter was forced to refund the cash.

The promoter's efforts were not completely wasted—he reported a profitable day at the food and drink stand.

Army Pilot Wins DFC

A major stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., has won the Distinguished Flying Cross for directing rescue operations at an airliner crash site last summer in the Grand Canyon.

Major Jerome B. Feldt, commander of the First Aviation Co., was on a training mission at Huachuca, Ariz., when the wreckage of the TWA-UAL airliners was sighted. As officer in charge of the mission, Major Feldt supervised the descent into the canyon by fixed-wing planes and Army helicopters.

Realign Command Line For National Guards

Responsibility for Active Army National Guard Advisors in the eight Western states has been assigned directly to the Commanding General of the Sixth U. S. Army, effective 10 March.

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth U. S. Army commander, said that 189 officers and warrant officers, and 254 enlisted men within the Sixth U. S. Army area previously reporting through the military districts in the various states would be affected.

The Military Districts, established 10 years ago to administer both the National Guard and the Army Reserve program, will retain responsibility for only the U. S. Army Reserve in their areas.

The U. S. Continental Army Command, Fort Monroe, Va., supervises training for both the Army Reserve and the National Guard. Lieutenant General Ridgely Gaither, Deputy Commanding General for Reserve Forces, explained that the new alignment of responsibility will simplify the relationship between the Senior Army National Guard Advisors and the State Adjutants General, who have responsibility for the Guard in their states.

Language Teacher Named For Career Service Award

A language teacher from the U.S. Army Language School, Monterey, California, has been designated as the Sixth Army nominee for The Third Annual Career Service Award of the National Civil Service League.

Mr. Tsutomo Paul Tekawa, Supervisory College Professor (Foreign Languages) was selected from a group of Sixth Army nominees which included Mr. Alvus Wayman, Transportation Section, Headquarters, Sixth U.S. Army.

Mr. Tokawa's nomination will be forwarded to the Army Incentive Awards Branch for consideration with other nominees.

Army Doctor Says Disease Rate Normal

Incidence of miningococcal meningitis (spinal meningitis) at Sixth Army installations is not considered as alarming, the Sixth Army Surgeon stated this week. The statement was made in response to inquiries based on reports of meningitis cases at Fort Ord.

A total of six cases at Fort Ord is not considered abnormal for this time of year, the Surgeon said. Appropriate preventive measures, including the administration of sulfadiazine to all personnel, are being taken.

Experience has shown that the greater majority of spinal meningitis cases occurred during the normal respiratory disease season, between late fall and early spring. Also, like acute respiratory diseases, meningitis is more common among the recruits than personnel who have been in the Army for some time.

New Gyro Info Set

Enlisted men desiring to apply for reassignment to the 546th FA Battalion, Fort Lewis, Washington, are asked to telephone the Personnel Section — 3412-3311 — for further information on becoming members of the newly-designated Gyroscope unit.

There are numerous MOS and grade requirements within the battalion for which in-service personnel at the Presidio may apply for assignment.

Ask Key Personnel For New Joint Course

Sixth U.S. Army Headquarters announces that a course in the techniques of analysis is being conducted jointly by the Sixth U.S. Army Comptroller Section and Headquarters, at the Presidio.

The analysis course, comprising 14 sessions of one and one half hours each, begins on 11 March, in Harmon Hall, Room 5, and continues every Monday, Wednesday and Friday thereafter (1000-1130), until completion of the schedule. Knowledge of mathematics or statistics is not necessary for enrollment. The students are to receive certificates after the course is completed.

Open to military and civilian personnel whose normal assignments require knowledge of Analysis and the Application of Command Management data, the session covers collecting and dissemination of operational information available from the Army Class 1 Command Management System and other sources.

Headquarters asks that section chiefs appoint key personnel to attend the Analysis and Command Management session. Names of such personnel, with their grades and position titles must be forwarded to the Comptroller Section, Sixth U. S. Army Headquarters, Building 38.

New Circular Tightens O'Seas Processing Regs

Too many deficiencies in processing for overseas replacement such as individuals arriving overseas ahead of their records, without their baggage or in civilian clothes, has resulted in the publishing of DA circular 612-1 calling on commanders at all levels to "institute immediate measures to preclude recurrence of . . . deficiencies.

The circular also cited instances where individuals were assigned to MAAG's, Missions, and Commissions when they were not physically qualified. It was noted that only individuals with an "A" profile code can be assigned to Iceland.

Another deficiency is the failure of passports to be obtained where individuals receive assignments calling for these credentials.

New DA Plan Will Organize Atomic Units

The Army plans to organize two types of atomic support commands armed with Honest John Rockets and Corporal Guided Missiles, the Department of the Army has announced.

An air transportable atomic support command at Fort Bragg, N. C., and a medium atomic support command at Fort Hood, Tex., were scheduled for activation for troop testing purposes on 1 March. Additional commands will be organized later.

These commands will be developed to furnish atomic firepower necessary to reinforce the defensive capacity of ground forces.

DOD Jobs Merged

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson has announced the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Research and Development has been consolidated with the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Engineering.

The new office, headed by Dr. Frank D. Newberry with William M. Holaday as deputy, has been designated Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering.

Information Chief Keys Community Relation AR

Washington (ANS)—The first Army Regulation devoted exclusively to community relations is now being distributed on a "need-to-know basis" to all major units in the field.

Written under the guidance of Army Chief of Information Major General G. S. Meloy, Jr., AR 360-55 is packed with ways and means of enhancing the Army's community relations program.

The regulation states that although the primary staff responsibility for active and good community relations rests with local Information Officers, all Army personnel are individually responsible for making the program a success.

According to the directive, the most effective community relations programs have top-command support and supervision, are continuous, and include periodic polls of community opinion.

The AR urges military participation in civic activities such as Parent-Teachers Associations, business and professional clubs, youth, veterans, and religious organizations.

On the list of specific activities recommended are informal meetings with community leaders by qualified military personnel, participation in civilian ceromonies and public events, speeches, and Post Open Houses for the general public and special-interest groups.

The AR stresses that community relations are equally important to commanders in overseas areas. It points out that commands in overseas areas must conduct vigorous and constructive community relations programs in cooperation with other agencies of the United States Government.

Clark, a member of the same organization, will show her bridal party set for which she made the dolls and the lace dresses. The bride's gown is handmade lace and the bridesmaids are dressed in rose point lace.

Mrs. Hal R. Arter, who makes her dolls in wax, will exhibit her Sleeping Beauty and the Prince, Spirit of '76 and Alice in Wonderland. Miss Claudia Robinson, daughter of a retired general, will show her doll house depicting Marie Antoinette's living room and bedroom.

Another side feature is a puppet show produced by the Girl Scouts. The girls made the puppets and stage and planned the show.

Dolls participating in the show must be at the Girl Scout House between 0900 and 1400 hours tomorrow. Judging will begin at 1600 hours and the winners will sport their ribbons on Sunday.

Admission is 50 cents for adults and 15 cents for children. Tickets may be purchased from any Girl Scout or Brownie on Post or at the Scout House during the hours of the show.

for your pleasure!

TEN THOUSAND BEDROOMS presents Dean Martin in Rome to supervise the reopening of the latest addition to his family's world-wide chain of hotels. Dean becomes infatuated with the beauties of the city, and in particular, with all four of the pretty daughters of composer Walter Slezak. Martin has competition from his bachelor companions, who also have romantic designs on the fair young ladies.

THE BIG BOODLE introduces Errol Flynn, a blackjack dealer who is paid a counterfeit five hundred peso note at the Tropicana Club in Havana. A chain of events ensues which sees him beaten by thugs, jailed as a counterfeiter, pursued by two beautiful women, and finally — assisting the U.S. Treasury Department and local police in rounding up the bogus money ring.

THE LADY KILLERS is about a nice old lady who had such a vivid imagination that even the police couldn't believe she had innocently become involved with a gang of bank robbers . . . but she had. This is the story of how she tried to expose the thieves and to return the money.

WAR DRUMS is a story of the uneasy peace existing between the Apache Indians and the ever-increasing settlers, who are crowding the Red Man off the fertile plains. Greedy gold seekers precipitate a raid in which both sides lose heavily. When full-scale war looms, the cavalry restores order, but only after hot tempers get out of control.

NIGHTMARE is a suspense-packed mystery involving the current widespread interest in hypnotism. The picture dramatically poses the question whether a man can commit a murder while under a hypnotic spell and be completely unaware of it. A jazz musician dreams that he has killed another man. The dream is so vivid that his brother-in-law, a detective, enters the case, which turns out to be the strangest in his career.

CINDERELLA is a story of the always popular, ever appealing drably-dressed kitchen maid whose fairy godmother transforms her into a princess for a night. It is enchanting, full of dreams, music and laughter.

Results Due

Did You Know . . . that despite a campaign to improve the officers' and enlisted men's quarters at the Presidio in 1913, efforts to secure adequate rebuilding appropriations from Congress continued for 25 years? . . . Not until after the late General John "Blackjack" Pershing lost his wife and three children in a Presidio fire in 1915 were the Nation's purse strings loosened by Congress —to set aside nearly $100,000 for remodeling in the following year.

With the return of the Third Brigade from the Mexican fighting, new housing problems were created on the Presidio . . . and yet, despite a vigorous local newspaper campaign, it was three more years before $250,000 was allocated by the Government . . . to replace the old wooden buildings with modern duplex houses. Still dissatisfied with the outcome, the newspapers called the project "only a beginning toward doing away with all the frame shacks that housed the non-commissioned officers."

Ten years later . . . another newspaper campaign succeeded in having Congress set aside some $2,163,000 for a building program begun here in 1938.

Gaslight portrait of a child . . . a place . . . and a time. Was it taken on the Presidio? . . . in the 1900s, perhaps! Was it the former site of the parade ground flag pole . . . or maybe the late General John Pershing's quarters? If you have a clue or an idea of who, where and when, the "Star Presidian" will be happy to have the information.

Did the little boy above grow to be a soldier? . . . Did he go down to the sea in ships? . . . Did he become a fireman? . . . financier or philanthropist? Where is he now? The gas light closing the circle of cannon balls is gone. The clumps of English ivy are gone . . . and indeed, the buildings that help to frame the scene are vanished . . . to make room for a more streamlined landscape. The picture presents a page from the Presidio's past . . . keynote to garrison life when the reservation was almost as young as the small boy in the Buster Brown haircut . . . proudly displaying his new "Studebaker" wagon.

Did You Know . . . that the first celebration of Army Day took place on the Presidio in 1838? Marked at first only by routine Infantry parades and equipment displays, the celebration was extended in 1934 . . . to include a two-day demonstration.

The first day marking Army Day here was devoted to exhibitions of Gas Defense, Signaling, Grenade throwing and the Army's work in Forestry and Civilian Conservation Camps. On the same night, an antiaircraft defense of San Francisco was staged . . . and on the second day, about 50,000 spectators witnessed a sham battle beginning with a barrage laid down by the Second Battalion, Seventy-Sixth Field Artillery, protected by the Sixth Coast Artillery.

• • •

And now to bring you up to date on another modern phenomenon . . . the buff-colored stone building on the right side of Lombard Street as you enter the Presidio. . . . Have you wondered what goes on behind its imposing front?

Well, it is the Protestant Episcopal Old Ladies' Home. Here, in the happy twilight of their lives, are 83 women guests catching up with the things they missed while active in their various professions . . . ranging from Medicine to Fine Arts and Law. One is a nationally famous photographer whose work is carried in the Smithsonian Institution. Another is an untrained though highly gifted artist. . . .

The Home is operated by Mrs. Faith Iddings, a lady of obvious culture and dignity. There are seven nurses and a doctor on duty there; an American chef and two Chinese cooks; four Negro kitchen maids, three others of various nationalities; a gardener and a chaplain. . . . The Home maintains its own burial plot in Cypress Lawn Cemetery . . . yet nobody worries about the inevitable journey there. . . . They are far removed from the stress of their former professions. . . . Happy as the days are long . . . and don't we wish that we could be like that?

—Debbie

King's Palace, Native Dress Highlight Visit In Bangkok

Special to the Star Presidian

CALCUTTA, India—We left Clark Air Force Base in a MATS (Navy) constellation and arrived in Saigon, South Viet Nam, four hours later. On most of these trips we lose about one hour.

The Saigon field was very small and bustling with construction. Even the terminal restaurant, to which we were restricted for our one and one-quarter hour stop, was being tiled, plastered and painted. We were not allowed to take any photographs and this was strictly enforced by the native police. It was a beautiful day and the temperature was in the high 80's.

Between the restaurant and the runway were piles of sand, lumber and other construction materials. Women and young girls were working alongside the men.

Directly across the field from us were three hangars and I could see military trucks parked in one. On the apron in front of the hangars were parked two old B-17's, one of which landed while we were there and was unpainted and unmarked except for a number on one wing. The other was painted a bright orange and white. When we took off, I could see a squadron of C-47's and numerous small non-military looking craft.

When we arrived at Bangkok, Thailand, we came into a very large field which to all appearances looked entirely military. A squadron of Thailand jets and numerous other military craft could be seen.

As we taxied to the terminal we passed a military obstacle course, a Primary Rifle Instruction course that looked the same as you would see at any American Army training camp. About two platoons of men in uniform were drilling with fixed bayonets. I later learned the majority of the Thailand Air Force is trained as ground troops to protect the Air Force's interests from all parties. There were armed guards at all entrances and exits.

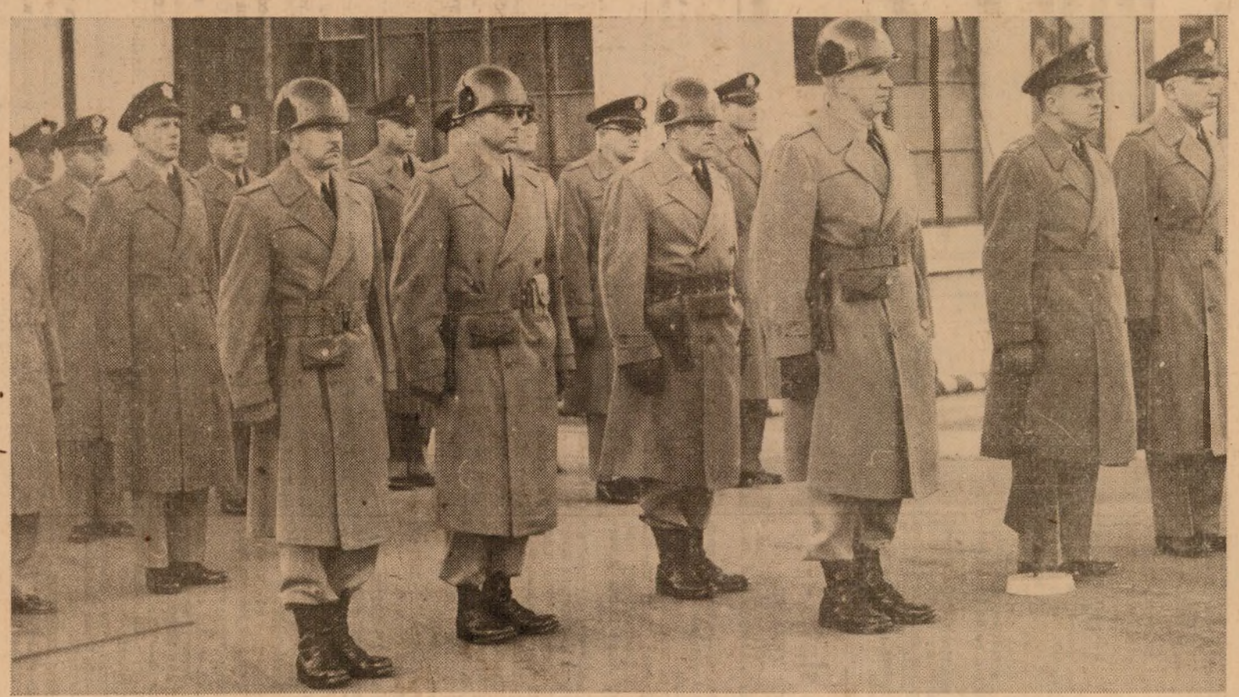
We were met at the plane by the Commanding Officer of a Joint Operations Detachment conducting survey operations in conjunction with the Royal Thailand Survey Department for U.S. Army Map Service, Far East. Although it was about 92 degrees, he said the three hottest months begin this month.

He drove us to our hotel, the Erawan, which had only been open about four months. It covered a good square block and although it was basically of modern Western design, the roof, walls, decorations, colors and general exterior were strictly Thailandish—it was truly a beautiful sight.

Bangkok, a city of two million people and just about that many different odors, is positively out of this world. It is a 100 per cent tropical city where many of the children run around nude and most adults wear as few clothes as decency will allow. The town has many mobile snack bars, which are men or women with a pot of food at one end of a stick and dishes at the other end; the stick is carried on their shoulders.

We visited the old King's Palace, called the Grand Palace, which I think is the most beautiful and colorful sight in the city. It is the one pictured in Anna and the King of Siam and is now a Holy Palace.

The new King's Palace is surrounded by beautiful gardens and covers a tremendous area, but is neither as ornate nor as colorful and beautiful as the old one. The old palace is bravely guarded by Army men who have a small arsenal at the main entrance. Still cameras are permitted on the grounds, but not within any of the buildings and movie cameras are forbidden.



The river that flows through the city is the main source of everything — transportation, laundry, bathing, etc. The people and particularly the children are very friendly.

After dinner I walked around the immediate vicinity of the hotel for about an hour. Many floats and broadcast cars were running around broadcasting the merits of the candidates running in the national election which will be held this month. It is a major election, but it is the consensus of those I talked to that the "ins" will remain in as Thailand has been making wonderful progress and is continuing to improve itself in all ways.

From Bangkok we went to Calcutta. This time we had to move our watches back an hour and a half.

At Calcutta the weather again was beautiful. The Customs are very strict; in fact the only reason the plane stopped was because this is a port of entry to the interior of India and you must be cleared here. There seemed to be some mix-up with the flight book, but it was cleared up and after about twenty minutes we were allowed to leave the plane.

There was a terrific variety of clothing worn by the natives in the terminal and I am very eager to see them in New Delhi.

Formal Review with Colonel St. John as reviewing officer was held at a reveille formation at the U.S. Army Map Service, Far East, in Tokyo. Music was furnished by the 1st Cavalry Division band. The colonel also toured the map-making plant and related activities. Colonel St. John was pleased with the mapping program and was impressed with the high training standards.

Texas Size turnip in Japan is admired by Colonel St. John and a Japanese merchant. The colonel also found out that the smallest carrots grown there are 18 inches long.

Sports Cars are still running second to bicycles in Japan's transportation popularity contest. Pretty hard to push a baby carriage from a bicycle, so men also carry babies on their backs.

Occultation Team In Pacific

Manila-Based Engineers Busy With The Weather

Weather reports may be routine in San Francisco, but to members of the 30th Engineer Group serving on occultation teams in Manila, weather has taken on a new importance. At Clark Air Force Base the temperature not only runs in the 80s, but also the high humidity makes the men feel as if wet blankets had been thrown over them.

According to a report just received from Lt. Robert J. Wallace, now touring 30th Engineer Group projects with Col. Lawrence R. St. John, 30th Engineer Group CO, the atmosphere is always damp even when the sun is shining.

The main body of the Occultation Team arrived at Clark last December. The trip was not uneventful since the plane developed hydraulic trouble between Kwajalein and Hawaii and was forced to return to the latter spot.

To date, the parties have had observations on Luzon, Mindoro and Panay. They have scheduled observations on Negros, Formosa and several islands in the Marshalls. All of these islands except the Marshalls and Formosa are Philippine islands.

Transportation to sites on Luzon is made by Air Force vehicles, while transportation to other islands is made by barge, FS ship, C-47 and various other facilities purchased from the Philippines.

According to the firsthand report, one of the important parts of moving to a site and making a successful observation is the art of tactfully getting cooperation from the native inhabitants in the site area. In nearly all cases the natives are friendly and come in droves to watch the party put up the telescope. One party member mentioned that he thought the natives watched in shifts. The electrical equipment and the telescope seem to be extremely interesting to the Filipinos.

After all the equipment is set up and in good working condition, only one party member need be at the site during daylight hours, since the actual observing is done at night. This gives the men some time for observing the people, their customs and the local scenery.

From the recreation standpoint, skin diving is popular with the men. Small fish of the most brilliant colors and assortments abound in nearly all the waters. The water temperature, rock formations and water life are ideal for this sport.

On the more serious side, parties are always on the alert for outlaw bands which are active in some of the site areas. These bandits, sometimes called Huks or Dissenters, live by stealing and plundering. So far, the parties have not encountered these people.

Palm Springs? No—just a Luzon hotel which has accommodated men serving on the Occultation Team at Clark Air Force Base. According to the men, it costs about $2 a night and beats living in a tent.

Hound Dogs aren't too receptive to Elvis and his "Geetar" in Japan, according to Lieutenant Wallace. The premiere showing of "Love Me Tender" was greeted with only fifty per cent attendance. The swooner standing beside Elvis is a disinterested Japanese rag picker.

Rubles Suspect When Rupees Are Misspelled

The money exchange problem caught up with Lieutenant Wallace in New Delhi.

In declaring how much money he was carrying, he wrote down 48 Rubles, which meant Russia to the customs man, who immediately began cross-examinating the lieutenant.

The language barrier brought several confused "noes" and "yeses" from the two parties until Lieutenant Wallace brought out his money.

The relieved customs man sighed "oh," quickly changed the lieutenant's declaration to 48 Rupees and let him pass.

Map Service In Japan Proves Big Business For Uncle Sam

Special to the Star Presidian

MANILA, R.P.I.—While in Japan we learned that the map service at which we stayed employs 926 Japanese at an estimated cost of $900,000 per year. Many people have been with them since 1946 and many who worked for me are still there. It was like old home week—they all want me back—I guess I'm freer with cigarettes than most people.

Just to show how much work the Army Map Service, Far East does—they use $1,104,000 worth of expendables annually and control mapping activities all through the Pacific.

In connection with our Occultation Program, AFFE has an agreement with eight of the foremost astronomers, electronics experts and scientists in Japan, whereby they devote some of their spare time to research and development of occultation equipment and techniques. These men form a committee which as a group receives $800 per month, which is very reasonable when you consider the talent.

The weather during our stay in Japan was clear and cold, ranging from a low of 31 to a high of 52 degrees.

Colonel St. John just drove past a house which he used as a Command Post during World War II when he was a battalion commander. It is located about three miles north of Clark and is now a C.P. for a Philippine Army Detachment.

We left Tokyo on a MATS chartered flight World Airways, stopped in Okinawa and continued on to Clark Air Force Base in Manila. We took a tour through the towns around Clark and found that 90 per cent of the houses are built on stilts to prevent mildew. We have not yet seen a child with shoes on. The cabs are either horse drawn or converted jeeps.

The morale of the troops at Clark is superior. Believe it or not their only complaint was about equipment and parts for doing their job better. They are all devoted to both their job and their organization. They were allocated cast-off billets, but have finished, painted and made good looking barracks out of the old quonset huts. It was very refreshing to see these men in freshly starched suntans with their 30th Group insignias on their shoulders.

Baby Carriage manufacturerers will will not find new markets in Japan, according to Lieutenant Wallace, who says in Tokyo, a city of more than eight million population, he did not see one baby carriage. Japanese mothers have been carrying their babies papoose style for ages.

Lt. Col. A. M. Ahmajan, CO of the U.S. Army Map Service, Far East, who has operational control over Lt. James Farrow, OIC Occultation Section, and his crew commended Colonel St. John on his choice of men. Colonel Ahmajan said he has never met a more capable group of men in his career and praised Lt. Farrow and Lt. Marlin DeHaas, his assistant, for the control and job they are doing.

Old, New Are Striking Contrast In New Delhi

Special to the Star Presidian

DHARAN, Saudi Arabia — When we arrived at New Delhi we were greeted by Col. Kenneth Curtis, U.S. Army Attache to India and a West Point classmate of Colonel St. John's. Since there is no MAAG in India, Colonel Curtis is the top Army man in the country.

The colonel and his wife took us on a tour of the city. There is New Delhi and "Old Delhi," the latter being more what I expected India to be like. The streets are crowded, smelly and dirty with cows walking around the street—they have the right of way.

New Delhi, particularly the area in which Colonel Curtis lives, is very beautiful and fertile and looks much like the better areas of many European countries.

Colonel Curtis took us to the site of a new Government-owned hotel which is just about finished. It is called the Ashoka and is out of this world. You could put a good-sized hotel in the lobby alone and some of the most beautiful and delicate murals and mosaics I have seen decorate the walls. All the work is done by hand and the help's pay runs from a low of 20 cents to a high of 63 cents per day.

New Delhi was a change from the Philippines and Bangkok, both of which were very tropical—hot and extremely humid. New Delhi was hot when we arrived, but was much drier. Instead of vegetation growing everywhere, open houses on stilts and people wearing a minimum of clothing, in India the people are fully clothed, the houses are stone and the countryside is rocky and desert.

After leaving New Delhi, we made a two-hour stop in Karachi, Pakistan. Pakistan Air Force airplanes are very odd-looking. The front end resembles a helicopter, but it looks like the designer had a complete change of mind when he got to the wings. Pakistan was having some type of political troubles, so we were corraled into the small terminal to wait. No picture-taking was allowed.

From Karachi we went on to Dharan, Saudi Arabia, a hot, dusty, sandy and isolated place. Only six aircraft are assigned to the base. The Saudi Arabian Army has a battalion here and they pull all guard and police duties on the base. The only church or chapel I have seen is the Saudi-mosque, located in their barracks area.

The Arabians run all the taxis and drive new American-made cars. The story I got was that they work for ARAMCO Oil Company as drivers, save their money and buy a car. None of the Americans are allowed to bring a car here.

We visited the ARAMCO Dharan camp and it is tremendous—good housing, beautiful clubs, snack bars, hospital, swimming pools, golf course, riding stables and zoo. It's a small American town. We also went about 50 miles to Rastanura, where all the pipelines in Saudi Arabia end.

Just before Rastanura is another large ARAMCO camp which has the only oil refinery in the country.

Although the temperature goes up as high as 125 degrees, the weather has been wonderful since we have been here. The days have been about 85 degrees and the evenings about 60. My BOQ is air conditioned as are most buildings on the base. (Wallace)

Austere Saudi Is Antitheses Of Damp SF

In addition to a strictly enforced ban on alcohol, the American magazines, Time, Esquire, Saturday Evening Post and Newsweek, are also outlawed.

The alcohol ban is so carefully enforced that even root beer must be smuggled in remarked the lieutenant. Road blocks and check stations are used for enforcement.

The officers' club does have a bar, however—milk!

Toreros Win Lopsided Victory Over Ft. Lewis

Sixth Army Boxers Hold Fourth Place Tie

Locals Wax Tournament Favorites In First Try

More than 2000 persons watched the Presidio Toreros romp over the Ft. Lewis Chiefs to the unofficial tune of 78-44, Wednesday night in the first meeting of the two teams in the Sixth Army Basketball Tournament. Fiery little Carroll Williams led the Presidio quint to the victory with a staggering 31 points. The two teams will meet again tonight in the second game of the double elimination tournament.

Earlier in the tournament the Toreros defeated their first tournament foe, Camp Hanford, by the lopsided score of 90-30. Jim Cummings, Ron Reynoir, and Bob Kemp paced the Torero attack with 14 points apiece.

The Torreros' second opponent in the winners division of the double elimination tournament was Ft. Huachuca. The local quint blasted the Huachuca crew to the tune of 78-40.

Ft. Lewis' loss to the Presidio placed them in the losers bracket of tournament play. In order to meet the Toreros in a return game the Chiefs must win over the other teams in the losers bracket. The Chiefs are one of the top teams in the tournament and are expected to meet the Toreros again tonight for the Sixth Army championship.

Winners in the Sixth Army meet will enter the All-Army Championship Tournament to be held 18-23 March which will be hosted by the First Army area.

Post Matmen Eliminated At Madigan Meet

James F. Frankenberry, 56th MRU, and Danny L. Elder, A Co. USA Garrison, Presidio's only two entries in the Sixth Army Wrestling Tournament at Madigan Army hospital, Tacoma, Washington, were eliminated from the tourney when both of them lost their first two matches.

Frankenberry dropped his first match to Bordelon of Ft. Lewis and the second one to Jarecki from the Ft. MacArthur team. Elder was decisioned by Abbott from Ft. Ord and by Ft. Lewis' Gomel.

Ft. Lewis went on to capture the team title with 30 points followed by Ft. MacArthur in second spot with 16 points. Ft. Ord was third high with 14 points.

Registration Forms

Miss Presidio Youth Activities, Marilyn E. Baker, won the award at the benefit basketball game between the Toreros and the Olympic Club held at LAH Gym. Miss Baker won her title during the half-time ceremony.

Sports Casting with Casey

If the famous Pebble Beach Road Races are staged at Ft. Ord, and there are still technical legal and engineer's questions to be ironed out, it will be at "no expense" to the Army. Also, bonafide charities, AER possibly, will share in the net proceeds. Other key stipulations include adequate insurance and sponsorship by the Monterey Junior Chamber of Commerce. . . . Dyed-in-the-wool fencing and gymnast fans, and those just interested in seeing the best of anything, will have a once-in-a-lifetime chance to see the World's Olympic Champion Fencing and Gymnast teams in action this coming Monday night. Making their final appearance of a nationwide tour for Hungarian Relief, the teams will show at the San Francisco State College gym, 19th and Holloway, at 2000 hours. Cost is a dollar per ticket for adults and 50 cents for students. Following this one-night stand the teams will disband. Should be a good show for an equally good cause. . . . Ft. Lewis Chiefs, now vying for the Sixth Army basketball championship, won't repeat—will not have the services of Olympic and All-American champion K. C. Jones in their title try. K. C. has been ordered to Fifth Army for duty. . . .

Though it's a little early for most Kentucky Derby pundits to stick their necks out, I was so impressed with the performance of the Calumet flyer, General Duke, in Flamingo Stakes I'm willing to risk it. Despite taking the overland route most of the way and then hanging at the sixteenth pole, he still would have beaten the neck-winning Bold Ruler had the race gone another five jumps. . . . Reports to the contrary, I expect the big Argentine thunderer, Holandes II, to take a crack at the $100,000 San Juan Capistrano rather than the Bay Meadows Handicap, which he won last year. Not only is the money more, but the long-striding South American should love the grass course. . . . The junior Izzak Waltons, who annually take dead aim on the trout in San Francisco's Lake Merced, will be happy to learn that the Fish and Game Commission has dropped a proposed bait restriction which would have banned the use of cheese and other dairy products in trout fishing. True, adult fishermen use much the same bait, but with the youngsters availability and economy are a much more important factor. Mom's refrigerator is the handiest of bait boxes.

Presidio's Brown Wins; Ord's Elliot Is Dumped

Sixth Army stood firm in fourth place as the 1957 All-Army Boxing Tournament went into the semi-finals this week at Fort Campbell, Ky. Third Army held first place, Second and Fifth Armies tied for second and Fourth Army moved into the third spot.

Heavyweight Curley Lee, Fort Ord's former 1955 Southwest Command Japan Champion, sent Fifth Army's Lonnie Shuler to the canvas with a left hook to the chin in the third round. Seconds later Shuler was flattened for the ten-count with the same punch.

Another Ord fighter, featherweight Hilton Smith, lost by unanimous decision to Fifth Army's James Floyd. The bout was a slow one with a lot of punches, but few good ones.

Second Army flyweight Sherriedale Morgan knocked out Ord's J. C. Adams in 1:10 of the first round.

On opening night Presidio's David Brown decisioned Fifth Army's Obie Vann in a bout marked by the lack of action. The styles of the two boys failed to mix and the crowd booed the decision. Brown drew a bye on the next two nights.

Nearly four thousand fans crowded the arena on a first night that saw two other Sixth Army boxers go. Louis Stewart, Ord welterweight, won a split decision over AFFE's Robert Randolph; however, Samuel Isabell, Ord middleweight, was outclassed by Third Army's Leon Matthews.

Second night pairings brought Ft. Lewis' Ralph Manami up against Fifth Army's Leon Thompson, after a thrilling head-to-head slugfest, Thompson walked off with a close decision.

One of the night's biggest upsets came when Second Army's Moses Walker, Kentucky Golden Gloves Champ, garnered a light heavyweight win over former All-Army Champion Roscoe Elliot of Ft. Ord.

Eight teams with 78 boxers representing the six continental armies, Army Forces Far East—Eighth Army (AFFE) and U.S. Army Pacific (USARPAC) were entered in the tourney.

That includes every duffer who likes to take a swing at the little rubber-cored sphere on occasional weekends.

Capt. George J. Reuss, Provost Marshal Section, has been appointed as the Sixth Army coordinator for the day's activities by Col. Harold A. Davenport, Provost Marshal, Sixth Army.

All entrants will be required to pay $1.25 entrance fee, one dollar of which will go to a local charity and the remaining 25 cents to defray the costs of striking medals inscribed "I beat Jack Burke, Jr."

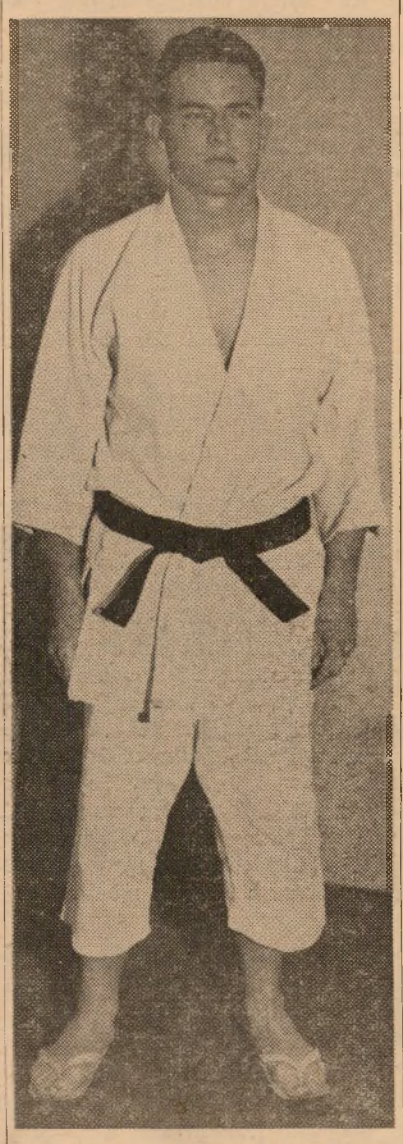
Judo Wrestler Awarded Black Belt In Tourney

Lt. Robert McCorkle, Provost Marshal Section, has been awarded the coveted Black Belt standing in amateur judo after nearly six years of competition.

McCorkle earned his black belt at the Senior Northern California, Pacific AAU Championship Tournament this past weekend when he won three out of five matches. The three wins placed him third in the tourney and merited his black belt award. Two weeks ago McCorkle placed first in the Junior Northern California, Pacific AAU, Judo Tournament competing in the 150-pound classification.



After three years of team participation, McCorkle was elected team captain of the San Jose State College judo team and led his team to the Northern California Team Championship in 1955. He attained a rating of first degree brown belt proficiency while in college.

The Northern California Judo Association holds competition twice a year, in March and November, when they award the black belt degree.

McCorkle explained that a win is declared by one of four methods: a clean throw, a choke hold where your opponent submits or is choked into unconsciousness, a joint hold where your opponent submits or receives a broken arm or the fourth and less dramatic mat hold where the opponent is confined to the mat for a minimum of 30 seconds.

McCorkle held high praise for his college instructor, Yosh Uchida, fourth degree black belt holder, and his present instructor at the San Francisco Judo Club. McCorkle was representing the San Francisco Club when he earned his award.

Lt. McCorkle is from Brawley, California, and is assigned to the Post Guardhouse as assistant confinement officer.

Black Belt holder, Robert McCorkle, Provost Marshal Section, recently acquired the belt after nearly six years of judo competition.

Most Menhaden Are!

More menhaden are caught in the U. S. each year than any other fish. They are used as food, fertilizer and a source of oil in making leather, steel plate and linoleum.

Custom Pickup by Joe Bailon of Hayward is exemplary of the beautiful craftsmanship and individual ideas of automotive styling. Some of the outstanding cars in the Oakland Show will be shown at the Presidio Auto Show at the Service Club, 14 April.

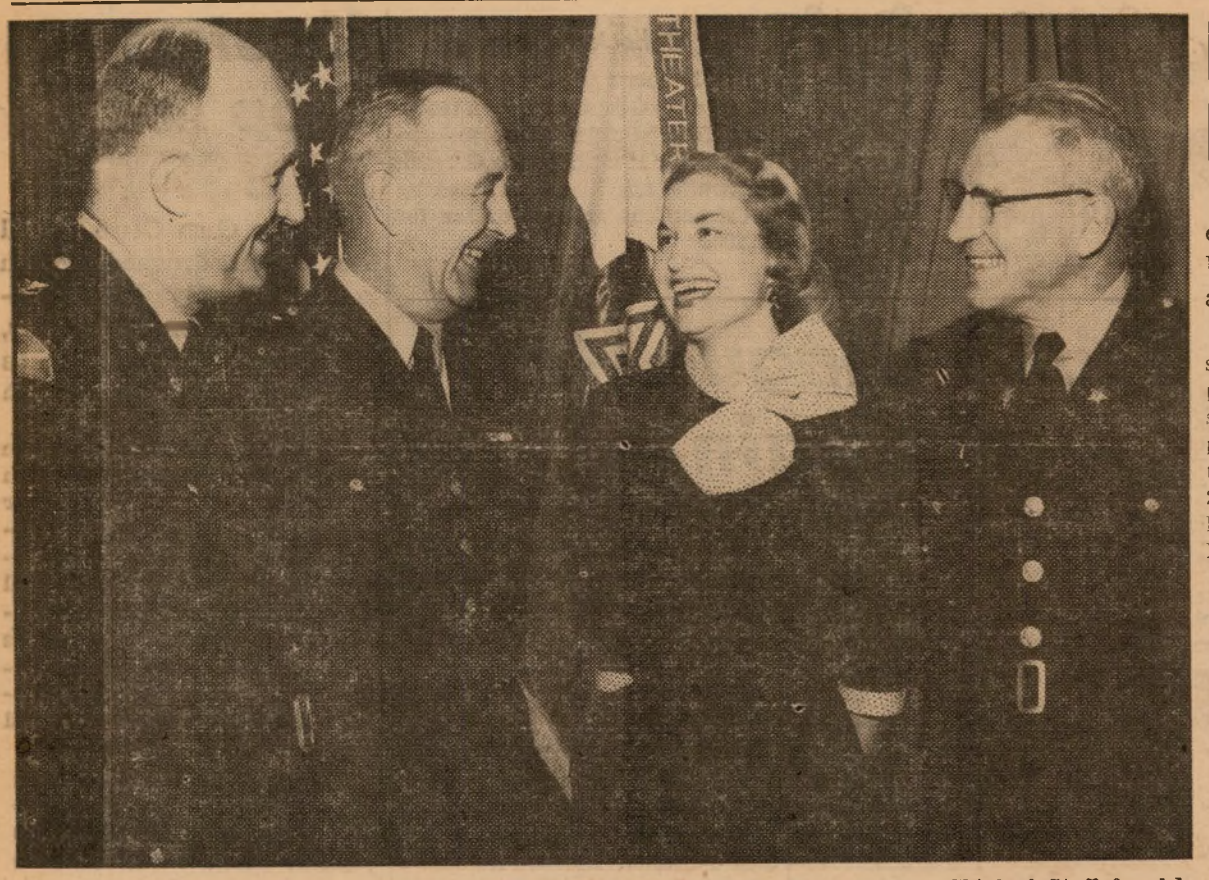
Post Auto Show To Feature Sports Cars

A first of its kind, The Presidio Automobile Show, is slated for 14 April at the Presidio Service Club and the loop surrounding the club area. The show has not yet received official sanction, but no obstacles are expected, according to Miss Isabel Walker, assistant director of the Service Club.

First on the day's schedule of activities is the Roadeo, a contest to select the most proficient driver on the Post. It is hoped that each unit on the Post will be represented by an entrant in the Roadeo to be held on the Parade field.

There will be an exhibit of the latest model foreign and American-built sports cars on display in the lobby of the Service Club. Already slated for the exhibition are Jaguar, MG Sedan, Corvette, and a Thunderbird. These cars will be supplemented with additional selections in the near future.

Also on hand for the show and to be displayed on the drive around the club will be some of the latest models from the American luxury car field such as the Cadillac El Dorado, the Chrysler 300, and the Lincoln Continental.



Customized cars and dragsters may also be seen at the forthcoming show. An organization known as Satan's Angels will be displaying the club members' personal cars. Five or six of these cars were on display at the recent Oakland Automobile Show and one of them, a customized '49 Chevrolet sedan was one of the top prize winners. Also scheduled for the show is a customized 1939 Hupp, which has been exhibited at the Pebble Beach Show.

There will be continual showings of international and national races such as the Pan-American Road Race, LeMans Classic, the Indianapolis 500 and others. Door prizes are to be given as part of the day's program.

Another feature of the show will be the exhibit sponsored by the California Highway Patrol. The Highway Patrol will have on hand and explain the latest equipment employed in their duties of maintaining order and safety on the public roads and highways.

To wind up the show, there will be an automotive fashion show in the evening. The fashion show will feature enlisted men and women modeling the latest fashionable attire to be found for the motoring populace. Emphasis will be on the sports car driver's attire.

Further information about the show will be released in the next few weeks.

West Point Cadets Visit; Discuss Soviets, Academy

Four West Point cadets this week enjoyed the "most highly prized cadet trip of the year," when they visited the Bay Area, stayed at the Presidio, spoke to high school and college students, and were escorted hither and yon by an assortment of Stanford and University of California coeds.

Officially the trip had two purposes. The cadets participated in college level discussions on the subject of "Soviet Penetration of the Middle East." And they visited a number of high schools to explain and answer questions on West Point.

The four cadets, William Henry Foster, Jr., Red Bluff, Calif.; F. Whitney Hall, Jr., Amarillo, Tex.; Richard Mollicone, Brooklyn, N.Y., and John Paul Manos, Fayetteville, N. C., are all members of the West Point Debate Council and Forum. Similar teams visited the Seattle area and the Los Angeles area.

The first discussion in which the cadets participated was held at Stanford University Sunday and was televised. During this week they have also met with forensic teams at University of San Francisco, San Jose Junior College, Menlo College and San Francisco Theological Seminary.

For Cadet Foster this trip was a homecoming. After graduating from Red Bluff Union High School, where he was president of his class and earned 10 school letters for athletics, he attended the University of California for one year. At West Point he is in the upper one-fifth of his class and earned a letter in Junior Varsity baseball.

The 16-man Sixth U.S. Army Pipe Band and the 55-man brass band will be among similar municipal units presenting Gaelic martial music for the thousands of Californians and out-of-state visitors attending the annual salute to Ireland's patron saint.

Beginning at the Ferry Building, 1400 hours, on Sunday, the massed Hibernians will parade through the main city streets to the customary plaudits of several thousand onlookers. The marchers will pass the reviewing stand in front of City Hall at approximately 1600 hours.

On Sunday evening, the city of San Francisco, through its civic organizations, plans to mark Saint Patrick's birthday with a series of dances and concerts, radio and television broadcasts, to which personnel of the Presidio and their families are cordially invited.

Announcement of the special events and their locations are carried in today's San Francisco newspapers.

Sales Store Closed

The Presidio Quartermaster Sales Stores will be closed for semi-annual inventory, all day during Friday, 29 March. In deference to off-Post families who do not have ready access to the Daily Bulletin, Captain James Malizola, the Post Quartermaster Officer, asks that Star Presidian readers convey this information to their neighbors living some distance from the Presidio.

Local Nike Sites Change Visitors Day to Wednesday

Two 9th AAA Missile Battalion Nike Battery sites located at Forts Barry and Cronkhite will be open to the general public from 1300 to 1600 hours each Wednesday. Tuesday was the former visiting day.

The 30-minute tours will be conducted at Battery A, Fort Barry, and Battery B, Fort Cronkhite. The battery commander or a battery officer will meet visitors at each battery launching site. The tours are continuous throughout the afternoon.

Lt. Col. Frank A. Bates, Jr., 9th AAA Missile Battalion CO, said the purpose in opening the Nike sites is to provide Marin County residents with firsthand information concerning the Nike Guided Missile System.

Discontinue Shade OD 33 At QM Stores

Sales or issue of any item of the Shade OD 33 uniform have been discontinued at the QM Clothing Sales Store as of this week. From now on it is required for military personnel to have with them a copy of DA Form 10-35 to be submitted at the Sales Store for initial or free issue or for any item being purchased.

Cash purchases at the store can be effected only through filling in of a mail order form available at the QM shop. Together with a Money Order covering the given cost, this will be forwarded to Fort Ord whose QM Section will in turn forward the goods to the individual making the request.

In cases of Charge, Free, and Initial Issue transactions, the local QM store now retains the DA Form 10-35 and will notify the soldier's unit upon the article's arrival from Fort Ord.

Necessary alterations on such military clothing are still being done at the QM Repair Shop. For Uniform OD Shade 33, the requirements have to be submitted on separate DA Forms 10-35.

Stage Formal Ceremonies For New Ord Commander

Brigadier General William M. Breckinridge, Commanding General of the Fifth Infantry Division and Fort Ord, was formally greeted at the Presidio this week with an honor guard ceremony Wednesday. It was his first official visit since he assumed command on 21 February.

General Breckinridge came to the West Coast from Frankfurt, Germany, where, for the past year, he had been chief of staff of the Fifth U.S. Army Corps. The Fifth Corps is one of the two U.S. Army Corps composing the Seventh U.S. Army, a major NATO command for Western Europe.

The general, a native of Washington, D. C., was graduated from the U.S. Military Academy in 1928 and was commissioned in the Infantry. During World War II, he served with the 10th Infantry Regiment in Iceland, England, Northern Ireland, France, Germany, Luxembourg, Czechoslovakia and Austria, participating in six campaigns.

From September 1951 to April 1954 General Breckinridge was in Japan holding positions on the staff of the Supreme Command, Asiatic Pacific and Army Forces, Far East.

"Pro Pay" Would Aid Tight Promotions, Says New Study

(This is the second article in a three-part series explaining the Cordiner Committee's recommendations on military pay schedules. Data is taken from the Armed Forces Press Service, Department of the Army bulletins and other official correspondence.)

The creation of two higher enlisted men's grades and in-grade pay increases for grades E-3 through E-8 and Warrant Officers is included in the Cordiner Committee's proposed changes in the military pay schedule.

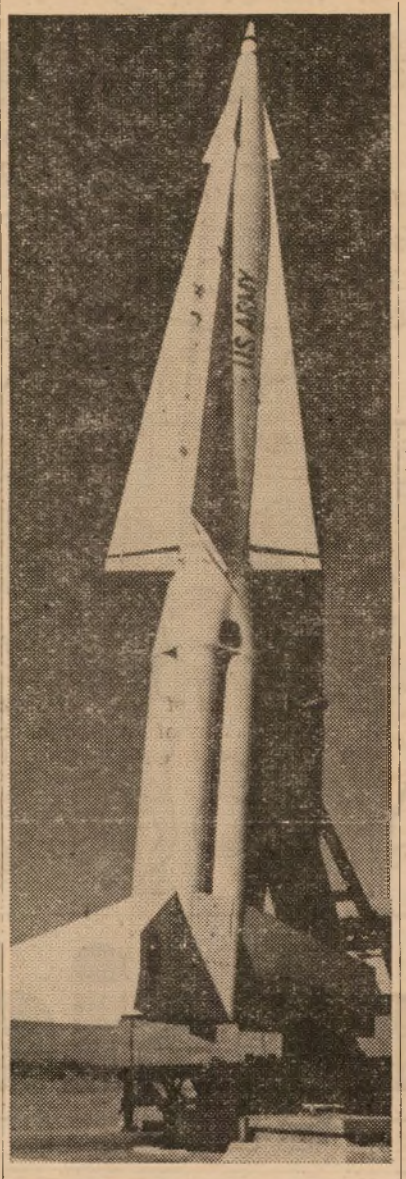
In addition, personnel whose progress is halted because of "tight" promotion quotas would be eligible for "proficiency pay" equivalent to one or two pay grade advancements. "Proficiency pay," which is proposed for grades E-4 through E-8, would be based on the individual's productivity and outstanding contributions.

Each service will devise its own schedule for awarding this added incentive. It would, for example, allow an E-5 to draw the lowest pay of an E-7. Grades E-8 and E-9 would be initiated to make the system flexible and workable.

Under the proposed pay structure, E-3's would start at $99.37 and would be raised to $117 after two years and E-4 starting pay of $140.40 would increase to $180 after two years.

Grade E-5 would begin at $210 and bring $10 increases at the end of two and four years of service. Men with E-6's would receive $250 initial pay and would increase $10 at the completion of two, four and six years of service.

Grades E-7 and E-8 would also enjoy $10 boosts at the end of two, four and six-year periods, with E-7's starting at $300 and E-8's at $350. Grade E-9 would begin at $400 and increase $10 after two, four, six and eight-year periods.



Personnel in the lowest Warrant Officer grade would draw an in-grade pay boost after two years of service had been completed. The other three WO grades would receive in-grade pay promotions at the end of 2- and 4-year periods.

WO raises would be as follows: W-1 start at $350 and raised to $373; W-2 start at $396 and increased to $418 and $440; W-3 start at $462 and boosted to $484 and $506; and W-4 start at $530 and stepped up to $557 and $585.

Children Abroad Will Have Crack At Spelling Bee

More than 30,000 American children of Armed Forces and State Department families living overseas will participate in the National Spelling Bee for the first time this year.

The overseas bee, sponsored by Stars and Stripes, will include children living in Europe, North Africa and the Middle East. The children will represent 148 American schools.

Nike Hercules Will Replace Ajax Shortly

The new Nike B which can go farther, faster, and carry an atomic punch, is undergoing final tests, the Department of the Army and the Western Electric Company announced this week.

Known as the Nike Hercules, this new missile will eventually replace the Nike Ajax, which has been guarding key cities and strategic areas of the nation for the past three years.

Although longer, heavier and more than double the diameter of the Nike Ajax, the Hercules model will have extreme maneuverability at altitudes far in excess of those capable of being reached by the Ajax. Its higher velocity will permit swifter interception of the most advanced types of aircraft and its increased lethality will make it one of the nation's most effective defense weapons.

The new Nike can be integrated into existing Nike batteries with certain modifications of the ground control equipment. Both the Ajax and the Hercules can then be fired with the same system. The equipment changes will also add to the effectiveness of the Ajax.

No target date has been set for integration of the Hercules into the Bay Area defense system, according to 30th AAA Group Public Information. For security reasons it is doubted that the change-over will be announced until it is completed.

Hq. Sgt. Wins Praise

M/Sgt. Allen C. Macey, who this week returned to Headquarters Company, USA Garrison, from attending a Guided Missile Electronic Repair Course at Fort Monmouth, N. J., brought with him a letter of commendation from his school commander.

Sergeant Macey was praised for the "outstanding manner" with which he performed his duties of student platoon sergeant. He left the Presidio in December to attend the course.

Home And Car Deductions Can Lower Tax Payments

(This is the third of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. The articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants.)

Your home and your car may be the source of deductions that will lower your federal income tax.

The interest on a mortgage is deductible on your federal tax return. In most cases, payments to a bank include both interest and principal; as the mortgage is reduced the interest is less and a larger portion is applied to the principal. Only the interest is deductible in the case of your residence.

Sometimes the monthly payment also includes an additional amount, which the bank holds for the payment of taxes, insurance, etc. These taxes are deductible as if you had paid them directly.

If your home has been damaged by fire, storm or flood, your loss not covered by insurance is deductible. The amount of the loss is calculated by comparing the fair market value of the property just before and just after the casualty.

This loss, or the cost of the property, whichever is lower, is reduced by any insurance recovery to determine the loss for tax purposes.

You are not allowed to deduct any loss you may suffer on the sale of your personal residence. However, you may be required to pay tax on a gain resulting from selling the house at a profit.

If the new home costs as much as you received for your old one (with allowances for certain "fixing-up" expenses), you are not taxed on the gain. If your new home costs less, the gain is taxable to the extent of the difference.

In any event, you are required to submit information concerning any sale of your home at a profit, whether or not the gain is taxable.

Any state or local sales tax you paid on an automobile purchase is deductible. So are the cost of your license plates, state inspection fees and interest on an auto loan.

A common deduction in many taxpayers' returns is for state gasoline tax. It is best to keep a record of your gasoline purchases during the year, but if you don't have such a record you can still make a reasonable estimate.

If you had a collision, you may be able to deduct for the damage to your own car not covered by insurance. Although driving may have been faulty, you are entitled to the deduction if the accident was not caused by your negligence.

The instruction book, which comes with your tax forms, gives further information. Help is also available by telephone or at offices of the Internal Revenue Service. You are urged to consult a properly qualified advisor if you decide to seek outside help.

"King Cole" Will Start Tomorrow

"Exercise King Cole," a command post and field training exercise, to be held in the Louisiana Maneuver Area from 27 March to 16 April, will involve more than 20,000 troops, the U.S. Continental Army Command announced today.

During the exercise the Army will further test the "Pentomic" concept of organization, doctrine and techniques. This concept relates to a pentagonal type structure, consisting of five battle groups. It is geared to the anticipated requirements of combat in which atomic weapons may be used.

"King Cole" will be conducted in a series of short exercises with brief intervening breaks used for critiques and corrective actions.

Doctrines on intelligence staff functions—revised following Exercise Sage Brush held in the fall of 1955—will be tested in "King Cole." A new concept on supply of special weapons will also be tested and evaluated.

Sixth Army Savings Bond Drive Readied

Preparations are under way for this year's Savings Bond Campaign in the Presidio area, according to Lt. Col. Walter R. Jorgenson, Sixth U. S. Army Savings Bond Officer pro tem. The drive will be conducted from 25 March through 5 April.

Sixth Army Headquarters, Post, California Military District and Letterman Army Hospital will participate in the campaign.

Goal of the campaign is to reach at least 65 per cent participation, the mark set by the Department of the Army. At present, participation in this area is about 21 per cent military and 48 per cent civilian.

Minutemen will be appointed in each section and unit to explain and direct the drive. Later, permanent savings bond officers will be appointed to ensure year-round participation and to maintain the goal established in the drive.

"Savings bonds are still the soundest of investments," explained Colonel Jorgenson. "This is because interest rates are guaranteed, something which cannot be said for currently popular methods of investment."

The colonel added that in an emergency, a savings bond owner can readily convert those of his bonds which are at least 60 days old into the cash he paid for them (never less) plus accrued interest.

A steering committee has been appointed to assist Colonel Jorgenson in conducting the campaign. Members are Mr. Newton McCarthy, Savings Bond Division, U. S. Treasury Department; Mr. Leslie F. Scanlon, Post Civilian Personnel Section; Major Neil F. Cramer, Sixth U. S. Army G-1; and Mrs. Marian Cornfield, Star Presidian.

Investment Speaker

Mr. Alfred Barnston, Sutro and Company, will speak on investment securities at 2000 hours, 26 March, at the Fort Scott Theater. All interested military and civilian personnel and dependents are invited.

House Approves Raise In Savings Bond Interest

The House of Representatives approved legislation this week increasing the interest rate on savings bonds to three and a quarter per cent. The present interest rate is three per cent.

The issue price and face value of the bonds will be the same, but the present nine years and eight months maturity will be shortened to eight years and eleven months. Return on the bond if held three years would be three per cent as compared to the present two and one quarter per cent.

The Treasury Department also plans to offer a new Series H Bond which would be the same as the proposed E bond except that interest would be paid by check each six months.

If the legislation is approved by Congress all bonds dated 1 February or later will carry the new terms automatically.

Engineer Experts Teach Map Making Techniques

San Francisco high school ROTC students are currently learning about how maps are made by the men who make them—three specialists from the 30th Engineer Group (Topo Survey).

Students in the seven San Francisco high schools have been studying map readying in their ROTC classes. To make the course more informative Maj. Thomas A. Hotchkiss and Capt. George R. Alexander, who direct ROTC programs, arranged with Maj. Ronald E. Steiner, 30th Engineer Group S3 Officer, to have three enlisted men lecture to their students.

Each of the three enlisted men gives a brief lecture in his respective field.

Sp3 William Cox, who is presently a topographic surveyor with the 549th Engineer Company (Survey Base) and has a B.S. degree in geology from the University of Houston, begins each session by explaining how the surveying work is done in the field. He covers the techniques of triangulation, leveling and traversing.

Then Sp3 Lindbergh Law, who is presently a cartographic draftsman with the 21st Engineer Company (Base Photomapping) and has a B.S. degree in civil engineering from the University of California, tells the students how the maps are compiled from aerial photographs. He explains the processes involved in taking the aerial photographs, compiling the maps from the aerial photographs with the multiplex machine and separating the five colors used in an Army map.

Map reproduction is explained last by Sp3 Griff Yamamoto, who is layout man at the 99th Engineer Company (Reproduction Base). He has attended Army schools in photolithography and offset press operation and explains the different reproduction processes such as use of the camera, plate graining and printing.

A variety of colorful displays accompany the lectures. They have been prepared by the lecturers themselves and other men of the 30th Engineer Group.

It is expected that the men will speak to all the high school ROTC classes in San Francisco before they are through. This will involve giving lectures to 22 classes at seven schools.

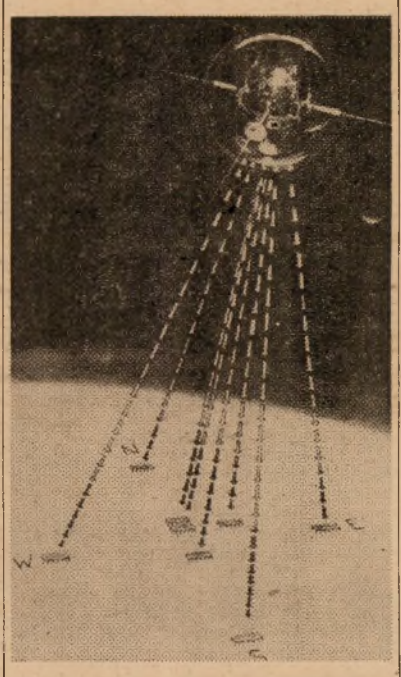
Now Hear This!

The Star Presidian is now making plans for a spectacular 1957 Armed Forces Day issue. Sections that wish to be represented must have pictures, suggestions and data in to the newspaper office by Monday, 8 April. The newspaper is located in Bldg. 87-A and can be reached at Ext. 4244 or 3386.

Trans Corps Wins High Praise For Conex Innovation

The Transportation Corps has been commended for its development of the Container Express Service, better known as CONEX, by the Hon. Frank H. Higgins, Assistant Secretary of the Army (Logistics). The commendation was received by Maj. Gen. Paul F. Yount, Chief of Transportation, on the occasion of the establishment of a Joint CONEX Control Agency by the Department of the Army.

The former San Francisco Port of Embarkation was one of the pioneer agencies involved in developing CONEX. The system was started in November, 1952, with shipments of three containers a week from Columbus General Depot to SFPE for trans-shipment to Yokohama Depot. The containers carried Corps of Engineers spare parts.



In November, 1956, Bay Area Army Terminal Center handled 847 containers. Last January the terminal center handled 1235 and February 1127.

Lewis Sfc. First To Win Army Incentive Awards

A Fort Lewis Sfc. won $25 and became the first soldier to have a suggestion adopted by the Sixth U. S. Army Incentive Awards Committee for his proposal to grow flowers in ammunition boxes.

Sergeant First Class Howard H. Tomson, U.S.A. Garrison, Fort Lewis, who is assigned to the Post greenhouse suggested that ammunition boxes be used as "flats" for planting growing seedlings. The idea has also been adopted for use in the greenhouses here at the Presidio and at Ford Ord.

LocalCaptainsAmass 1400 Semester Hours

Nearly 1400 semester hours is a towering heap of learning—or nearly 50 years of college study.

And it stands particularly tall when it has been earned over the past year by a group of 71 captains who are full-time soldiers first, and students only in their spare moments.

According to the annual educational achievement report of the Presidio Army Education Center, 71 captains, holding a variety of jobs on the Presidio and its subposts, have in the past 12 months averaged over a semester's work apiece toward baccalaureate degrees.

Two of these officers, Captains Walter M. Kevell and Donald T. Yabe, both of Training Unit (6700), will receive B.A.'s this June from San Francisco State College.

Through the facilities of the Army Education Center, the officers have combined USAFI correspondence courses with attendance in the current series of on-post college classes presented by SF State.

Reports on officers' progress in education are made yearly to their commanders who take academic accomplishments into consideration when preparing individual efficiency reports.

It was because of the rapidly expanding demands of the military for a variety of new skills and broader ranges of knowledge that the Army has since World War II set the B.A. as the ideal educational goal for all of its officers.

In the past decade the Army has likewise expanded its educational facilities, providing greater opportunities for military personnel to pursue higher education.

The curriculum offered through on-post classes and USAFI runs the gamut of courses in the sciences, humanities and arts presented by most of the nation's undergraduate schools.

For instance, Captain Hugh H. Harris, Sixth Army PM Section, has since just last March completed a dozen on-post college classes along with 15 USAFI courses, the equivalent of over-three years' work. The subjects included, to name only a few: sociology, geography, government, history, anthropology, biology, public relations, business law, and Spanish.

Nearly a dozen of the captains have made progress almost as rapidly as Captain Harris.

The Presidio Army Education Center issues its report cards at regular intervals throughout the year on each rank from Warrant Officer to Colonel.

We didn't know . . . but Mr. Harry Witzke, of the Sixth U. S. Army Finance and Accounting Division knew . . . that the picture published in last week's Presidio Sketchbook column was taken on the Presidio about 45 years ago. The photo and the column took Harry back to the year 1912 . . . when his father was a soldier . . . serving here with the First Field Artillery's D Battery. Harry was then a little lad who used to watch the Presidio Cavalry units ride down the parade ground during the weekly formal parades here.

"I remember the 6th, the 12th and the 16th Infantry Regiments and the First Battalion of the First Cavalry," he says, "to watch them come down the field carrying the regimental colors on horseback was like seeing a rainbow in the afternoon! The gun carriages were drawn by mules and I used to love the sound of their steel shoes when they hit the cobble stones. The standards had more colors than the United Nations!"

Harry's father is buried in Golden Gate Cemetery. "Other small boys and girls used to pick wild flowers with me," he adds, "along the banks by the West Cantonment, so that we could bring them to decorate the graves of the soldiers on May 30th."

Another memory brought to Harry's mind by last week's Star Presidian column was the arrival on the reservation of the Civil War Veterans for the garrison's formal parades. "They used to march in on foot," he mused . . . "but as time went on the units got smaller . . . and the men themselves seemed to be shrinking in size . . . and finally they used to show up in horse-drawn wagons . . . then as I grew older . . . all the horses and mules at the Presidio and outside just disappeared . . . and the Fords and Overlands replaced them."

Harry tells us that the parade ground was moved over to its present location from the area along by Buildings 28 and 39 . . . where the Finance and Accounting Section now stands. As a child, he used to pick wild strawberries to the west of the wooden buildings shown in last week's photo, present site of the Headquarters Company, the 163rd Military Police, 16th Base Post Office, Machine Records Unit, MRU, and the Sixth Army Band.

As a Presidio soldier, Harry's father served with the 1st Field Artillery as a disaster unit in rescue operations during the great San Francisco earthquake—1906.

"The soldiers did yeoman's service in lifesaving," he recalls, "during their three-day and night assignment outside the Hibernia Bank on Jones and Market Streets."

Most lasting of memories in Harry Witzke's childhood days on the Presidio is the tragic one marking the night General Pershing's wife and three children lost their lives in the fire which also consumed a number of the frame buildings housing the officers' families. Every unit on duty at the garrison turned out to fight the flames but the fire won.

"We brought our wild flowers and placed them on the burned out cots where the children had been sleeping," says Harry Witzke.

For Sale at the new Post Self Service Supply Center and available for the use of Sixth U. S. Army Transportation section are the items mounted on the above display board. The board, which was prepared to orient transportation on the relative costs of expendible items, is being explained to Col. A. Deane Gough, Executive Officer, by Lt. Col. Robert G. Youngblood, Operations Officer. M/Sgt. Walter C. Beach, Transportation Section Sergeant Major, who prepared the display, is also present.

Special Display Board Stresses Item Economy

For the purpose of orienting the personnel of Sixth U. S. Army Transportation Section to the cost and availability of expendible items, that section has compiled a display board indicating all the items available and their prices.

The display board has been used with orientation talks by Lt. Col. Robert G. Youngblood, Operations Officer, who has explained the new Self Service Supply system to the transportation personnel.

"When people know the relative costs of items, like Thermo-Fax at $37.60 a box and steno notebooks at $.18 apiece, it is possible for them to more wisely economize," said Colonel Youngblood.

The new supply system has been very favorable received, according to Transportation Executive Officer Col. A. Deane Gough. The display board, which was put together by M/Sgt. Walter C. Beach, Transportation Sergeant Major, contains more than 50 items.

Irish Spaghetti?

Reservations are not necessary for the club's anniversary and Saint Paddy's Day shindig to which all non-coms and their friends are invited.

Post Chapel To Sponsor 'Hour' Drive

"One Great Hour Of Sharing"—a chapel offering appeal sponsored by the Church World Service — gives Post and sub-Post members of the Protestant faith an opportunity to aid financially the project of world-wide relief of oppressed peoples, during the military church services here 31 March.

An interdenominational agency, Church World Service has enlisted the assistance of more than 30 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches nationwide in its plan to alleviate the sufferings of the victims of national and political disasters.

Chaplain (Major) Erhard H. Harms, the Post Protestant chaplain, is in charge of the local Hour of Sharing being introduced at the Presidio and sub-Post chapels on the last Sunday of March.

Biggest Offensive

The greatest single mass troop operation in history was launched 26 September, 1918. For 47 days of the Meuse-Argonne offensive, more than 1,200,000 American troops pushed forward on a 90-mile front in France.

Ask Increased Presidential Quota For West Point

Washington (ANS)—The Army is asking Congress to pass a bill authorizing an increase in the number of Presidential appointments to the United States Military Academy.

The proposed legislation has been referred to the Senate Armed Services Committee and to the Durham Subcommitttee of the House Armed Services Committee. Passage of the bill would increase from 89 to 300 the number of cadets that can be in the academy by Presidential appointment.

This legislation is in keeping with the Army's long-range requirement for approximately 1,550 new officers a year (not including the medical service, chaplains, and WACs). One of the recommendations of the Service Academies Board, convened in 1950, was that at least 50 per cent of the annual Regular officer requirement of each Service should be Academy graduates.

At present, an average of 720 cadets enter the Academy each year through Presidential, Congressional, and other types of appointments. After normal attrition during a four-year period the average graduating strength is 550. This bill would permit the Army to enter an average of 750 to 760 cadets annually, insuring a graduating class of 585 to 590 each year.

Do you feel like the March lion and want some reading to match your temperament? If so the Post Library has several new books which will appeal to the blood and thunder set.

Tracing the sea wolves from the days of the early buccaneers through the high tide of privateering to extinction, THE AGE OF PIRACY by Robert Carse is a bloody, thrilling tapestry of a wild way of life forever vanished. All of the great names are here: Morgan, Kidd, Teach, the Lafittes and a gallery of others. The book describes how they lived, fought, sailed; ordnance, secret hideaways; how they divided their spoils; how they died. Pirate fanciers and others should note that much of the material presented here has never before appeared in English.

In GIVE US THIS DAY a young Oklahoman, Sidney Stewart, a survivor of Bataan, reveals the terrible truth about a little-known aspect of the Pacific war as he experienced it from the beginning in the Philippines. He was a captive of the Japanese for more than three years. He knew one after another all the torments of confinement in conditions of primative barbarism. True though this story is it almost defies belief. This remarkable and deeply moving book is already a best seller in five European languages.

PACIFIC ORDEAL by Capt. Kenneth Ainslie is an extraordinary story of one of the longest sea tows in history. Using a surplus Navy tug, Capt. Ainslie started out to tow four surplus mine sweepers from Panama to the Philippines. He was faced with storm, broken tow lines at night, mutiny, poison, feuds, amateur surgery, engine failure and marooning. This exciting true tale is set against the remote vastness of the Pacific and conditions of extreme danger.

Is the United States underestimating the power of Russian military might? Are we lulled into a false security by our atomic weapon stockpile? The answers to these and other equally vital questions are set forth in amazingly revealing detail in THE RED ARMY. This authoritative and controversial appraisal of the modern Russian military machine by a group of noted military experts — American, British, French, Czech, German and Russian—is edited by the respected analyst, B. H. Liddell Hart.

For the March lambs we have three new fiction titles by well known authors. They are: THE ETRUSCAN by Waltari, THE FOUNTAIN OVERFLOWS by Rebecca West and TWILIGHT OF THE GODS by Ernest Gann.

Order Tight Control Over On-Post Beverage Sale

Young soldiers under 18½ years of age have been clearly denied access to alcoholic beverages and beer by Sixth U.S. Army circular number 16-75.

The circular especially referred to members of the NGUS and the USAR who are performing six months' active duty for training. It was emphasized that this restriction included the 3.2 per cent beer sold in post exchanges.

Stations where six month trainees are located will instruct persons dispensing beer to check all prospective patrons, exclusive of officers and non-commissioned officers in uniform, and have them show their identification card.

Installation and activity commanders were also instructed to take special care to see that prohibited beverages do not fall into the hands of minors, including minor military and minor dependents and guests of military. They were instructed to take the following action:

- Issue different open mess cards to under age members.
- Establish sales control procedure requiring identification of all purchasers of packaged alcoholic beverages.
- Require a purchaser of alcoholic beverages to show identification in all cases of doubt.
- Exercise control to prevent excessive use of alcoholic beverages.

Sixth Army Recruiting Leads All Other Armies

The Sixth United States Army Recruiting District, commanded by Colonel William M. Cohoon, Military Personnel Procurement Officer, has led all Continental Armies in Regular Army enlistments for the past four months.

The record was set in remote, thinly populated and roughly terrained sections of the eight western states. For example, a recruiter working out of Flagstaff, Arizona, recently packed his enlistment material by horseback 70 miles into the Canyon of the Colorado River in search of prospects among the Havasupai Indians. It is routine for others to work in the 115 degree heat of Death Valley or the 30 below zero cold of Montana.

In October, Sixth U.S. Army Recruiting District achieved 97.6% of objective; November, 98.9%; December, 109.5%; January, 114.6%, and still climbing, 183.1% in February which should keep Sixth U.S. Army on top when official figures are received from Department of the Army.

Recently added to the Sixth U.S. Army Recruiting District mission is the responsibility for enlistments in Reserve Forces and National Guard. In these categories, Sixth U.S. Army during February enlisted 142.7% of National Guard and 129.4% of Reserve objectives. In addition to these achievements, Sixth U.S. Army Recruiting District also enlisted the greatest number of WACs in the nation.

VA Says Agitators Improve Sputum Test In TB Analysis

New Hardware store type paint agitators have been adopted as standard equipment in 173 Veterans Administration hospital laboratories for use in testing sputum for tuberculosis germs, the VA has announced.

In making the important sputum test for TB, the viscous material must be homogenized before its parts are separated in a centrifuge. The job had been done by standard paint agitators, but they were not satisfactory as the vibration made it difficult to secure safety hoods.

Mr. Abraham L. Rosenzweig at McGuire VA Hospital in Richmond, Va., puzzled over the problem of finding a better sputum agitator, one day found in a hardware store a new type paint agitator with a main part that does not vibrate.

The most important advantage of the new agitator is that it reduces the danger of live TB germs being released into the air of the laboratory.

FORGIVENESS FAVORED—Legislation to void an order to refund single quarters allowances paid to some 1,500 women in the Air Force married to airmen has been forwarded with approval to the full House Committee on Government Operations by a subcommittee headed by Rep. William A. Dawson (D—Ill.).

The payments were made between 1951 and 1954 under different service interpretations of the compensation act. A later ruling declared the WAFs were not entitled to the allowance and ordered the money returned.

Thornton Named New 6th Army Wac Staff Adviser

Lieutenant Colonel Margaret M. Thornton, newly-appointed WAC Staff Advisor for the Sixth U.S. Army, christened her new assignment this week when she congratulated Wac Of The Month title winner, Pfc. Loretta Enitan, of the Presidio Company D.

Colonel Thornton is not a newcomer to the local scene. She served until recently in the headquarters G-4 Section. A native of Los Angeles, the new WAC Staff Advisor was graduated from the University of California, at Los Angeles. She entered military service in 1942, as a member of the original WAAC and she has had only two short breaks in service since that time.

Pfc. Enitan is the fourth Hawaiian WAC to be chosen for Company D's laurels. The 20-year-old girl is a clerk typist in the Post Quartermaster Section. She is a native of Big Island, Hawaii, and is the only member of her family in military service.

Gotcha! Say three Presidio photo bugs as they start limbering up their shutters in anticipation of the Sixth U. S. Army Photo Contest. A meeting will be held Tuesday night at the Presidio Service Club, 1900 hours, to explain the contest. All persons interested in joining a camera club should also be present.

Prizes will be awarded in the following three categories: single black and white photographs, black and white picture stories and 35mm color transparencies. Prizes of $25, $20 and $15 will be awarded to Sixth U. S. Army winners in each of these groupings.

Entry forms, which must be filled out in quadruplicate may be obtained at the hobby shop dark room, building 122, or at the Presidio Service Club. They will also be available at the Tuesday night photography meeting.

There will be two sections of competition, one for amateurs and one for those who have had some professional experience.

Will Feed 50

Improved Cookset Perfected By QM

A cabinet cookset capable of feeding 50 men and needing only 11 repair parts instead of the presently required 49 has been designed and developed by the Quartermaster Corps, according to the Department of the Army.

The new cookset will replace the Army field range now in military supply lines. It will reduce supply inventories and ease field maintenance.

The unit will weigh 114 pounds as compared to 137 pounds for the field range. Components will be stored within the cabinet, making it portable and capable of being operated while in transit.

Little Corporal's Idea

The use of divisions as tactical organizations was introduced by Napoleon in 1800. Until that time the battalion was the largest tactical unit.

M-Sgt, That Is!

Hey, Anybody Know Carter?

This is a story about Master Sergeant Carter—all three Master Sergeants Carter, that is.

Leading names in the story are M/Sgt. Richard L. Carter, Post Judge Advocate Section; M/Sgt. Richard T. Carter, Sixth U. S. Army Engineer Section; and M/Sgt. Jack L. Carter, Quartermaster Commissary.

This comedy of names was almost disastrous one day when M/Sgt. Richard T. Carter received a long distance call from Boise, Idaho.

"Hey Dick, it's a boy!" a voice informed him. "A what? A boy?" repeated the Engineer Section's Carter. After a few more minutes of conversation, the call was switched to M/Sgt. Richard L. Carter, whose brother-in-law informed him of the good news—Richard T. breathed a sigh of relief.

Minutes later the phone struck again—this time a voice was trying to sell Richard T. a carload of spaghetti. Calmly the call was switched—this time to M/Sgt. Jack L. Carter at the commissary.

Happy ending time—the confusion has not yet reached the paymasters.

Set Retreat Parade For Retiring Col.

Colonel John E. Stewart, former Post Comptroller, will retire from active duty today after more than 33 years of service as an officer, warrant officer and enlisted man. A retirement ceremony and review will be held at 1600 hours.

Colonel Stewart, a native of Pennsylvania, enlisted in the Army in August 1923. Following the outbreak of World War II he became a warrant officer in September 1941 and was commissioned as an officer in March 1942. In 1947 he was integrated into the Regular Army as a major. A member of the Finance Corps, he is a graduate of the Finance School Advanced Course.

The colonel served with the Army of Occupation in Japan and was stationed at Fort Meade, Md., prior to coming to the Presidio. He holds the Legion of Merit.

The organization receiving the citation may display an appropriate insignia of such form and design as determined by the Secretary concerned.

The insignia may also be worn by individuals present at the action cited, but no longer members of the organization.

Fishing Accident Takes Life Of AAA Colonel

Lieutenant Colonel James R. Nagel, 48-year-old veteran of more than 31 years of military service, was apparently drowned 11 March while surf fishing at Fort Cronkhite, California.

Colonel Nagel was believed swept to his death by a heavy wave which washed suddenly over a rock on which Colonel Nagel and his brother, Dr. Frank Nagel of Chicago, were standing.

Dr. Nagel said after the accident that the wave washed him off the rock into a crevice. When he worked his way out about 10 minutes later, Colonel Nagel had disappeared.

Units from the 194th Ordnance Detachment at Fort Cronkhite, the Fort Point Coast Guard Lifeboat Station and Military Police from the Presidio of San Francisco searched the area of the Pacific Ocean without finding Colonel Nagel's body.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Angela Rose Nagel, and two children, Robert A., 21, and Susan C., 17. Both attend school in El Paso, Texas.

Colonel Nagel was assigned to Headquarters, 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command, at Fort Baker, California, with temporary duty as liaison officer with the 28th Air Division at Hamilton Air Force Base. He had been in the assignment since returning from the Far East, 4 March, 1956.

His military service began 23 April, 1926, when he enlisted in the National Guard. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1935 and held a first lieutenant's commission when he entered active military service in 1940.

He had been on active duty service continuously since that time, serving in the Asiatic-Pacific Theater in World War II, Greece during that country's civil war in 1948-49 and the Far East during the Korean conflict.

His decorations included the Bronze Star Medal, received for meritorious service while commanding the 176th Armored Field Artillery Battalion in Korea in 1953-54; the Purple Heart; the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal with campaign stars for the China-Burma and Central Burma campaigns, the Greek War Cross and the Order of Military Merit, ULCHI.

Colonel Nagel was born in Secor, Illinois, 19 February, 1909.

'A' Company Brains

Company A of the 38th Infantry Regiment at Fort Lewis can boast brains plus brawn. Twenty-one per cent of the recruits taking basic training with the unit were college graduates or students at the time of induction. Among them are a school principal and a professor. Of the 234 soldiers on the roster, 61 per cent are high school graduates.

Post Employee Is Part Time Angel To Servicemen, Needy

"Thank goodness it's Friday" sigh most of us as we leave office desks and duty stations on Friday afternoon dreaming of a couple of days at home or out on the town. But to Miss Evelyn M. Roberts, Friday requires a little added energy, for from duty she reports to the USO Travelers' Aid Desk to spend three hours helping out service personnel.

Miss Roberts, a program analyst in the Post Comptroller Section, does everything from listen to the boys' problems to advising them about community resources, transportation facilities, hotel accommodations and recreational activities.

Through Travelers' Aid she helps locate military and civilian relatives, provides servicemen with free passes to theaters and recreational opportunities, directs personnel to various points in the Bay Area and advises and refers service persons to appropriate agencies for financial assistance.

Before coming to the Presidio last July, Miss Roberts was a Federal service worker in Europe, Guam, Japan and Alaska. She is a former servicewoman.

Miss Roberts has been donating her time to the Travelers' Aid Desk for a year. Before starting work last year, she shopped for patients in the Laguna Honda Home during the day. In addition, she has donated blood 14 or 15 times.

Chief Warrant Officer FLOYD H. SHAW is newly assigned to the 9th AAA Missile Battalion at Fort Baker as battalion Motor officer. His former assignment was with the Transportation Corps in Seoul, Korea.

Mr. Shaw is a veteran of 20 years military service. His record includes duty tours with the Infantry, Quartermaster Corps, Ordnance, Engineers, and Transportation.

Warrant Officer Shaw's wife and the couple's 17-year-old son are currently residing in Monterey. They will rejoin him here at the completion of the regular school term.

Woman Among Men!

WAC Helen Stirs Male Heartbeats

Helen of Troy—the legendary lady whose face launched a thousand ships, was small change in the hearts of 15,000 American soldiers, this week, when they suffered mass heart attacks because of Pvt. Muriel A. Reithinger, an 18-year-old Wac now at the Presidio.

Pretty as a picture, the Florida brunette created havoc at Fort Lewis, Washington, when through administrative error, she stormed that male sanctuary.

The 90th Replacement Battalion's 15,000 wanted to be shipwrecked with Muriel—but their particular desert has no privacy. Their temperatures soared as they whistled, and Muriel's face grew redder and redder. Somebody alerted the Washington press, radio and television services. Olympia, the capital, is said to have sent reporters by jet plane. Muriel became a national sensation!

Almost speechless from shock, the pint-size Florida peach could barely say to the newsmen, "I only asked to be assigned to the Post Dispensary at the Presidio of San Francisco."

It was indeed a Man's world for Muriel! She traveled on an otherwise all-male troop train from her former post in El Paso, Texas, to Los Angeles, and from there to Tacoma with three railroad cars of soldiers, marines and sailors. From Tacoma to Fort Lewis, she was escorted by 32 Infantrymen in a bus, and when she got to Fort Lewis there were 50,000 more.

When the red tape was unsnarled, Muriel, the WAC history-maker, was put on a train for the Presidio, where her face got redder than ever. She had no sooner arrived than she came down with an 18-carat case of measles!

It isn't known—yet—whether Muriel took the measles at Fort Lewis—or whether she gave them as a reward to her 15,000 admirers. She is now in semi-seclusion at Letterman Army Hospital. The place is full of MEN!

New Package Water Plant Perfected By Engineers

Washington (ANS)—A "packaged water plant" that can satisfy emergency drinking requirements of 50,000 persons, purify water up to rates of 12,000 gallons per hour, and be operated by one man, has been developed by Army sanitary engineers at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Perfected at the Army Corps of Engineers' Research and Development Laboratories at Fort Belvoir, the plant is now undergoing troop tests and is producing drinking water from the polluted Potomac River.

Designed for field erection, the plant consists of three main all-aluminum sections, an "Erdlator" and two gravity type sand filters. The Erdlator is a cone-shape, up-flow coagulation basin 14 feet in diameter that removes mud, bacteria and other suspended matter from the water and makes effective disinfection and filtration possible.

The new system makes it possible to chemically and physically treat polluted water pumped into the unit and discharge it as potable water in approximately 20 minutes.

Present plans indicate that the plant could be suitable for emergency use at field hospitals, prisoner of war camps, air bases and at various other installations.

Six-Week Typing Class For Tyros Starts On Monday

The six weeks of instruction is open to commissary officers and civilians.

Mr. Maes, who has been at the Presidio for ten years, has a 26-year record of Federal service, including both military and civil. Purim Ball Set Personnel of the Jewish faith have been invited to a Purim Ball at 2030 hours, tomorrow night, at the San Francisco Jewish Community Center. The dance is sponsored by the USO-JWB.

The organization is also planning a Purim celebration at the Center Sunday. A brunch from 1030 to 1200 hours, Purim program and a social from 1300 to 1500 hours have been scheduled.

Socially Speaking

As the Irish prepare to launch another memory-filled St. Patrick's Day, G-3 civilians are cooking up one big memorable evening for Mrs. Jeanette B. Irons. Mrs. Irons, records administrator and custodian of classified files, is leaving the section to marry Mr. N. Pound.

A farewell dinner honoring the eight-year employee will be held at 1730 hours today at Sabella's Capri Room on Fisherman's Wharf. A gift from the entire section will be presented to Mrs. Irons at the feast.

A resident of San Carlos, the future Mrs. Pound will not only be remembered for her office loyalty, but also for originating and running an annual Christmas charity project within the section. Five years ago Mrs. Irons decided that she and the section could make Christmas happier for San Francisco's needy children by providing them with toys. Each year she has bought a ham, sold raffle tickets and used the proceeds for purchasing the toys.

World Travelers Find Iran Land Of Many Contrasts; 30th Unit Trains Officers, NCO In Geodetic Methods

Special to the Star Presidian

Teheran, Iran. — We were met by Major Luther Payne, who just left 30th Engineer Group as 660th Battalion CO to take over here, and Capt. John South, who brought the unit over and has been praised by everyone here at all levels. Captain South will soon be returning to the Group.

Lt. William Kelly, our only pilot here, was also there to meet us. He has put in more than 80 hours a month flying time over some of the worst terrain in the world in the L-20 here.

After registering at the Jam Hotel and eating breakfast, we went to Armish MAAG to sign in and meet the local officials. Colonel St. John met another West Point classmate, Col. Alfred DuMoulen, chief of staff Armish MAAG. We spent the day discussing the project with various staff sections.

After dinner at Captain South's house, which is located about nine miles from Teheran and two miles from the Shah's summer palace, we went up on a high hill to a triangulation station where an Iranian triangulation team supervised by Lt. Robert J. Hohne, 30th Engineer Group, was engaged in a first order triangulation by reading lights spotted on distant hills.

Here we met Iranian General Mostafa Notash, Chief Geographic Division of the Iranian Army, and Col. Hossein Ghodssi, Chief Photogrammetric Section. These men visited the 30th Engineer Group last October.

The five officers and 21 enlisted men working here left the Group last July. In addition to their technical surveys, they are training Iranian Army officers, NCO's and civilian technicians in U. S. Geodetic methods.

The men found Iran to be a country of contrasts — extremely hot in the summer and bitterly cold in the winter, vast desolation and arid wastes, mountains and deserts and a land of the old, yet a land of the new.

Since there are no U. S. Army facilities such as housing, mess facilities or PX's, all of the personnel live off of the local economy.

For recreation the men hunt, sightsee, study or read. Many of the personnel have written to USAFI for correspondence courses to complete during their free time. At present the detachment works six days a week with Fridays off. This is because the men work with Iranian personnel, who are mainly of the Moslem faith and observe Friday the same as we do Sunday. (Wallace)

Iranian Life for both natives and 30th Engineer Group personnel stationed there differs somewhat from U. S. living. At top is photo of young Iranians who follow survey parties. The two boys on the left are wearing pajamas, common daily attire for men and boys. Second photo shows Sp3 John C. Moffatt supervising and checking the work of an Iranian officer. A home is pictured in the background; since the party happens to be working along the railroad line, the house can be taken with them on the job. Bottom photo shows Sfc. George W. Frobert and Specialist Moffatt on the "doorstep" of their home, a rented railroad car. The home moves with the men as long as they stay near the railroad. Sergeant Frobert is holding the party's mascot. Bottom right is an unhappy elderly Iranian who is trying to smile for the photographer.

New Bill Would Forgive Doctors For Overpay

Army, Air Force and Navy Reserve doctors who were overpaid while training at non-federal hospitals may have overpayments forgiven, according to a Defense-sponsored bill introduced by Rep. Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.). The measure will be considered by the House Judiciary Committee.

The doctors concerned completed their residence in civilian hospitals after joining the service. Those affected were in training before 1 July, 1954.

Seventy Army Reserve officers would be affected by the bill. Their overpayments total $20,860.21.

New Officers, WOs Authorized Wear Of Army Green

Officers and warrant officers entering on first extended tours or six months active duty for training now are authorized to wear the Army Green Uniform.

Since the Army Green will be the mandatory winter uniform for men in these ranks after 1 October, the early change for newly commissioned officers was authorized to save them the expense of buying uniforms which will be obsolete soon.

Commissioned and warrant officers will wear the Army Green cap, black necktie and shade 46 poplin shirt with the summer uniform this year. The change will be made on 1 May or the date established locally for the beginning of the 1957 summer uniform season.

Enlisted personnel off duty may wear the Army Green accessories with summer uniforms on an optional basis. The adoption of summer accessories for enlisted men will be announced when Army Green uniforms are issued to enlistees after 1 October.

Army Aircraft To Fly Atlantic During Spring

Washington (ANS) — The Army has announced that it plans to flight-deliver five L-23D Command type aircraft to Europe this Spring. The flight will be the first trans-oceanic hop in the 15-year-old history of the Army Aviation Program.

The Army Aviation Program was first approved for Field Artillery in 1942, and was entirely separate from the then existent Army Air Corps.

Present plans call for Army aviators from Headquarters, U. S. Army, Europe, to pick up the new aircraft at the Beech Aircraft Corporation plant in Wichita, Kansas, and fly them to Europe.

Army Aviation officials expect the feat to establish a long range flight-delivery capability. In addition to permitting rapid delivery of aircraft in flyable condition, the trans-Atlantic flight will save the cost of disassembly, crating and reassembly, as well as shipping space on surface transportation.

According to the Army's schedule, two of the twin engine aircraft will make the trans-oceanic flight in May and the remaining three will be delivered in June.

First Plane Specs

In 1907 the Signal Corps issued specifications and called for bids for an airplane that would fly for one hour, carry two passengers and make 40 m.p.h.

Retreat House Offer Spiritual Haven For All

With the Lenten season and its religious significance at hand, Catholics are reminded of two spiritual Retreat Houses where they can renew spiritual convictions through prayer and meditation. The Protestant chaplain is preparing a list of similar religious havens to be published next week.

Chap. Robert J. Plocki recommends El Retiro, San Inigo, a Jesuit Retreat House in Los Altos, for Roman Catholics or for those of no particular religious conviction. Retreats for men only begin every Thursday evening, closing on Sunday evening after dinner which is served at 1900 hours.

Reservations at El Retiro may be secured by telephoning Father O'Mara at WHitecliff 8-4491. The street address is 662 University Ave.; the mailing address is P.O. Box 128, Los Altos, Calif.

For women the chaplain suggests Vallombrosa in Menlo Park, Calif. Reservations for Vallombrosa can be arranged by telephoning the Very Reverend John M. Lally, DAvenport 3-7418. The street address is 250 Oak Grove Ave., Menlo Park, Calif.

The women's Retreat services begin each Friday, closing on Sunday evening after dinner. If it is not possible to arrive in time for opening ceremonies, individuals may report in at the earliest possible time and still have their reservations hold for the remaining program.

Religious facilities and accommodations at both Retreat Houses are presented without cost, but spiritual offering toward maintenance of either institution may be made at the discretion of the Retreatant.

Special three-day passes for Catholic and Protestants attending the Lenten Retreats anywhere in this area may be secured through section chiefs and company commanders.

All-Star Cast for the Youth Variety Show is made up of Presidio teenagers. The second and third performances will be presented today and tomorrow at 2000 hours at the Fort Scott Theater. The musical revue is built around a "Teens in the 20's" theme and is directed by Lt. Col. Thomas E. Baker, LAH.

Teenage Hit Musical Due Final Performance

A musical flashback of "Teens in the 20's," featuring an all-teenage cast, will be staged for the second time at 2000 hours today in the Fort Scott Theater. The final performance will be given tomorrow night at the same place.

Proceeds from the show will be donated to Presidio Youth Activities. Tickets are 90 cents.

A chorus line, specialty acts and skits are included in the revue. The local Rockettes open the variety show with "Twas Not So Long Ago" and present a spectacular finale, "The Marathon Dancers." The nine dancers also appear in two other numbers.

Silent movies, radio and quiz kids are the subjects of three skits scattered throughout the show. The Varsity Drag, College Daze and Irving Berlin songs are also included in the evening of entertainment.

Post Girl Scouts Have Openings For All Ages

Sixth Army Finalists Face Judgment Today

Eight musical groups including two from the Presidio have been entered in the Sixth U.S. Army finals of the recorded all-Army Entertainment contest. Tapes will be judged at 0900 hours today in the Music Room of the Presidio Service Club.

Other installations competing are Fort Lewis with four entrants and Fort Ord with two entrants. Camp Hanford, Wash., and Fort Huachuca, Ariz., are also expected to send tapes cut by their competitors. Entrants judged the best today will be sent via tape recording to the Department of the Army by 1 April.

Both musical groups entered by the Presidio are from the 30th Engineer Group. Sgt. Orville E. Childers, Sp3 Byron H. Brater, Sp3 Roderick F. Pratt and Sp3 Comenick Nofio compose a barber shop quartet. A spiritual or rhythm and blues group is made up of Pvt. Tommie Hawkins, Pfc. Robert Foster, Pvt. Donald Worley and Sp3 Enoch Green.

The Army Language School Chorus from the Presidio of Monterey is one of Fort Ord's entrants. The chorus won first place in the all-Army finals last year. The Red Diamond chorus, composed of men in Fort Ord's Fifth Division, is also entered.

Fort Lewis' entrants include a Post chorus, the Fort Lewis Rainier Chorus, a barber shop quartet, a spiritual or rhythm and blues group, and a country and western group.

Judging the Sixth Army finals are Miss Edna Fisher, San Francisco music teacher; Prof. Harold Hollingsworth, choral director at San Francisco State College; and CWO Louis Ferraro, Sixth Army Band Director. Mr. Albert E. Lambert, Sixth Army Special Services, is handling the contest details.

Miss Thompson discusses with a representative group of service wives the importance of their being recognized overseas as people who are freedom-loving, generous, strong and peaceable. It is a warm and stimulating discussion bearing an important message for all Americans.

Without a weapons carrier, the men move out, burdened with their gear and extra ammunition. Pigeon Fanciers Get Army Birds Pigeon fanciers will have to make a quick trip to Fort Monmouth, N. J., to get in on the sale of the last Army pigeons, 23 March. The sale will be conducted from 0800 hours on a cash basis, first-come, first-served.

About a thousand birds will be on sale at the Signal Corps Pigeon Breeding and Training Center at Fort Monmouth. The birds are $5 a pair, one pair minimum and ten pair maximum, per customer.

Fifteen war hero pigeons of World War II fame will not be sold. These combat veterans will be donated to various zoos and institutions throughout the United States.

Pigeons were first used by the Army in the Dakota Territory in 1878. Employment of pigeons reached a peak in World War II when more than 56,000 birds were used.

First Banded Bird

The earliest record of a banded bird is that of a heron captured in Germany in 1710. The metal bands on its leg had been placed there in Turkey several years before.

GOLF — Color deficient duffers as well as dyed-in-the-wool shotmakers will be able to shave several strokes off their games if the traditional red-flag hole markers are changed to yellow, according to a recently completed study by the California Optometric Association and the Department of Fish and Game. Their findings indicated that at least eight per cent of the male population is deficient in color perception, although many are unaware of the fact. The color tests were conducted mainly with hunting in mind but the results which indicated yellow as safest are finding widespread applications in other activities. Unhappy thought—advertising men, PR men and all color media buyers, always alert to any major study trends, may begin demanding everything in yellow and black in order to reach the eight per cent they've been missing. Could be we will be peering at a black and white world through yellow-tinted glasses, or worse yet, using yellow newsprint for our publications.

AAA Sports Trophy Won By Seattle's 26th

The first annual 6th Antiaircraft Regional Commander's Sports Participation Trophy will be presented to Seattle's 26th Antiaircraft Artillery Group in ceremonies 21 March.

The trophy, covering the period July through December, 1956, is given on the basis of the number of teams and individual players participating in organized competitive sports, plus how well they finished in tournament play.

The Seattle Group rolled up a total of 70 points, compared to 58 for the Hanford, Washington, defense area, 47 for the Los Angeles defense area and 45 for San Francisco.

A defense area winning the trophy for three successive six-month periods gains the award permanently. Otherwise, the trophy rotates from winner to winner each six months.

Presentation of the award will be made by Colonel Arthur Roth, Deputy Commander of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command, during the banquet honoring teams in the command's basketball tournament. The banquet is scheduled at the Letterman Officers' Club at the Presidio of San Francisco at 1930 hours on Thursday, 21 March.

Internationally Known high-jumper Ernie Shelton goes over the bar in his "Western Roll" style. Shelton has cleared the bar at 6'11¼" in competition. In the lower picture, Shelton is shown working at the drawing table, his duty assignment being an illustrator for the California Military District. Ernie received a B.A. in Design from the University of Southern California and is quite pleased with his Army assignment.

Presidio Boasts One Of World's Foremost Track Men, Shelton

The world's number one high-jumper in 1954 and 1955, Ernie Shelton, has been assigned to the California Military District at the Presidio. Shelton was assigned to CMD as an illustrator upon completion of his basic training at Ft. Ord, California.

Shelton was considered the leading contender for the United States representative in the high jump at the 1956 Olympics in Australia, but failed to qualify in the Olympic tryouts. Shelton said that he realized that something was wrong with his jumping that day but didn't discover until later that he had a pulled muscle in his thigh.

The Olympic tryouts were also the scene of the first jump to hit the seven-foot mark when Charley Dumas, Compton College, hit 7 feet ¼ inch to set the new world mark.

The first experience with track events and high jumping that Shelton had was accompanying his older brother, when the latter was training in high school. Ernie's brother, Warren Shelton, is enrolled at the University of Southern California at present after completing two years' service with the United States Army. Ernie attended George Washington High School in Los Angeles where he began to draw recognition to his jumping prowess by topping the bar at 6'5" on five different occasions.

From high school, Shelton went to Valley Junior College, Van Nuys, California, for one year. During that year, he increased his jumping height from 6'5" to 6'10". His record for the year earned him an invitation to join an AAU tour to the Scandinavian countries where he posted the 6'10" mark at Turku, Finland.

The following year Shelton enrolled in the University of Southern California. That year he won the National Collegiate Championship at Ann Arbor, Michigan; the National AAU, St. Louis, Missouri, and the National Indoor Meet at Madison, Wisconsin. The 1954 season saw Shelton hit the 6'11⅛" mark to establish a new high mark and earn the world's number one spot in high jumping. He topped the 6'10" mark ten times during '54 competition.

Shelton racked up an even more outstanding record the next year when he captured the Pan-American Games, National Collegiate Meet, National AAU, and National Indoor Championships, plus raising his old mark to 6'11¼" to set the National Collegiate record. He hit the 6'11" mark twice that year and topped the bar at 6'10" 23 times during the year to establish himself as the most consistent jumper at the higher levels.

Shelton said the seven-foot mark has been his goal for a long time now. Adequate evidence of this fact can be found in the record number of times he has attempted to clear the bar at this level, a total of 70 attempts.

The 1960 Olympic games aren't too far off, according to Shelton, and he intends to make the team for the games this time. "With the proper training and good competition, I feel that I can make the seven-foot mark or maybe even better," said Shelton. "The seven-foot mark has been my goal for a long time and after I have made that I will be content to hang up my shoes."

Shelton feels that the Army has been good to him; he received a degree from the University of Southern California in design and he has been assigned to CMD as an illustrator. This is the same type of work that Shelton intends to pursue when he returns to civilian life.

Third Army Wins Team Title; Brown Sick, Forfeits Match

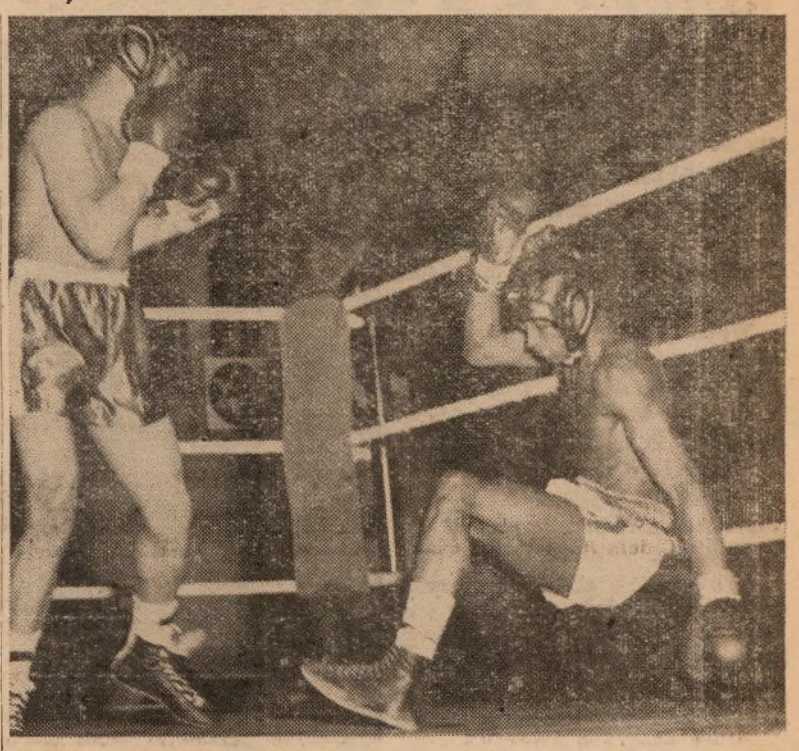
The rugged physical requirements of duty as a day-to-day paratrooper paid off in fistic laurels last week as Third Army boxers slugged their way to a second consecutive team title in the All Army Boxing Tourney at Ft. Campbell, Kentucky. Third Army had previously won team titles in '54 and '56.



Sending five fighters into the finals, all members of the 82nd or 101st Airborne Divisions, the Big White A garnered three titles as flyweight Wee Willie Barnes outpointed Second Army's Sherredale Morgan; Lefty Dave Harris decisioned AFFE's Otis Goodwin for the lightweight title, and bantamweight Jerry Armstrong won a unanimous decision over Fourth Army's Antonio Burciage.

Presidio's David Brown who won his first match, drew two byes and was due to meet Otis Goodwin in the semi-finals, was hit with a virus and forced to default.

The Third Army racked up 25 points in annexing the team title; Fourth Army was second with 19; AFFE third with 13; Sixth and Fifth Army tied for fourth with 8 points each; First Army scored 5 points and USARPAC garnered 4.

Major General Thomas L. Sherburne, commanding general of the 101st and Ft. Campbell, awarded the individual trophies to nine of the ten champions in the ring before the final bout. Col. Reuben Tucker, assistant division commander, made awards to the runners-up.

Trophies for the last bout and team awards were presented at a banquet following the matches.

Going Down is Sixth Army's J. C. Adams following a jolting left hook from Second Army's Sherriedale Morgan. Morgan went on to the finals but dropped a close decision to Third Army's Wee Willie Barnes. However, Morgan will represent the Army in the Interservice Matches since Barnes wasn't able to make the trip.

AAA Tourney To Open Monday At Letterman

Basketball teams representing the finest in the four defense areas of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command will open play Monday morning for the championship of the entire command.

Competition at Letterman Army Hospital Sports Center will bring together teams from Fort Winfield Scott's 740th AAA Missile Battalion, Seattle's 20th AAA Gun Battalion, Fairchild (Washington) Air Force Base's 10th AAA Missile Battalion and a Los Angeles champion still to be determined.

Each team is already a champion, and has the capability of adding two more titles to its list before the basketball competition ends for the year. The winner of the 6th AA Regional Command Tournament gets both the command title and a berth in the All-Army Antiaircraft Command Tournament at Fort Devens, Mass., March 25-April 2.

The 740th moved unbeaten through the four-game competition in the 30th AAA Group Tournament earlier this month to take the championship of the Bay Area's four AAA battalions plus the battalions guarding Travis and Castle Air Force Bases.

Pressed only once in the tournament, the 740th ran its season record to 16-4 by defeating a scrappy 9th AAA Missile Battalion team from Fort Baker 66-51 in the finals.

Private Hubie Brown, former Niagara University player, leads the 740th as both coach and captain. Brown and several other members of the present team played on the Headquarters Battery team which had a 12-4 record before the full battalion team was formed for the 30th AAA Group tourney.

The Fairchild entry defeated the other battalions which make up the Hanford, Washington, defense area in the 5th AAA Group Tournament.

The 20th AAA Gun Battalion came out on top in the 26th AAA Group Tournament which decided the champion of the Seattle defense area.

Los Angeles' 47th AAA Brigade and 108th AAA Group are deciding the titlist in a tournament this week.

The schedule for next week's play calls for two games each day — Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday—with a single game if necessary Thursday. Monday's play will start at 9:10 a. m. after opening ceremonies, with the second game at 2 p. m. Tuesday's and Wednesday's games will be at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. with the Thursday game at 10 a. m.

The double-elimination meet will wind up officially with a Thursday night banquet at the Letterman Officers' Club at which the championship and runner-up trophies will be presented by Colonel Arthur Roth, Deputy Commander of the 6th AA Regional Command.

Bay Area Model Will Affect San Francisco's Future Plan

By Sp5 Richard Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

Army engineers are hard at work over in Sausalito making a crystal ball. But they're making it out of cement instead of crystal. And it's not shaped like a ball, but like a bay, San Francisco Bay.

When it comes to divining powers, however, this project is very like a crystal ball, only better. "The San Francisco Bay Model is likely to have more effect on the future of this area than any other single project," stated Col. John A. Graf, San Francisco District Army Engineer, this week.

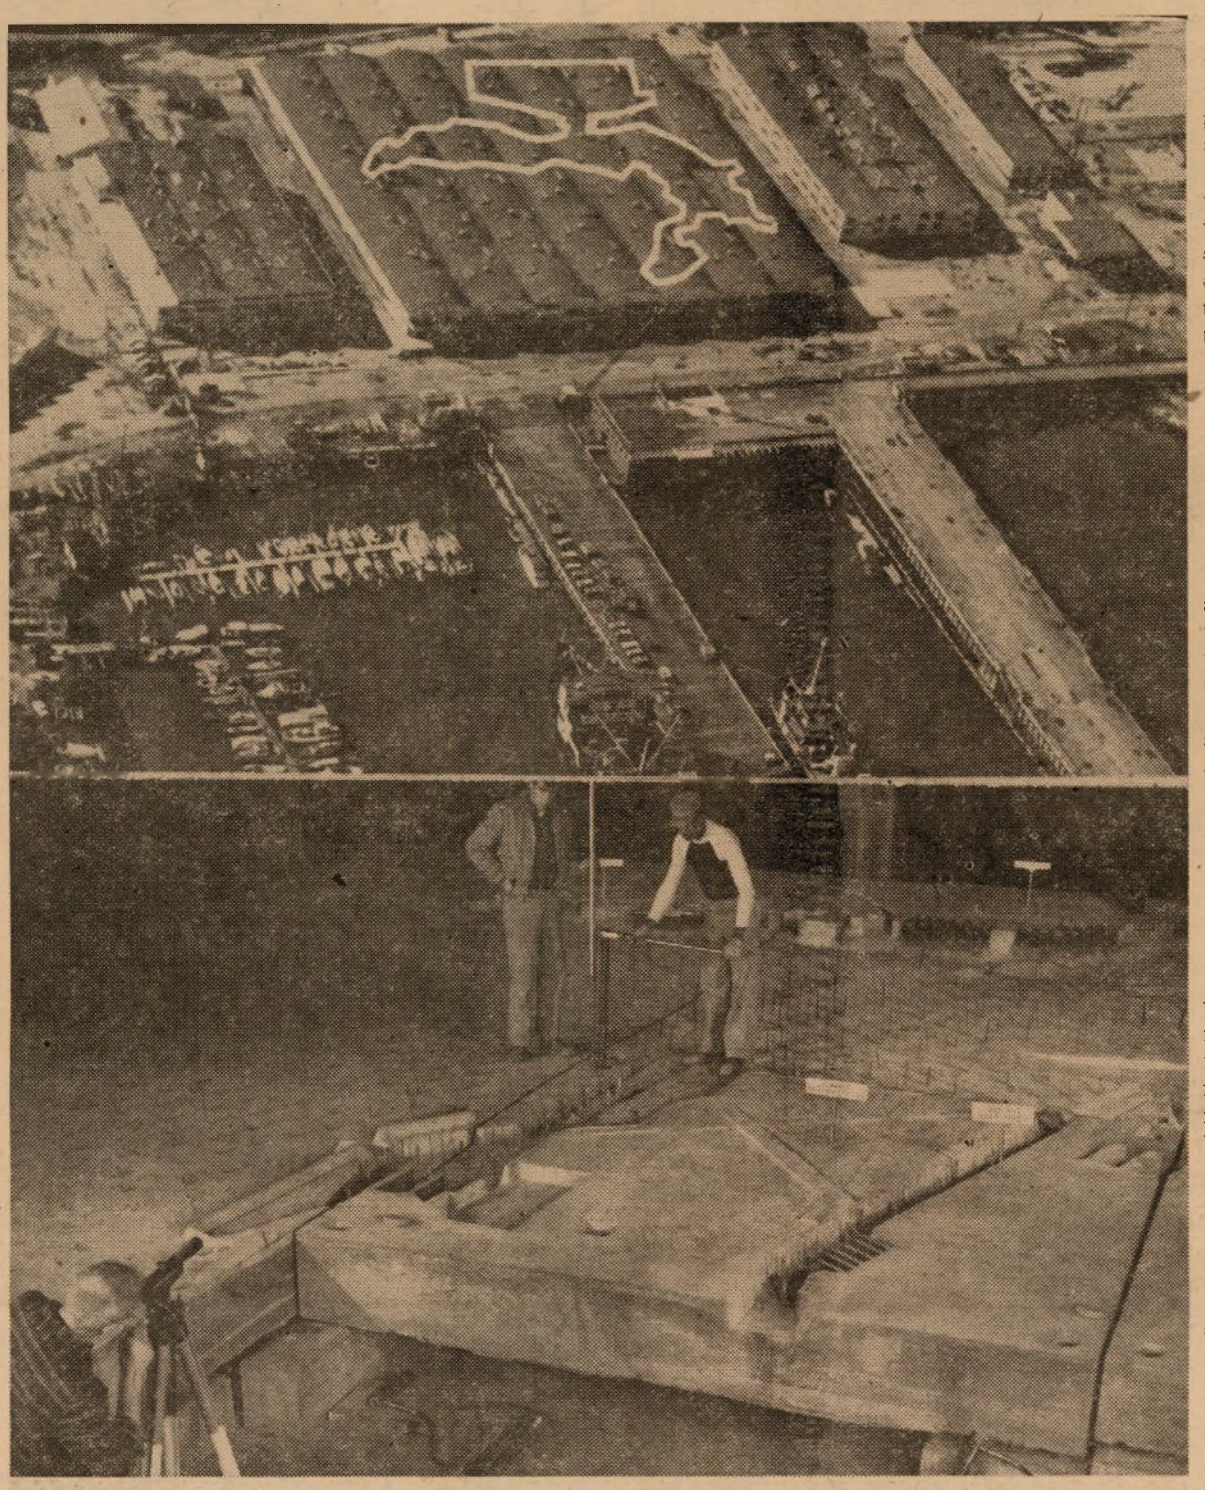
The model's ability to predict the future comes from the fact that various barrier plans, such as the Reber Plan, have been built into the model. This means that once the model is operating identically to the bay, it will be possible to perform million dollar dredging operations by removing a block or two of cement. Huge dams can be simulated by dropping premolded blocks of cement into place.

Barrier plans proposed for the Bay Area range from the most ambitious which would dam off the north and south extensions of the bay and create fresh water lakes to the conservative plans which would only aim at lessening the dredging expenses.

While the acre-size scale model, located in a Sausalito warehouse, will not be completed until the middle of April, already proponents of various barrier plans have expressed extreme interest in the model—each hoping that it will prove his particular plan the best.

"Almost every engineer agrees that eventually some sort of barrier plan will have to be adopted for the Bay Area," said Colonel Graf, who added, "the Army Engineers are completely impartial regarding the plans, we hope only to provide an accurate model for testing them."

Actually it will be next fall before the barrier plans can be tested. First comes the intricate job of making the model act like the bay. This is especially complicated as the horizontal scale of the model is built with one foot equaling 1,000 feet, while in vertical scale one foot equals 100 feet. This makes all the slopes in the bay model 10 times steeper than they actually are in the bay.



"This can all be worked out by means of mathematical formulas," explained Wardell D. Johnston, engineer on the project.

To create the currents and eddies of the bay in the model, hundreds of copper strips have been implanted in the model bay's floor. These will serve to adjust velocity and create currents, tidal flow, etc. Gilsonite, a lightweight bituminous material mined only in Utah which has a similar specific gravity to silt, will be injected into the flow and the current will drift into shoals.

Salt water will be pumped into the model by a main pump in the headbay area and a secondary pump at Chipps Island which will allow proper tidal flow and freshwater inflow at cut-off. Electronic devices in the system will generate tides. On the model 14 minutes will represent the 24-hour tidal changes.

The whole project will cost about $2½ million. Only $300,000 of this amount will go to pay for the model itself. The rest of the money is being spent to record volumes of information on the actual functioning of the bay itself. Currently 24 tide stations are manned about the bay area to record information. In addition during certain normal tide periods the Engineers send out 36 boats to various areas of the bay where 24-hour studies are made on velocity, salinity and samples of sedimentation are taken at various depths.

"Accurate data is vital when it is considered that the studies from this model will literally affect the investment of billions of dollars in this area. The projects involve every phase of life in the Bay Area—commercial, transportation, recreation, water conservation and flood control," said Colonel Graf.

Bay Outline indicated on the roof of the U. S. Army Engineer warehouse (top picture) shows the area that the Comprehensive Model of San Francisco Bay will occupy upon completion sometime in April. The scale model, being built by the San Francisco District, U. S. Army Engineer Corps, will occupy an acre and is being built on leveling screws which will compensate the model for any settling of the warehouse foundation. The slab going into place (lower picture) includes Alameda Naval Air Station and part of the Oakland Inner Harbor.

Army Still Leads Other Services In Manpower

The combined Armed Forces strength at the end of 1956 was 2,780,177, a decrease of 17,577 from 30 November, 1956.

According to Defense Department estimates, inductions and re-enlistments in December totaled 58,251, a drop of 7,736 from the previous month.

The Army continued to lead the other services in strength with 992,290. Other services included Air Force, 915,000; Navy, 672,632; and Marine Corps, 200,255.

Regimental System Will Save Units

Washington (ANS) — Under a newly adopted Combat Arms Regimental System, the Army hopes to preserve the traditions of its historic "regiments of the line."

Changeover to the new system will be gradual and geared to conversion to the Army's pentomic concept. Under the plan, every combat unit will ultimately bear the flag of one of the Army's historic regiments.

Infantry, artillery, cavalry, and armor units in the pentomic Army will soon bear the designations of distinguished regiments whose colors have been carried into battle by generations of American soldiers.

The Army reported that continuation of the regiments which distinguished themselves at Yorktown, Gettysburg, San Juan Hill, Chateau Thierry, Normandy, and the Pusan Bridgehead will give the soldier of today a link with the past and a stake in the future.

Institutional rather than tactical, each "parent regiment" will field a variable number of combat units, contingent upon the size of the Army at any one time.

Under the new system the battalions of old Artillery regiments may be firing guided missiles and the squadrons of the old Cavalry regiments could be reconnoitering in airplanes rather than on horseback.

Army Band Due European Tour In May

The U.S. Army Field Band will leave 8 May on a 10-week goodwill concert tour of 12 nations including Austria.

Landing at Bremerhaven, Germany, about 16 May, the band is scheduled to appear in 45 cities in England, Scotland, France, Spain, Portugal, Monaco, Italy, Germany, Luxembourg, Belgium, the Netherlands and Austria.

Wherever possible, the bandsmen will play before both local and military audiences. The band made a similar tour of Europe in 1952; however, this will be the first visit to Portugal, Spain and Italy.

Maj. Chester E. Whiting, who commands and conducts the band, formed the aggregation from combat infantrymen-musicians in 1946. He is one of 23 original bandsmen still with the organization.

New "Data Brain" Will Speed Supply

The long wait between ordering and receiving supplies will soon be included in "remember when" conversations because of a new electronic data processing network, designed to speed up the flow of supplies and to keep stockpiling to a minimum.

Operated by the Signal Corps and the Long Lines Department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the network is the outgrowth of the "fast-communication" concept of Project MASS (Modern Army Supply System).

The system named CONUS-DTNS (no pronunciation included) is short for Continental United States-Data Transceiver Switching Network.

Quartermaster, Ordnance, Signal and Overseas Supply Agency in New York and San Francisco will be the first to use the new system. The network is expected to cut the time needed for processing supply requisitions by 30 to 40 days. Requisitions which took two weeks will be handled in days and those taking days will be trimmed to hours.

Savings are expected through greater over-all efficiency and reduction of the time required to process and transmit information, requests, orders and reports. Further savings will result from the reduction of materials in supply pipelines and amount of materials stocked in depots.

Telephone lines will connect the network's switching centers in Philadelphia, Atlanta, Chicago, Kansas City and Oakland. Thirty-three military installations are interconnected to these centers. Data transceivers of the International Business Machines Corporation are used to exchange information on punched cards between all network points. Cards punched at one end of a circuit can be duplicated rapidly at the other end by using communications lines. An estimated million such transactions can be handled daily.

In the future the system will be used to process personnel assignments in the Zone of Interior and overseas. About 30 days will be saved in the time needed for handling personnel transfers. About a million military personnel will be administered by this system. Later an additional half million civilian personnel may be similarly processed.

Studies are also under way to determine how CONUS-DTSN can be utilized to ease the transition from peace to war in an emergency.

ARMY POWER—KEY TO PEACE

The Star Presidian

Vol. 5, No. 41 PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA Friday 22 March, 1957

A Pretty Girl and a $100 Savings Bond are ingredients guaranteed to produce a smile on any general officer's face, but especially when the general is the Chief of Army Finance, Major General Harry Crandall. The general is here to launch the annual Sixth U.S. Army and Presidio Savings Bond Campaign. The pretty girl is Emily Shew of the Post Comptroller Section.

Army Finance Chief Will Aid Bond Drive

Major General Harry Crandall, Chief of Army Finance, will arrive here today from Washington, D. C., to help launch the 1957 Savings Bond Campaign in the Sixth U.S. Army and Presidio area. The campaign will start Monday and run through 5 April.

General Crandall, who visited here last year during the drive, will be accompanied by Mr. Gideon A. Cox, National Sales Representative, Savings Bond Division of the Treasury Department, and Capt. George Shepard, Savings Bond Promotion Office, Department of the Army. The general will meet with Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young on Monday.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Post Commander, will address the Minute Men canvassers at the kickoff meeting at 1100 hours today at the Post Theater.

In an open letter to commanders of installations and activities in the Sixth Army area, General Young stressed the importance of the annual campaign and called for "positive . . . measures . . . for continuous support of this program throughout the year." The Army Commander cited "constantly changing personnel" and the "tendency . . . for . . . participation to decline subsequent to the termination of the active drive" as key negative factors.

At the Presidio and sub-posts, Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Post Commander, has urged unit and section chiefs to give detailed, personal attention to the campaign. "Your criteria for a successful drive should be individual participation by every military or civilian member of your organization."

When the drive is completed, individual canvassers who secure at least 20 subscriptions will receive citations from the Treasury Department. The top canvasser will receive special recognition and each section that achieves the 65 per cent participation goal will also receive a citation.

New Film On EnemyPropaganda At Army Library

The film, entitled "Defense Against Enemy Propaganda," shows what enemy propaganda really is, what it aims to accomplish, how it is disseminated and how it may be combatted.

Since the film is cleared for public showing, use in both military and civilian audiences is encouraged.

How About You?

A blood crisis at Letterman Army Hospital was reported yesterday by Maj. Frank H. Smiley of the Blood Transfusion Section. The hospital is down to two pints of Type "O" positive, the most common type of blood. The major added that the hospital is also low in other types. Donors are requested to contact Major Smiley at Ext. 3083 or go to the hospital laboratory.

Army Plans EM Test For Proficiency Status

Washington (AFPS)—The Army soon will launch a testing program for determining individual MOS proficiency in enlisted grades, according to a recent directive.

The proficiency tests, the results of which will be employed in making promotions, reductions, reclassifications, and selections for special training, will be mandatory in some situations, voluntary in others, depending upon their purpose.

Actual job performance may be required in addition to the familiar "pencil - and - paper" items in certain tests. The MOS qualifications of NCOs also will include assessment of leadership ability.

The date and aim of a scheduled test will be announced and a study guide of the occupational area the examination covers will be distributed several months in advance, the Army said.

In making final determination of grade or ability to do a job, the directive says, other factors will be considered. These include evaluation by commanders, seniority, and possibly, education and amount of training.

AMA Special Membership Set For Doctors

Special service memberships in the American Medical Association have been opened to both regular and extended active duty reserve officers of the Armed Forces by an amendment to the AMA by-laws.

Service members are not required to pay dues and do not receive AMA publications, except by subscription. Other membership rights and privileges are the same.

Service membership are continued as long as the holder is on active duty and may be continued after retirement if the doctor does not engage in active practice.

CONARC Commander General Willard G. Wyman will arrive at the Presidio today by plane from Fort Ord where he has been inspecting the Combat Development Experimentation Center. General Wyman, who is a former Sixth Army Commander, will be greeted by an Honor Guard Ceremony on Monday and then briefed by Sixth Army Commander Lt. Gen. Robert Young.

Civilian Management Confab Set For Fairmont In April

The Ninth Federal Personnel Management Conference, which will be held at the Fairmont Hotel, 4-5 April, will have a theme of "Personnel Frontiers in Federal Management."

Details on the program and reservations may be obtained from Mrs. Vasconcellos of the Presidio Civilian Personnel Division, Ext. 2383. More than 1200 persons were in attendance at the last conference sponsored by the Federal Personnel Council and cooperating asspeiates.

A symposium on the morning of 4 April will deal with the conference theme, "Personnel Frontiers For Federal Management." William A. Foley, director of the 12th U.S. Civil Service Region, will moderate the discussion.

In the afternoon three simultaneous sessions will deal with the following topics: Supervision and Management, "Supervisor or Superman"; Recruitment and Selection, "Competition or Competence"; and Communications, "Measuring Your C. Q."

An address by Ralph S. Roberts, administrative assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture, is the first event scheduled for the 5 April program. Following this will come an address by Bernard Rosen, director of the Civil Service Incentive Awards Office, who will discuss "Stretching the Taxpayer's Dollar."

Three simultaneous sessions will complete the morning program. They will concern these topics: Executive Development, "The Desk-to-Desk Method vs. the Shoe Leather Approach"; Employee Relations, "Employee Participation—An Emerging Principle?"; The Federal Pay, "Stricture or Structure."

A final address on Human Factors in Automation and a social hour will complete the conference.

Indian River Reset

Exercise Indian River, the combined Army-Air Force maneuver scheduled for the last two weeks in May at Yakima Firing Center, Washington, has been rescheduled for sometime between September and November. Some 19,000 troops of the 4th Infantry Division and other Ft. Lewis units are slated to participate.

First Soldier Sets Scope For Progress

Washington (ANS)—Many major changes in the Army's organization, tactics and weapons are expected during the next fiscal year, according to Chief of Staff, General Maxwell D. Taylor.

In a statement before the Senate Armed Services Committee here recently, General Taylor summed up the progress he expected of the Army during FY 1957 as follows:

"The Army will enhance its combat readiness and hence its deterrent capability by the reorganization of its divisions, by the introduction of atomic support commands, and by the improved readiness of the Army Strategic Reserve."

"It will continue the modernization of its equipment, particularly in the missile field.

"Its reserve forces should improve in quality through the further implementation of the Reserve Forces Act and related actions."

A few minutes earlier, The Chief of Staff had told the Committee that the first and perhaps most important change will be a major reorganization of the Army's main combat forces—the infantry, airborne, and (to a lesser extent) the armored divisions.

"The purpose of the reorganization," he said, "is to improve our ability to fight effectively under conditions of atomic warfare without loss of capability to conduct so-called conventional warfare."

General Taylor also told the committee that the change in weapons would occasion a major shift to surface-to-surface and surface-to-air missiles, both with warheads of great destructive capacity.

AF Official Sees Pilotless Future

★ ★ ★

Washington (AFPS) — A high Air Force official predicts manned combat planes may become obsolete.

Addressing a recent meeting of the Strategic Industries Assn. here, Asst. Air Force Secretary Dudley C. Sharp said:

"We can readily see that, except for certain types of missions the manned combat aircraft may become technically obsolete in the future. However, we cannot predict the exact time . . . this will happen."

The secretary said further that "the regime of the manned bomber will . . . give way when we achieve the truly reliable intercontinental ballistic missile."

"By the 1960s," he noted, "pilotless weapon systems may well take half of our procurement budget."

Jimmy - - Near Statistic!

Tuesday eight-year-old Jimmy was playing with his friends between Quarters 1294 and 1295 at Fort Scott. Suddenly he darted in front of two parked cars into a Motor Pool bus. The bus swerved, Jimmy hit the side and was thrown in front of the parked cars. He suffered multiple abrasions and bruises and was rushed to the Letterman Army Hospital receiving ward.

Jimmy, son of Captain and Mrs. Milton S. Saunders, was lucky. Will the next impetuous child be as fortunate?

Children playing near the quarters and congregating before and after church and school always present a problem, according to a Post Transportation spokesman. Military Police try to maintain order, but groups of excited children are hard to manage.

The children also have devised a dangerous game—rapping on stopped and slow-moving buses. A little girl playing this game recently was killed in Stockton. The game is played frequently at the Presidio.

It takes an accident to bring about action. The action needed in these situations must be taken by parents. If Jimmy and his friends had been utilizing the playground just 100 yards from the accident, he would not have made the headlines.

But using the playgrounds is not enough. Children are taught some safety rules at school, but they must be taught even more at home. Safety around buses and streets near home is a lesson better learned through repetition and punishment, than through injuries and possible death.

Many Items Deductible On Federal Tax Return

(This is the fourth and fifth of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. The articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants.)

If you decide to itemize your income tax return, here are some deductions you should be careful not to overlook.

Interest paid on loans is deductible. This includes mortgages, automobile, appliance, home improvement or personal loans you may have. The part of "carrying charges" representing interest on installment purchases is deductible. Evidence such as a statement from the seller should be obtained to show the amount of interest you paid during the year.

Most taxes, other than federal taxes, are deductible. These include state and local real estate, personal property, income, retail sales, poll taxes, and, in all but a few states, gasoline taxes. You can also deduct auto licenses and registration fees, but not dog or hunting licenses.

Another type of deduction you can take if you itemize is your contributions to any "religious, charitable, educational, scientific or literary" organizations.

These contributions are deductible up to 20 per cent of your income, and up to 30 per cent if at least 10 per cent of your income was paid as gifts to religious organizations, schools or hospitals.

Gifts of property, also can be deducted at their fair market value as of the time they were donated. Suppose, for example, you contributed to your church a share of stock which had doubled in value while you had it.

You can deduct, as a contribution, the full value of the stock at the time of the gift, even though you only paid half that much for it. At the same time you escape paying the tax on the capital gain which would have been realized if you had sold the stock instead of contributing it.

An individual is not permitted to deduct a contribution which he has pledged but not paid during the tax year. Contributions of services are not deductible, and blood donations are construed as a service.

All transportation expenses incurred in connection with your job or duty may be deducted if they were not reimbursed. These include fares, automobile expenses, and (if in connection with over-night travel) meals and lodging.

The expense of commuting between home and place of work is not deductible at all.

If you had certain expenses connected with your employment (other than travel or reimbursed expenses) you can claim them as miscellaneous deductions. Examples would be uniforms and insignia.

Other miscellaneous deductions include the fee for preparation of your tax return, some alimony and a share of interest and real estate taxes paid by a cooperative apartment corporation of which you are a tenant stockholder.

The instruction book which comes with your tax form gives further information. Help is also available by telephone or at offices of the Internal Revenue Service. You are urged to consult a properly qualified advisor if you decide to seek outside help.

Many people overpay taxes because they cheat themselves on personal exemptions.

Here is how to count your exemptions (each one takes $600 off your taxable income):

One exemption for yourself, two if you are 65 or over. The same applies to your husband or wife.

If your husband or wife died during 1956 you can still file a joint return claiming the exemptions to which the deceased would have been entitled.

One exemption can be taken for each person who fits the definition of a dependent.

A dependent must:

- Have less than $600 gross income for 1956 (except that this does not apply to your child if he is under 19 or is a full-time student).
- Have received more than half of his support from you, unless you file a multiple support agreement (see below).
- Not file a joint return.
- Be either a citizen of the U.S. or a resident of the U.S., Canada, Mexico, Canal Zone, Panama and in some cases, a serviceman's child living in the Philippines.
- Live with you (absence while attending school does not interfere) or be a close relative as defined in the instruction book.

If you shared with others in the support of a dependent, but none of you provided more than half the support, you may still be able to arrange for one of the group to have the $600 exemption. You might agree, for example, to take turns in having the exemption from year to year.

The one who claims the exemption must have contributed more than 10 per cent of the support, and must be entitled to claim the dependent except for the requirement of providing more than half support.

In order for one of the group to have the exemption all other members of the group who contributed more than 10 per cent must sign declarations that they will not claim the dependent. The Internal Revenue Service provides Form 2120 (multiple support agreement) for this purpose.

There is a deduction of as much as $600 for care of children under 12 while the breadwinner works. This child-care deduction is available to mothers, widowers, divorced and legally separated persons, for expenses paid to someone other than a dependent for the care of a son, daughter, stepson or stepdaughter under the age limit.

This regulation also applies to any dependent of any age who is mentally or physically incapacitated.

The instruction book which comes with your tax form gives further information. Help is also available by telephone or at offices of the Internal Revenue Service. You are urged to consult a properly qualified advisor if you decide to seek outside help.

Sgts Win High Awards For 'Mercy' Assist

Two Presidio Master Sergeants this week received certificates of achievement citing them for "Exceptional performance of duty in support of 'Operation Mercy.'"

Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist presented M/Sgt. Frank S. Datner and M/Sgt. Peter Binder, both of Hq. Co., USA Garrison, the certificates signed by Brig. Gen. Sidney C. Wooten, Commander of Kilmer Reception Center, who praised the men for their work as interpreters during the great influx of refugees at that camp.

The certificates contained the inscription "Isten Hozta Amerikaba" which had also been written above the entrance to Camp Kilmer. It means "Welcome to America."

The two master sergeants were at Camp Kilmer from the middle of December to the first part of March. During this time more than 25,000 refugees were received and processed.

The Wacs of Company D, U.S. Army Garrison, marched home again this week with the formal parade laurels. Too frequent an event to be newsworthy any more, the event is of special significance this time. It marks the phase-out of Presidio service for the WAC Company commander, Lieutenant Dorothy L. Crook, who has led her enlisted women in all formal parades since she arrived for duty here nearly a year go.

New Study Would Provide Officers In Grade Pay Boost

(This is the final article in a three-part series explaining the Cordiner Committee's recommendations on the military pay schedules. Information is taken from Department of the Army news releases, Armed Forces Press Service and other official bulletins.)

Officers up to the rank of general would receive in-grade pay boosts according to their responsibilities and skills under the proposed change in military pay schedules drawn up by the Cordiner Committee. Supplementary active duty pay has been recommended for all officers.

In both cases the additional pay would not be included in computing retirement benefits. Officers would receive the increased paycheck only while on active duty.

The proposed legislation now under consideration by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson will be submitted to the Bureau of the Budget and the White House this month.

According to the plan generals, who are not recommended to receive in-grade boosts, will receive pay supplements of $150 to $300 depending upon their grade. Base pays for generals range from $1100 to $1700.

Colonels would begin at $850 with an active duty supplement of $100. Sixty-five dollar increases will be added at the completion of two and four years of service. A base pay of $660 with a $50 supplement will be paid lieutenant colonels. An additional $40 will be paid after two years and two $45 increases are planned after four and six-year periods.

Starting pay for a major would be $530 with an increase of $30 after two years and additional boosts of $35 at the end of the fourth and sixth years. Captains would start at $410 and receive increases every year for six years. The successive steps are $431, $444, $457, $470, $485 and $500.

First lieutenants would start at $335 and would receive $10 raises at the end of each year for four years. A second lieutenant's base pay would be $222 and would increase to $244 after one year and $268 at the end of the second year.

The committee also supports medical incentive pay to attract and retain medical and dental officers. This special pay would be realigned to conform with the new basic pay system.

Popular Lady

For the last three years Phyllis has been a member of Stars and Bars, a national welfare and social organization that concentrates its efforts on service personnel.

The 75 members of the local chapter break up into small groups to carry out the welfare phase of their purpose. Phyllis' group visits enlisted wards at Letterman Army Hospital every other Tuesday. From the fun standpoint, the girls play hostess every Saturday to officers on active duty with the Armed Forces. The socials are held from 1630 to 1930 hours in the Princess Room of the Bellevue Hotel.

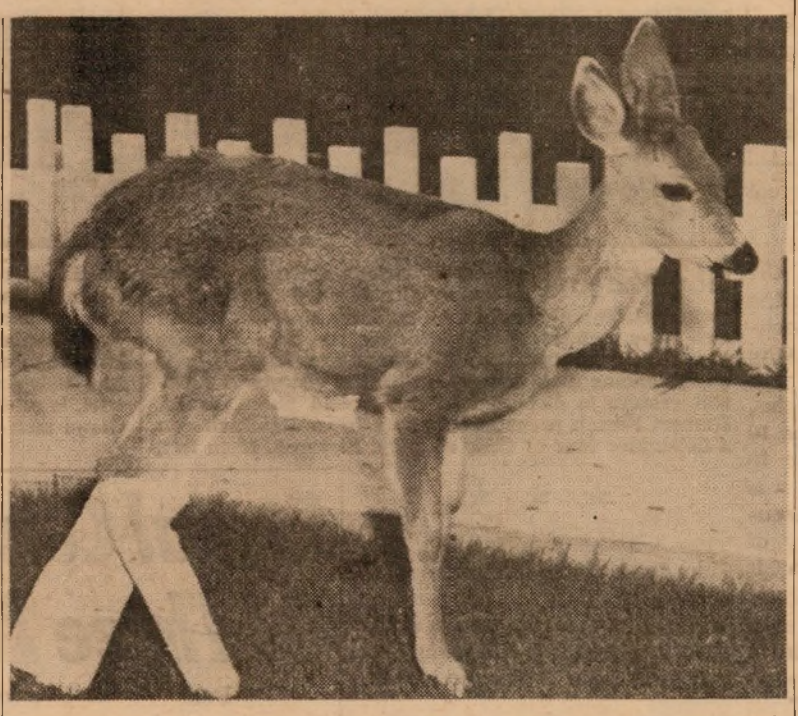
Quick Action By Army Vet Saves Life Of AAA Battery's Deer Mascot

A hobby shop work bench substituted for an operating table, last week, at a remote Army NIKE Guided Missile site near Castro Valley.

A delicate, two-hour operation was performed on Bambi, a one-year-old deer mascot of Battery "A," 441st AAA Missile Battalion.

The deer suffered two torn tendons of his left hind leg and a badly cut tendon on his other hind leg. Something had startled the animal and he leaped through a barracks window.

Lt. Marvin Mitchell, an Oakland Army Terminal veterinarian, was summoned immediately by Captain Thomas B. Dodgen, the battery commander. After the lieutenant administered first aid, Bambi spent the night in the battery orderly room.



The next day Bambi was anesthetized and operated upon by Lt. Mitchell, The torn tendons were sewn and skin from the pet's belly was grafted to the wound to help strengthen the leg. Men of the battery provided assistance during the operation.

Bambi, a coast deer, wandered onto the base grounds about a month ago. Unpenned, the deer sometimes sleeps in the barracks and is free to roam the site.

He feeds on vegetable scraps from the mess hall and grazes on the grassy hillsides and on the battery shrubbery.

No one seems to know what frightened Bambi into leaping through the window. Some of the soldiers speculate that the deer might have been scared by a dog or by one of the men flapping a sheet while making a bed.

The men of the battery, having become attached to the deer and concerned over his condition, filed steadily into the hobby shop to check his state and to visit. By the second night, the still groggy deer had hobbled to his feet and tested the injured leg.

Bandaged Bambi mascot of Battery A, 441st AAA Missile Bn., is recovering from injuries incurred when he leaped through a barracks window after being startled. Lt. Marvin Mitchell, an Oakland Army Terminal veterinarian, treated the mascot for two torn tendons of his left hind leg and a badly cut tendon of his other hind leg.

The battery missilemen, who are making a sweater for Bambi inscribed with Battery "A," 441st AAA Battalion, fed him cereal and water and provided a day and night nursing vigil.

Lt. Mitchell returned the following two days and administered penicillin shots to cut down the chances of infection.

Apparently Bambi will survive —thanks to the quick thinking and action of his devoted friends.

Army Pilot Lauds New Safety Course At USC

Eighteen Army officers and three civilians from all over the United States have completed a two-month Army Aviation Safety Course at the University of Southern California. Col. Frank G. Forrest, Sixth U.S. Army Aviation Officer, attended from the Presidio.

Purpose of the course is to train selected individuals in the scientific approach and techniques of aircraft accident prevention.

Although the course emphasized aeronautical engineering, the class also studied aviation physiology and psychiatry, aircraft accident prevention and techniques of investigation.

"The course was very worthwhile," Colonel Forrest commented. "It opened my eyes to a few things that will be beneficial in my job."

The colonel hopes to create an airtight accident prevention program. His first step will be to work in conjunction with the Sixth Army Safety Director in improving aircraft accident reporting.

"If we can determine the cause factors in aircraft accidents, we can work out better prevention techniques," Colonel Forrest said.

Store Closed

The Army Commissary Store will be closed all day next Friday, 29 March. It will not be possible to make any purchases at the store on this date.

World Travelers Report On 30th Engineer Units On Duty In Middle East

Special to the Star Presidian

Tripoli, Libya—As I have mentioned before, Captain John F. South, Officer in Charge of the Iranian Survey Project, was lauded by everyone we met from Maj. Gen. John F. R. Seitz, Chief of ARMISH-MAAG and General Mostafa Notash, Chief of all mapping, Imperial Iranian Army, down to the Iranian recruit that drives for him. General Notash has recommended Captain South for an Iranian medal.

Captain South's job includes not only accomplishing the survey work required for mapping this rugged country which is the size of the entire Sixth Army area, but also to train Iranian officers in the methods he uses. He is assisted by Lt. William Kelly, the only pilot assigned to the project; Lt. Robert J. Hohne, chief of the triangulation party; Lt. Gary G. Engels, chief of the level party; Lt. Paul G. Paley, chief of the altimetry party; and Mr. William Doxey, AMS civilian geodetic engineer.

General Notash took us to lunch one day at an Iranian restaurant. We ate the national dish of Iran, Tchilow Kabab or rice and meat. Bread is called Lavash in Iran; it looks like a piece of perforated, deflated inner tube rolled. Each piece is about 12 inches wide and 28 inches long.

From Iran we went to Tripoli where we were met by Maj. Ray Nielsen, CO of the 329th Engineer Detachment, and Capt. Frederick Gates. The "Desert Mapping Force" has its headquarters on Wheelus Air Base. Its work will provide control for the first accurate maps ever made in Libya and will provide a missing link in the intercontinental geodetic ties between Europe, Africa and Asia.

The morning after our arrival we watched the launching of the Air Force's "Matador." The 542nd Engineer Company surveyed the launching and target areas for the missiles. After the missile launching, Colonel St. John and I were flown to Gheddahia, about two hours flying time from Wheelus, where Lt. Robley W. Smith and 10 volunteers are clearing paths in mine fields. The field we saw was laid by General Rommel, and Lieutenant Smith gave us a copy of one of Rommel's maps that he is using.

All of the mines are the real thing, and there are all kinds—French, Italian and German—anti-truck and anti-personnel. From the density they have encountered, they estimate that about 200,000 mines are in this one field.

The survey parties spend three weeks in the desert, then one week at Wheelus, where they have opportunities to visit such places as Malta and Greece. Even at Wheelus, however, living is far from plush, as the men live in tents.

The geodetic survey is strengthening the policy of goodwill between Libya and America. Maps which will result from the operation will aid the Libyan Government and be of more value directly to them than to the United States.

They will be used by the Point Four Program in Libya to aid in developing mining and agricultural areas; to speed road construction, railroad building, planning and construction of towns; and to encourage other improvements throughout the Kingdom of Libya.

Travelers Home!

Colonel Lawrence R. St. John, 30th Engineer Group CO, and Lt. Robert Wallace, Assistant Group S3, have completed their tour of 30th Engineer Group outposts and are back in the United States. This is the final article in the series written by Lieut. Wallace as he viewed the different areas and operations.

Saves Time

Civilian employees at the Presidio are asked to discontinue making individual calls to the Civilian Payroll Unit when it concerns leave information.

To avoid delay placed on the unit by such calls, employees must place queries with their supervisors who will in turn certify their Time-Attendance cards and transmit the necessary calls through group method every Friday when the pay records are not in process of being made up.

MEN AT WAR is a story of the front lines in Korea, 1950, when an Infantry platoon has lost all contact with higher headquarters and is obviously being surrounded by the enemy. The only chance for survival lies in regaining a hill to the south which Battalion had been known to be occupying. Without a weapons carrier, the men move out, burdened with their gear and extra ammunition. Harassed by roving enemy patrols, the weary platoon makes its way back to the hill, only to find it in enemy hands. The exhausted men storm the hill and are virtually wiped out themselves in annihilating the enemy.

In THE VINTAGE, Mell Ferrer and John Kerr are cast as two Italian brothers who flee to the south of France after Kerr has accidentally killed a drunken worker for molesting a woman. Their flight takes them to the vineyard where two sisters, although suspecting them to be fugitives, induce the man of the house to hire them for the harvest. The other pickers resent the strangers, but soon accept the brothers. Ferrer arouses the resentment of the fiance of one of the sisters, who informs the police of his suspicions about the brothers. During their questioning by the police, Kerr attempts to break away, and he is shot down. Ferrer remains at the vineyard to start a new life with the younger sister.

THE BIG CAPER introduces a notorious bank-robbing gang, long in hiding, as they come back into action when one of the leaders discovers a favorable setup. After weeks of careful planning, the gang moves in for the kill. During the robbery dissension arises among the gang members; a fight ensues, which disrupts split second timing and leads to the gang's capture.

THE BUCKSKIN LADY shows a new doctor arriving at Bitter Water, a stagecoach stop-over in the Nevada Territory. He begins to change many things in the little settlement, particularly the life of Angela, the Buckskin Lady. Angela and her father, a drink-sodden doctor, are allied to two-gun gamblers, and fleece travelers of their money in crooked gambling games. Falling in love with the young doctor, Angela attempts to end her gambling association, but does not convince the doctor of her good intentions. Discouraged, she returns to the gambler, becomes involved in a holdup in which she is seriously wounded. A posse formed by the young doctor finally catches up with the fugitive pair, shooting the gambler when he tries to fight it out with them.

Sixth Army Band Wins Second In Paddy Parade

Further laurels were added to the Sixth U. S. Army's community relations this week when the garrison's drill team and its band were declared winners in the Saint Patrick's Day parade contest in San Francisco.

Lieutenant Philip Davis led the drill team through its paces in a precision exhibition that brought a mighty volume of applause from civic leaders and their guests on the reviewing stand at City Hall.

The band, in charge of Warrant Officer Louis Ferraro, received a similar ovation. The Presidio musical unit was barely nosed out of first place by the Department of the Pacific Marine Band.

The Presidio this week, marks the 181st anniversary of its founding, when in 1776 a priest and two Spanish officers traveled up the wild finger of land extending from the Monterey peninsula . . . to colonize and secure the seaport for Spain.

About 22 years later . . . in 1898 . . . Elbert Hubbard wrote his own version of the now classic exploit of Colonel Andrew Summers Rowan . . . an Irish officer serving on the Presidio. Rowan was sent to Cuba during the Spanish-American War to bring armistice terms to General Garcia . . . and to seek out information on the military strength of the Spanish Insurgents.

Hubbard's documentary, the accuracy of which is questioned by many historians, is dedicated to Colonel Rowan, who, like a good soldier . . . asked no questions but took the message to Cuba and brought back vital information to the Presidio commander. The author's version is that the message brought back here by Colonel Rowan was far more important that the one carried to Garcia. From the courier's adherence to soldierly code, Hubbard drew a moral for this nation's citizens . . . that they follow Rowan's example by bringing his brand of fidelity and enterprise into all phases of public life.

Colonel Rowan died in San Francisco in 1943. Even though two soldiers buried in San Francisco National Cemetery carry that name, neither grave can be proven as that of the man who carried the message . . . or brought the message . . . from Garcia.

• • •

Have you walked past the eucalyptus tree on the parade ground recently? That's the lone giant planted by a Spanish trader in the eighties . . . to commemorate the Declaration of Independence! Did you know that the little copper-green seed pods now being shed from the tree are supposed to bring wonderful relief from head colds and general sinus conditions? Just crush the top of the cone you will find at the base of the tree . . . put it to your nose and inhale deeply: One can only assume that the eucalyptus fluid, so highly concentrated in the pod, is the answer. . . . But . . . if you object to smelling like a drug store, don't take this particular cure!

• • •

Have you visited the pet cemetery down by California Military District Headquarters? It's worth the walk there, one of these lovely spring evenings.

Any Presidio man, woman or child whose heart has once been saddened by the death of a dog, a cat or a bird . . . or even a lowly little hamster, is sure to find solace . . . even some bright fragment of humor, there. On the brow of a hill behind Stillwell Hall, the Presidio Pet Cemetery is a perpetual reminder that man's best friend is still of the animal kingdom!

Covering about one third of an acre of ground, the last resting place of the garrison's family pets is maintained by the Post Engineers and the Post Police. It has a white picket fence, and it is dotted with white wooden markers lettered in black . . . naming all the creatures that ever gladdened a school-boy's heart.

Here lies a cat called Charlie Brown . . . and Satan . . . a dog born in Karlshrue, Germany . . . Smiley, Willie and Tony . . . or one small grave holding the "immortal" remains of seven pets who once brought joy to a Navy family on the Presidio.

"Here lies Tweeter . . . wrapped in silk . . . our little bird who drowned in a glass of milk." Beside Tweeter is the grave of Nan Kie . . . an obviously Oriental feline whose bird-hunting days are over. . . . And there is Tony; "He didn't learn to say a lot, but this small bird won't be forgot" . . . and Pooka; "she loved fun and she was a faithful family member."

And so it goes at the Presidio Pet Cemetery . . . Peter, Paul and Toby, Louis, Tramp and Snowflake . . . Shesa-Nut . . . and Wimpy . . . the dog who "served in the Women's Army Corps."

Loved and remembered in their animal paradise . . . do they run and bark, or purr . . . sing their glad songs . . . or follow Heaven's small boys to school?

By Pfc. Perry Wolfe
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Presidio's Toreros came from an eight-point deficit at the half to overhaul the Ft. Bragg team and win their second game of the All-Army Basketball Tournament 85-67. The Toreros tied the score at 35 all at the half after trailing by eight points and went on to confound the Third Army quint with their zone defense.

The Toreros were red hot, hitting 29 of 61 shots from the floor for a 48 per cent average. Big Jim Cummings led the Toreros to their 38th win in 39 starts with 23 points. Carroll Williams was follow-up with 20 points.

Presidio jumped to a 20-6 lead in the first 10 minutes of the game, while Hawaii hit only two field goals in that time. The halftime score stood at 47-26 with the locals commanding a 21-point lead.

When play resumed, Hawaii caught fire and pulled to within seven points at 61-54, but soon lagged and never threatened again. Carroll Williams, San Jose State star, topped Presidio scoring with 25 points. Jerry Byrd, former All-American from Kentucky, was right behind him with 22 points.

Wednesday was a day of rest for the Toreros after the first two contests in as many days. The Toreros met the highly touted Ft. Dix "Burros" last night too late to meet the Star Presidian deadline.

The All-Army Basketball Tournament opened with an overtime victory for Third Army's Fort Bragg quint. Ft. Bragg squeezed past the Fort Eustis "Wheels" in the extra period 88-86.

The Ft. Sill "Cannoneers," led by Worthington Patterson and Arnold Short with 50 points between them, outdistanced the Far East quint. Patterson, former University of Connecticut great, poured in 30 points and Short hit six straight set shots in the late stages of the game to cinch the win. Ralph Beard, former Kentucky great, kept the Far East quint in the game, tallying 26 points.

Beard and Dick Tyler, North Carolina State, led a Far East rally that pulled them to within one point of the Ft. Sill five after suffering a 13-point deficit a few minutes earlier.

In the final game of the first night's play, Ft. Dix built up an 18-point lead in the final four minutes to swamp Ft. Leonard Wood. Dix held a 46-38 lead at intermission and was never headed in the final half. Jack Sheehy, former Cornell captain, topped the Ft. Dix "Burros" with 24 points followed by Dan Manix, St. Francis great, with 17 points. Bill Ridley, former Illinois University star who stands only 5'8" was high scorer of the game and led Leonard Wood with 26 points.

Second day action saw Second Army, Ft. Eustis, defeat the U.S. Army Pacific quintet, 96-64, and Fifth Army, Ft. Leonard Wood, fell the Armed Forces Far East, Korea, by a score of 89-91. First Army's Ft. Dix defeated Fourth Army's Ft. Sill 76-72 in the night game.

Sports Casting with Casey

I may be whistling deep down in Dixie, but if our sharp shooting Toreros win the All Army Basketball Championship — seems the only team standing between them and the title is First Army's Ft. Dix Burros—I'd like to see them sing their swan song in a return go with the Pasadena Mirror Glazers. Since the locals suffered their only defeat at the hands of the star-studded southerners, and that, 65-59, in the sudden-death Southwest Invitational at Las Vegas, a two-game series should provide the name of the best non-pro team in the nation. Proper timing, good local press, Kezar Pavillion and a nominal charge would provide local fans with the best game of the year and replenish the coffers of Army Emergency Relief. Of course the Ft. Dix team is a big if. As tourney favorites they boast such top flight greats as Si Green, two time All-American from Duquesne, and Tom Gola, All-American, All-Pro and everybody's Mr. Basketball. Anyway it's a happy thought. . . . Since Charlie Dumas, Olympic high jump record holder and only man ever to clear seven feet, has been ruled ineligible along with Warren Shelton and Junior Sigh for scholastic deficiencies at USC, our boy Ernie Shelton, Warren's baby brother, should dominate the jumpers at most of the major track meets this year. You might say he will be putting the Army's best foot upward and over all season long. . . . Deep in the heart of Ft. Sam Houston, Maj. J. W. Russell, coach of last year's Olympic champion riding team, is putting some superhuman service athletes over the jumps in preparation for the upcoming pentathlon competition slated for November in Mexico City. Modern pentathloners must be tops in steeplechase horsemanship, cross-country running, swimming, pistol shooting, epee fencing and—Say, anyone for golf? . . . Ft. Carson sloughfoots not only demand beauty of their "sweethearts," but talent as well. Recently they adopted women's world figure skating champion, Carol Heiss, as the 47th Infantry Division sweetheart. . . . First Army's Tom Courtney, Olympic 800-meter champion, will participate in a series of six track meets in South Africa. Artie O'Connor, his Fordham coach, will accompany him on the AAU sponsored tour.

"Pleasant Way to help a good cause," said the Army Commander, Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, as he and his foursome launched International Golf Day at the Presidio Club. Group includes Lt. Col. Fred C. Smith, Post PM; General Young; Col. Harold A. Davenport, Sixth Army PM, and Capt. George J. Reuss, coordinator for this year's "beat Jackie Burke" effort.

Golf Day Officially Opened At Presidio

A foursome composed of Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth U. S. Army Commander; Col. Harold A. Davenport, Sixth Army Provost Marshal; Lt. Col. Fred C. Smith, Presidio Provost Marshal, and Capt. George J. Reuss, Sixth Army Coordinator for the event, teed off at the Presidio Golf Course Tuesday to officially open the first annual International Golf Day competition sponsored by the Military Police Association.

The competition is world wide, anywhere the United States Military Police are stationed. The purpose of the event is to raise money for any worthy charity, the charity to be selected by the local installation sponsoring the event. The Presidio Youth Activities has been selected to receive the funds derived from Presidio competition.

Gen. Young, when asked for his thoughts on International Golf Day, grinned and said, "I can think of no pleasanter way to contribute to charity than to play a round of golf."

International Golf Day competition is open to anyone who likes to play golf. The individual may play as many games as he likes between now and April 6th just as long as he pays an entry fee for each game. The object is to beat Jack Burkes, Jr.'s third round score in the Masters Open at Augusta, Georgia, on April 6.

The entrant's total minus his official handicap will be matched against Burke's and if it is lower the individual will receive a medal inscribed: "I Beat Jack Burke, Jr." The Callaway System of automatic handicapping will be used whenever the individual does not have an established handicap.

Under this method, a player's handicap is determined, after each round, by his gross score for the 18 holes and by the worst, or highest individual hole scores he has made. For instance, if his gross score was 107, he may deduct the total of his four worst holes. Thus if he had one 9, two 7s and several 6s, he could deduct 29 strokes, giving himself a net score of 78.

Each entrant will be required to pay an entry fee of $1.25 for each round he plays. Youth Activities will receive $1.00 of each entry fee and the remaining 25 cents goes to the Military Police Association to defray the cost of striking the medals.

Netmen Third At Stockton

Presidio's defending all-Army volleyball champs made their best showing of the season when they captured third place in the Northern California Open Volleyball Championship Tournament sponsored by the Stockton YMCA and held at the Stockton gym. The tournament featured the eight top teams of this area.

Presidio's netmen earned the right to enter the Far Western Volleyball Tournament by virtue of the third place win. The five top teams of the tournament earned berths in the open division of the Far Western Volleyball Tournament which will be held at Alameda Naval Base on 12-13 April. The Alameda tourney will consist of the open division and the Intercollegiate and Armed Forces division.

The locals downed Hamilton AFB 10-15, 15-13 and 15-5 in the first encounter of the tourney.

Next on the Torero netmen's schedule will be the Alameda Tournament which features the top five teams from the Southern Division and top five from the Northern Division.

Hudson Only Champ, Marines Dominate

Final results of the 1957 Interservice Boxing Championships show the Marines have the situation well in hand. The Marines placed four champions in the winner's circle to take the team championship. The Air Force captured three spots, the Navy two and the Army took only one title.

Allen Hudson, heavyweight from Third Army's Ft. Bragg, North Carolina, was the only Army boxer to complete the interservice matches without a loss. Hudson won the heavyweight title from Marine contender Dave Robinson by a unanimous decision. The Marine finished the fight on instinct after Hudson jarred him with a terrific right hook and repeated left jabs in the early rounds of the fight.

The interservice title was decided on four split decisions and only one knockout, that one being a TKO, due to the nearly balanced abilities of the individual fighters.

Army's Dillard Jackson was dropped for a nine count by a mule-kick left from Marine Roosevelt Charles, Camp Lejeune. The Ft. Sill light middleweight rose to his feet but was wobbly and the referee stopped in the fight with 21 seconds gone in the final round, giving the title to the Marine glover.

Interservice Boxing Champions:

DON ADAMSON,
Air Force, 112 pounds.

RAY WHARTON,
Navy, 119 pounds.

FRANCIS LEE,
Navy, 125 pounds.

LUIS MOLINA,
Marine Corps, 132 pounds.

BOB POWELL,

ROOSEVELT CHARLES,

740th AAA Cager Charles Scott goes up with an under hand layup shot with a futile attempt to block the shot made by 10th Missile Battalion cager. The two teams met in the first game of the winners bracket of the double-elim Sixth AAA Regional Command Championship Tournament.

740th AAA Wins Regional Crown

Ft. Scott's 740th AAA Missile Battalion grabbed an early lead and held it all the way, Thursday, to defeat Los Angeles' 551st AAA Missile Battalion, 71-58, and take the championship of the Sixth Antiaircraft Regional Command Basketball Tournament.

Led by Hubie Brown's 32 points, the 740th became the Sixth AAA Regional Command's first basketball champ and will represent the command in the All-Army Antiaircraft Command Tournament 25 March-2 April at Ft. Devons, Mass.

Brown opened scoring with a layup in the first seconds and the 740th never trailed. Lyle Harger, towering center, sank one to tie the score at 4-4 a few minutes later, but that was as close as the 551st ever got.

High point honors for the tournament went to Brown, former Niagara University player, with 118 points in four games. His best effort came in the tourney opener when he dunked in 39 points.

Harger was second in total scoring with 107 points. His best day was Wednesday, when he scored 33 points against Fairchild's 10th AAA Missile Battalion.

The championship was the second of the season for the 740th, which moved unbeaten through the 30th AAA Group Tournament last month.

It took a pair of chips-down victories—the second in overtime—to keep the 551st in the running for the title, in Wednesday's action.

The Los Angeles team edged Fairchild's 10th AAA Missile Battalion from Fairchild (Washington) Air Force Base 84-82 in a morning contest, then upset San Francisco's 740th 70-69 in overtime in the finals in the afternoon.

Winning margin in the Wednesday afternoon thriller came when Lyle Harger, 6-foot 8-inch Los Angeles center, crammed one in the basket with 10 seconds to go. The shot erased a 69-68 740th lead and meant the difference when Brown missed a desperate shot from the far corner as the final horn sounded.

The clash had gone into overtime when Tom Adkins, former Murray State College of Kentucky player, tipped a basket for the 551st with a minute left in regulation play, knotting the score 59-59.

The finals were a rematch of the tourney's opening game, when the 740th came out on top 87-79. The San Francisco titlists had a rough time taking the triumph, as Los Angeles moved into the lead several times before dropping behind for good.

Fairchild's 10th AAA Missile Battalion took the next victory with a 66-63 triumph over Seattle's 20th AAA Gun Battalion. The clash followed the tournament pattern of close contests, as Seattle grabbed an early lead, lost it before halftime and then came back to tie it up midway through the third quarter. Seattle's Allen Mangin was the top man in that game with 23 points.

Seattle became the first team eliminated from the tourney and therefore settled for fourth place when the 20th lost 68-58 in a Tuesday morning game with the 551st. Mangin again paced Seattle with 22, while Harger and Robert Pitman led Los Angeles with 18 each.

The 740th dropped Fairchild into the losers' bracket of the double elimination contest with a 76-58 victory Tuesday afternoon.

This Wednesday Will Mark 181st Year Since Anza Founded Presidio

Just 181 years ago next week a scouting party of two Spanish officers, 11 soldiers, and a priest struck out from the Presidio of Monterey to found a new post on the great northern Bay of San Francisco.

Leaving Monterey at dawn on 23 March 1776 they covered the 100 miles of untamed peninsula to San Francisco Bay in four days, and on the night of 27 March were camping at Mountain Lake on the southern edge of today's Presidio Reservation.

This 100 miles was the last lap of a journey that had begun in the fall of 1775 at the Presidio of Tubac, Arizona (then Sonora, New Spain), when these same men headed an expedition of 193 soldiers and colonists overland to Monterey. Their purpose was to establish and colonize a post which would secure the strategic Northern California port for Spain.

The two officers were Lieutenant Colonel Juan Bautista de Anza and Lieutenant Jose Moraga; the priest, a Franciscan friar, Father Pedro Font.

After the night at Mountain Lake, the Anza party broke camp and set out across the high ridge which crowns the present reservation. They made directly for the headlands where Fort Point stands today. Anza immediately recognized the high cliff as the ideal site for a fortress controlling the mouth of the harbor. (Eighteen years later the Spanish would erect the Castillo de San Joaquin and in the 1850s the United States Army would also agree with Anza that this was the natural point from which to defend the bay.)

On that spring morning in 1776, however, Anza's first act was to erect a wooden cross in the name of the Spanish Crown and beneath it he buried a record of his explorations in the Bay Area.

No less acute was Anza's military appraisal of the adjacent table land. This area he chose as the site for the new Presidio of San Francisco. As Fr. Font recorded their observations, Anza and Moraga found the flatland ideally suited to their needs, with "a great quantity of timber and firewood, plentiful water in several springs or lakes, abundant land for raising crops."

The same day the Spaniards selected a tract of land for a mission several miles to the southeast. The area of the nearby spring they named Arroyo de los Dolores. Before returning to Monterey, Anza and his party also scouted the southern arm of the bay and up the contra costa.

Anza never returned to San Francisco for he was recalled to Mexico shortly after arriving in Monterey. The actual founding of the Presidio of San Francisco was left to Moraga the following summer.

But it was Anza as leader of the overland expedition who made the founding possible. He had brought colonists over a thousand inland miles of unmapped desert and mountains. And his survey of the Bay Area dispelled any lingering doubts in the minds of Spanish officialdom that this was a land which had to be possessed. As Font's diary shows, they saw clearly the Bay Area's enormous potential. Fr. Font wrote in March, 1776:

"I think that if it could be well settled like Europe there would not be anything more beautiful in all the world for it has the best advantages for founding in it a most beautiful city, with all the conveniences desired . . . with that harbor so remarkable and so spacious, in which may be established shipyards, docks, and anything that may be wished. . . ."

Army Explorer Lt. Col. Juan Bautista de Anza of Spain, accompanied by 12 soldiers and a priest, left the Presidio of Monterey 181 years ago this week to found a new post on the San Francisco Bay. Today that post is the Presidio—an Army headquarters for eight western states.

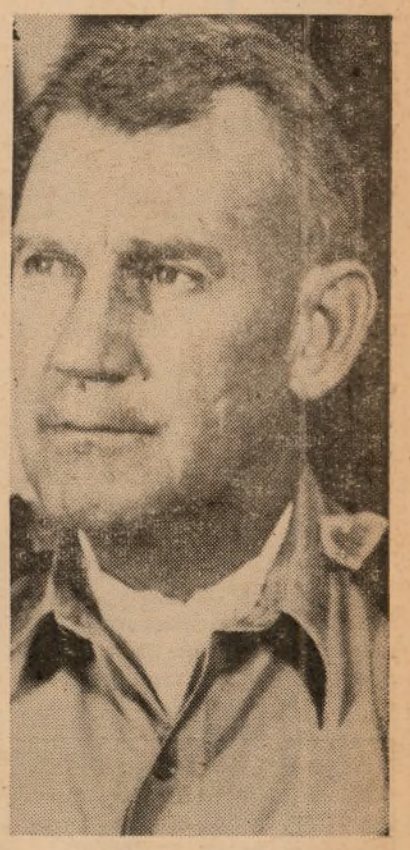
Conservation First Step In $ Savings Planning

The Post Commander was notified this week of a $430,000 budget cut for the fourth quarter of this fiscal year. Since 1 April marks the beginning of the quarter, budget trimming will begin immediately.

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Post Commander, has requested all agencies to reemphasize and intensify efforts to reduce to a minimum the use of fuel, electricity, water, gas products and supplies. Conservation is the first step in compensating for the cut which amounts to 13 per cent of the total annual funded budget.



"If each person would think of his section or unit as his home and conserve utilities and supplies accordingly, we could reduce expenditures in these areas immediately," Colonel Lundquist said. He urged the cooperation of all personnel.

A revamped conservation program was launched on Post last September. Although the winter months were included in the statistics, over-all savings were recorded for the first half of fiscal 1957, July through December, according to Capt. Charles N. French, Assistant Post Conservation Officer.

In heating costs, the Presidio hit $19,188 less than expected during these months. Of this amount, $13,632 was saved during the second quarter. The Presidio also saved $11,148 in electricity costs during the half and $8,697 of the saving was recorded in the second quarter.

The Post as a regional logistic command for most of California and installations in the seven other Sixth Army states, budgets $45,000 for gasoline products. Savings have been urged in this area by such means as combining trips, taking only necessary trips and utilizing the least expensive type of transportation.

Incidents of common waste become of vast monetary importance when multiplied by the entire Post. Officials believe that by watching heaters, lights and gasoline consumption, personnel can help effect much of the needed savings.

Maj. Gen. Howze

After three years of duty in the Caribbean area, he became assistant commandant of the Armored School at Fort Knox, Ky.

In 1954 he was assigned as assistant division commander of the 3rd Infantry Division in the Far East. First POW Returnee

Retirement Ceremony Today

Today's review and retirement ceremony will honor Lt. Col. John Daujat, Sixth Army Manpower Control Officer, and Maj. Edward Bott, Sixth Army G-2 Section, it has been announced by Sixth Army Headquarters.

In addition, three other officers, three warrant officers and two non-commissioned officers will retire today, but they will not be present at the ceremony.

Colonel Daujat has the distinction of being the first prisoner of war to be released by the North Koreans during "Operation Big Switch." He was a prisoner of the Communists for 31 months following his capture in January, 1951.

His military career began in 1937 when he enlisted in the Infantry. He was commissioned as an officer in 1942 and during World War II served in the Asiatic-Pacific Theater. After two years as a National Guard instructor in Texas, he returned to the Far East in 1950 and was captured in Korea a year later. He was awarded the Silver Star Medal for heroism and the Korean Distinguished Military Service Medal.

Lt. Col. Daujat

Major Bott served in the Mediterranean Theater during World War II. He took part in the Rome-Arno, Northern Appennines and Po Valley campaigns in Italy. He wears the Purple Heart for shrapnel wounds received near Traversa, Italy. He also holds the Bronze Star Medal.

Gordon Tabbed As New Basic Training Center

The tremendous response to the Army's six-month reserve component training program was cited by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker this week as the reason for utilizing Fort Gordon, Ga., as a basic combat training center.

A total of 35,145 young men have enlisted and entered the six months' training program between October, 1955 and January, 1957 through the U.S. Army Reserve and National Guard. In the past three months approximately 7,000 have entered the program, including more than 3,900 during February.

Trainees will be phased into Fort Gordon beginning in May.

Proper Listing Of Items Necessary On Tax Form

(This is the sixth and seventh of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. The articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants.)

It is important to know what to include and what not to include when filing your federal income tax. Look at this list and see if you can tell which should be listed on a tax return:

- Dividends from an insurance policy
- Social Security Benefits
- Gifts
- Payments received under Workmen's Compensation laws.

The answer is that none of the above should be listed as taxable income. There are other forms of exempt income, too, which you will find listed in the official instruction book. Some of them are:

- Inheritances and bequests (the estate may be taxed but not the recipient)
- Railroad Retirement Act benefits
- Certain health and accident benefits
- Damages awarded by a court or paid out of court for personal injuries

Government payments and benefits to veterans and their families, except non-disability retirement pay and interest on terminal leave bonds.

If you won a prize, watch this fine distinction: the prize is taxable if you were required to exert even the slightest effort to earn it; on the other hand, if it was made in recognition of scientific, literary or other achievement you would have performed anyway, the prize is considered a gift and you are not taxed on it.

Such interest earnings must be reported on 1956 tax forms, the Internal Revenue Service has ruled.

Most scholarships and fellowships are exempt unless they are paid as compensation for services, such as teaching and research.

In figuring support for a dependent you do not have to count scholarships received by a student.

If you have an annuity from life insurance, pension plan or other source, the portion which you may receive tax-free depends on your life expectancy and the amount you paid for the annuity. The Internal Revenue Service will furnish actuarial tables upon request to help you figure this out.

Anyone who owns stock needs to know about the dividend exclusion and credit. This applies only to dividends from corporations which are subject to United States corporation income tax and does not include dividends from savings and loan associations, credit unions or foreign corporations.

Your first $50 of qualified dividends is tax free. Husband and wife are each entitled to exclude the first $50 for dividends on stocks that each owns.

If you received dividends beyond this amount, you are entitled to a "dividends received credit." This credit is four per cent of the remaining dividends, but it cannot be more than four percent of your taxable income, or more than the amount of tax otherwise due. The credit is not just a deduction from your taxable income—it is actually subtracted from your tax.

For example, if you received $550 in dividends, you can exclude $50 from your taxable income, and subtract four per cent of $500—or $20—from the tax you would otherwise pay. The last page of the tax form provides a schedule for figuring the amount of your credit.

Uncle Sam realizes family doctor bills and dentist bills can add up, so he permits you to itemize and deduct all medical expenses beyond three per cent of your adjusted gross income.

If you (or your husband or wife) are 65 or over, the three per cent rule does not apply to your own medical expenses. It does apply however, to any medical expenses you pay for your dependents.

Among the items to include in your list of medical expenses are fees of doctors, dentists, hospitals and nurses. You can also deduct premiums for health, accident, hospitalization and medical insurance, but you must reduce your medical expenses by the amount of any benefits received from insurance.

Your total deduction is limited to a maximum amount for the year, as explained in the instruction book, and medicines and drugs may be included in your medical expenses only to the extent they exceed one per cent of your gross income.

The federal tax code contains several provisions of special interest to widows and widowers:

(1) You may file a joint return with a husband or wife who died during the tax year if no separate return is filed.

(2) If you have not remarried and have in your household a dependent child or stepchild, you are entitled for the next two years to use the same tax computation (with income-splitting privileges) as you have been entitled to on a joint return.

(3) When life insurance proceeds are taken as an annuity or in installments, widows and widowers are allowed up to $1,000 per year of tax free payments in addition to a pro rata amount of the principal.

(4) You may be entitled to a deduction for child-care expenses.

(5) You may be entitled to retirement income credit if your deceased husband or wife would have qualified.

The instruction book which comes with your tax forms gives further information. Help is also available by telephone or at offices of the Internal Revenue Service. You are urged to consult a properly qualified advisor if you decide to seek outside help.

In Korea, Major Penrod was in charge of Class I Division/KCOMZ. In Oakland Military Subsistence Market Center he was also assigned as chief of unit.

Captain MAURICE C. GREENE has arrived at the Presidio to resume his duties as Aide de Camp to Major General Robert Lee Howze who assumes command of the Sixth Army Reserve Force this week.

A veteran of 14 years' Federal service, Captain Greene came here from Fort Polk, Louisiana, where he held a similar assignment with the General. Until his current position, Capt. Army Still Largest Total Armed Forces strength was 2,788,079 at the end of January, an increase of 7,356 over December, the Department of Defense has announced.

The Army led in manpower with 993,393, an increase of 37,183 over December.

Map-making and engineer intelligence are among the highest priority missions of the Army's Corps of Engineers. Ten million maps were printed and distributed during the first four weeks of the Korean conflict.

Finance Chief Stresses Payroll Savings Plan

"The principal and rate of return on Savings Bonds are absolutely guaranteed by the Federal Government; it is impossible for anyone to lose money through the purchase of bonds," stressed Major General Harry W. Crandall, Army Chief of Finance, during his visit here this week to open the local Savings Bond Campaign.

The campaign opened Monday and runs through 5 April. Goal is to attain a minimum of 65 per cent participation of all personnel.

General Crandall noted that the payroll savings plan is the best method for both civilian employees and military personnel to save regularly and automatically by having a portion of each pay check saved before it is spent.

The general said that the fundamental characteristic of thrift is absent in most individuals.

"Creating or encouraging this characteristic of thrift is more difficult today because of 'good times' and the free and easy spending philosophy now in vogue," General Crandall commented. "Overcoming this handicap can only be done through educational self-discipline."

Lt. Col. Walter R. Jorgenson, Sixth Army Savings Bond Officer pro tem., has announced that the original system of picking up civilian savings bonds with paychecks will be reverted to on 9 April. Civilians who wish their bonds mailed to their homes after this date must notify the Post Finance and Accounting Office by 5 April.

Seek Retired Officers

Retired military officers and those about to retire are being given priority ratings for positions with the Naval Officers Realty Corporation in San Francisco, and the Washington Investment Plan, Fairfield. The same opportunity is open to officers reverting to inactive duty status.

Colonel James B. Moorehead (USA retired) has asked the Star Presidian to convey this information to interested personnel at the Presidio. Further information on employment with either business concern may be secured by telephoning Colonel Moorehead at TUxedo 5-3434.

Pre-Camp Reserve Conference Set At Local Armory

A pre-camp Reserve conference for personnel involved with summer training at the Presidio will be held tomorrow at Harmon Armory under the sponsorship of Post S3.

Starting at 0800 hours the conference is scheduled to last all day and will resolve problems of logistics, personnel and training.

Besides the commanders of units scheduled for summer training there, representatives from Sixth U.S. Army G1, G2, G3 and G4 will be available at the meeting for consultation.

Korean Defense Minister To Visit Here Next Week

Korea's Minister of Defense Kim Yong Woo will be hosted at the Presidio on Thursday when an honor guard ceremony will be performed in his honor.

He is returning to Korea after a two-week visit in the United States during which time he visited various military and industrial centers as the guest of the Secretary of Defense. His itinerary included visits to West Point and the General Motors Assembly Plant in Detroit, Michigan.

Mr. Kim will be accompanied by Maj. Gen. Paik Sun Jin, Chief, Logistics Bureau, Defense Ministry; Col. Park Chung Huh, Comptroller, Republic of Korea Air Force and Mr. Kim Dong Sung, Assistant to the Minister of National Defense.

The Defense Minister is making his second visit to the United States. He took graduate work in mathematics at the University of California 23 years ago.

Official Charter for the new Presidio Active Duty Chapter of the Reserve Officers' Association is presented to CWO Theodore J. Roberts (Lt. Col., USAR) by Capt. Edward Couch, Army vice president of the California Department, Reserve Officers' Association. Mr. Roberts is the local chapter president.

High IQ Standard Equipment With 30th Engineers

An educational survey taken by the 30th Engineer Group reveals that about one-third of its total domestic manpower force are college graduates and more than 75 per cent of the men have at least a high school diploma or its equivalent. These statistics parallel the Army's need for highly trained specialists.

Additional facts show that half of the men had at least some college education and about six per cent did not complete grade school. These figures were compared to statistics for the country's total population, which show that 5.2 per cent of the people have completed college and 33.4 per cent have finished grade school.

The two survey companies, 549th and 537th Engineer Companies, boast the highest level of education. This is attributed to the need for men with backgrounds in civil engineering, geology and related fields in survey work.

World Travelers Complete Unique Tour

Fourteen foreign stops in 36 days is the travel record just completed by Col. Lawrence R. St. John, 30th Engineer Group CO, and Lt. Robert Wallace, Assistant Group S3. The officers returned last weekend from tour of 30th Engr. Group outposts.

As Lieutenant Wallace summed up his trip, he praised surveying operations in Iran and Libya. The 22 engineers stationed in Iran are working alongside 87 Iranians in producing the country's first maps which show elevation and classification, he explained.

"The work in Iran is exceeding original expectations," the lieutenant commented. "The party encountered very little difficulty, which is probably due to the high caliber of men we sent and the good relations they have established there."

Although the survey project in Libya was only six weeks along when the visiting officers arrived, the parties were already achieving excellent results accuracy-wise.

Arab Chieftain Hosts Presidians During Tour

A native dinner and show hosted by Libyan natives entertaining in a tent will be long remembered by Lt. Robert Wallace, who just returned from an overseas tour with Col. Lawrence R. St. John, 30th Engineer Group CO.

The dinner was started off with tea, followed by macaroni with a tomato and onion sauce. The sauce had been used to stew the freshly killed gazelle. Two kinds of meat were served—stewed gazelle and roast gazelle. They also had boiled potatoes, beans that looked like lentals, wine and coffee. The coffee tasted like it had been cooked with Karo Syrup rather than water.

The gazelle they ate had been shot that morning, but often gazelle are killed by being run to death. The natives chase the gazelle in a British land-rover for about 25 kilometers. The animals run between 35 and 45 miles per hour and finally collapse. The natives then jump out and slit the animal's throat. Americans do not like gazelle killed in this manner because adrenalin in their bodies gives the meat a strong taste.

After dinner they rolled up the side of the tent, pulled two trucks into place, turned on the lights and 27 Arabs led by Chief Senusa of the Senusa tribe (about 3,500 strong) presented two and a half hours of singing, dancing, acrobatics, games and imitations of burros and a camel.

"It was the best floor show I've seen in a long time," Lieutenant Wallace said.

One of the major problems in Libya is supplying water to men in the field. Water is taken to them by truck and each man is rationed to a gallon a day.

"Libyan weather is expected to present a problem during the summer," Lieutenant Wallace said. "The hottest temperature on the earth has been recorded about 50 miles from where the men are staying. Since heat disturbs the surveying instruments, odd workings hours may have to be established."

Personnel living off-post in Libya are enjoying new homes, according to the lieutenant. About 12 engineer wives are already living there and more are expected in the next two months.

Before returning to San Francisco, Colonel St. John and Lieutenant Wallace presented a report to the Army Map Service in Washington, D. C. While overseas, the men stopped in Hawaii, Japan, Manila, Saigon, Bangkok, Calcutta, New Delhi, Karachi, Dharan, Beirut, Teheran, Rome, Tripoli and Bermuda.

With the biggest bridal months of the year coming up (June, August and September), our thoughts turn to showers—bridal, not April. As soon as a relative or close friend announces her intention to join the "chained gang," the entertainment quandry begins. Sometimes a luncheon, tea or other such affair is decided upon, but most frequently a shower gets the nod.

What kind of shower is the best? This question must be answered by the bride-to-be after she has decided what type of household or personal articles she most needs. Don't shy away from kitchen, linen or miscellaneous showers just because they aren't different—100 brides may be having the same type of shower during the same week, but all 100 of them need kitchen, linen and miscellaneous articles.

If you are entertaining for a bride after she has had the practical showers, you can still hostess a shower that will be fun and useful. The "gadget-$1-limit" shower is a popular one with both brides and guests. It is fun to examine the new and old types of gadgets and frequently the bride uses the gifts everyday.

The "recipe-one ingredient" shower is similar. Each guest brings a recipe (usually simple for the confused bride) and one non-perishable ingredient such as baking powder. A cute sidelight is for each guest to bring a can of food with the label removed. For the first few months the new couple is slightly surprised at the canned food served at an otherwise normal meal. This shower can also be augmented into foreign or around-the-clock recipes. In such cases each guest is assigned either a certain country or time of day on the invitation. The guest then brings a recipe to fill the bill.

The Golden Gate Chapter of the Army Finance Association received its charter from Maj. Gen. Harry W. Crandall, Chief of Army Finance and president of the Association, last weekend. The local chapter was started last November.

Invasion Model which will provide planning data for the Armed Forces Day mock invasion at Baker Beach is now in the final phase of construction at the 30th Engineer Group's 171st Engineer Detachment plant at Fort Scott. Pvt. Jerome A. Goebel, above, is working on the model's terrain features. Before the model could be constructed, plane table sheets had to be provided by the 549th Engineer Company so that a map could be made by the 549th Engineer Company.

Scale Model Will Aid Armed Forces Day Plan

Members of the 30th Engineer Group are currently building a scale model of the Presidio's ocean face—from the Golden Gate Bridge approach to Lincoln Park—to facilitate advanced planning for Armed Forces Day to be held 18 May.

The three by five foot model will enable planners to plot the mock invasion which will be held on Baker Beach that day. The model is to appear from above much the same as the actual area would look as viewed from an airplane.

Members of the 171st Engineer Det. are making the terrain model from plywood and plaster on a 1:2,400 scale. This unit has made a variety of terrain models including a scale model of the Presidio which was presented to Lt. General Robert N. Young, Sixth U. S. Army Commander.

Organized as the only Army TOE unit to construct terrain models and form relief maps, the 171st is also presently forming seven plastic relief maps of the Fort Ord and Hunter Liggette areas on assignment from Sixth U. S. Army.

The model of the Baker Beach area for Armed Forces Day actually required the coordinated efforts of three of the 30th Engineer Group units. Plane table parties from the 549th Engineer Company surveyed the area. Sp3 Marvin Toleson and Sp3 Ernest Lindsey were the party chiefs of this mission, which served as a training project.

At the Photomapping Plant a crew of men from the 21st Engineer Company took the plane table sheets provided by the 549th and compiled a map from them. This map is the basis upon which the 171st is building the model now in its final phase of construction.

Ed Center Begins Classes In U.S. History, Government

Eight-week courses in U.S. History and Government and General Science will begin 1 and 2 April, according to the Presidio Army Education Center. The classes are open to military and civilian personnel who are working toward high school diplomas or are interested in the subject matter.

The classes meet from 1800 to 2100 hours in Bldg. 563 near Lombard Gate. U. S. History is scheduled on Monday and Wednesday and General Science on Tuesday and Thursday. Registration is handled by the Education Center, Ext. 2974 or 4449, Bldg. 258.

Conducted in cooperation with the San Francisco Public Schools, the classes enable military personnel to earn a high school diploma in one semester or 16 weeks of evening study.

The second series, English and Mathematics, will be offered in September. Students who complete the four classes and pass the USAFI GED high school level test are eligible for high school diplomas either from the San Francisco Adult Education Division or their home state or community.

Did you know . . . that there's a spring well set in a clump of willow trees on the Presidio which . . . according to Indian legend . . . was a dependable ally to the stork when this garrison was in its infancy? Ojo de Agua del Polin . . . or El Polin Spring . . . is located at the extreme end of MacArthur Avenue. Distinguished now by a redwood marker . . . El Polin is credited with overloading the stork's schedule of deliveries to old-time wives and mothers at the Presidio. Women who drank the spring water, according to Indian belief . . . became so consistently productive that husbands took only second place in the scheme of family life. For instance . . . 20 children were born to the Miramontes, a Spanish family, after the wife began to drink from the Spring . . . not all together of course . . . but with almost alarming regularity thereafter. The wife of William D. Howard, an early San Franciscan . . . had been childless for many years when she met Senora Miramontes, who confided to her the magic of El Polin Spring . . . Mrs. Howard drank from the well . . . and presto! . . . she became the mother of a beautiful little daughter. However . . . be that as it may, and judging from visual testimony down at Letterman Hospital OB GYN Clinic it may . . . a more welcome potion for many Presidio mothers-to-be would probably be contained in the water from a well which would put the stork back on part-time basis!

• • •

Beyond the magic well . . . at MacArthur and Portola Street, is the site of Mission Dolores-Presidio Trail. Here, also, a redwood marker indicates where the old trail passed the original Comendancia. Running east and south, the path followed the little valley now heading southeast of the reservation boundary near Laurel Avenue. It would be a lovely pilgrimage for garrison personnel to make on a Sunday afternoon! The trail once followed a winding course across the sand hills to the Mission . . . northern end of El Camino Real . . . the King's Highway! People on foot . . . on horseback . . . and in ox carts . . . traveled this route . . . bound for baptisms . . . marriages . . . and funerals. And borne over it for burial at Mission Dolores . . . were the bodies of Presidio Commandantes Morago and Arguello.

• • •

Newcomers to the Presidio are sure to find a trip to old Fort Point, situated at the east end of Golden Gate Bridge . . . a rewarding experience. Here is the ancient brick fortress . . . haunted by its past . . . forbidding in the long echoes which ring back from your footsteps on the inner courtyard . . . yet fascinating in the silent story that it tells. . . . Once on that spot . . . a veritable arsenal faced out to discourage sea-going land-grabbers inbound to stake claim. . . . Over half a century ago Fort Point was constructed as a harbor defense in an age of full-riggers and their nautical piracy.

A white cliff over 100 feet high rose on the site, back in 1776 . . . when the Spaniards set up the first military outpost on the Presidio. They mounted a cannon at the peak of the cliff to remind mariners that they could enter only by the grace of His Majesty . . . Carlos III of Spain!

Over 17 years later . . . the first fort was built on the site. The Spaniards called it El Castillo de San Joaquin. Shaped like a horseshoe . . . with a 10-foot adobe wall, the Castillo was in charge of one captain, a sergeant and 11 other enlisted men.

Of its 12 cannon mounted on the hill . . . only two faced the harbor. Six of the original cannon are now recognized as museum pieces. They were cast in bronze, between the years 1628 and 1693 . . . . in Peruvian foundries. Four of the cannon are now mounted on the Presidio and there are two of the same group on the grounds at Fort Mason.

After the San Francisco Earthquake—(not last Friday's), parts of the fortress were excavated to reinforce the south wall. The military engineers found that water in the inner reservoirs which was caught from the sloping roofs and carried by pipes to the storage cisterns below, was still palatable. (Seventy years old and still a good drink of water!)

Although declared obsolete in 1905 . . . with its batteries abandoned in 1914, the grim fortress on the Golden Gate is still there . . . to challenge the atoms and the earthquakes of our time.

A supply of prime leather fabrics, in color, is due at the Crafts Shop this week. During the months that follow, their very existence is a daily challenge. The sudden return of a Japanese landing party heralds the looked-for attack by the Marines. Allison helps his unit by stealthily removing the firing pins from the Japanese howitzers. Carroll Williams and K. C. Jones led the Army All-Stars to an 82-66 victory over Akron's (Ohio) Goodyears in their second game of the National AAU Tournament. Williams and Jones won high praise for their beautiful back court play, speed, and ball-hawking.

The Army 'Stars had only a five-point lead at the half, but stretched it to 61-50 with 14 minutes to go and left no doubt of the outcome from that point on.

Psaltis Williams

Ron Tomsic, former Stanford star, playing with a heavily bandaged leg, led the Air Force All-Stars to a 100-76 victory over the Joliet, Illinois, team.

Rated Heavy Basic At Dix

Harold Carter, slated for a bout with San Francisco's Eddie Machen, referred to as the preliminary to a crack at Floyd Patterson's world's heavyweight title, may have to wait a few months for such a bout. Carter is now absorbing basic training at Ft. Dix, New Jersey.

Carter has a pro record of 23 wins, two losses and one draw in 26 bouts. His first professional loss was to Wayne Bethea, New York heavyweight, which Carter has twice avenged since then. His only other loss was to Johnny Summerlin and the Jersey heavy later gained revenge for that one too.

In the 1952 New York Golden Gloves, Carter dropped a decision to the present world's heavyweight champion, Floyd Patterson. The next year Carter went on to Chicago and won the national Gloves tourney, with Patterson not competing.

The 549th, led by their captain, Ted Thorhaug, won all three of their games in the elimination play, two against Hq., 752nd AAA and one against the 21st Engineers. A big factor in the 549th win was Ken Killingsworth and Jim Compton as servers and Tom Munson, spiker. The three men accounted for a large number of the winner's points.

The 21st Engineer Company completed the season in third spot and fourth place went to the 99th Engineer Company.

Shelton Ties For Second

Ernie Shelton, world renown high jumper, placed second in the triangular track meet between Stanford University, Santa Clara Youth Center, and San Francisco's Olympic Club at the Stanford University track field this past weekend.

Shelton, jumping under the Olympic Club colors cleared 6'7½" to tie with Vern Wilson for second place in the meet. Stanford took first place in the high jump with a leap of 6'8½" to set a new Stanford mark. Vern Wilson was selected for the second man on the Olympic Games track team behind Charley Dumas.

The Stanford meet was the first competition that Shelton had entered since just prior to the Olympic Games in Australia. "I was really surprised that I did as well as I did, going into the meet cold like I did," said Shelton. Shelton has not been able to find time to work out since he has been in the Army.

The California Military District, to which Shelton is assigned, is sending him on a month-long recruiting tour of Vallejo high schools. Shelton will work out with the high school athletes of the various schools to create good will for the Army's recruiting program.

Shelton will enter the University of California-Olympic Club track meet tomorrow at the University of California track field.

Two Losses To Dix During Tourney Play

By Pfc. Perry Wolfe
Star Presidian Sports Editor

Presidio's Cinderella team went to the ball, all right, but never got a chance to try on the glass slipper of the All-Army Basketball championship as they suffered their second and third defeats, 85-59, 72-57, of a 40-game season at the hands of the favored Ft. Dix Burros.

Winner of the All-Army championship title, First Army's Burros were bulging with professional and collegiate talent such as Tom Gola, three time LaSalle All-American; Si Green, Duquesne All-American; Al Clinkscale of the Globetrotters; Ed Catino, George Washington University; and Jack Sheey, Cornell University.

All-American Tom Gola got the Dix team off to an early lead when he picked up the first seven points. At the end of the first seven minutes, the score stood at 15-5 in Dix's favor with Gola and Si Green doing all the scoring. Gola also drew three personal fouls in this period and was pulled from the game for the remainder of the first half.

Returning to action after the first half had ended with the score tied at 34-34, Ren Reynoir put the Toreros ahead with a driving layup. Taking advantage of the the lead the Toreros attempted to keep the ball near mid-court, but the strategy backfired and the Ft. Dix quint grabbed the ball for a quick three points to take the lead. The Burros never lost the lead after that.

The Presidio held the Dix lead to a small one and was behind only 8 points going into the final five minutes of play.

Ron Reynoir led Torero scoring with 14 points followed by Carroll Williams with 13 points. Jerry Byrd, Kentucky University, who had been averaging almost 15 points per game, was held scoreless and Jim Cummings, who had been averaging 19 points for the last four games, was held to 9 points.

Si Green picked up 23 points to lead the Burros' scoring, followed by Ed Catino with 15 and Gola with 14 points. There were a total of 30 fouls called against the Toreros and Ft. Dix capitalized on 32 of 50 attempts from the charity toss line.

Ft. Dix wound up their season with a 36 won and one lost record while the Presidio boasts a 39-3 record for the season.

Presidio had earned the right to enter the final by defeating Ft. Eustis, Virginia, 97-76. The two teams were evenly matched in the field goal department but 39 out of 49 attempts from the free throw line made the different in the Presidio's victory.

In their third game of tournament play, the Toreros suffered their second defeat of the season and the first in the All-Army tourney at the hands of Ft. Dix when they lost 82-59. The loss dropped them into the losers' bracket of the double-elimination tournament. The first encounter was almost a carbon copy of the second meeting between these two teams. The Toreros gave a good account of themselves until the final eight minutes of play when the Burros spurted ahead with a scoring spree that cinched the game.

The score was tied at 37 all at the end of the first half and the lead see-sawed back and forth eight times with the Burros jumping to an 8-point lead with 10 minutes to go. Dix then poured on the heat to garner a 20-point lead with three minutes to go and salt away the game.

Carroll Williams was high man for the Toreros for the night with 17 points. Si Green led the Burros with 18 points, Ed Catino had 12, and Al Clinkscale, Tom Gola and Jack Sheey had 11 points apiece.

Other games in the latter part of the All-Army Tournament saw Second Army's Ft. Eustis drop Fifth Army's Ft. Leonard Wood from the tourney 96-89. John Kenshock, John Carroll University; Julius McCoy, Michigan State All-American; Art Bunte, Utah State University; and Happy Mahfouz of Spring Hill College in Alabama shared in the Ft. Eustis scoring. The Eustis win paired them against the Presidio in the semi-final game.

The night before, Ft. Eustis downed Ft. Sill 100-80 to eliminate the Fourth Army team from further play. The second game of that night saw Ft. Leonard Wood drop Third Army's Ft. Bragg from tourney competition when they were defeated 98-68. Former San Francisco Don and All-American K. C. Jones hit 14 points for the losing Ft. Leonard Wood team.

Mahoney, Immenhausen Win At SF State-Moffett Meet

Dick Immenhausen and Jim Mahoney, distance runners for the Presidio track team, finished one-two in the two-mile event of the San Francisco State-Moffett Field Track meet held at Moffett Field Tuesday.

Immenhausen and Mahoney, Hq. and Hq. Co., 30th Engineer Group, were not credited with the win because they were unattached, even though they finished one half lap ahead of their nearest competitors. The official time listed for the event was 5:10.1 and credited to Blanford of S. F. State.

Mahoney will be lost to the Presidio thinclads when he leaves for Ft. Hood, Texas, to be assigned to a gyroscope outfit to Germany 8 April.

Mahoney and Immenhausen have both done extensive running in the East, prior to their entry into the Army and between them hold a number of records in the long distance events on Eastern cinder paths.

Presidio Pistol Team Wins Meet

"Beat Burke" is the foremost thought on the minds of the feminine foursome of Mesdames Fred C. Smith, Legare K. Tarrant, Harold A. Davenport and George J. Reuss as they approach the first hole of the Presidio Golf Course preparatory to teeing off in the International Golf Day competition.

WomenGolfersUrged Get Into The Swing

All women are cordially invited to try to beat Jack Burke, Jr., on International Golf Day, according to the latest word received from International Golf Day headquarters in Ft. Gordon, Georgia.

The Military Police Association is sponsoring the world-wide competition in order to raise funds for a local charity designated by the local sponsoring installation. Presidio Youth Activities has been selected by the Post Provost Marshal Section to be the recipient of the proceeds from entry fees in the Bay Area.

The first foursome of the fairer sex to take advantage of the latest release from International Golf Day headquarters was Mrs. Legare K. Tarrant, wife of the Deputy Commanding General, Sixth Army; Mrs. Harold A. Davenport, wife of Sixth Army Provost Marshal; Mrs. Fred C. Smith, wife of the Post Provost Marshal; and Mrs. George J. Reuss, wife of the Sixth Army International Golf Day Coordinator. All four women are actively engaged in youth activities here on the Post.

Women may use their established handicaps plus an added handicap of seven strokes or they may rely on the Callaway System of handicapping to determine the score they will pair against Jack Burke, Jr.'s. third round card in the Master's Open at Augusta, Georgia, on 6 April. The women have the opportunity to play as many rounds as they desire in an attempt to beat Burke's card. All that is necessary to compete is to pay the $1.25 entry fee for each round that is played.

Barbara Romack and Patty Berg, two of golfdom's top pro feminine players have signified sponsorship and have indicated that they intend to play against Burke for the "I beat Jack Burke, Jr." medals to be awarded all persons who succeed in bettering Burke's card.

Application blanks, with full particulars for entering the competition, are available at the United Services Club as well as golf courses throughout the Bay Area. Any further information may be had by contacting Capt. Robert L. Anderson, local coordinator for International Golf Day, at Ext. 4188 or Ext. 2829.

Military Gifts Ease Blood Crisis; Need Still Urgent

Military and civilian response to Letterman Army Hospital's appeal for volunteer blood contributions far exceeded the blood bank's expectations, according to Major Frank H. Smiley, MSC, the stored blood supply's officer in charge.

Over 100 pints of whole blood were collected at the hospital since the drive's inception, last Thursday week; however, blood is still seriously needed and plans are underway for an all out drive that will include both military and civilian donations.

Men and women from the Presidio, Oakland Army Terminal, Fort Mason, the Triple A, the 163rd Military Police and other units, rallied to the call for all blood types, particularly for type O Positive.

Patients undergoing surgery at Letterman, many of them seriously ill, have already benefited from the generosity of the Presidio and off-Post unit members who built up depleted reserves in the blood bank supply.

Total Damage Won't Exceed $100,000Mark

"The Presidio, as a whole, came through relatively well," said Post Engineer Col. James R. Rundell yesterday evaluating last Friday's earthquake damage. He estimated the total physical destruction to run between $50,000 and $100,000.

The Post Dispensary did not treat a single earthquake patient and summed up the experience this way: "We rocked a little but everybody remained emotionally firm."

Actual damage to the Presidio according to the Post Engineer, included a number of broken windows (about 100 at Letterman Army Hospital), approximately 25 brick chimneys damaged to varying degrees, a few cracks in masonary, some fallen plaster and two broken water mains. No fires were reported.

Most houses escaped serious damage. But the damage to the Westlake home of Lt. Col. John R. Spark, 6th Army AG section, was so serious that he was forced to move into permanent quarters at the Presidio. Damage included broken water pipes, twisted foundation, buckled basement floor, toppled refrigerator, cracked fireplace and shattered dishes. No one was home at the time.

Pvt. James Beven at Headquarters USA Garrison rates the quake as "the most terrifying thing I've ever experienced."

Padres Hit 100%

The Sixth Army and Post Chaplain sections are the first to hit 100 per cent participation in the Savings Bond Campaign. The Sixth Army Finance and Accounting and Signal section also topped the 65 per cent participation goal by publication deadline. The 4th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis and the 4th Armored Division at Fort Hood, Tex., will begin reorganization as atomic combat units 1 April, the Department of the Army announced yesterday.

Within the next two years, all Army infantry, armored and airborne divisions will be tailored to fight wars in which atomic weapons have been introduced, while retaining the firepower and general effectiveness for successful non-atomic combat.

Units already reorganized are the 25th Infantry Division, Hawaii; 1st Armored Division, Fort Polk, La.; 1st Infantry Division, Fort Riley, Kan.; the 11th Airborne, Germany; and the 101st Airborne Division at Fort Campbell, Ky.

No RIFs Are Planned; Release Budget Details

All Activities and troop units based on the Presidio will feel the impact of the $431,275 budget cut received by the Post for this quarter of FY 1957 and initially announced in last week's Star Presidian. Reduction of funds sub-allocated to technical services and activities were determined by the Program Budget Advisory Committee, chairmanned by Col. E. B. Hempstead, Acting President, and approved by the Post Commander, Col. C. E. Lundquist.

The staff sections and activities designated to be cut are Ordnance, $129,000; Engineer, $100,000; Quartermaster, $79,310, including $17,310 for gasoline, oil and lubricants for vehicles and power equipment; Comptroller, $30,000; Signal, $22,000; S3 TDY, $20,000; Special Services, $10,000; Transportation, $7,500; Recruiting, $3,000, and Veterinary travel, $465.

An additional $30,000 saving will result from the virtual elimination of civilian overtime in all activities except in actual emergencies. This action will necessarily result in late reports and piling up of backlogs of paper work. All requests for overtime must be approved by the Commanding Officer.

Enlisted personnel of Companies C, D and E will be made available for assigned duties the full 40 hours of the normal work week. Training requirements will, of a necessity, have to be met on Saturday mornings. In addition, military personnel will be utilized for essential overtime duties.

Present personnel ceilings will not be affected, according to the approved recommendations. Training of civilian employees other than new employees will be eliminated during the fourth quarter and civilians will be encouraged to take annual leave from April through June. The latter proposal is to level off civilian leave, particularly during the summer vacation months.

Each staff section, activity or troop unit that utilizes the Self-Service Supply System has been notified of a 10 per cent reduction

Competitive Promotions Will Key New System

Washington (AFPS)—A plan eventually placing enlisted promotions in all MOS's on a "Promotion Qualification Score" basis, discarding the quota system as such, has been announced by the Army.

Expected to make promotions competitive in the atomic-age Army, opportunities for new stripes will depend strictly upon individual qualification.

Shaped to the Cordiner Committee recommendations for rewarding productivity, eligibility for advancement will be determined by a composite score based on new MOS Proficiency Tests.

To be introduced gradually as the proficiency tests are developed, promotions based on PQS's will first be made in MOS's requiring long technical training and in skills where re-enlistment rates are relatively low.

At present, promotions are made through Department of the Army quotas established on the existing grade vacancies.

When these vacancies are alloted to commands according to the number eligible, qualifications vary and inequities between organizations may occur, unless those who may be promoted and quotas are equal, the Army said.

Here's how the new plan will work:

- As the MOS Proficiency Tests, which have been announced in DA Pamphlet 611-2, are released, all in grades E-6 and below may work toward a "Promotional Qualification Score."
- The PQS will be a composite total of points based upon:
- The test score; time in grade; ratings by commanders and evaluation boards; Army schooling; civilian schooling, including GED

New Device Will Detect Crevasses

Future explorers into the arctic wastelands will walk more securely due to a device developed by the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories at Ft. Belvoir, Va., which locates crevasses electronically.

The machine, mounted on a Weasel, creates an electronic field which is distorted when it detects a hidden crack in the ice. The detector located all known crevasses and some new ones during tests covering more than 100 miles of the Greenland Ice Cap last summer.

Command Change

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Post Commanding Officer, has announced the appointments of Col. Charles G. Rau as Deputy Commanding Officer and Col. E. B. Hempstead, Executive Officer. Colonel Rau was formerly Deputy Post Commander and Colonel Hempstead was Chief of the S4 section. Both can be reached at Ext. 2451.

Army Tests North Wind In Aerobee Rocket Plan

High altitude rockets are now being fired from the top of the world to map the North Wind near its source, the Department of the Army has announced. The experiments are expected to lead to more accurate predictions of cold weather to come.

Army scientists of the U.S. Army Signal Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J., planned the experiments.

The rockets will reveal for the first time the precise direction, speed and temperature of icy winds responsible for winter cold spells as well as other high altitude winds. These air currents will be thoroughly explored to an altitude of 80 miles.

The first specially-equipped Aerobee rocket has already been fired from Fort Churchill, deep in northern Canada. Nine more launchings will follow during the 1957-58 International Geophysical Year, the first of which will take place next July.

The Aerobees spray 18 packets of high explosives into the air at pre-set intervals during the ascent. As the four-pound charges explode, sensitive instruments on the ground record the barely audible blasts. From the time lag between each explosion and the sound's arrival on earth, scientists can compute vital facts about the polar winds.

Ft. Gordon USDB Closed

The drop in the number of military personnel assigned to the Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Gordon, Ga., has been so great that this institution will be closed by 30 June, Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker announced this week.

The disciplinary barracks will be placed on a standby status.

VA Official Scores Use Of Name For Profits

Door-to-door solicitors implying they represent Veterans Administration or have VA endorsement for a product are acting without sanction of VA.

The statement was issued this week by J. Glenn Corbitt, Manager of the VA Regional Office at San Francisco, California, in response to inquiries of verbal statements made by agents soliciting subscriptions or funds, or selling products in behalf of veterans.

"VA does not endorse any product, project or commercial endeavor for the profit of individuals, organizations, or corporations," Mr. Corbitt said.

He added no VA employees are permitted to use their official connection with VA to identify themselves in connection with any project other than one directly connected with their official duties.

Mr. Corbitt said VA neither endorses nor condemns door-to-door solicitations in behalf of veterans, but it advises those who may suspect the legitimacy of such endeavors to check with their Better Business Bureau or any community organization acting in that capacity.

New Program Will Tighten Off-Post Traffic Violations

More than 80 per cent of the traffic fatalities and 50 per cent of the traffic injuries involving military personnel in the Sixth Army area occur outside the limits of posts, camps and stations. A program has been launched to reduce and control these off-post accident

State and municipal police officials within the area will report all serious off-post traffic violations involving military personnel to the headquarters.

Reports will be forwarded to unit commanders through the Provost Marshal, who will record the reports the same way as an Offense or Incident Report.

In most cases the report will not be used as a basis for military punishment when the individual has been punished by civilian authorities for the same offense.

New Series Starts Today

High taxes, high prices, juvenile delinquency, traffic congestion—oh such problems we Americans think we have! But has anyone ever stopped us from complaining about these things? Can't we worship the way we please and move freely from city to city?

These basic rights are acknowledged nonchalantly by Americans. It is so natural for us to attend the school of our choice, compete for jobs and expect raises and fringe benefits, that we forget these situations are not the rule in every country.

Many of our naturalized citizens have witnessed the opposite, however; they carry with them memories of countries which did and do not uphold such freedoms.

A new series, "Liberty's Legacies," will be introduced in the Star Presidian this week. Through the articles, local naturalized citizens will be urged to tell their respective stories. With their help maybe we can begin to appreciate the basic inherited freedoms that draw others to America.

Harry can't resist the impulse to rev his chariot to peak power while waiting for slow-moving ("they're all cattle!") foot traffic to take advantage of a favorable light. The mice-like panic and muttered threats that result are music to Harry's frustrated jet-pilot ego. The only thing that stands between Harry and slow strangulation by incensed pedestrians is their long suffering control, but even a cornered mouse will finally bite.

Driver Commended

The Presidio's version of "Muni Man of the Month" was recorded this week when the Post School Director commended Fred Condova, Motor Pool driver, to the Post Commanding Officer.

In writing to Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Mrs. Rosemary Aubry said that Condova's "kindness and courtesy to our preschool children is to be commended. Both parents and teachers feel the children are in competent hands."

Now Is The Time To Save Money On '57 Taxes

(This is the last of a series of articles on federal income tax filing. The articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Accountants.)

Often the greatest tax savings are to be made during the year by planning your decisions with tax considerations in mind, rather than at the end of the year when you have your tax form in hand.

Here are some possibilities for reducing your tax which you can't do anything about after the end of the tax year, but which might reduce next year's tax return.

● If you are providing nearly half the support of someone who might qualify as a dependent, consider providing more than half so you will be entitled to the $600 exemption. The extra amount you contribute may be less than the tax savings.

● Remember that unless a dependent is under 19 or a full-time student, you will lose the exemption if his income is $600 or more. Be sure to check the income of everyone you expect to claim as a dependent.

● If you are planning to be married, a wedding before midnight, December 31, 1957, will give you the privilege of filing a joint return for 1957. This probably would result in substantial tax saving.

● A baby born before midnight, December 31, qualifies as an exemption for the full year.

● If your medical expenses are likely to be over three per cent of your income this year and you expect them to be less next year, pay as many medical bills as possible before the end of the year, up to the maximum allowable deduction. If you borrow to do this, remember that you can also deduct the interest.

● If your medical expenses are over the maximum deduction, perhaps you can defer part of the payment until after the end of the year.

● Borrowing to pay your taxes can sometimes let you take the deduction a year earlier.

● If you sell your home at a profit, remember that you do not have to pay a capital gains tax if you pay more for a new home within a year than the price you get for the old one.

● When investing money, remember that stock in a domestic corporation offers the possibility of dividend exclusion and credit.

● If you sell securities or other "capital assets" at a profit, it is usually better to wait until you have held them at least six months so that the profit will be taxed at the capital gains rate instead of as ordinary income.

● When buying bonds, consider not only the interest rate but the fact that interest on state and municipal bonds is exempt from federal income tax.

If any of these points is likely to make a substantial difference in your tax, it will probably pay you to discuss your problems with the Internal Revenue Service, or to seek professional tax advice. Anything you pay for assistance in preparing your tax return is deductible from your taxable income.

But beware of any "tax expert" who claims he can cut your tax below the amount you really owe. It's a good idea to pick someone who has had experience in dealing with the Internal Revenue Service, just in case the government should raise some question about your return. (AFPS)

Liberty's Legacies!

Court Reporter Lauds 'Fair Chance'

Hitler's treatment of the Jews prior to World War II may be history-book stuff to most of us, but to Werner "Bernie" Ebstein, reared in that atmosphere, it was a grim beginning to a now normal life.

Bernie, better known as "Sullivan" or "Ryan" to his Sixth Army Inspector General fellow workers, was born in Breslau, Germany, in 1924. He attended public school in that city, now part of Poland, for a year before Hitler decreed segregation and Jewish children were placed in separate schools. Bernie attended one of these schools until 1940.

The next date flickering in Bernie's memory is November 19, 1938. At 0200 hours he was awakened by his mother to witness a spectacular fire—the burning of all Jewish synagogues except one. This one, oddly enough, was the most Orthodox and the one in which his father was an honorary official. It was bypassed only because it was surrounded by Gentile-German tenements, and was used later as an emergency hospital.

In September, 1939, Jews were restricted to certain areas, Bernie explained. Rationing was in effect for all Germans; Jews were given the leftovers.

"We could always tell when the Germans invaded a country," Bernie laughed. "For instance, we ate fish from Norway and cottage cheese from Holland."

As did all Jews living in Germany during these years, the Ebsteins sought a means of escape. They grabbed at their only chance—a route across Lithuania, Russia, Siberia, Manchuria and the Yalu Sea to Shanghai. The route, frequently followed by refugees, entailed a 40-day trip. The Ebsteins left Breslau on 29 August, 1940.

Meet O'Sullivan

From September, 1940, until the Pearl Harbor attack, the Jews were allowed free movement in Shanghai by the Japanese. After that, relations became strained and in September, 1943, all Jews were herded into a three-mile area. The restriction was enforced until the end of the war.

"We thought the war was over a day too soon," recalled Bernie with a smile. "We started celebrating and were arrested; we were sure scared but were released the next day."

In 1948, the Ebsteins headed for San Francisco. First came Bernie's brother in January, Bernie in May and finally his parents in October. Brought over by the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, Bernie was sent to Chicago where he stayed until October. He then came to San Francisco and worked as a drug clerk and candy maker.

Since coming to the United States, Bernie's life has paralleled many others—work, Army, school, marriage, family. He attended the Lenhardt School for Court Reporters under the G.I. bill and completed a four-year course in two years at night school. He passed the Federal test for court reporters, then the California State test for court reporters. As far as is known, he is the first naturalized court reporter in the United States.

From an oppressed German-Jew to an American court reporter. How does Bernie associate these? "Through court reporting I am able to prepare objective judicial records," he explained. "Objective viewpoints and a fair chance were unheard of during much of my life."

Civilian Awards, Cash Goes To Five

Four civilian Sixth Army AG and one Army Reserve Headquarters employee received performance award certificates and cash awards this week in two ceremonies.

Col. F. G. Stone, AG executive officer, presented awards to Mrs. James (Kimiye) Okubo, editorial clerk; Mrs. Freida Taylor, Mrs. Sara Shepherd and Mrs. Masaru (Dorothy) Takashiba, clerk typists.

The women shared a $100 check equally. They were commended for their work as a team in revamping a system of Sixth Army circulars.

Mrs. Georgia Dallas, Chief of the CMD Active Duty Branch, received a $200 check in addition to her certificate. An employee of the Headquarters for seven years, Mrs. Dallas was presented her awards by Col. Frank R. Maerdian, CMD Deputy Chief.

New Camera Debuts Here

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

A team from the Army Map Service will be at the Presidio Saturday to demonstrate a newly developed bench camera which can be used to achieve a parallel perspective when photographing terrain models.

Photographs with parallel perspective can be gridded in the same manner that maps are gridded.

Three demonstrations of the camera and its capabilities will be made Saturday. At 0900 it will be shown in room 133, Bldg. 39. In the afternoon interested military personnel and key civilians are invited to showings at 1300 and 1500 hours at Harmon Armory.

Hydraulic Tailgate attachment on two new Post Transportation 1½-ton trucks enables Presidio personnel to do more work with less personnel. Although Pvt. James L. Petty of E. Company, USA Garrison, is helping truckdriver Elwood Linyard above, the driver can actually do all the work himself. The built-in freight elevator will lift up to 2000 pounds.

Trans Adds Versatile Trucks

Post Transportation Section has obtained two 1½-ton trucks with hydraulic tail gates which enables the drivers of the trucks to move items in and out of the trucks without assistance, it was reported this week.

The tail gate which swings out from the truck to a horizontal position and then moves up and down like an elevator has a lifting capacity of 2000 pounds. One side has a ramp so the driver can wheel items on and off the ramp.

One of the trucks, being used by Letterman Army Hospital, hauls 25,000 pieces of linen to and from the laundry daily. The other truck is assigned to the Household Goods Branch of Post Transportation and is used to move personnel baggage.

Hour of Sharing

Presidio People Pledge $209

The sum of $209.00—with further donations pledged—was the amount collected at the Post Chapel on Sunday for the "One Great Hour of Sharing," sponsored by Chaplain Major Erhard H. Harms, Post Chaplain.

Launched in conjunction with the Church World Service Branch, National Council, Churches of Christ, in the United States, the project is in aid of oppressed and displaced peoples throughout the world.

The Presidio Chapel collection was realized through only one religious service. The money will be forwarded to the National Council for distribution on a non-denominational basis, after the pledges given during last Sunday's service are honored.

Presidio Easter Schedule Set

Solemn religious services keynoting the penitential season of Lent will be conducted at the Post Chapel and The Chapel Of Our Lady of the Presidio during the next three weeks.

Next Sunday (Passion Sunday) marks the beginning of the Passiontide drama which introduces the final two weeks of Christ's earthly existence. On this day, the Roman Catholic Church Calendar prescribes the reading—from the altar—of the longest of the Christian gospels.

The following Sunday (Palm Sunday) marks Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem from Gethsemane — triumphant until He was seized by the Roman rulers and sentenced to be crucified. The distribution of palms on that day signifies a spiritual return to Jerusalem when Christ's followers strewed his path with their branches.

Holy Week, beginning on the last seven days preceding Easter Sunday is marked by the symbolic stripping of the altars in all Roman Catholic churches and the draping of their religious figures in purple to denote the mourning co-incidental with the death of Christ on Good Friday.

The Lenten penitential season for Christians closes on Easter Saturday at midnight at which time the altars are again dressed in preparation for the first Easter Mass, honoring Christ's Resurrection from the grave.

HOLY WEEK SCHEDULE:

PROTESTANT CHURCHES: Daily Services at the Post Chapel every day at noon.

Exchange Expert Answers Key Questions Concerning Operation

Presidio military personnel and dependents save from 25 to 40 per cent on essential items (tooth paste, razor blades, etc.) when they buy at their Post Exchange, George G. Elliott, Bay Area Exchange General Manager, said this week.

Information supplied by Elliott agreed with the answers on PX queries given by Headquarters, Army and Air Force Exchange Service, recently.

The mark up allowed in a PX is strictly limited, said Elliott. Clothing can only be marked up 12½ per cent and the highest mark up on costume jewelry and watches cannot exceed 25 per cent. "This is about half what the regular commercial mark up would be," he said.

"And another thing," Elliott added, "part of that profit comes right back to the soldier for his unit found. The money is apportioned by Sixth Army on the basis of troop strength and varies between $.50 and $1.65 per man."

The Post Exchanges are not tax supported and must be kept up and operated from funds created by purchases. Exchanges do not pay rent.

The answer to "Why can't I buy televisions, washing machines, and other items in the exchange," is furnished by the Headquarters, Army and Air Force Exchange Service. In 1949, an agreement was reached between the armed services and Congress which restricted the items to be sold to a specific list. Post Exchanges are also limited to the amount they can charge for items. Radios, cameras and watches, the highest priced items, cannot exceed $60.

Post Exchanges are operated by the Post commander through his exchange officer. They work through the Army and Air Force Exchange Service which is the entity which embraces the world-wide activities, personnel, non-appropriated funds and property through which commanders provide exchange service.

Other Post facilities, such as barber shops, cleaners and shoe repair shops, are operated by concessionaires on a contract basis. Their prices are set by the Exchange Council whose members are selected by the installation commander.

The civilians who work at the Presidio are allowed to use cafeteria facilities. However, contrary to a recently published national article on PX's, civilians may not buy cigarettes. Military personnel still pay the federal tax on cigarettes, but they do save the state tax.

"It is easy to be heard if you have an idea for improving PX service," said Mr. Elliott. All general suggestions should be deposited in any one of the many suggestion boxes on Post. Requests for specific items may be given to the clerks who all have "want slips" by their cash register. If there is enough demand, items can usually be stocked.

There is no guarantee that PX privileges won't be further cut. The Army and Air Force Exchange Service urges military personnel to protect their privileges in the following ways:

- Don't buy for others.
- Don't resell items.
- Don't antagonize the downtown merchants by examining their merchandise if you intend to buy it in the PX.
- Don't boast about exchange prices.

In the Spring . . .

A Young Man Goes To War

Five out of the eight principal wars fought by the United States were started in April. Only the War of 1812, World War II and Korean War began in other months.

Forty years ago tomorrow the United States barged into World War I. On 12 April, 1846, formal declaration of war was made against Mexico. Fifteen years later, on 15 April, the Civil War began.

The American Revolution started on 19 April, 1775, and Congress declared war on Spain on 21 April, 1898. In addition to these wars, several Indian wars began in April.

Talent Finalists Play To SRO Crowd

I suppose you knew all the time . . . that since 1776, five different flags have flown over the Presidio! Just in case there is one reader who didn't know—here goes. The Mexican, Spanish, Maximilian Empire, and two American flags have been unfurled here at one time or another, since the garrison was established!

Bet you don't know where Penguin Island is! . . . It's almost within walking distance of where you stand . . . or about one mile as the seagull flies. Isla de los Alcateaces—Alcatraz—or Penguin Island, was named by Lieutenant Ayala, in 1775, when it formed the central part of the fortress during Spanish reign. It later became the first military Post completed by the U.S. Army . . . in 1857.

Until the end of the Civil War, Alcatraz was considered a triumph in military engineering. Its three main batteries at that time consisted of 40, 35 and 16 guns, respectively; designed to rake with flanking fire the channels on either side of the island by which vessels entered San Francisco Bay. To make the island more impregnable to foreign landing parties, its shores were blasted away to create the present sheer cliffs you now see from the shore.

A "shot proof guardhouse" was the pride and joy of the Army Engineers in the fortifying of Alcatraz. It had a garrison so situated that it could command the entire area with musket fire. And it was prepared for lengthy siege with a supply of powder magazines and supply chambers and cisterns built deep in the solid rock.

"The Rock's" first commanding officer was Captain Joseph Stuart, of the Third Artillery. In 1860, when the Third was in Nevada quelling an Indian uprising, Alcatraz was occupied by a detachment of 10 men from the Presidio.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Penguin Island was strengthened by an Ordnance Detachment from the Corps of Engineers, and a detachment of Dragoons, under command of Major Henry Burton. Its defenses were fortified at that time, and in 1892, it was designated a Saluting Post . . . to return the signals of foreign vessels entering San Francisco Harbor.

In 1895, Alcatraz became the U. S. Disciplinary Barracks . . . a prophetic turn of events . . . in view of its present purpose.

Did you know . . . that during World War I, the Sixth Infantry Division was in so many engagements it was nicknamed The Sight-Seeing Sixth? . . . Its successor, the Sixth U.S. Army, has since upheld the original reputation, for its six-point star was seen throughout the Pacific . . . from Hawaii to New Guinea.

During the sweep of Allied Forces in the war against Japan, all major campaigns were led by the Sixth Army. It was the first Field Army in the military theater . . . a strategic defense force in the conquest of Japan.

Activated in Fort Sam Houston, Texas, in 1943, the original cadre for the Sixth Army were drawn from the Third Army headquarters, under command of General Walter Kruger.

At the time of the Luzon campaign in 1945, the Sixth Army supervised the mopping-up procedure in the Philippines. It took over Occupation duties in the Japanese islands until 1946 when the Eighth Army relieved it.

The present Sixth U.S. Army was reactivated in 1946.

You mustn't ever underestimate the power of your Army newspaper. . . . An item which appeared in a recent column regarding the cure for sinus which we discovered in the seed pod of the eucalyptus tree created widespread interest. This week the giant eucalyptus on the parade ground got a crew cut from the Post Engineer Grounds Maintenance men. It was top-heavy and its weight was not properly balanced. Possibly as a means of forestalling a case of botanic arthritis or something, the groundsmen performed a major operation on the old tree. . . . Not long after the branches fell to the ground we saw several men and women collecting paper sacks full of the eucalyptus pods. Meanwhile the air blowing down the parade ground was redolent of healing oils seeping from the freshly-cut branches.

And how does your sinus condition feel today? . . . Debra

"Rigolettos" Sensational; Dixieland Group Scores

An enthusiastic crowd jampacked the Presidio Service Club on Wednesday night to watch the cream of Sixth U. S. Army talent vie for the right to represent this area in the All-Army finals at Ft. Monmouth, N. J., 10-18 May.

Contestants had reached the area finals via semi-finals at Ft. Ord and Ft. Lewis. Presidio failed to survive these early eliminations.

An opera bouffe group, composed of Pvt. Harold Estby, Pfc. Amos Finley, Jr., Pvt. Lawrence R. Clandon and Sp3 Edwin Hunter, from Ft. Ord, The Rigoletto Quartette, walked off with the hearts of the crowd and the votes of the judges in the vocal group finals. This talented unit drew raves, and looks like Sixth Army's best bet in the finals. The Ft. Lewis Quad Leaders won second place honors.

In the individual specialty competition, Pvt. Barry D. Christy turned in a sensational baton whirling exhibition to beat out Pfc. Julie Laguisan, a svelte Hawaiian doll with built-in hula action.

A solid Dixieland instrumental group from Camp Hanford belted the crowd and the judges to score best in their class. Made up of Pfc. John W. Torbett, III, M/Sgt. John C. Lindsey, Pvt. Mike D. Moran and Pvt. Larry L. Di Palma, the red hot combo will take a lot of beating in the finals. The Trumpet Tones from Ft. Huachuca was second.

A concert pianist, Pfc. William L. Scott, of Ft. Ord, displayed an almost overwhelming power and verve to beat out smooth stylist Pfc. P. Goodrum, of Ft. Lewis, on the eighty-eights. Scott went all the way last year and displayed his wares on the Ed Sullivan Show. He has a good chance to repeat.

The crowd disagreed with the judges in only one instance, that being when they named Pvt. Joseph Shapiro, a pop stylist from Ft. Lewis, the winner over Capt. William L. Black, a finalist in the annual Metropolitan Opera talent search.

Two other groups, musical and non-musical, were uncontested in the finals; the Camp Hanford Trio and the Jyro Jets from Ft. Ord. The Jets, second in the All-Army finals last year, presented their sensational trampolin act. The Hanford Trio were smooth but seemed to lack the necessary polish for the bigger test.

Post Commander Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, assisted by Sixth Army Special Services Chief, Colonel Arthur W. Gustafson, presented the trophies.

Judges were Dr. Fenton McKenna, head of the San Francisco State drama department; Dwight Newton, Examiner TV critic and columnist; Lu Hurley, better known as Mr. Myrtle; Roberto, talent scout and program director, and Henry Warner, talent teacher and agent.

THE TEAHOUSE OF THE AUGUST MOON is the experience of a shy and uncertain Army captain who is given responsibility of rehabilitation of an Okinawan village. Tobiki is the village to which the mild-mannered Ford is sent —to run his job according to Washington's Plan B, which calls for the building of a Pentagon-shaped schoolhouse, lectures on democracy, and a special spur to American get-up techniques. But the plan tells Ford nothing about the Oriental way of doing things. Gradually, he solves the many problems in his own inimitable way.

THE BUSTER KEATON STORY is the true-life film biography of one of the screen's leading comedians. Young Keaton, at the age of three, was learning his art in front of the footlights. In his late teens he was a vaudeville star with Hollywood beckoning. After playing several bit parts, Keaton emerged as a full-fledged star and rode a wave of popularity until the "talkies" arrived. His first two attempts in the new medium are failures in which he invested his life savings. Discouraged, he returns to vaudeville with the wife who has kept her faith in him, both determined that he will succeed in the one big thing he knows best, how to make people laugh.

THE RIVER'S EDGE shows a professional killer fleeing south from San Francisco with a large haul from a hold-up. He is searching for a guide he knows, a Korean War veteran who has married the thug's girl friend. The fugitive intends to use the vet's knowledge of the mountain terrain in getting to the border and beyond, then kill him and get back the girl. Locating the couple, the three start out to Mexico by car, but are stopped by a border guard, who is run down by the killer. Before dying, the guard tells what has happened to the local sheriff, who launches a man-hunt. Pressed by the police, the trio, now ruthlessly dominated by the killer, climb higher and higher in the mountains, while hate and tension spring up between the two men. After several unsuccessful struggles, the guide is injured, but not before he sees the killer meet his death in a fall from a precipice.

12 ANGRY MEN introduces a jury in the Court of General Sessions. They have just finished hearing a murder case. The judge instructs them, and reminds the jurors that if a reasonable doubt exists in their minds, a verdict of "Not Guilty" must be found. He stresses that the death sentence is mandatory if a "Guilty" verdict is brought in. In the jury room, review of the case results in 11 "Guilty" to one "Not Guilty." The lone dissenter is a soft-spoken engineer who expresses a belief that the evidence against the accused is not conclusive enough to dispel reasonable doubts. Continuing discussions cause other jurors to question the soundness of their decision. After hours of dramatic deliberation, one by one, the jurors reverse themselves, finally voting for acquittal.

Sociology 161, "Race and Ethnic Relations," and Government 149, "Urban Politics," will begin 8 April. Both classes will be conducted from 1830 to 2100 hours each Monday and Wednesday. Sociology 161 will meet in Bldg. 1131 and Government 149 in Bldg. 1101.

From 1430 to 1700, the Sixth U. S. Army Band combo will present music for a Tea Dance included in the club program.

740th Takes Third At AAA Cage Meet

San Francisco's 740th AAA Missile Battalion came home this week with third place and a 1-2 record in the first annual U.S. Army Air Defense Command basketball tournament at Fort Devens, Mass.

The 740th, previous winners of the San Francisco defense and 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command tournaments, took their first game from the 546th AAA Battalion of Fort Worth, Texas, 79-69. but lost their next two—65-60 to the 602d AAA Battalion from the Army Chemical Center, Maryland, and 76-69 to the 516th AAA Battalion, Selfridge Air Force Base, Michigan.

The 516th, representing the 5th AA Regional Command, wound up with the tournament championship with a pair of upset victories over the 602d in the finals.

Hubie Brown led the way for the 740th in all three games. The former Niagara University player who captained and coached the 740th scored 35 points in the opener against the 546th, followed by guard Paul Brooks with 25.

Brown scored 27 in the second clash against the 602d, which wound up in second place. The 740th was able to bottle up the 602d's star player, Thomas Holbrook, but couldn't stop his teammate, V. F. Del Negro, from scoring 20 points. The San Francisco five dropped the game in the final half after taking a 33-28 lead in the first 20 minutes.

In the semi-final meeting with the 5th Region champions, the 740th moved in front 34-29 in the first half, and stayed in front until the final nine minutes, when the 516th tied it at 54-all and then moved ahead. The 740th stayed within three points until the last 60 seconds, when the 516th scored twice and held the ball at the final gun.

Brown scored 33 points for the 740th. The total was also high for the game, as Paul Hinking led the 516th with 27. Brooks and John Bauer had 10 each for the 740th. The 516th's superior height was a big factor in the decision.

The tournament left each of the regional commands except the First and Fourth in possession of an athletic championship for the entire U.S. Army Air Defense Command. The Second AA Regional Command won the softball title and Fort Scott's 752d AAA Gun Battalion, representing the 6th AA Regional Command, captured the volleyball crown in earlier tournaments.

Tennis and Golf

An announcement from Special Services Sports Office states that there will be an intramural play-off for tennis players in early May. For the golfers there will be an intramural competition held in the latter part of May or the early part of June.

Winners in the intramural tournaments will be selected to represent the Presidio in Sixth Army competition and All-Army competition.

Softball Tourney

A pre-season softball tournament will begin 15 April, according to Special Services' Sports Director Hal Fischer. The tournament will give the teams a chance to get organized and play together prior to the opening of play in competition for the Post intramural championship scheduled to begin on or about the first week of May.

The length of the pre-season tourney and whether it will be double or single elimination will depend on the response from the units desiring to enter teams in the tourney. Tournament winners will be awarded a trophy.

Locals Down Ord Women

Six games out of six were racked up by the Presidio WAC volleyball team when they met the Ft. Ord women Monday night at the LAH Gym. Presidio's women had no trouble downing the Ord women with scores of 15-0, 15-13, 15-8, 15-12, 15-6, and 15-5.

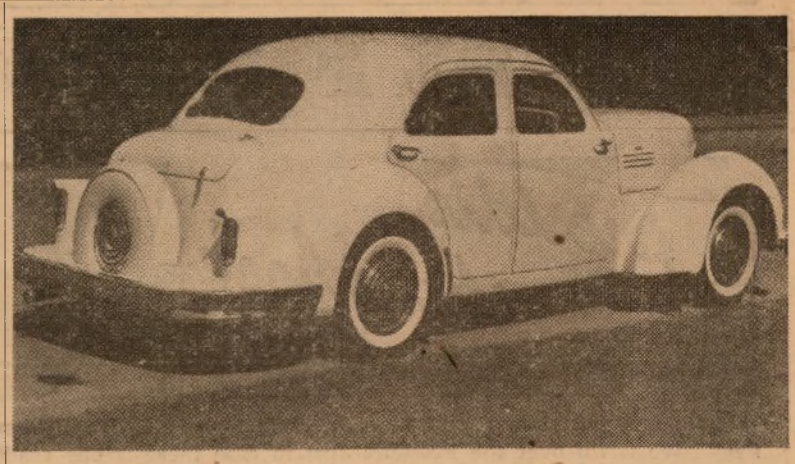
Games are a catch-as-catch-can affair since the WACs are not in any organized league.

Shooters Leave For Hawaii

The Presidio Pistol team will depart Monday for Scofield Barracks, Hawaii, as a result of a friendly challenge between Col. Carl E. Lundquist, Post Commander, and Maj. General Edwin J. Messinger, Commanding General, 25th Inf. Div., Scofield Barracks. The challenge was issued to Col. Lundquist when he visited Hawaii in December.

Representing the Presidio will be Col. Charles G. Rau, officer in charge and team captain; Col. Leon J. Rouge; Capt. John F. Kallam; M/Sgt. James L. Wade; M/Sgt. David A. Dewey; and Sfc. Nelson Lincoln. M/Sgt. Dewey is the only man on the Presidio team who does not hold a Distinguished Pistol Shooter's medal. Three medals, known as leg medals, are required to be awarded the Distinguished Shooter's medal and Dewey holds his first one.



The match will be a 900 aggregate match with .22, .38, and .45 calibre pistols. The Presidio team will leave Travis AFB on Monday afternoon and will return to the Presidio 15 April.

"Huppolet," owned by Miss Winnie Northrup of San Francisco, will be one of the customized automobiles shown at the Auto Show at the Presidio Service Club on 13-14 April. The Huppolet is powered by a '49 Chevrolet engine and was originally a stock 1939 Hupp.

Auto Show Will Have 8 Customs

One of the featured attractions of the Automobile Show to be held at the Service Club 13-14 April will be the prize winning customized 1939 Hupp Sedan. The automobile is owned by Winnie Northrup of San Francisco and will be one of the numerous customized autos to be exhibited at the Service Club Show.

Purchased for $125.00, the car was redesigned and reworked by Miss Northrup; her nephew, Jim Kurtzhal; and his friend, Tiny Toel, over a period of two years before she considered it ready for showing in the custom and rod shows. The car has won four top awards in the shows entered since its initial showing in the National Roadster Show held at Oakland 26 February, 1956. It has been shown in Chico, San Mateo, Santa Rosa and numerous other custom shows in Northern and Central California.

Originally the car was a 1939 Hupp and now is referred to as the "Huppolet" by Miss Northrup. Redesigning and restoring the automobile has made it a cross-breed of many lines. Front wheels are '50 Nash and the rear wheels are '49 Chevrolet, the original windshield and lower grill were replaced with Morris Minor shield and grill, headlights are '56 Volkswagen lights, front and rear bumper were taken from a '49 Chrysler and bent out to wrap around the front fenders.

The original block was replaced with '49 Chevrolet straight six and the transmission and running gear also come from a '49 Chevrolet, a '41 Dodge rear window replaced the original one, '48 Studebaker taillights were mounted vertically and a '35 Ford trunk was moulded into the original trunk space. Topping off the exterior customizing is a '55 Ford Waterfall Blue paint job.

The interior is a red and white custom upholstering job that cost Miss Northrup $250.00. Miss Northrup estimates that only $1,500.00 has been spent on the total project. This would not have been possible if the majority of the work had not been done by Miss Northrup's nephew.

Also scheduled to be present at the show are seven creations belonging to the members of Satan's Angels. Miss Isabelle Walker, one of the guiding lights of the show, stated that "the cars are so low that we have to get the grass cut for them." There will also be eight sports cars, three racers that have competed at Bonneville Salt Flats or the Indianapolis 500, and two Italian racing motorcycles.

April 13 has been designated as the day for the skill driving test known as the "Road-eo." The Road-eo is patterned after the American Trucking Association's Truck Road-eo Rules. The winning driver will be selected upon the basis of his driving skill, fitness of his car, personal appearance and a short written test on knowledge of safe-driving practices. The competition is open to one individual from each unit on the post who will drive his own automobile.

The remainder of the activities of the show will be held on April 14. This will include the automobile show, continual showing of international and national racing films, demonstrations and exhibits by Yellow Cab Co., California Highway Patrol, and Green Cross Safety Council.

Beginning at 8:00 Sunday evening, there will be a fashion show of the latest sports clothes for men and women. Apparel will be modeled by military personnel from the Presidio. The show is being put on by the Enlisted Personnel Advisory Council under the guidance of the Service Club.

Williams Selected To AAU All-Stars

Balloters in the AFPS All-Star basketball team competition, who didn't stop reading two and three season old reports long enough to watch this season's stars and neglected to even place Presidio's Carroll Williams on the honorable mention team, may be surprised to learn that Williams was considered worthy of an All-American rating at the recent National AAU basketball championships at Denver, Colorado.

Williams played for the Army All-Stars in the Denver tourney and was voted to the first team guard slot on the basis of his showing this season and the three games that he took part in in the Denver Tourney before the Army All-Stars were defeated by Peoria, 82-67.

According to the AFPS balloting the first team consisted of Sihugo Green, Tom Gola, K. C. Jones, Jesse Arnelle, and Al Ferrari. The second team was composed of Darrell Floyd, Bob Kessler, Dick Boushka, Julius McCoy, and Ralph Beard.

Jerry Bird, who joined the Toreros after the Sixth Army championship tourney and went with them to the All-Army Tournament at Ft. Dix, New Jersey, was voted to the AFPS honorable-mention team.

Practice Putts are taken by M/Sgt. Clyde H. Shaw; Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, retired; and Sp3 Sylvia Jane Carbonnell in preparation for making their attempts to beat Jack Burke, Jr., in International Golf Day competition sponsored by the Military Police Assn.

Saturday Final Day To Beat Burke Jr.

Today and tomorrow will be the last opportunity to beat Jack Burke Jr.'s third round score in the Master's Open Held in Augusta, Georgia, in International Golf Day Competition sponsored by the Military Police Association.

Competition is world-wide and benefits from the $1.25 entry fee are to be donated to the local charity designated by the sponsoring unit. Proceeds from match competition in this area will go to Youth Activities Fund. One dollar of the entry fee will go to the Youth Fund and the remaining .25 will go toward defraying the costs of striking the medals inscribed, "I beat Jack Burke, Jr."

Competition is open to men and women and the entrants may play as many rounds as they care to in an attempt to beat Burke's card. Male competitors may play their established handicaps or may employ the Callaway System when computing their cards. The women may also play with their established handicaps plus an additional seven stroke handicap or they may also play using the Callaway System of handicapping. Each round played must be accompanied by the $1.25 entrance fee.

Application blanks, with the full particulars are available at the United Services Club as well as golf courses throughout the Bay Area. Additional information may be had by contacting Capt. Robert L. Anderson, local coordinator for International Golf Day, Ext. 2829.

Fencers Take Third Place

Letterman-Presidio fencers maintained a rapid pace last week-end while participating in the Northern California Sabre Team Championships and Epee Championships.

The number one Letterman-Presidio sabre team, Laurance Brownlee, Jose Tafoya, and Bill O'Brien, took third place behind the first place World Championship Hungarian Olympic Sabre Team, and second place Olympic Club team. Fourth place was taken by Letterman's second team of Severo Pasol, Leo Thompson, and David Brownell.

Members of both teams qualified for the United States National Fencing Championships.

Brownlee and Pasol qualified for the Open Epee Championship in the preliminary rounds, but were dropped from the finals by some of the top talent on the Pacific Coast. Brownlee placed fifth and Galvin placed seventh in overall competition.

Sixth Army Men Lead Keglers

With six out of nine games completed, Sixth Army men's bowling team holds the lead with a team aggregate of 6690 pins and the Sixth Army women's team is in sixth spot with 1742 pins, in the All-Army Bowling Tournament being held at Ft. George G. Meade, Maryland.

Yet to be held are the men's and women's remaining team events, doubles, and singles events. Edith Wark is the only bowler representing the Presidio in the All-Army tournament.

Mahoney First At Tri-Meet

Jim Mahoney, Hqs. and Hqs. Co. of the 30th Engr. Gp., won his second two-mile event in as many weeks when he took first place in the triangular track meet between San Francisco State, Sacramento State, and Humboldt State.

The win was also a repeat of the last week's meet in that Mahoney was not officially credited with the win because he was running unattached. Mahoney crossed the wire over 100 yards ahead of the official winner.

Official time for the race was 10:12.4, which would indicate that Mahoney ran the event close to the San Francisco State track record of 9:46. Dick Immenhausen, running mate of Mahoney from the 30th Engineers, was forced to drop from the race when he developed several blisters on his right foot.

Sports Casting with Casey

According to one of our lady fans, golf and fishing widows can now go to the end of the complaint line. Seems a new type, much more put upon and far outnumbering the above, has emerged on the scene. As our fan puts it, "Golfing and fishing widows? Hah! At least they can, and are, taking up these sports with their husbands. This gives them a chance to talk their family problems, etc., over with the king. The really sad case is the boxing widow. She breaks her back getting the house in order, preparing a tasty dinner, seeing that the children have some quiet after dinner entertainment then readies herself for an hour or so of the big man's time. What happens? He rushes home, bolts his dinner without a word, or at least no more than a grudging grunt, and heads for the television set. Any conversation during the fight is met with 'okay, keep it quiet!' or a non-comprehending 'huh.' It was bad enough when this happened once or twice a week, now it's four times a week!" Any rebuttal? Well, I'm sorry girls, but there is little relief in sight. To the contrary, the rising audience ratings of fights, live or filmed, old or new, has convinced media buyers of their terrific potential. Plans are underway to show even more fights with the possibility that every night, maybe twice on Saturday, will be fight night. Maybe you should all band together and demand equal time. . . . Our "big horse," General Duke, my selection for the "Run for the Roses," (Casey-8 Mar-57), came through with a world record-tying effort to win the $123,000 Florida Derby, beating odds-on favorite Bold Ruler. . . . Now that our basketball team is back in the fold we're still in favor of a local match with the Pasadena Glazers for the benefit of AER. Where are all the promoters? . . . It's about time for yours truly to sharpen his plug hooks, oil the old spinner, wax his rod and retie a few flies. Bass seeking time is just around the corner. Trout and other game fish notwithstanding, there is nothing quite like the thrill of that first smashing impact of the black, large or smallmouth, on a smooth gliding surface lure.

After the nearsighted decision in the Joey Lopes-Orlando Zulueta go at the New Capitol Arena in Washington, D. C., on Wednesday night, I hope never again to hear eastern boxing pundits wax bitterly about "California decisions." On our card Lopes scored 99 to 87. Round-wise, we thought he took 9, reluctantly giving Zulueta a split on one of his better defensive spurts. The little California Dynamo kept his more experienced foe on the run in every round, scoring solidly with shots to the head and body. He hurt Zulueta at least twice and only the showmanship of the high-ranked lightweight kept him from showing more obvious strains of battle. We can't blame IBC-owned lightweight titlist Joe Brown for singling out Zulueta for a title defense. Brown should hardly work up a sweat on the over-the-hill Cuban. But why not a crack for rugged Larry Boardman? He can only knock the head off any lightweight living!

Weightlifter Yoshida Bound For Los Angeles

Ralph Yoshida, 16th Base Post Office, the nation's number one weight lifter, middleweight class, will leave tomorrow for Los Angeles to take part in the California State Weightlifting Championships.

Yoshida hails from the island of Maui, Territory of Hawaii, where he captured the Territorial Championships in 1954. The Pennsylvania State Championship was taken by the lifter while he was assigned to Ft. Monmouth, New Jersey, and later the All-Alaska Championship while Yoshida was serving in Alaska.

Late last October, the Olympic Weightlifting Trials were held in San Jose and Yoshida walked away with top honors in the middleweight division and the impression that he was on his way to the land of kangaroos. The Olympic Games' officials later decided to drop the middleweight class in order to carry two heavyweights to the Games for the sake of the team title, and Yoshida was dropped from the team.

Total weight for the three lifts: press of 205 pounds, snatch of 210 pounds, and clean and jerk of 275 pounds was 690 pounds and the top showing in the middleweight division of the Olympic trials. Yoshida has since increased his weight total to 740 pounds with a 220-pound press, 220-pound snatch, and 300-pound clean and jerk, the latter weight being more than twice the weight of the lifter.

Ralph Yoshida

After the Los Angeles meet, Yoshida hopes to journey to the National Championships in Florida in June. The June competition will be the final appearance of the lifter as a serviceman. He will receive his release from active service during the last week in June and then enroll in college in Springfield, Massachusetts. Physical Therapy is Yoshida's center of interest and will be his major subject in college.

Mock Court Martial Proves Effective Troop Info Device

Members of the 16th Base Post Office Tuesday learned the fundamentals of the General Court Martial first hand. They WERE the court martial, the witnesses, the court and the accused.

The morning-long mock court martial was designed to teach the men the duties and functions of members of a general court martial. It also served to show that a man is innocent until proved guilty.

And finally it showed that when a man is proved guilty, Army justice is both just and stern. Pfc. John Doe stole a sport coat and a pair of boots and "hocked" them. He was proved conclusively guilty and was reduced to lowest rank and given four months of hard labor.

Prepared scripts enabled the cast of characters to take part in the trial much the same as it might be done in a stage play. Some enlisted men found themselves playing the role of officers. The "stage" officers were designated by huge mock shoulder insignias.

The whole trial was carried out according to basic legal procedure. Each witness was sworn in, questioned and cross examined. Each military article was cited to back up the court's actions.

Some of the lines in the trial's scenario were quite lively and added to the interest of the trial. The witness who owned the shop where the stolen goods were sold came out with the following:

"I was in my respectible establishment about the 1st of March and this soldier (pointing to accused) comes in with a pair of boots and a coat. He says he wants to sell them for $25. I says to him that they ain't worth $5, but that I might give him $8 out of the kindness of my heart. I'm an honest man, see? I don't wanna cheat nobody . . . not get caught at it!"

Savings Bond Leaders—

Six Post and Sixth Army sections reached the 65 per cent participation goal as of yesterday morning in the Savings Bond Campaign. The two-week drive ends today.

Post sections making the participation grade were Quartermaster, 68 per cent, and Comptroller and Civilian Personnel, 65 per cent. Top Sixth Army sections are Special Services, 69 per cent; Ordnance, 68 per cent; and G2, 66 per cent.

Last week both Chaplain sections and Sixth Army Finance and Accounting and Signal topped the 65 per cent mark.

New System

equivalents earned in service; Aptitude Area Scores; and other special items, including decorations, Combat Infantryman Badge, Expert Rifleman Badge, Combat Medic Badge, combat service, and qualifications in arms.

● With the composite score entered in each man's unit record, commanders will report periodically to the Pentagon the number in each MOS by grade and the order in which they stand by PQS's.

● Instead of quotas, the Army will announce "cut-off" qualification scores by grades.

This means that all in specific MOS's who have a PQS above a certain fixed figure, for instance 270, will have a chance for promotion.

This cut-off score will be set so that more men can be considered than can be selected. Thus, for example, if there are 150 E-7 vacancies in the Army in a certain MOS, commanders may be authorized to promote, say, 50 per cent of those above the cut-off score who are: 1) recommended by immediate commanders; 2) recommended by a board at regimental or comparable level; 3) approved by major commanders.

The Army says this system will:

a. Fix promotion standards in all grades on an impartial Army-wide basis.

b. Put promotions on unit level, where performance can be best determined.

c. Allow local commanders more leeway in making selections from a zone of consideration.

The Army said, for the present, the promotion system will remain the same; point criteria will be announced later; E-1 and E-2 promotions will continue; it is anticipated that a limited number of the proficiency tests will be administered during the latter part of 1957.

Commander Honored —Captain Allen S. Bowen receives the Army's Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant from Maj. Gen. E. J. McGaw, Commanding General of the 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command, in ceremonies at Fort Baker. The captain was commended for his work in the conversion of Battery D, 9th AAA Missile Battalion at Angel Island, from 120-millimeter antiaircraft artillery to the Nike guided missile. Captain Bowen is leaving Angel Island to attend the Army's AAA and Guided Missiles School at Fort Bliss, Tex., starting April 17.

Seek Qualified Officers In Expanding R&D Field

Washington (ANS)—In this age of the atom, the Army is encouraging qualified officers to apply for duty in the swiftly-expanding Research and Development field.

The Army is continually improving the attractiveness of the R&D field to assure officers specializing in atomic energy and research and development, opportunities equal to those given individuals pursuing conventional branch patterns.

Atomic Energy Specialization is now within the scope of the R&D career field which includes both atomic energy and research and development specialists.

All officers on active duty except members of the Chaplains' Corps and the Judge Advocate General's Corps are eligible for specialization in research and development subject to certain limitations prescribed in AR 614-135.

The Army Regulation states that interested individuals must volunteer in writing if they have completed a minimum of three years active duty commissioned service, have special aptness in one of the technical phases of the atomic energy or research and development programs, or military or civilian schooling in this area.

Officers may request initial assignment to a R&D position through their Annual Preference Statement or by letter to the chief of their individual career branches.

New ROA Officers

Capt. Edward Couch, Army vice-president of the California Department, Reserve Officers Association, installed the officers for the new Presidio Active Duty chapter of ROA Wednesday night at the Fort Scott Officers' Club Annex. Those installed were:

CWO Theodore J. Roberts, president; Major Herman A. Kleikamp, senior vice-president; M/Sgt. Cecil E. Bartholomew, junior vice-president; Capt. Charles W. Wells, secretary-treasurer, and Chaplain (Capt.) Robert J. Plocki, chaplain.

Group S3 To School

After completing the course, the major will report to Headquarters, USAREUR, Germany. Maj. David L. Lyon, former Group S3, will assume the Adjutant position.

Huge Electron Accelerator For Sharpe General Depot

The most powerful electron accelerator ever built is to be constructed at the Army's Ionizing Radiation Center at Sharpe General Depot, Lathrop, Calif., and it will be used to sterilize food, DA announced today.

The $625,000 accelerator is scheduled for completion by 31 Oct., 1958. It will be capable of producing 18 kilowatts of radiation power at 24 million electron volts which is enough to sterilize about 3,000 pounds of 6-inch food units per hour.

A nuclear reactor producing gamma rays, designed by the Atomic Energy Commission, will be a companion unit. It will have the same food-sterilization capacity as the accelerator.

A food processing plant will complete the principal facilities of the Ionizing Radiation Center. Primary purpose of the Center will be to determine the relative value of costs of gamma rays and beta rays for pasteurization and sterilization purposes. It will develop additional information concerning preservation of foods and treatment of other materials by radiation.

Ground breaking for the $7½ million Ionizing Radiation Center is scheduled for late June of this year at the Lathrop installation of Sharpe General Depot.

in spending money. Stock replenishment will be reduced and requisitioned items will be rigidly screened for their essentiality. Along the same lines, the technical services will review outstanding requisitions and cancel the due-out which usually take more than six months for delivery.

Transportation will reduce vehicle repair work to the minimum which affects the vehicle's safe operation. All activities are requested to reduce official long distance calls to the absolute minimum in number of calls made and length of conversation.

The conservation of utilities and gasoline products announced last week will be continued. The response and cooperation received so far was praised by Colonel Lundquist.

The Budget Advisory Committee also recommended that the Post not accept year-end money after 15 May, that cannot be immediately obligated.

Indian Chief Aids Cub Pack

Close to 200 scouts of Presidio Cub Pack 77 were instructed in the skill of archery by a full-blooded American Indian during a recent Cub meeting at the Scout House.

Parents of the boys enjoyed the performance just as much as the juniors. Demonstrations were presented by Chief Red Wing and Princess Morning Star who appeared at the club in conjunction with the phase-out of the Cub Pack's educational theme entitled "The American Indian."

The Den Mother, Mrs. Kitty Cheatham, supervised the social affair and served refreshments to the cubs and their guests.

DA Orders Transfer Of 700,000 Reservists

1st July Deadline Set For Switch To Standby

About 700,000 enlisted U.S. Army Reservists will be transferred from the Ready Reserve to the Standby Reserve before 1 July, the Department of the Army announced yesterday. The screening action will bring the reserve component strength within the 1,448,000 set by the Department of Defense.

By 30 June the Reserve will include a National Guard of 400,000 and an Army Reserve of 1,048,000. The National Guard is not affected by this screening program.

Enlisted Ready Reservists who incurred eight-year Universal Military Training and Service Act obligations before 1 June, 1953, and are not participating in the training, will be transferred to the Standby Reserve immediately. These persons can return to Ready Reserve status by volunteering for a unit assignment in either the National Guard or Army Reserve.

Transferred Reservists may be returned involuntarily to the Ready Reserve if a need arises and a Ready Reserve obligation has not expired.

The screening program is expected to affect a group of men whose roots are deepest in the community and who represent the least military potential for mobilization because of their time away from training.

New Microwave Set For Yuma Test Station

The twenty-mile distance between Yuma Test Station and the city of Yuma, Arizona, was serviced with microwave trunk lines for communications purposes this week. The first official call was made by the Yuma Test Station Commanding Officer to Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander.

The $153,000 microwave system cost the Army $35,000. The remainder was financed by the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company.

The complete project includes 15 Central Office trunks to the switchboard, two private line teletype channels, one Western Union channel, one telephoto channel for the transmission of weather maps and seven public telephones.

Top Em Grades Closed To Most Officers 1 July

Washington (AFPS)—Officers released from active duty after 30 June will not be authorized automatically to enlist in grades E-6 or E-7, the Army has announced.

Under present policy, officers separated under honorable conditions and who enlist in the Army within 90 days after release, receive an initial appointment in either of the top two grades. The grade is determined on whether commissioned service was before or after 22 March, 1948.

As a consequence, the Army said, many vacancies that could be used for promotions of career enlisted men to E-6 and E-7 have been reserved for former officers.

Effective 1 July, under the new policy, the Department of the Army will determine the grade of appointment of a former officer based on his qualifications to meet Army requirements.

Because of the limited number of vacancies, few appointments are expected to be made above grade E-5, the Army said.

After 30 June, an officer or warrant officer relieved either voluntarily or involuntarily from active duty may make application no earlier than 120 days prior to his release for a grade determination if he desires to enlist.

Applications will be made through channels on DA Form 1696-R and final determination of grade will be made by the Adjutant General.

Enlistments must occur within 90 days after release to receive the grade.

The Army said the new policy, designed to assure that top NCO's and specialists are career soldiers of highest quality, will not affect officers relieved from active duty who hold permanent enlisted grade in the regular Army.

Any former enlisted man who gave up E-7 stripes to accept a commission may revert to his former grade in the ranks if relieved from temporary officer status.

Reup Standards Raised; Some Exceptions Listed

Higher standards for reenlistment in the Army will become effective 19 April, according to the Post SI Reenlistment Branch. Purpose of the change is to eliminate men who do not have the ability to learn or progress.

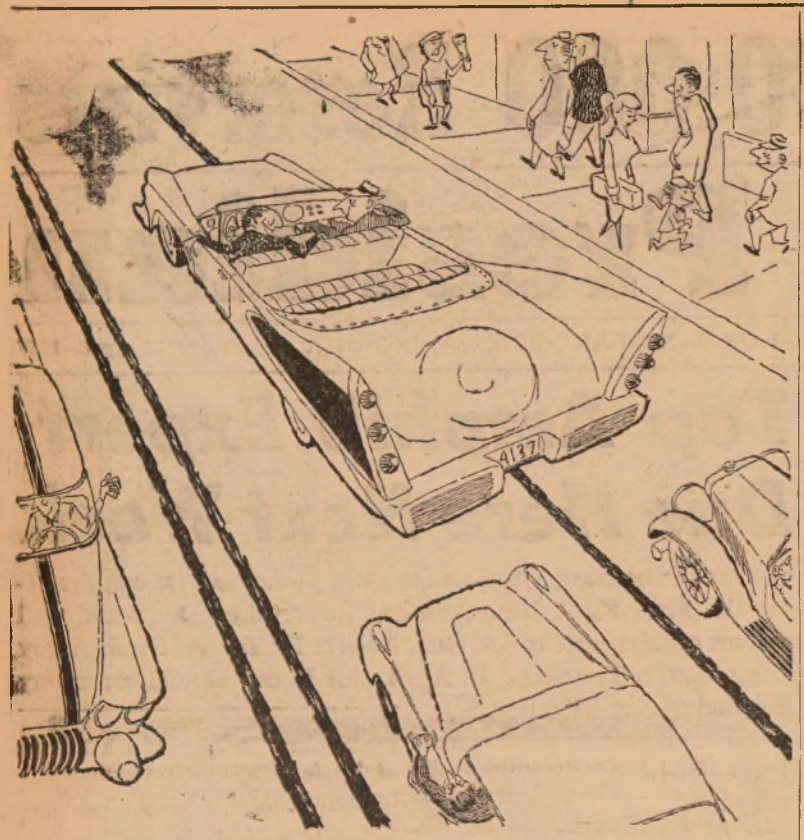
Most reenlistees will be required to score a minimum of 90 in at least three aptitude areas of the Army Classification Battery. An individual may be retested one time only if his performance and general behavior are inconsistent with his examination grade or if the retest is requested by his immediate commander.

Exceptions to the new policy include individuals in grade E-4 through E-7, with less than 10 years service, who possess aptitudes in at least one area and are recommended by the Army Commander; and those with 10 to 20 years of service who are acceptable to their immediate commanders or higher headquarters.

Other exceptions are those holding the silver star or higher decoration, partially disabled combat wounded veterans, enlisted men holding reserve, National Guard or Warrant Officer appointments, and Lodge Act refugee enlistees who are otherwise qualified.

These exceptions will not be honored after 20 years active service for other than Medal of Honor winners.

To enlist under the new policy, individuals must score at least 31 per cent on the Armed Forces Qualification Test.



As of 20 April all individuals must pass physical examinations for reenlistment.

Late Flash . . .

Department of the Army has sliced two months off the 10-month time requirement for promotion from private to private first class. The time reduction which became effective on 1 April will continue through this quarter. Statistics on the number of men affected at the Presidio were not available at press time.

Postal Curtailment

The Presidio Post Office will be closed on Saturdays starting tomorrow until further notice, due to the national shortage in Postal funds. Mail pickup at the boxes will continue on Saturday. Additional curtailments in service include no mail delivery to the quarters and no unit mail pickup on Saturdays. The office will be open from Monday through Friday, 0830 to 1700 hours.

Meet Big Think Thurman the hand-talking road hog. Thurman's got the worst credit and the biggest car in town. He's a prominent member of the anti-freeway, anti-pedestrian and smaller-highway, bigger-cars committees. Thurman is articulate on everything from Jayne to Marilyn. Of course he would choke to death with his hands tied. Thurman believes that taxes should be lowered and highway officials reduced. He believes that you should drive from three to five miles an hour in 35 mile zones and increase your speed to at least 70 in school and pedestrian zones. Thurman is sure the howling horns and screaming threats that follow his wake are motivated by sheer jealousy. Despite the chaos of jangled nerves and frayed tempers that Big Think daily provokes, he'll live to be ninety and never get a citation.

Streamlined techniques in Civil Service administration were discussed. They will be adopted at the Presidio this year.

Limited Facilities

Presidio Service Club reminds its patrons that only limited social and recreational facilities will be available at the club during its spring cleaning and decorating project under way during the next two weeks. The club, however, will not be closed completely at any time.

Instructor's Role was taken by Col. John G. Ondrick, Sixth Army Deputy Chief of Staff, Administration and Management, during the just completed Techniques of Analysis, Presentation and Uses of Command Management Data seminar. Twenty-eight local personnel were graduated from the course this week.

28 Complete Unique Management Course

Twenty-eight key Sixth Army, Post and California Military District personnel completed a unique training course in the techniques of analysis, presentation and use of command management data, this week. The first of its kind, the course has been recommended by Sixth Army for army-wide adoption under the sponsorship of the Department of the Army.

Designed to increase managerial know-how, the course covered reporting, programming, performance analysis, budgeting and accounting procedures. The meaning of the reported operational and financial data and how it should be presented and used for command decisions was stressed.

Developed and conducted by Sixth Army Comptroller Section, the course included 21 hours of instruction. Bernard Kahn was course coordinator and was assisted by Ken Dunn and Boyd Huff, Sixth Army and Post Training Officers.

Instructors, in addition to Mr. Kahn, were Donald Marcy, Arnold Jamin, A. D. Kuperstein, Joseph Kunec, Albert Leslie, Richard Meacham and Lt. John D. Nichols. Miss Ruth Hanicker and Pvt. Donald Costigan assisted.

About 150 miltary and civilian personnel have enrolled for future classes which have been scheduled to run through July. Certificates will be awarded to those who complete the course, as part of the advanced supervisory development program.

Liberty's Legacies

Dutch Private Finds Hope, Prosperity

When Pvt. Max Kannegieter was 11 years old, he wasn't looking forward to the Little League season, he was learning the meaning of interrogation, arrest and torture during his native Holland's worst winter in World War II.

Max, a Corpsman at the Post Dispensary, was born in Utrecht, Holland, in 1933. He was able to complete about two and a half years of grammar school before the war started. From then on, education faced such barriers as no heating for the schools and finally German rule of the classroom.

In 1943 Max and his family were forced to leave Utrecht and start a new home in the small village of Loosdrecht. The move was a quick one because Max's parents, who were active in the Resistance movement, were outjumping the Gestapo.

"That winter was the worst we faced during the war," Max recalled. "We had no clothes, food, electricity or heat and many died."

In April of the next year a group of Dutch traitors and Germans referred to as the SS men took over a large private yachting establishment in their village and launched a reign of terror. His parents were arrested along with many others and he and his brother stayed with friends. The next day they too were interrogated and arrested.

"All of those arrested were tortured and many finally released information, but I am very proud to say that my parents did not talk," Max said. "Just four years ago my mother was still suffering from the effects of her tortures."

The Kannegieter family was held for 17 days. While they were in confinement, the first American food parcels were dropped in Holland.

Pvt. Max Kannegieter

"We were frightened at first because we thought the Americans were dropping bombs," Max laughed.

After the war Max returned to school and his father attempted to reopen his refrigeration business; however he found it impossible to compete with collaborators who had made much money during the war. The collaborators were fined by the government, but were still far advanced from the business standpoint.

"My parents were the key witnesses in the court martial trial of the SS men who had terrorized our village," Max commented. "Many other would-be witnesses were dead and those living were afraid to give a true account of the tortures."

Nearly four years ago Max and his family were able to get into the United States under the quota. They were sponsored by a relative in Los Angeles, so they made their home there.

"I got the first job I ever held two weeks after I arrived in the United States," Max said proudly. "I worked for a furniture company in Los Angeles and was still with them when I was drafted five months ago."

He worked part-time while attending Los Angeles City College and completed the two-year course in pre-medicine.

"In the United States you have a better chance to get a break," Max summed up. "We knew we would have to work hard here, but we have received more from our output than we would have in Holland. For example, I have had two cars since I have been here; in Holland I would have been proud to own a bicycle."

PresidioMarksmenLeave For Camp Roberts Trials

The cream of the Presidio's rifle and pistol talent left the Presidio Sunday for Camp Roberts where they will warm up for the Sixth U.S. Army Rifle and Pistol Matches by participating in the first area Small Arms Firing School.

"You, in the armed forces came here to take on a double title, that of instructor-marksman," the 17 rifle shooters and 10 pistol experts from the Presidio were told Monday by Brig. Gen. John D. F. Phillips, Commanding General, 5th Division Artillery, at Fort Ord.

Presidio's Pistol Team will join the group at Camp Roberts following their meet with the top shooters of the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii. Lt. John R. Kemp will join the Presidio Rifle team on 14 April.

Both rifle and pistol competitors from the Presidio have a rugged schedule planned for them in the coming months. During the small arms firing school, which runs until 19 April, the men will receive intensive training in every phase of shooting from top instructors, all graduates of the Rifle Marksmanship Coaching School at Fort Benning, Ga.

From 19 to 21 April the National Rifle Assn., Southwest Pacific Regional Matches will be held at Camp Roberts under Sixth Army sponsorship. Then the big Sixth U.S. Army Rifle and Pistol Matches get underway on 25 April and run for five days.

Following the Sixth Army matches the top individual and team marksmen will remain at Camp Roberts for several weeks in May to prepare for the All-Army Matches at Fort Benning in June and for the National Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, later in the year.

The following Presidio shooters have been sent to Camp Roberts for rifle competition: M/Sgt. Douglas B. Sheridan, M/Sgt. John W. Utley, M/Sgt. Wayne K. Steward, Sgt. Dale Mathias, Sp3 Richard M. Smith, Sp3 Jackson Devine, Sp3 Billy P. Blalock, Sp3 Charles B. Anderson, Sp3 Marvin D. Toleson, Sp3 Tadahide Takahashi, Pfc. Clyde E. Harn, Pvt. Donald Bailey, Pvt. John A. Alexander, Pvt. Norman W. Army Engineer Civilians Win Cash Awards

Two Sixth Army Engineer civilians were presented with suggestion award checks this week. The presentations were made by Col. Seymour A. Potter, Jr., Sixth Army Engineer.

Mr. L. C. B. McCullough, Chief of the Program Branch, Management Division, received $20 for his suggestion to italicize changes in headquarters regulations. This makes the changes more easy to identify.

Miss Daisy Drew, a statistical clerk with the section for more than four years, won $10 for suggesting the elimination of the civilian section on morning reports. This greatly reduces the amount of material submitted with the report.

21st Wins Best Barracks

The 21st Engineer Company came through with its first win in the 30th Engineer Group Best Barracks Competition during the month of March. Col. Lawrence R. St. John, Group Commander, presented the plaque to Capt. Milton S. Saunders, 21st Engineers' commander.

To Decorate MRU Sergeant At Retreat Parade Today

Sfc. Donald A. Warner, who is assigned to the 56th Machine Records Unit, will receive his second Army Commendation Ribbon at an awards and decoration ceremony conducted by non-commissioned officers and scheduled for this afternoon. The Sixth U.S. Army Band and Post marching units will participate.

The award, an Oak Leaf Cluster to be worn on his first Commendation Ribbon, will be presented by Col. Thomas F. Bienvenu, Post Comptroller and reviewing officer for the parade.

Sergeant Warner, who returned recently from Japan, will receive the award in recognition of his outstanding work in that country as NCOIC of the AG Personnel Management Team. His team visited all U.S. Army units in Japan and studied personnel records and the placement and utilization of personnel assigned to each unit.

Most of the time Sergeant Warner worked without the presence and direction of a commissioned officer.

The sergeant was graduated from Fairfax High School, Los Angeles, and enlisted in the Army a short time later. During his less than 10 years active service, he has spent nearly seven years overseas. His tours include 30 months in the Philippine Islands, 16 months in Korea during the conflict and four years in Japan.

New Officer bars are pinned on First Lieutenant Jack Carter by Lt. Col. J. M. Johnson, Post Quartermaster. Lieutenant Carter is manager of the Army Commissary. He served in that capacity as a master sergeant since January, 1956.

M-Sgt. To Reserve Duty

Decked out in the new Army green officer uniform, First Lieutenant Jack Carter received his Reserve commission and silver bars from Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Post Commander, and Lt. Col. J. M. Johnson, Post Quartermaster, this week.

Lieutenant Carter, a former master sergeant who was called to active duty in his Reserve commission, is store manager of the Army Commissary. He has been with the commissary since January 1956.

On 1 May Lieutenant Carter will assume the duties of Commissary Officer, replacing Captain James Malizola, who has been reassigned. A serviceman for 13 years, Lieutenant Carter has held his Reserve commission since 1952.

Info Service Will Record And Send Your Voice Home

Free service for military men and women in sending tape recorded messages to their families, on a nation-wide level, is now being presented to service personnel by the Sixth U. S. Army Information Activities Section.

If you cannot find time for letter writing, you can still keep your relatives and friends happy by making an appointment for a recording of a personalized radio chat with them. Telephone M/Sgt. Allan Larkin, at extension 3740. He will arrange for your recording date and a time which will not intrude on your duty hours.

There is no more fitting time than the advent of Easter in which to send a few cheery words to your folks by way of your hometown radio station!

Last Ride was recorded by Mr. John A. Cherry, school bus driver, when he retired from Federal service after 27 years. Mr. Cherry, a Post Transportation employee, has been at the Presidio since 1946. He drove the nursery school bus for a year before being selected for the school runs.

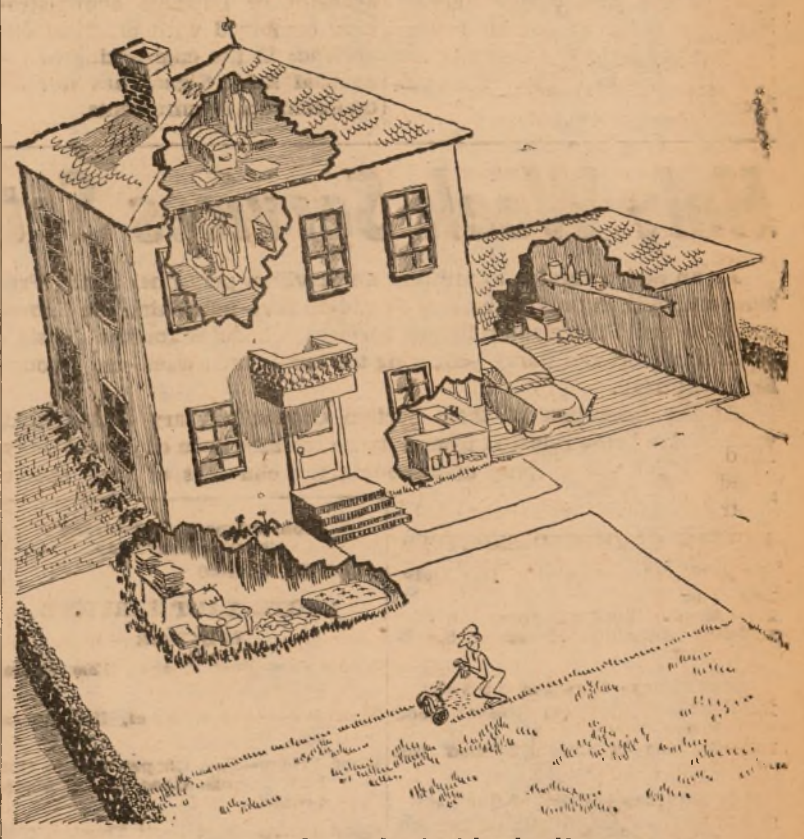
Popular School Bus Driver Retires; Served 27 Years

One of the Presidio's first three school bus drivers, Mr. John A. Cherry, said goodbye to his last student, parked his bus for the last time at the motor pool, then attended an informal ceremony on the occasion of his retirement after 27 years Federal service.

A Certificate of Achievement, signed by Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, was presented to Mr. Cherry by Lt. Col. J. J. Speciale, Post Transportation Officer.

Mr. Cherry's government service includes a tour of duty in the Navy in addition to his Civil Service career. While in the Navy he participated in the Nicaraguan Campaign in 1912, the Mexican Campaign in 1913 and the raising of the Battleship Maine from the Harbor of Havana, Cuba.

He finished his first Navy tour of duty in 1914, but reenlisted in 1917. He was sent to France where he was assigned to a French Artillery Battalion operating 14-inch railway guns. Mr. Cherry stayed there until the first U.S. troops arrived in 1918. He also served in England and Scotland during World War I.



In 1946 Mr. Cherry came to the Presidio and was assigned to the Post nursery school bus. The following year he was selected for the school runs, the job he filled until his retirement.

Spring Clean-up Week Set

Hazardous conditions in the home which invite fire disasters are the target of Spring Clean-up Week, which begins this Monday. The week is sponsored by the Post Fire Station under the direction of Col. James R. Rundell, Post Fire Marshal.

Most home fires start in trash piles, accumulations of rubbish or stored odds and ends. Fires start most freqeuntly in closets, attics and basements. Clean-up is one of the best ways to prevent both the fire and its spread, according to Colonel Rundell.

Passover Rites are enacted by Rabbi William Z. Dalin and local personnel who will participate in the annual observance of the freeing of Jews from Egyptian slavery. Seated around the seder table and its traditional symbols are Sfc. Milton Kirschner, Headquarters 30th AAA Group; his son, Milton; Rabbi Dalin (Major) USAR; Sp3 Leonard York, Post Dental Clinic; Sfc. Lillian Aronson, G3; and Pvt. Philip Nathanson, Letterman Army Hospital. The Jewish Welfare Board seder-dinner for military personnel is scheduled at 18 hours, Monday, at the San Francisco Jewish Community Center.

Passover Starts Monday; Sundown Services Planned

Passover, the eight-day observance commemorating the deliverance of the Jews from Egyptian slavery, begins this Monday at sundown. Jewish military personnel and their dependents have been invited to participate in a first night seder service and dinner by the Jewish Welfare Board.

The seder service is scheduled at 1800 hours, Monday, at the San Francisco Jewish Community Center. Rabbi William Z. Dalin, Chaplain (Major) USAR and Sixth Army Auxiliary Chaplain, will conduct the service. Rabbi Dalin, who has been with the Sixth Army since 1948, is the religious leader of Congregation Ner Tamid in San Francisco.

The JWB has arranged home hospitality for personnel who observe the second night seder service. Unit Commanders have been requested to grant Jewish personnel 72-hour passes for the first and last two nights of the holiday.

First celebrated more than 2000 years ago as a spring festival at the time of the first barley harvest, Passover early in Jewish history became the time to remember the eventful freedom from Egyptian bondage.

Legal Advisor Role

There is a legal advisor assigned to each contracting officer, and each of the chiefs of the technical services has a legal staff.

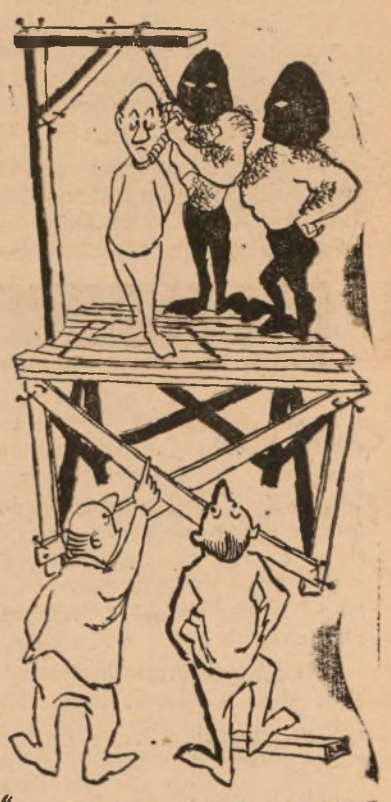
Why Gamble?



Nearly 250,000 servicemen who have not reinstated USGLI and NSLI policies are gambling small premium payments against full protection for their families, according to Defense officials.

Under the Survivor Benefits Act, members of the Armed Forces carrying WWI or WWII policies on partial or full premium waiver must voluntarily file VA Form 9-5782 and resume the payments before 1 May, or risk adequate provision for their dependents.

The Defense Department and the services have notified about 680,000 servicemen of the 1 May clause. About 425,000 have filed the necessary VA form.

Socially Speaking

Women, our complete enmacipation has finally come—not only can we work, vote and enjoy several other freedoms we were once considered beneath, but now we can BACKSEAT DRIVE to our hearts' content. Russell Brown, Iowa State Safety Education Director, has publicly announced: "The right kind of backseat driving probably is our most underrated safety device." I suggest that this statement be printed by the carload and placed in every family car. From now on when the male member sitting behind the wheel begins grumbling answers to our SAFETY admonitions, let's just whistle a happy tune and point to our backseat drivers' motto. By the way I tried to reach Mr. Brown to congratulate him on his courage and intelligence, but was unable to contact him. You don't suppose he has met with bodily harm, do you?

"JUST A LITTLE TO THE LEFT WITH THAT KNOT, MEN"

Medicare Proving Big Boon To Service Split Families

Washington (ANS)—According to a recent survey of the Medical Care Program by the Surgeon General's office, 25.7 per cent of all patients taking advantage of civilian facilities are separated from their husbands due to the exigencies of the service.

This finding shows that if there were no Medical Care Program, one out of four servicemen's dependents might have been faced with the greater expense of civilian hospital and medical care out of their own pockets, unless they happened to live near a military installation.

Here are the latest percentage figures in a breakdown by service of 19,896 dependent cases treated by civilian doctors from December 7 through March 25: Air Force, 41.8; Navy, 31.4; Army, 24.4; and Public Health Service, 2.4 per cent.

A Medical Care Program official said that maternity care cases predominate the hospital claims with 37 per cent.

Honor Soldiers are Pvt. Mattie L. Lauria, Presidio Wac of the Month, and Sp3 Philip G. Greenwald, 9th AAA Missile Bn., Soldier of the Month. They are pictured with Lt. Col. Frank A. Bates, 9th AAA CO, and Capt. Robert Gunning.

Soldiers Of The Month Meet; Unit Prizes Vary

"Soldier of the Month" awards for the Presidio area went this week to Sp3 Philip Greenwald, Hqs. Bat. of the 9th AAA, at Fort Baker, and to Pvt. Mattie L. Lauria, of the Sixth Army's AGP Section.

A four-time winner of the Best Soldier title, Greenwald earned his first two titles while in basic training. His Wac counterpart in superior military performance is on her first duty tour since completing basic training.

Wac Pvt. Lauria was accorded special honors by Lt. Col. Frank A. Bates, Jr., commander of the 9th AAA at Fort Baker. She was given a tour of the NIKE site in the company of the unit's Man-of-the-Month and the commander, himself.

Sp3 Greenwald was awarded a three-day pass, cost of a hotel room in a popular San Francisco hotel, three dinners at three famous restaurants, a tank full of gas for his car, $5.00 in cash or trade at the Fort Baker Cleaners, the same at a commercial laundry in the city.

Pvt. Lauria settled for an interval respite from retreat and reveille formations, no details and no parades.

Telephone Confirmation Set For Chaplain's Injured Son

Richard, 14-year-old son of Chaplain (Major) and Mrs. Erhard H. Harms, will remember distinctly the date of his confirmation in the Lutheran faith.

The boy, in Letterman Army Hospital with a broken kneecap, is formally declaring his religious conviction by telephone conversation next Sunday when he makes his theological vows to Chap. Frank Jacobsen, San Francisco Zion Lutheran Church.

In addition, Chaplain Harms reports to the Third Division at Fort Benning in early June preparatory to gyroscoping to Germany with one of the divisional units. If Richard's knee injury is not healed, he must stay at LAH when his family moves.

Combat Engineers

Combat engineering is in direct support of, or an actual part of, battle operations. Typical examples are smashing enemy-placed obstacles or overcoming obstacles imposed by nature and devising and placing fortifications, mines, and other engineering works required by friendly forces.

Silver Bars were pinned on First Lieutenant Patricia Flynn, Assistant Military Personnel Officer, this week. Lt. Col. E. K. Matson, Post Adjutant, did the honors. Lieutenant Flynn has been in the service for more than four years and has spent 14 months of that time at the Presidio.

A pelican five feet long and weighing 25 pounds has a skeleton which weighs only 23 ounces.

Incredible . . . it now seems, to learn that the flag of the Russian Empire once flew over American territory within only two hours distance of the Presidio. And to know that . . . indirectly at least . . . the Russian trappers who settled at Fort Ross in Sonoma County were responsible for the California gold rush which set the whole world afire with dreams of wealth.

Fort Ross is now being reclaimed and renovated by the State Division of Beaches and Parks. Some 80 miles north of San Francisco it can be reached by following Route 1 . . . a paved road running right through the stockade itself.

Built by Russian soldiers yearning for freedom during the reign of Ivan the IV . . . or Ivan The Terrible . . . as he is known in history books, the Fort Ross blockhouses were constructed in local redwood . . . without application of a single nail . . . a building practice common throughout the Orient. In the present process of renovation . . . the American construction workers are adhering strictly to the original building design.

It was in 1812 that the Russians arrived in the Farralone Islands . . . just beyond the Golden Gate. They had come here from Sitka, Alaska, to engage in the fur trade through the trapping of huge sea otters. Actually . . . they were not the first Russians to come to San Francisco during the 19th Century. A Russian nobleman had preceded them to the Presidio by five years. He came in on a ship purchased from an American sea captain in Alaska . . . to beg supplies from Arguello. . . . Spanish commandante of the Presidio. His czarist troops in Sitka were starving and scurvy-ridden . . . and, through his visit here he wrote a fresh chapter into Presidio history.

Either for ulterior reasons or more worthy ones . . . he fell in love with the Spanish commandante's daughter . . . Donna Concepcion Arguello . . . 16 years old and surpassingly beautiful.

Their star-crossed love affair later became the inspiration for the classic poem by Bret Harte . . . an epitaph which took shape years later at her father's dinner table.

Count Rezanof readily gained favor in the Spanish commandante's household. He was accepted as a future son-in-law by the time he was forced to return with the cargo of supplies for his garrison at Sitka. Yet, strangely enough, Donna Concepcion never heard from him after he left here.

Not knowing that he had died in Siberia, enroute to Russia with information for the Czar . . . the girl entered a convent.

As a professed nun she was sitting at her father's table one evening years later . . . when foreign dignitaries were being entertained at dinner. It was then that she learned of the fate of her lover . . . from which message was born these lines from Harte's epic poem:

"Forty years on wall and bastion—swept the hollow idle breeze—since the Russian Eagle fluttered—on the California seas—Two dark eyes in haunted orbit—gleamed beneath her nun's white hood—black cloth hid the wasted figure—bowed and stricken where she stood."

So went the course of Presidio history . . . and so the course of the saga of one John Sutter . . . self-styled Captain . . . a Swiss immigrant who purchased Fort Ross from the Russians in 1840 . . . for the sum of $40,000, as a means of advancing his dream of becoming fatherly head of an agricultural empire in the Sacramento Valley. His goal was high but his funds were low . . . so Sutter gave the Russians a term payment for Fort Ross and opened a saw mill to process lumber and complete payment of his debt.

It was his foreman . . . John Marshal, who discovered gold in the stream one day while examining logs floating down on the tailrace. The sawmill was abandoned and the gold rush began. Further discoveries brought the news to the world by sailing ship . . . thence began the stampede to California.

Through Fort Ross and Captain John Sutter was born the chain of events which brought Statehood to California . . . poured her bloodstream of gold into the Union's Civil War . . . and made millionaires and mansions where so lately there had been only a wilderness—and a Russian trapping colony.

Challenge Match Set For Hawaii

A preliminary "postal match" was held 30 March between the Presidio and the 25th Infantry Division of Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, with the actual match being conducted today and tomorrow at Schofield Barracks. Members of the Presidio team, Col. Charles G. Rau, officer in charge; Col. Leon J. Rouge; Capt. John F. Kallam, team coach; M/Sgt. James L. Wade; and Sfc. Nelson Lincoln left for Hawaii Monday.

The "postal match" was held at the respective posts and the results of the match were mailed to the competing team. Auto-Fashion Show Tomorrow & Sunday

Since the day that man decided there must be a better contrivance than the horse to supply the energy needed for him to move from one place to another without exerting himself, the automobile has become one of the most important factors and interests in man's existence. The Enlisted Personnel Advisory Council under the guidance of the Service Club is sponsoring a combined Automobile Show and Fashion Show tomorrow and Sunday at the Service Club.

Tomorrow from 1000 hours to 1600 hours will be the Road-eo, a test of skill for the drivers representing the various units on the post. The individuals will drive their own cars and will be judged on their skill, fitness of the car, personal appearance, and a short written test.

Featured at the Auto Show on Sunday will be the latest models from recognized automobile manufacturers from two continents and the brain-children of the individuals who were dissatisfied with the stock models, the customized and racing versions of the automobile.

In the display will be a Triumph, Hillman Minx sport sedan and station wagon, Porsche, Mercedes Benz coupe, Volkswagon bus, Cadillac, Corvette, and the California Highway Patrol's latest patrol car, the '57 Pontiac equipped for law enforcement on the highways.

On the more spectacular side will be eight customized cars, exhibited by Satan's Angels, an auto enthusiasts organization from the Bay Area; three racers including a dragster and a lakester, a customized '39 Hupp, and four Italian motorcycles.

Included in the show will be a continual running of the world's best known racing classics throughout the world, demonstrations by the California Highway Patrol of the entoximeter and radar control system, and Green Cross Safety Council Display from 1300 hours to 2000 hours.

Beginning at 2000 hours, the Fashion Show will feature the latest creations in the fashion world with the accent on sports clothes that will fit the budget of the service man and woman. Service personnel modeling the clothes will be Lei Simmons, Charlotte King, Maxine Sliva, Laura Rhoads, Stella Gonzales, Nancy Blom, Rosellis McKenzie, Marjorie Love, and Betty Arnold for the women's fashions. Men's clothes will be modeled by Dave Feder, Howard Falberg, Charles Gordon, Adolfo Ramirez, Edmund Evanowski, John Turner and Robert W. Mason.

Entertainment during the fashion show will be furnished by Ronnie Draper from Bimbo's Trophy Room, Elsi Norwood, vocalist, and the San Francisco Quartet featuring barbershop harmony.

Co-chairmen of the fashion show are Harvey Shone and Charlotte King; chairman of the auto show, Dave Feder; co-chairmen of publicity, Howard Falberg and Phil Miller; chairman of the Road-eo, Don Nofio; invitations and posters, Robert Stottlar; and fashion coordinator, Mrs. Jerri Miller. Mobilgas Econ Run To Stop At Presidio

Presidio's Crissy Field will be the site of the end of the first lap of the 1957 Mobilgas Economy Run, which has been routed through San Francisco for the first time since its beginning several years ago.

Crissy Field will serve as an impounding area where the cars can be serviced, checked, weighed, refueled and readied for the next lap of the 1,568.3-mile run which extends from Los Angeles to Sun Valley, Idaho. Volunteer garrison members will assist United States Auto Club officials while the automobiles are on the Post. Crissy Field was selected as the most ideal spot for the initial stop of the run in the San Francisco area by the USAC officials.

First of 24 automobiles in the Mobilgas Economy Run is scheduled to arrive at 1055 hours Monday and 48 minutes later the last car will cross the check point established at O'Rielly and Lincoln Avenue. A maximum of 11 hours and 15 minutes driving time for each leg of the run has been set. The cars will depart at midnight Monday on the second leg of the trip for Winnemucca, Nevada.

This year also marks the first time that women drivers have participated in the economy run. Vocalist Ginny Simms leads the drivers in the feminine division. Each automobile driven by a woman will also have an identical entry driven by a male driver. There are 12 women drivers scheduled to take part in the run.

The cars are divided into four categories in the run; low price, low medium, upper medium, and high price. The winner is determined in each category by ton-miles per gallon and each driver must maintain an average speed of 40.7 miles per hour.

Track Men Urgently Needed By Post Team

30th Engineer Troops Due Rotation In Iran

One officer and seven enlisted men of the 30th Engineer Group are scheduled to leave the Presidio next Thursday to replace Group personnel serving on the joint United States-Iranian Survey Project. It is the Iranian unit's first personnel rotation.

Second Lieutenant Donald Haas, who will replace First Lieutenant Robert J. Hohne, will lead the first group headed for temporary duty in Iran.

Additional rotation groups will leave in June and July. First Lieutenant Richard J. Rappaport and nine enlisted men are scheduled to make the trip in June. First Lieutenant Harry A. Taylor, accompanied by eight enlisted men, will complete the rotation in July.

The project has been under full operation since August 1956, and is nearing its half-way mark. The first phase, triangulation, started in northwest Iran at the Turkish border and continued southeast across Iran to the Pakistan border.

Shortly after the first phase was underway, the second order level parties moved into the field, starting at Teheran and working northwestward. Three other phases of the second order level are also planned. One runs northwest out of Teheran to Turkey, the second southwest to Pakistan and the last south to the Persian Gulf.

The third part of the project, barometric leveling, will provide suitable vertical control to produce 1:250,000 scale maps of an area in the vicinity of Teheran. Five barometric leveling parties are presently in the field and are about one-quarter finished.

Expand Salk Vaccine Program's Coverage

Washington (ANS)—The Army is making Salk polio vaccine available on a voluntary basis to all personnel normally eligible for medical care as a special precaution against the dread disease.

Although paralytic poliomyelitis has fallen to a relatively low rate among military personnel, the Army hopes to lower it even further by its extensive immunization program.

According to available information, individuals running the greatest risk of contracting polio are dependents living in family groups where there are young children, sub-standard hygiene and sanitation areas, and communities where outbreaks occur.

Department of the Army Circular 40-3 also states that the vaccine should be offered to certain civilian employees such as school teachers and laboratory workers, who because of their work are in danger of "catching" the disease.

The Army has not made it mandatory that its personnel be immunized with this vaccine.

Refresher

Reserve Course Proves Popular

An intensive school in "Methods of Military Instruction" was completed recently by Army Reservists from the Northern U.S. Army Military District, California. The school is part of a Sixth Army program to improve military teaching practices throughout the Army area.

Schools were conducted at Reserve Training Centers in San Francisco, Oakland, San Jose, Stockton, Fresno and Sacramento.

Primary purpose of the course is to qualify new personnel as competent instructors and to provide a "refresher" for personnel who had received previous instruction in the subject.

Army Hospital Stages 'Disaster' Drill

★ ★ ★

Troops, Medics Test Facilities For City Aid

By Sp3 Dick Lewis
Star Presidian Associate Editor

Letterman Army Hospital and the Post Dispensary threw their total effort into Exercise Fire Drill on Wednesday to show themselves and a galaxy of visiting dignitaries just what Army medical facilities at the Presidio could do to aid a disaster stricken San Francisco.

Problem-wise, the city was hit by a severe earthquake at 0400 hours, Wednesday, which demolished buildings, broke water and gas mains and severed many electrical and communication lines. Many injuries were incurred by the populace, both during the quake and in the fires, explosions and panic that followed.

Fires raged uncontrollably in part of the city, but the Presidio remained basically intact. Gas, water and electricity were all operable and communications intact. The Army offered assistance at 0500 hours after the LAH Commanding General, in conference with the Commanding General, Sixth U. S. Army, judged the situation calamitous and ordered the Letterman Army Hospital Emergency Operations plan into action. By 0700 hours the first casualties began arriving at LAH and the Dispensary for emergency treatment.

Disaster Victim receives a thorough examination at the Letterman Army Hospital Triage (sorting) station Wednesday as part of the Exercise Fire Drill activities. Both LAH and the Post dispensary took part in the day-long exercise which tested the Presidio's ability to give medical care to San Francisco earthquake victims. Also taking part in the exercise were 800 Presidio soldiers who served as casualties.

Army Surgeon General Lauds 'Drill' Purpose

The Joint Commission on Hospital Accreditation now requires all hospitals to have a plan for meeting emergencies, according to Major General Silas Hays, Army Surgeon General, who visited the Presidio this week in conjunction with "Exercise Fire Drill" staged by Letterman Army Hospital, Post Dispensary and local troop elements.

"This emphasis on disaster plans is a big step in Civil Defense," the General explained. "I am happy to see so many local Civil Defense observers here."

Letterman is the second Class II Army hospital to display its natural disaster schedule. Brooke Army Hospital at Fort Sam Houston staged its drill previously. The other six Class II hospitals must also fulfill the requirement.

Planned completely by local hospital personnel, the drill was praised by General Hays as a training exercise.

"It really keeps the boys on their toes," the General said. "The training is especially important to us in the military."

In planning such simulated disasters, each hospital has different problems to combat, the Surgeon General continued. Its location, size and surrounding population are all factors to consider.

When questioned about the national blood supply, General Hays said that there is not nearly enough blood on hand and that satisfactory blood substitutes have not yet been developed.

"We are stockpiling Dextran as a blood substitute, but it is not the same as real blood," he said. "In an emergency we would have to draw the blood from individuals on the spot."

General Hays, who left yesterday, inspected all phases of the exercise.

Microwave Trunk Lines for communications purposes were recently put in between Yuma Test Station and the city of Yuma, Arizona. The first official call was made by Col. Walter W. Abbey, Yuma Test Station CO, to Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander. The $153,000 system was financed jointly by the Army and the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Next Of Kin?

Urge Personnel To Check Records

Servicemen and women of the Presidio are urged to bring their emergency data forms up to date by making a prompt visit to the Post Personnel Section, or by bringing any change in family status to the immediate attention of commanding officers.

Capt. Webster Parker, Post Personnel Officer, announced this week that in cases of recent deaths here it was discovered that insurance and estate beneficiaries had died several months prior to the demise of the military man whose records were being checked for vital information necessary for the established beneficiaries.

Two-Year Lag Eases As 44 Win Stripes

The top two grade promotion freeze for men not working in a critical MOS has thawed in the Sixth U. S. Army area for the first time in more than two years, according to statistics released this week from Sixth U. S. Army.

While most of the 13 E-7 and 31 E-6 promotions allotted to this Army area still went to men in combat MOS's, some soldiers working in other job categories have been promoted. The Sixth U. S. Army flight detachment received one E-7 allocation, Recruiting (6400) received an E-7 and two E-6's, Post received two E-6 slots and Training Unit (6700) received one E-6 and 18 E-5's.

It was good news, too, for men at the bottom of the promotion ladder. During the April-May-June quarter, privates, E-2, may be promoted as they complete eight months of service. Prior to this

Army JAG Will Visit Sixth Area

Major General George W. Hickman, Judge Advocate General, will arrive in the Sixth Army area 25 April to begin a tour of installations housing JAG personnel. The general will be accompanied by Col. Carlos E. McAfee, Sixth Army Judge Advocate.

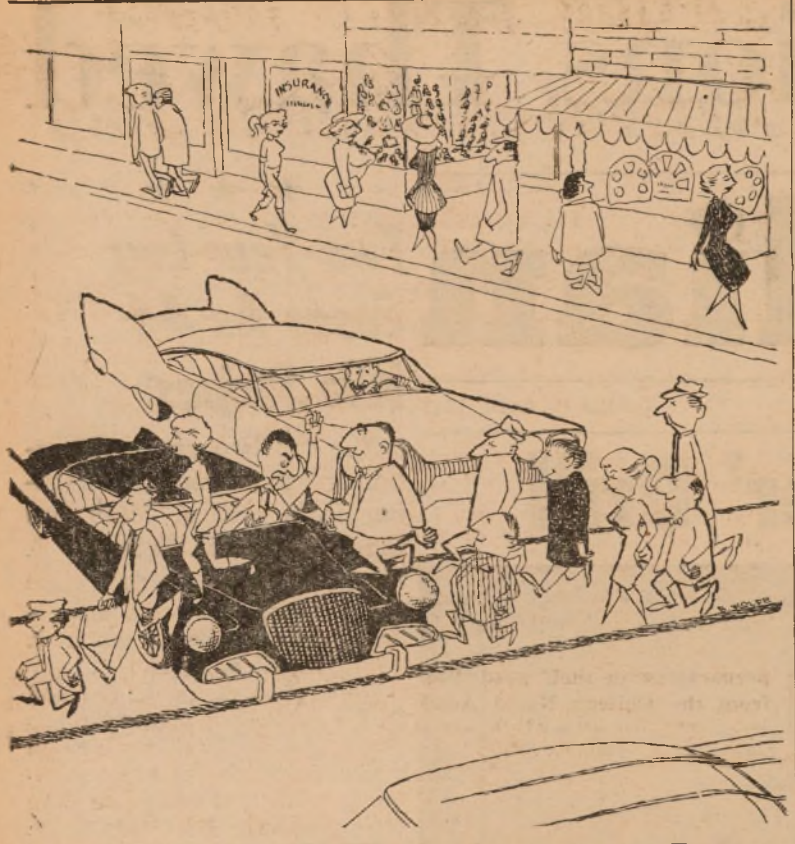
The officers will inspect the administration of legal justice and other activities.

General Hickman's itinerary will bring him to the Presidio on 30 April. His inspections will begin at Fort Huachuca and include Camp Irwin, Fort MacArthur, U. S. Disciplinary Barracks, Fort Ord, Army Language School, Oakland Army Terminal and U. S. Army Terminal Group, Pacific. He will complete his schedule on 6 May at Fort Lewis.

The general inspected the area once before as Assistant Judge Advocate General.

14 Sections Achieve Savings Bond Goals

Eight Sixth Army and six Post sections reached the 65 per cent participation goal in the recent Savings Bond campaign, according to Lt. Col. Walter R. Jorgenson and First Lieutenant Patricia Flynn, the respective savings bond officers.



The Sixth Army sections totaled 60 per cent participation, which was broken down into 65 per cent for civilians and 47 per cent for officers and warrant officers. This represents an increase of 23.1 per cent achieved during the drive.

Post scored an increase of 17 per cent with their jump from 21 per cent to 38 per cent participation during the drive period. Civilians attained 47 per cent and military 32 per cent.

Sixth Army sections that will receive citations from the Treasury Department for hitting or topping the 65 per cent goal are G1, G2, G3, Finance and Accounting, Engineering, Special Services, Chaplain and Ordnance.

Post sections to be cited are Chaplain, Comptroller, Civilian Personnel Division, Company A and Headquarters Company, USA Garrison and Quartermaster.

A program to sustain the participation achieved during the drive has been established in the Sixth Army area. Permanent savings bond representatives will be appointed in each section to continue contacting those who have not signed up for the savings plan and new employees.

Joe Pedestrian is finally having his day in Artist Wolfe's biting safety satire. These nonchalent foot "soldiers" have met the enemy and he is theirs, for the moment at least, but you can bet Fergie Fudge will be back on the combat line at the next crosswalk. He'll sit and smirk while irate walkers are forced to make the long trek around his car front into oncoming traffic, or brave the obstacle course of a rapier-like rear. Fergie's got a blind spot for traffic markings. He believes no-parking zones, loading zones and any other restricted areas are for his particular convenience. His favorite expression is "Signs are for idiots!" meaning, of course, that Fergie's mother didn't raise any foolish sons. What Fergie's best friends, if he has any, won't tell him is that he lacks a grain of simple courtesy. Fergie will fudge once too often and his tombstone will read:

Here lies Fergie Fudge.

Chief Chaplain To Retire; Col. Heuer Named Successor

The Sixth Army Chief of Chaplains, Chaplain (Col.) Edward J. DeMars, will retire from military service on 30 April. He will be replaced by Chaplain (Col.) Herman H. Heuer.

Father DeMars entered military service as a Reserve officer in 1942. He was integrated into the Regular Army in 1946 and has been at the Presidio since last September.

As a secular priest, Father DeMars was assistant pastor for Saint Rita's and late for Saint Phillip Neri's Roman Catholic churches in Detroit. He was Chief of Chaplains, Seventh Army Headquarters in Germany, before coming to the Presidio.

Chaplain Heuer, who is of the Lutheran Church, was graduated from Oklahoma University in 1939. He prepared for the Ministry at Concordia Theological Seminary in Missouri.

Key Civilians See NIKE Test At Red Canyon

Fourteen of the Bay Area's civic and political leaders were flown to New Mexico by the Army Wednesday to show them how their communities are defended against atomic and hydrogen bomb attacks from the air.

The demonstration, featuring the NIKE guided missile, was at the Red Canyon Firing Range, where the 740th AAA Missile Battalion fired its annual service practice.

The civilians, representing civic clubs, city governments and the press, were flown to the range in the first "Operation Understanding" trip made from the San Francisco area.

Time Change Soon—

Daylight saving time will be adopted at the Presidio at 0100 hours, Sunday, 28 April. It will remain in effect until 0200 hours, Sunday, 29 September.

New Desk Will Aid Personnel To Plan Rail Travel

An additional service to Presidio travelers was introduced on Post this week with the opening of a section for a representative of the Rail Passenger Carriers. The new center is located in Post Transportation Section, Bldg. 251—service hours from 0800 to 1600 every Monday through Friday.

Military and civilian personnel here are encouraged to utilize the assistance of the representative in arranging schedules, reservations, travel information, unofficial travel tickets, or issuance of tickets for Government transportation.

For better service to all, itinerary and reservation information for official travel must be placed through the Passenger Traffic clerks by telephone — extension 2831 or 3039.

Travel reservations at personal expense may be placed directly with the carrier representative in Bldg. 251.

Liberty's Legacies

"Land Of Opportunity," Says Private

America is still the land of opportunity to young people from other countries, says Pvt. James Feehan, AG Printing Control, who came to the United States from Ireland to seek his fortune in American newspapers.

Private Feehan, who was born in Dublin in 1933, completed two years at St. Vincent's College before deciding to try the United States. He was working in advertising on the Irish Press, Ireland's second largest newspaper, when his decision came.

"I was also doing free lance sports work at the time and I found it impossible to get on the editorial or writing side of the paper," Jim explained. "I decided to come to the United States, work during the day and study at night."

Jim's destination in this country was Portland, Oregon, where his aunt and uncle live. He arrived in December, 1954, went to work for Southern Pacific and attended Portland State in the evening.

After nearly two years with S-P, Jim landed his first U. S. newspaper job with the Milwaukee Review. He was a reporter with that paper until his induction last August.

Pvt. Jim Feehan

"Although I came over with hopes of getting into newspaper work immediately, I realize now how fortunate I was to break in as quickly as I did," Jim commented.

Much of the opportunity in the United States lies in our freedom from habits and traditions, according to Jim. Here individuals can get in and work for what they want without being tied to conventions.

This same situation affects newspapers in both countries, he continued. Irish newspapers neither compete nor criticize. They carry out the same policies that have existed for years, such as using the front page for poetry, dress patterns and advertising.

Complaints about taxes were minimized by Jim, who said that income tax in Ireland is about the same as it is here. In addition, the Irish pay high import and purchase taxes.

"I don't believe there is a more ideal social structure in the world today," Jim said. "This country is too young for harrassing, confining conventions; here we do not look at life as it was 100 years ago."

Easter Smiles in advance were displayed by Mrs. William (Ann B.) Knauf, Chief of the Finance Reserve Components Branch, Post Finance and Accounting, as she was awarded a $200 check and performance award certificate. Lt. Col. Louis C. Mulvaney, Post Finance and Accounting Officer, made the presentation.

Ideas, Performance Win Cash For Post Civilians

Superior performance of duties and suggestions brought a total of $445 to four Post civilian employees this week. Three of the winners were Post Signal personnel.

Mrs. William (Ann B.) Knauf, Chief of the Finance Reserve Components Branch, Post Finance and Accounting, was awarded a $200 check and performance certificate. Lt. Col. Louis C. Mulvaney, Post Finance and Accounting Officer, made the presentation.

Mrs. Knauf has been in government finance and accounting work for more than 16 years. She previously won four suggestion awards which netted her nearly $100.

Top Signal award winner was Mr. Rene Borde, who received a $200 check from Capt. Victor Stout, Post Signal Executive Officer. A photographic equipment repair foreman, Mr. Borde has had 12 suggestions adopted at local and Army wide levels.

Signal suggestion winners were Mr. Robert McCoy, photographic equipment repairman, and Mr. Wolffred Bauer, Director, Central Film Exchange. Mr. McCoy received $25 and Mr. Bauer $20 from Captain Stout. This was Mr. Bauer's sixth suggestion award and Mr. McCoy's fifth.

Sponsored by Post Transportation, the demonstration will feature three separate types of moving. One company will show the techniques of shipping goods to Japan, Okinawa, Hawaii and Alaska by sea van.

The second display will show the movement of articles to Europe in CONUX containers by sea van. The final company will demonstrate moving goods within the United States.

30th Officers Upped

Two 30th Engineer Group officers were promoted to first lieutenant this week. Wearing new bars are First Lieutenants Kenneth I. Hoberman and Francis J. Buckmeier.

Lieutenant Hoberman is Assistant Group S-3 and Chief of Photomapping and Reproduction. Lieutenant Buckmeier is platoon leader of the 21st Engineer Company. Both men have been with the Group since February, 1956.

Awards Program On Upgrade

A total of $3,900 was presented to Post civilian employees for superior performance under the incentive awards program during the first three quarters of this fiscal year. The combined awards totaled $2,500 more than was awarded in all of FY 1956.

Although 16 awards have been presented as compared to seven during the last fiscal year, participation has declined each successive quarter of this year. Half of the total was presented the first quarter, five the second and three the last quarter. Four presentations were made during the third quarter of FY 1956.

Mobile Dental Lab Will Serve AA Sites

A fully equipped, 31-foot, standard width dental van has been received this month by the Post Dispensary for use in providing dental service to soldiers stationed at isolated Nike sites in the Bay Area.

"No longer will valuable man hours be lost while men come down out of the isolated areas to go to the dentist; we are going to them," explained Clare T. Budge, Post Dental Surgeon.

When the van goes on the road at the end of the month, it will be "captained" by Lt. Earl Krainik. It is expected that he and his crew of two technicians will remain at one site for approximately two weeks.

The newly developed mobile vans, which were purchased by the Army for approximately $192,000, can operate either independently or from fixed electrical and water outlets. The air conditioned units provide the most modern dental service including laboratory, X-ray and a two-chair operating room.

The mobile van will provide service to both the East and West Bay areas at the following Nike sites: Richmond, San Pablo, Rocky Ridge, Lake Chabot, Coyote Hills, Sharp Park and Fort Funston.

The van will be back at the Presidio for Armed Forces Day and will be open for inspection by the public.

The Army has purchased 12 of the portable dental clinics for use in remote military areas of the United States. On the West Coast vans have also been delivered to Fort Lawton and Fort MacArthur. Other installations where the vans have been delivered are as follows: Fort Wayne, Mich.; Fort Dix, N. J.; Fort Meade, Md.; South Park Military Reservation, Broughton, Penn.; Fort Sheridan, Ill.; Fort Devens, Mass.; Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot, Penn., and Fort Belvoir, Va.

New Title Official

The 6th Antiaircraft Regional Command with headquarters at Fort Baker was renamed this week. The command is now referred to as 6th Region, Army Air Defense Command, according to Maj. Gen. E. J. McGaw, Commanding Officer.

The change was made so that the regional headquarters would be uniform in name with the parent command.

Sick Leave Shows Increase

The rate of Post civilian sick leave absenteeism increased four-tenths of a per cent over the two preceding quarters of the fiscal year, according to a newly-released report. Although lower than the rate for the third quarter of FY 1956, the rate is above the desired three per cent.

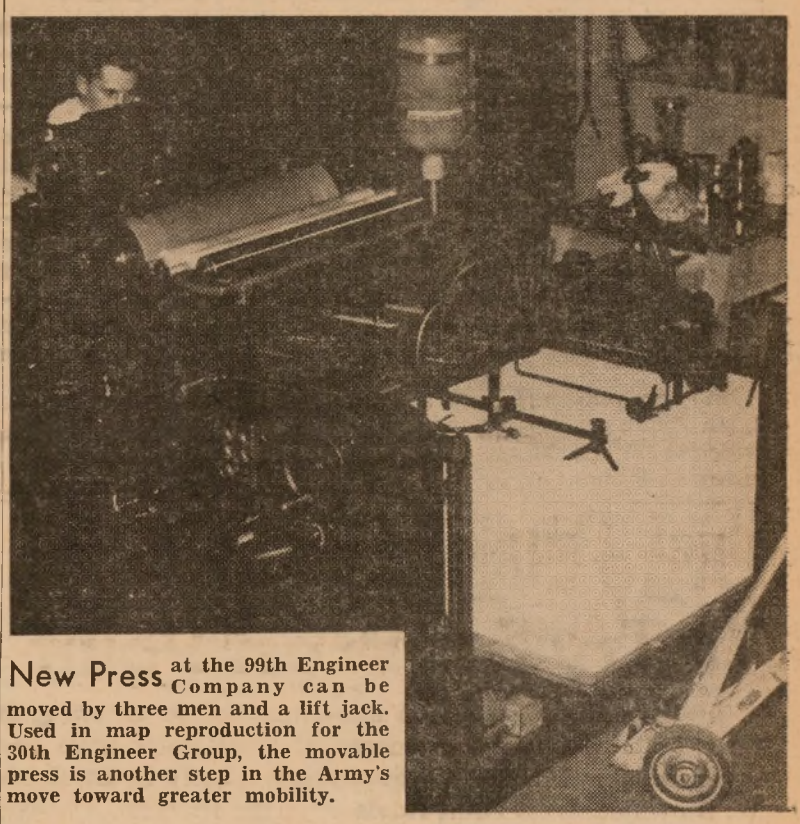
Last quarter's rate was 3.1 per cent as compared to 2.7 per cent for the first and second quarters. Sections maintaining a rate below one per cent were Post Commander, S-1 Safety Division, S-2, S-3 and DA Personnel Management.

21-Gun Salute Honors Arrival Of Chilean Ship

The Presidio had the guns of the Chilean Navy turned on her this week—in greeting rather than in conquest—when the Esmeralda, a four-masted Naval Training vessel slid up under the Golden Gate Bridge to pay her second visit to this port. Her 21-gun salute was answered by a cannon salvo in kind, from a Sixth U.S. Army mobile gun emplacement mounted on the shoreline adjoining Letterman Hospital.

Under command of Captain Robert De Bonnafos van der Schrat the Esmeralda was inbound from Valparaiso, Chile. She carries 299 midshipmen including 54 Chileans, one Columbian and one Ecuadorian. All are undergoing sea training preparatory to their graduation from the Chilean Naval Academy. The vessel made her first call here in 1954.

The 12th Naval District, the Chilean Consulate and the Municipal departments of San Francisco are planning a series of receptions for the officers and men of the Esmeralda.



Outward bound on 25 April, the Esmeralda returns to her home port via Ecuador, Callao and Peru. It is expected that the sailing vessel will be open to the public at designated times during her stay in Treasure Island.

A & M Group Meet

Former students of the A & M College of Texas will hold their annual muster in the Bay Area at 1900 hours, 30 April, at the Olympic Country Club in San Francisco, according to the local club president. All former students and friends of the college in the area have been invited.

Vets Fight Again

During the Korean War 600,000 Americans who fought in World War II were called on to face fire again, while a million and a half non-vets who had come of age were not called to do their share because they could not be made ready in time.

New Press at the 99th Engineer Company can be moved by three men and a lift jack. Used in map reproduction for the 30th Engineer Group, the movable press is another step in the Army's move toward greater mobility.

Movable Press Adds Mobility To Map Making

As the Army moves towards ever increasing mobility in Combat Operations, so also must it strive towards these ends in its many staff operations.

One problem has always been the operations which require large, heavy equipment such as printing, especially in the field of map reproduction. Maps are an essential part of any combat team and since they must always be up to date, require field printing units. These field printing units must be prepared to make quick moves as combat situations change.

To facilitate this, the Army has developed a light compact movable press, one of which has recently been obtained by the 99th Engineering Company (Reproduction Base) of the 30th Engineering Group for use in map reproduction.

Designed basically for field use, this press can actually be used in base plants as well as the field and do the same job as its heavier and larger immobile counterparts in either place. Equipped with a set of roller wheels on one end, the entire press can be moved by using a lift jack on the opposite end. For operation the machine can gain its power supply from either portable generators or permanent power sources.

In combat situations, the movable press finds a perfect application. It is also ideal where a change in the status of operations of a unit is made from field to base.

Although the primary advantage of the press is mobility, it has many other advantages over the older permanent type presses. It is compact, taking a floor space of only five by six feet; light, weighing only five thousand pounds; safe, utilizing plastic guards around the dangerous moving parts; and has the added advantage of being built on one frame.

The majority of printing presses, because of their size and purpose, are built on several frames, causing difficulty in disassembly, moving and reassembly.

The press is rapidly finding its way toward widespread use in the Armed Services and is only one example of the Army's progress towards mobility.

Marine Carpenter, Mr. Alvin W. Redlin, Post Transportation Section, was retired at an informal ceremony at Fort Baker. He received a certificate of achievement signed by Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander. Lt. Col. J. J. Speciale, Transportation Officer, made the presentation.

Mr. Redlin was presented a certificate of achievement signed by Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander. Lt. Col. J. J. Speciale, Post Transportation Officer, made the presentation.

Mr. Redlin was commended for his loyal service to the Army establishment. He began his Federal service with the Engineers in the Panama Canal Zone in 1942 and came to the Presidio in November, 1946.

An Army veteran of World War I, Mr. Redlin participated and was wounded in the Meuse-Argonne salient in France.

Shipwreck Ball Will Entertain Baker Club Fans

Don't forget the big Shipwreck Ball at the Fort Baker Service Club Tuesday evening from 2000 to 2230 hours. The event is open to the public, to the military public—and the only sign of civilization will be whatever the guests care to bring with them. The club is being decorated in a Pacific Isle theme with crates and driftwood in profusion, nothing that looks overly comfortable.

In keeping with the Shipwreck spirit of the evening, the guests are asked to dress as beachcombers or—as they were dressed "when the ship went down." That leaves either a wide or narrow margin, depending on the individual point of view.

There will be music by the Shipwrecked Tomcat's, with Skipper Lou Frye doing the howling!

The main dish at the banquet for desert island mariners will be — C Rations — not strictly fresh from the sea, either.

Chinese Nationalists At 30th Engineer Group

Seven Chinese Nationalist Army Officers visited the 30th Engineer Group yesterday on the last leg of a two-month trip around the United States. During their trip the men studied methods in surveying and map making at the Army Map Service in Washington, D. C.

Visiting the group were Maj. Gen. Wei-shu Hwang, Commandant, Survey College; Col. Chin Fu, Deputy Chief, Survey Dept.; Col. Tzu-hsiuing Tsou, Commanddant, China Map Service; Col. Wen-Ching Wan, Operations Officer, Survey Dept.; Col. Kuo-chang Pang, Professor, Survey College; Col. Yu Sze Chu, Chief, Ninth Section, G-2 Ministry of National Defense; and Lt. Col. Ju-chen Chang, Professor, Survey College.

The visitors were met and briefed on their Fort Scott tour by Col. Lawrence R. St. John, Group Commander; Maj. Carroll H. Wood, Group Executive Officer; Maj. Ranald E. Steiner, Group S-3; and Maj. Lloyd W. Stromgren, Battalion Commander 660th.

In addition to the technical phases of their visit, the officers toured the Headquarters and Headquarters Company barracks and messed at the company.

Easter is the day to take those new spring outfits out of mothballs and to admire and criticize the new clothes Miss Jones is wearing at the annual fashion parade.

Fashions and fads are not new phenomena, however, for as far back as fashion history takes us, certain do's and don'ts regulated the wardrobe. For example, let's flash back to World War I and the early 20's and re-create a common Easter parade.

Women preparing for Easter Sunday from 1918 on could utilize beauty shop facilities. During this year long hair was popular; it was usually arranged low on the forehead and accented by a roll at the back of the head. In the next few years short bobs and bangs were common.

Perched on the long hair were small bonnets brought down low on the head and covering the ears, back of head and most of the forehead. A few years later the fad changed to wide band worn around the head and then wide-brimmed hats with much ribbon and lace trimming.

Layers of makeup as worn by movie heroines were also important. Patches, powder, rouge, lipstick, mascara and all other "aids" used today were also part of getting dressed nearly 40 years ago.

The war had a definite influence on the main feminine Easter garments. Style lines were simple, colors subdued and clothes more practical. From 1918 until 1921 long skirts were still worn. Those with slits at the side or accordion pleated were most popular. Shirt waist and loose-fitting blouses were worn in 1918, followed by the introduction of the sailor collar, the ensemble and the dropped waistline.

By the way, our 1918 counterparts also struggled with very high heels and luxurious silk hose.

Costume jewelry was introduced in about 1922. Pearls, dangling strings of bead, pendant earrings, rhinestones and semiprecious and precious stones were common accessories. Many women sported jewelry sets which included matching gems in rings, necklaces and bodice pins.

And what did our lady's escort wear? His trousers probably were ankle-length and could have been bell-bottom; his jacket high-waisted and one button; and his overcoat very long set off by a fur collar. If he were really in vogue, he would wear a raccoon or camel's hair topcoat.

The man of the 1918 hour wore his hair much as men do now and topped the hairdo off with a Homburg for dress. Many of the younger men were beginning to eliminate the hat from the final outfit.

And that completes our historical Easter parade. When this one passes into history, may it always be happy memory for you.

• • •

Two happy pre-Easter events were announced this week in the form of births. Major and Mrs. Morris F. Dumanske, Sixth Army Ordnance, welcomed their first boy, while First Lieutenant and Mrs. Andrew J. Dickison, G2, had their sixth child, a girl.

• • •

Wives and dependents who would like to start bringing happiness to others at Easter time are urged to become volunteers at the Post Thrift Shop. Profits from the shop are donated to support worthy Youth Activities Programs. The Thrift Shop is located at Bldg. M-29, Ext. 3265.

Easter Cantata At Ft. Scott Theater Tonight

Library Has Spring Tonic —Read Some New Titles

Suffering from those old income tax blues? The Presidio Library has just the remedy—a fresh supply of titles guaranteed to chase them away.

To make any trouble lighter, just take one dose of GUEST-WARD HO! Auntie Mame's creator, author Patrick Dennis, rides again in this irrepressible tale of a young New York couple who take over the management of a western dude ranch. Real life heroine, Barbara Hooton, spins her yarn of the mishaps of dude ranching through the effective pen of Mr. Dennis. Next to Mrs. Hooton, Auntie Mame is a rank tenderfoot.

And to provide the gentle touch needed to soothe a fevered brow, we prescribe THE SOUND OF WAVES, by Yakio Mishima. This tale of first love—and courage—is simply and delicately told in a book which is already being regarded as one of the world's great love stories. It begins when Shinji, meets the lovely Hutsue, in the rich, tangy setting of a Japanese fishing village. How it ends, we leave to the reader to discover.

But perhaps it's true that misery really does love company; in that case, we have just what the doctor ordered—Sidney Stewart's, GIVE US THIS DAY. Mr. Stewart, a survivor of Bataan, recounts in stark, shocking details one of the most shameful features of the Pacific War—the treatment of American soldiers who fell into the hands of the Japanese. His first hand account of torments suffered during three years of confinement as a Japanese P.O.W. will make anyone's aches and pains seem trivial by comparison.

If those blues continue to exist, stronger medication must be applied. Best results can be obtained by one reading of THE OPPORTUNIST, by Samuel Youd. This explosive novel traces the history of a man driven by ambition to rise above his poor surroundings, whether by fair means or foul. He had three moments of decision; each decision lead to the death of one of his "dearest" friends; each death lead one step closer to his goal—success at any cost. But did he really succeed?

As an added fillip, and at no extra charge, we can supply a copy of the classic, BATTLES AND LEADERS OF THE CIVIL WAR, edited by Ned Bradford. Former enemies, Civil War commanders from the North and South, were brought together on the high ground of history to write this great work. It has been called the "greatest repository of first hand testimony by the actual contenders"; it stands unique in its breadth and depth of information.

These are just a few of the new titles obtainable at your Post library. We also recommend these master dispellers of gloom who need no introduction: Frances Parkinson Keyes—BLUE CAMELLIA, John P. Marquand—STOPOVER; TOKYO, Alistair MacLean—GUNS OF NAVARONE, Ernest K. Gann—TWILIGHT FOR THE GODS, Meyer Levin—COMPULSION, and P. G. Wodehouse—THE BUTLER DID IT.

Fleeing to Atlantic City to hide while the "heat" is on, the crooks are followed by a dishonest cop and his girl friend, who attempt to blackmail the thieves into surrendering the jewel. When a plan to give up the necklace in return for freedom misfires, two of the gang are killed. The leader then notifies the police of his whereabouts, meets the cop at a prearranged spot, where he loses his life in exposing the duplicity of the crooked cop.

A MAN ALONE presents Ray Milland as a notorious Western gunman who finds the bodies of six victims of a stagecoach holdup. Riding into Mesa to report the tragedy, he is suspected of the crime and shoots a deputy sheriff who foolishly draws a gun on him without identifying himself as a law-man. Forced to flee, Milland is pursued by a posse which ignores the sheriff's plea for restraint and fair play. Day and night the manhunt continues until the sheriff rescues Milland and establishes his innocence.

SHOOT OUT AT MEDICINE BEND shows Randolph Scott and his two sidekicks, all veterans of the Indian wars, setting out to avenge Scott's brother's death by marauding Sioux Indians. Finding the brother's gun unfired, but loaded with defective shells, the trio trace the faulty ammunition to a renegade storekeeper who is aiding the Indians. A furious gunfight ensues when the gang's activities are revealed, but the guns of Scott are too fast for his enemies, and law and order is restored.

Post Chorus Seeking New Vocal Talent

Singers—male and female—military or civilian — are invited to join the chorus group at the Presidio.

Under direction of Don Bishop, a professional voice instructor, the choral members rehearse every Tuesday and Wednesday, 1800 hours, at The Presidio Little Theater.

It is planned for the Presidio Chorus to present a series of concerts on the completion of the training period at the Little Theater which operates in Building 117.

Newcomers are cordially invited to attend the choral rehearsals and to take part in the coming concert series when the group will travel to outlying units.

Top Company Will Give Annual Sacred Concert

The Requiem—by Gabriel Fauré, and Cantata 135—by Johann Sebastian Bach, are the twin offerings comprising a sacred concert being given at the Fort Scott Theater tonight at 2000 hours.

Keynoting the focal point in the drama of Lent and Easter, the concert introduces 50 voices and full orchestral accompaniment including the Presidio Post Chapel Choir, Old First Presbyterian Church Choir of San Francisco, members of the Sixth U.S. Army Band, the University of California and San Francisco State College orchestras.

Maria West, contralto for the Post Chapel Choir, will be soloist for the Bach Cantata. Tenor soloist for the offering is Byron Mellberg, noted for his contribution in city orchestral works. Irving Pearson is bass soloist.

Kay Shipley, popular local soprano, will be soloist for The Requiem and Gene Turner fills the baritone slot. Included in No. 135 is "Oh, Lord, This Grieving Spirit."

The concert, an annual event presented at the Presidio during the Lenten season, is under direction of Gary Hall, well-known choral conductor and arranger.

Others included in the program are Philip Higginbotham, organist-choir director of the Old First Presbyterian Church, and Sp3 John Kennedy, Post Chapel organist.

The sacred concert is open to military and civilian personnel of the San Francisco area. There will be no charge for admission; however, a collection will be taken following the performance.

Requiem and Cantata No. 135 are of approximately one hour and 15 minutes' duration.

To expedite seating for the special Lenten performance, members of the Presidio Teen Age Club have volunteered their services as ushers.

It is Good Friday, 1807, at the Presidio! . . . In adherence to an old Spanish custom, the garrison commandante, Luis Arguello, has declared a holiday for his soldiers . . . men drawn to this alien land from Granada, Malaga and Madrid, Andalusia, Seville and San Sebastian . . . place names whose music now rings across their minds like church bells in the towns and cities where the fervor and the pageantry of their religious ceremonies had been born.

In keeping with their custom . . . the Spanish soldiers at the Presidio on this "God's Friday" . . . are concentrating on the focal point of the Lenten season . . . most dramatic punctuation mark in the church calendar! The men are cowled in black head masks reaching to their tunic belts. Only their eyes can be seen . . . velvet-brown behind the penitential hoods . . . mirroring their shared suffering in the Crucifixion.

By the commandante's quarters . . . present site of the Presidio Officers Club . . . is an enormous hand-hewn cross on which hangs a replica of the gaunt figure of Christ crucified. Other figures, carved in Spain more than 500 years ago, represent the Blessed Mother, Saint John Of The Cross, and the Holy Women of Jerusalem . . . and there are still others . . . Roman soldiers in their togas . . . their garments bestuded by jewels . . . whose brilliance lends color to the greyness of the morning.

Inside the commandante's house time stands still . . . the adobe walls in the common room are stripped of their decorations . . . the family mood is in keeping with the day. Although far away from Spain, they have brought with them to the Presidio one of the oldest of their country's rituals!

Mrs. Arguello and their daughter Donna Concepcion wear black . . . the 16-year-old girl in deep reveries . . . Count Rezanof, to whom she is betrothed, has only recently returned to his garrison in Alaska. He is to return six months later to be married to Donna Concepcion, by Father Pedro Font, a Franciscan friar under whose guidance the first Presidio chapel was built.

Under rigid fasting . . . the household awaits sundown . . . when they join the soldiers in the processional to the new chapel. A solitary hooded figure leads them . . . carrying a plain cross . . . flanked by torch bearers and mounted horsemen bearing the Spanish Church standards.

Behind them march the men in uniform . . . to the plaza facing the chapel . . . to kneel again in spiritual fancy at the tomb of Christ. Father Font unveils the church crucifix for their veneration, and the penitents close the night watch. Restless in their grief they await the morning!

And now it is Easter Sunday on the Presidio . . . Spanish soldiers awaken to the ringing of the church bell . . . black face masks and the holy images are put aside . . . Easter Morning Mass and Holy Communion . . . during which they dedicate the Presidio to their newly-resurrected God.

The church is strewn with wild flower petals . . . California poppies, roses, blue lupin and bluer cornflowers . . . spilling out beyond the entrance to the plaza . . . down the length of the parade ground.

Donna Concepcion wears her Spanish lace dress . . . a flower in her hair. She doesn't know that Count Rezanof will never come back to the Presidio . . . nor that she will be a Bride Of Christ . . . a nun . . . thirty years later!

The soldiers are dressed in their festive white zaraquells, topped with scarlet satin jackets . . . Castanet music blends with bird song in the grove . . . there are fireworks and feasting . . . Spanish songs and folk dances . . . Andalusian white wine is passed in flagons from one soldier to another . . . they drink in turn to Christ's Resurrection and to the glory of their own rebirth.

It is Easter Sunday at the Presidio!

Presidio Netmen Take Far-Western Tourney

Rifle Match At Roberts Is Underway

The 21st Annual South Pacific States Regional High Power Rifle Championships sponsored by NRA will be held for three days beginning today at Camp Roberts Rifle Range.

Of interest to the military shooters participating in the matches will be the fact that they will be firing in a "leg" match in which the high scorers will be considered for an award of excellence-in-competition badge. Three awards of this type qualify a shooter for the Distinguished Marksmanship badge, the highest military honor in rifle competition.

Valuable prizes including sterling silverware, bread and butter plates and cocktail shakers are expected to give an added incentive to the military and civilian rifle marksmen competing in the matches.

Contrary to general belief, rodents don't feed entirely on plants. Some feed almost exclusively on insects when they are abundant.

Locals Win At Alameda Tournament

Scoring an upset, Presidio's defending All-Army volleyball champs topped ten service teams, including last year's winner, Los Alamitos NAS, to cop the Service Division Championship of the Far Western Volleyball Tournament held at Alameda Naval Air Station this past week.

In the opening round, the Torero netmen drew a bye then felled San Diego Naval Training Center 12-9 and 15-10. Hamilton AFB was the next victim of the locals by scores of 15-13 and 13-11. In the final game of the winner's bracket Los Alamitos NAS won the first game 6-15 and dropped the second and third games of the three-game series to the Toreros 15-13 and 15-13.

Los Alamitos' loss to the locals dropped them to the losers' bracket of the double elimination tournament. Los Alamitos met and defeated Hamilton AFB in the losers' bracket and earned the right to meet the Presidio for the championship of the tournament. The Navy won the championship series 15-12 and 15-8 which gave them and the Toreros one loss in tourney play. This necessitated a double final which the Presidio took 15-10, 7-13 and 12-10.

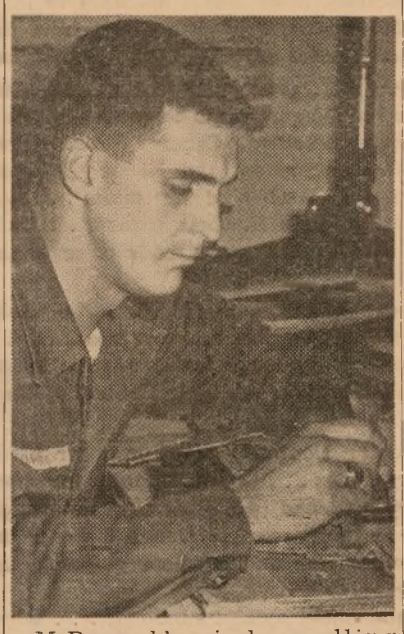
Final standings of the tourney saw the Torero netmen take first place followed by Los Alamitos, Hamilton AFB, Oakland Army Terminal, Pt. Mugu Naval Research Center, US Air Force Academy, Travis AFB and Ft. Ord in that order. This is the first time the Air Force Academy has entered the Far Western Tourney.

According to Maj. Bob Jones, "We ran out of gas before we got started in the Open Division of the tourney on the following day." The Open Division title went to the Stockton team who won in '54 and '55 and was runner-up in last year's tournament.

Monday is the opening date of the Sixth Army Volleyball Tournament to be held at Letterman Gym. The tourney will feature men's and women's games for the Sixth Army championships. Ft. Lewis, Washington is expected to be the team to beat, if the Presidio is to win the Sixth Army title.

Top-Ranked Rower Now Map-Compiler

One of the top single scullers in the country, Tom McDonough, two time National Champion and second in the Pan-American Games Pair-Oared with Coxswain Shell events, has recently been assigned to the 21st Engineer Company, 30th Engineer Group, as a multiplex map compiler.



In the past two years, McDonough has been the foremost competitor of single sculling champion Jack Jelly, Jr., the kid brother of Princess Grace of Monaco and the son of Jack Kelly, Sr., the world's biggest name in rowing a generation ago. Although McDonough has not yet defeated Kelly he has managed to rack up an impressive record of wins.

In single sculls events McDonough placed first in the 1955 National Championship Association Senior Single Sculls; third in the 1955 National Championship, Championship Single Sculls; and second in the 1955 American Rowing Association, Senior Single Sculls. In the Pair-Oared with Coxswain Shell events, he holds the National Championship of 1954 and 1955 and second place in the 1955 Pan-American Games.

McDonough, to clarify the difference between sculling and pair-oared classification, stated that sculling is rowing with short oars, two oars to the man, while pair-oared is sweep rowing in which longer oars are used, one oar to the man.

His first rowing experience, McDonough gained at Northeast High School in Philadelphia. While there and at the University of Pennsylvania, he rowed on the eight-oared shell teams. With the eight-oared experience to aid him, Tom took up the smaller individual classifications during the summers.

The summer following his graduation from Penn, he and his partner and classmate at Penn, John Kieffer, won the National Championship in the pair-oared shell classification at Worchester, Mass., representing the Fairmount Rowing Association of Philadelphia. The following year they captured the National title again, this time at Philadelphia and qualified to represent the United States at the Pan-American Games. McDonough and his partner placed second in the Pan-Am Games held in Mexico City.

McDonough's single sculling competition has consisted of many second and third place finishes behind Kelly, Jr., and the other top men in that field. Being relatively new to the field of sculling, McDonough stated that he feels he can do considerably better in the future with the proper conditioning, practice, and competition.

The man who deserves a good part of the credit for McDonough's success is John Carlin, vice-president of the International Rowing Federation, President of the Fairmount Rowing Association, Tom's home club, and one of the big names in rowing today. Carlin will again coach McDonough when he returns from his two-year tour of duty with the Army.

McDonough holds a Bachelor of Science and Masters in Civil Engineering from the University of Pennsylvania. He received his degrees in 1954 and 1956. He and his wife, Joy, are living in San Francisco.

Show Attracts Record Attendance

Women Drivers were allowed to compete in the Mobilgas Economy Run for the first time this year. Pvt. Matthew J. Rinaldi, C Co., USA Garrison, and Lt. Richard C. Halverson, 30th AAA Group, welcome Mary Davis to the Presidio where the first leg of the run ended.

Crissy Field Site For Economy Run First Stop

The twenty-four automobiles competing in the 1957 Mobilgas Economy Run rolled to a stop on Crissy Field Monday morning amid hundreds of scurrying officials, newsmen and photographers, military personnel, and scores of curious onlookers.

While the drivers rested and ate, the cars were impounded under guard at Crissy Field where the officials checked, rechecked, refueled and readied them for the second of the four-leg trip from Los Angeles, California, to Sun Valley, Idaho. Drivers will featherfoot accelerators over the 1,568.3 miles of the run to nurse the utmost mileage from each drop of fuel as a basis for advertising for the 1957 models during the coming months.

The route followed by the Economy Run is laid out to encompass the same road conditions, traffic problems, and varying altitudes that would normally be encountered by the average motorist and tourist. Highways, cities, mountains, desert, and sea-level driving are included to give a well-rounded variety to the conditions encountered by the drivers in the Mobilgas Economy Run.

Drivers are chosen for their ability to squeeze the maximum mileage from a gallon of fuel. Among the better known drivers participating in this year's run is Betty Skelton, internationally known aviatrix and racing driver. Miss Skelton has a reputation for stunt flying, such as flying upside down ten feet above the ground and for racing her automobile at speeds up to 145 miles per hour. She holds three international records for stunt flying and nine sports cars records for speed and acceleration. Another of the prominent drivers, Clarence Brown, retired MGM director who directed "Yearling" and "National Velvet," was once an auto mechanic.

Also included in the roster of drivers is Mary Davis, trophy winner in all 27 sports car races she has entered; Ina Mae Overman, a civil engineering draftsman whose hobby is custom cars; Ray Brock, editorial staff of "Hotrod" magazine; Bill Losher, retired Commander US Navy; and twin sisters, Marilyn Miller and Millie Sahakian. Mrs. Miller's husband is Ak Miller, a prominent driver in the Mexican Road Race.

This year marks the first time the Economy Run has been open to women drivers, the first time it has been routed through San Francisco, and the first time that all the automobiles entered but one, have been the increasingly popular four-door hardtop models. Studebaker-Packard Corporation is the only company that does not build a four-door hardtop model.

The cars left the Crissy Field impound area at 1201 hours Tuesday on the second leg of the trip which ends at Winnemucca, Nevada. After another check at Winnemucca, they will depart for Ogden, Utah, and from there on the last leg of the run to Sun Valley, Idaho. The route extends from sea level at a number of points to 7,382 feet above sea level at Echo Summit between Placerville, California, and Lake Tahoe.

Winners are determined by a ton-mile formula under which the car's weight in tons is multiplied by the car's miles per gallon average. This formula puts all automobiles on an equal efficiency basis regardless of over-all weight. Results of the run will not be released until a much later date and then through national automotive publications.

Top Swim Group Will Stage Show At LAH Pool

The Golden Gate Swimming Club, a group of feminine swimmers, will present an aquacade show at 1930 hours, 24 April at the Letterman Swimming Pool.

The girls, who specialize in syncronized swimming, will be led by two national syncronized duet champions, Pat Cronin and Dawn Engle. Several of the 30 participants in the show are active in amateur swim competitions.

They have performed at the local Y. Women's City Club, Lake Tahoe summer resorts and the San Mateo Elks.

Life is Short!

Very few of our wild birds and animals are really long-lived. Among the longer-lived species that have been known to reach the ripe old age of more than 100 years are: turtle, vulture, eagle, crow, parrot, salmon, raven, shark and eider duck. Bears have been known to reach the age of 40, deer 20, antelope 15 and fox 14.

Post Softball Under Way

The Post intramural softball season got under way this week when play was opened in the pre-season softball tourney. The pre-season tournament has 16 teams entered who will play a double elimination tournament during the two weeks' scheduled run.

Upon completion of the tournament, the regular intramural season will commence. Twenty-one teams have entered intramural play and have been divided into three leagues; American League, National League, and the Northern League.

The American League is composed of Hq. Co., USA Garrison; Co. A, USA Garrison; 46th Ordnance; Hq., Sixth U. S. Army; 56th MRU, Teen-Agers; and 16th BPO. In the National League are Hq. and Hq. Sports Casting with Casey

I think one of our local sports pundits was way off base when he labeled Chuck Spieser, former number one light heavyweight contender, as a "parlor idol . . . with the right connections," who rose to contention via "a diet of bloated middleweights, club fighting bleeders" et al. The writer's opinion was based on the fact that he (Spieser) was "nonchalantly" knocked out by Tony Anthony last Friday night. He cited the "build-up" as one of the "necessary evils" of boxing and credits this with bringing about the Spieser-Anthony scrap. I gather this writer, like most of his brethern (Spieser was a 3-5 choice) had been taken in by the very build-up that he scolds. What he didn't know, or at least credit, was the amazing honesty of the Michigan belter. Spieser did not have to fight Anthony for a shot at the crown. His bout with Archie Moore, for all intent and purposes, had been signed, sealed and delivered. He knew the hard, fast punching Anthony was a rugged and unnecessary foe. He also knew that Tough Tony had a glass jaw that cost him four knockouts, the only losses on his record, during his early career. Yet Spieser is quoted as saying "If I'm the number one man in the division, I should be able to beat the number three man." This is the type of honesty that you seldom encounter in this day and age, let alone in the beakbusting trade. So orchids to the stocky college puncher, if for nothing other than having the courage of his convictions — that only the best man deserves a shot at the title.

Hail and Farewell . . . The Olympic heavyweight boxing champion, 1st Lt. Pete Rademacher, has been released from active duty at Ft. Benning, Ga. Pete, a reserve officer, had been in the Army 33 months . . . Milwaukee Braves welcomed infielder Mel Roach back from a two-year hitch in the Army.

Splinter Mates . . . The woodenhead partner of Paul Winchell, Jerry Mahoney, who will appear on NBC-TV's "Salute to Baseball" in mid-April, claims to be a cousin of Woody Mahoney. Woody, Jerry points out, is Mickey Mantle's favorite bat—"Mickey may do the swinging, but it's Woody's influence that carries the ball over the fence," Jerry says. Jerry also has an Uncle Oakley, who became a seat in Yankee Stadium. Tommy "Hurricane" Jackson punches the light bag from a sitting position for 15 minutes a day, claiming it strengthens his shoulders. . . . Duquesne's Dave Ricketts set a new national collegiate record of 42 consecutive foul conversions. He broke the string with his first foul scoring opportunity in the Duquesne-Niagara second half. . . . Best dangling phrase of the week was from Yale, reporting the scheduled appearance of double-diving Olympic diving champion Pat McCormick at the Yale swim carnival Feb. 23. Quoting . . . "Coached by her airline navigator husband, Mrs. McCormick is the mother of a ten-month old son."

Auto-Fashion Show Draws Crowd, 4,000

Drawing the largest attendance since the opening ceremonies of the Service Club, the Auto-Fashion Show, sponsored by the Enlisted Personnel Advisory Council and held at the Service Club this past weekend, was a whopping success. The show attracted nearly 4,000 people.

Exhibits of custom cars, foreign and American made sports cars, racing films, and the fashion show in the evening were the featured attractions of the show.

The one disappointing factor of the show was the scheduled Road-eo on Saturday morning, which failed to materialize when only four contestants entered the event. It was hoped that each unit from the Post would select an entrant to represent them in the Road-eo.

Miss Elizabeth De Latorre and Miss Isabelle Walker, Service Club directors, plan to enter the show in world-wide competition for the outstanding show put on during the year by a service club. The top award in the competition is a color television set. Results of the contest will be known in June.

The Presidio Service Club won a similar award in 1955 for a series of programs held at the Service Club called "Know Your World."

Outdoorsmen Spend Big $s During '55

California's outdoorsmen spent a staggering $487,000,000 for hunting and fishing in 1955, according to the first complete survey of these activities conducted by the Department of Fish and Game. The total expenditure for these activities was more than four times the amount spent on the combined total of admissions to professional, collegiate, and high school football, basketball, and baseball games and concerts, plays and movies in this state in 1955.

The report shows that the average hunter spent $265.55, the fresh water fisherman spent $217.89 and the salt water fisherman laid out $141.54 for their favorite pastimes. A national survey by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service shows the typical hunter nationwide spent only $79.49, the typical fisherman, fresh water, spent $77.38 and the salt water fisherman spent $107.29.

Further results of the survey revealed that California hunting and fishing resources furnished more than 31,000,000 man-days of recreation for licensees. Of this total, the fresh water anglers led with 15,600,000 man-days followed by the hunters with 9,000,000 man-days and the salt water anglers totaling 7,100,000 man-days.

The California hunter traveled 702 miles and averaged 14 days of shooting while his national counterpart traveled only 206 miles and averaged eight and one-half days.

The total estimated expenditures were based on a total of 1,179,255 angling license users and 632,896 hunting license buyers in California in 1955. State sportsmen were queried on time spent, miles traveled to hunt and fish, expenditures for equipment, transportation, food, lodging, rentals, bait, special equipment, storage for game, repair and maintenance of equipment, clothing and money spent for club dues and sportsmen's magazines. These were the items that swelled the sportsman's expenditures to an almost unbelievable total.

Defeats 25th Division In Close Competition

Adding another leg to its fast growing reputation, the Presidio Pistol Team surprised one of the best infantry division teams in the Army as they fired to a hotly contested nine-point aggregate victory over the 25th Infantry Division in a challenge match at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, last week.

Final tabulation showed the Presidio with 12665, and the 25th with 12656 out of a possible 15000.

Presidio got off to an early lead as they won three out of four tests with the 22 cal. In slow fire Presidio scored 919; 25th fired 899. Timed fire saw the locals rack up 986 points against their opponents' 983. Presidio blazed a brilliant 978 against 963 in rapid fire, but slipped to 1431 against 1443 over the National Match course. They held a 26-point lead at the end of the match.

In the center fire competition, 32 cal. and up, Presidio's lead was cut to seven points as the Lightningaires came back fighting with totals of 903 slow fire; 969 timed fire; 931 rapid fire; 1415 National Match, bringing their aggregate to 4218. Presidians fired 882 slow fire; 979 timed fire; 949 rapid fire; 1401 National Match, bringing their aggregate to 4211.

Final round firing with the 45 cal. saw the Presidio team score 892 slow fire; 968 timed fire; 922 rapid fire; 1358 National Match, to finish with an aggregate of 4140. The 25th shot 897 slow fire; 958 timed fire; 917 rapid fire; 1378 National Match, for an aggregate of 4150.

High individual scorer for the match was Sfc. Nelson Lincoln, Letterman Army Hospital, who fired an aggregate total of 2581 out of a possible 2700. Only some 23 marksmen have ever managed to score 2600 or better in match competition.

Second high average went to M/Sgt. James L. Wade with 2566. Third was Col. Leon J. Rouge with 2556. Capt. John F. Kallam was fourth with 2482 and M/Sgt. David A. Dewey fired a 2480 total.

Marksman	Center Fire .22	Center Fire .45	Aggregate
Lincoln	879	859	843	2581
Wade	875	849	842	2566
Rouge	867	845	844	2556
Kallam	846	830	806	2482
Dewey	847	828	805	2480
	4314	4211	4140	12665

Commenting on the match Col. Charles G. Rau, Deputy Commanding Officer and officer in charge of the team for the match, said, "Major General Messinger has a fine group of young marksmen. A group that is going to make some of the old pros look to their laurels in the future. He has proven in the relatively short time that he has commanded the 25th that proficiency with the soldier's basic weapon need not be a drudge or an unpleasant training chore, but that with imagination and skillful planning, the soldier's pride in competitive excellence becomes a stimulating morale factor."

Col. Rau was also impressed with the division's outstanding hospitality. "Undoubtedly the 25th has one of the best public relations programs I've ever encountered in the service. We were treated wonderfully."

Perpetual Trophy set up by the 25th Infantry Division for the first annual challenge match competition between the Presidio and the division is presented by Maj. Gen. Edward J. Messinger, Comanding General, to Col. Charles G. Rau.

High Scorer in the challenge competition between the 25th Infantry Division and the Presidio was Sfc. Nelson Lincoln of Letterman Army Hospital. Here he displays a non-official X-Target record of ten for ten to Major Harry N. Washow, director of marksmanship for the division.

Cold Weather Training Center Due In Alaska

Functions of the Mountain and Cold Weather Training Center, Camp Hale, Colorado, will be transferred to Fort Greeley, Alaska, by 1 July, the Department of the Army has announced.

Half of the approximately 350 operating and instructor personnel assigned to Camp Hale during the seven month training season will return to Fort Carson, Colorado, this month. Except for a small caretaker detachment, the rest of the personnel will be transferred at a later date.

At Fort Greeley, the training will be incorporated into existing courses of the Arctic Indoctrination School opened in 1948.

Operation 'Fire Drill'

Some 800 simulated casualties, provided by the 30th Engineer Group, 561st Engineer Company and A and D Companies, USA Garrison, were routed into the two medical centers during the exercise.

The casualties were labeled with symptoms only and it was up to the attending physicians to diagnose the injuries. Most of the critical cases were sent to LAH and the non-critical to the dispensary. Some of the patients were declared dead and removed to the temporary morgue (LAH swimming pool).

All the casualties treated by LAH were funneled into the Triage Center (LAH Gym) where their injuries were diagnosed by a battery of doctors into one of the following categories: 1) Burns, 2) surgical, 3) medical. The patients were then moved to special areas of the hospital for treatment.

As much as possible, Wednesday's exercise was treated as the "real thing." Actual patients at Letterman, if they could walk or be moved without hindering their recovery, were evacuated to make room for the simulated patients. The operating room was enlarged to handle 11 operations instead of the ordinary five.

Blood was drawn from volunteers during the exercise. In an actual disaster, acquiring enough blood to supply the patients would be one of the most difficult tasks, according to CWO Charles K. Hopkins, LAH Information Officer. He explained that if the disaster had been real, there would have been approximately 750,000 casualties requiring 62,000 pints of blood. At present, LAH has a blood supply that would last about an hour under the emergency conditions.

At the Post Dispensary, corpsmen and other EM were given the responsibility of caring for many of the non-critically injured patients. "The doctors already know how to bandage patients," explained Col. Clare T. Budge, Post Dental Chief, "so we are taking the opportunity to give practice to the enlisted personnel."

By staging Exercise Fire Drill, LAH is fulfilling a requirement by the Joint Commission on Hospital Accreditation which requires all hospitals to have a plan for meeting emergencies. To date, only one other Army medical center, Brooke Army Hospital at Fort Sam Houston, has tested an emergency plan.

Invitations to witness Exercise Fire Drill went to 175 distinguished residents of the area. They included ranking officers from military installations and leading San Francisco civic leaders. Representatives from each of the San Francisco hospitals and LAH consulting physicians were also invited.

Top NIKE Unit Will Get Tough Range Testing

The 28th AAA battalion of Seattle, the Army Air Defense Command's top-rated missile battalion, has been selected to carry out a special test designed to prove the ability of the NIKE guided missile to destroy evasive and low-flying targets.

The test is scheduled from 28 April to 4 May at the Army's Red Canyon Range in New Mexico, where ARADCOM's NIKE units go each year to practice using their weapons. The top battalion has been officially recognized as the winner of the world's first competitive firing of antiaircraft artillery missiles.

Results of the test will be used as the basis for possible changes in requirements for the annual service practices which are to be conducted by all NIKE units in the command next year.

New Designation

Units previously described as atomic support commands have been designated U. S. Army Missile Command, according to a Department of the Army announcement.

When activated, the units will be referred to as numbered commands with their type, such as air transportable or medium, indicated parenthetically.

Promotions

month, E-2's had to have 10 months' service before they were eligible for promotion.

The brightest promotion news at Post headquarters, other than the two E-6 promotions, was the allocation of 223 E-4 raises. No E-7 or E-5 allocations were given to Post. Training Unit (6700) received 13 E-4 promotions and Recruiting (6400) received four E-4 promotions.

The two E-6 promotions allotted to Post will be awarded to individuals selected by a board convened at Post headquarters. Unit commanders will submit to the board, names of those persons eligible for such a promotion. Units coming under the Post promotion allocation are as follows: All 6002 units, 30th Engineer Group, 46th Ordnance Group, 561st Engineer Company and the 199th Military Intelligence unit.

All of Sixth U. S. Army received 13 E-7, 31 E-6, 211 E-5 and 1,422 E-4 allocations. Army-wide, the promotions went as follows: E-7, 300; E-6, 800; E-5, 5,500, and E-4, 33,000.

Promotions will not be made to grades E-5, E-6 and E-7 during the quarter in the following MOS's: 073, 542, 551, 553, 631, 714, 715, 719, 762, 763, 765, 767, 942, 943, 951.

Army Commander Will Retire In September

The Star Presidian

Vol. 5, No. 46 PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA Friday 26 April, 1957

★ ★ ★

V Corps' Mathewson Will Succeed Young

Lieutenant General Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander since July, 1955, will retire 30 September after more than 35 years of Army service, the Department of the Army announced this week.

General Young will be succeeded by Lieutenant General Lemuel Mathewson, presently commander of the V Corps, U.S. Army in Europe. He will become Sixth Army commander on 1 October.

Lt. Gen. Mathewson

Born in Washington, D. C., on 14 January, 1900, General Young was graduated from the University of Maryland in 1922 and was commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry from the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

During the first 20 years of his military service, he attended Army schools that included the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. Overseas tours of duty prior to World War II were in Puerto Rico and Hawaii.

General Young's World War II service included an assignment as Secretary of the War Department General Staff under General George C. Marshall for seven months. He was promoted to Brigadier General and assigned to the 70th Infantry Di-

"Give Blood" was the war cry as these first contributors to the new Presidio Civilian Blood Fund gathered at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank to give their one-pint donations. Esther Cookston, Post Commissary, was one of the first to register under the close surveillance of the others. The fund is being established to combat blood emergencies encountered by civilian employees or their dependents.

First Blood Drawn For Presidio Reserve

Presidio civilian employees and their dependents soon will be able to offset emergency blood needs through a reserve fund established in cooperation with the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. The first big "give blood" day is 14 May.

One of 400 such reserve funds, the Presidio reserve will be managed by Mr. Les Scanlon, Civilian Personnel Officer, and Mr. Gordon Findley. No fee is required for membership.

First to contribute from the Presidio were Esther Cookston, Post Commissary; Jack Dulberg and Dorothy E. Takashiba, Sixth Army AG; Elsie Frick and Margaret Fyfe, CMD; Henry D. Fanning, Sixth Army Engineers; Genevieve Hanley, Sixth Army Signal; Alvin Johnson, Post Signal; James Washington and Alfredo Flori, Post Transportation; Donna Neiss, Frances P. Akimo and Frances Ahrens, LAH; and Sam Moore and Nolan Dix, Post Quartermaster.

Employees ineligible to donate blood will still be able to utilize the fund; however, the users will be contacted to actively participate in replenishing the fund. Members of employees' families are eligible to donate.

In addition to being handy in emergencies, the fund will net users a $25 saving for each pint of blood. The usual charge to patients for a unit of blood and its processing is $33.50 when a replacement is not provided. The fund will eliminate the charge for blood replacement and users will pay processing fees only.

Irwin Memorial will provide a mobile unit to accommodate donors on 14 May. Employees will be excused to give blood.

Band Sets Radio Show

The Sixth Army Band presents its next radio show over KGO on Sunday at 1815 hours. Featured in the concert will be Colonel Bogie, a march by Kenneth Alford, and A La Marche Karelia by Jan Sibelius, also The Song Of The Vagabonds, by Rudolph Friml.

Need Stenos!

Civilian personnel have been urged to tell their friends and relatives about the several clerk-stenographer and clerk-typist vacancies at the Presidio. Those interested should contact the Civilian Personnel Division, Bldg. 36, for further information.

Three Will Retire Today; Ceremonies Set For 1600

Three local officers will be honored at a retirement ceremony at 1600 hours today on the main parade ground. The Sixth Army Band and Post troops will participate in the military parade.

Five other servicemen will also be retired this month but will not participate in today's ceremony.

Leaving on 30 April are Lt. Col. Anthony R. Hamilton, Chief of the Sixth Army G2 Operations Branch; Lt. Col. Wayne Lycett, Assistant Post Quartermaster; Capt. Charles W. Kinder. USAR Advisory Group, CMD; M/Sgt. Henry F. Tadday, Army ROTC instructor at the University of San Francisco; and M/Sgt. Leonard M. West, Food Inspector with the Post Veterinary Detachment.

Colonels DeMars, Rudser and Hamilton will receive letters of achievement from Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, upon their retirement.

DA Says 1,000 Officers To Be Integrated By June

Washington (ANS)—The Department of the Army has announced that selection of approximately 1,000 officers being integrated into the Regular Army under the augmentation program will be completed during June, 1957.

This first increment is designed primarily to include qualified young officers on active duty who will finish their normal two-year tours between now and the proposed cutoff date of June, 1958. In addition, this early announcement will include a substantial number of highly qualified officers in all other grades.

A roster of the balance of officers being integrated is expected to be made public shortly after 1 January, 1958, the Army said.

Under this program, the Army expects to appoint some 5,500 officers to Regular Army status between now and June, 1958. They will be selected from the Reserve, both active and inactive, National Guard, and former officers.

ANZAC Trade Union To Honor War Dead

Twelve trade representatives accompanied by the Consuls General of Australia and New Zealand will place three wreaths on the Grave of the Unknown Soldier in the San Francisco National Cemetery here at 1100 hours, Thursday, in observance of Australia's Memorial Day, Anzac Day.

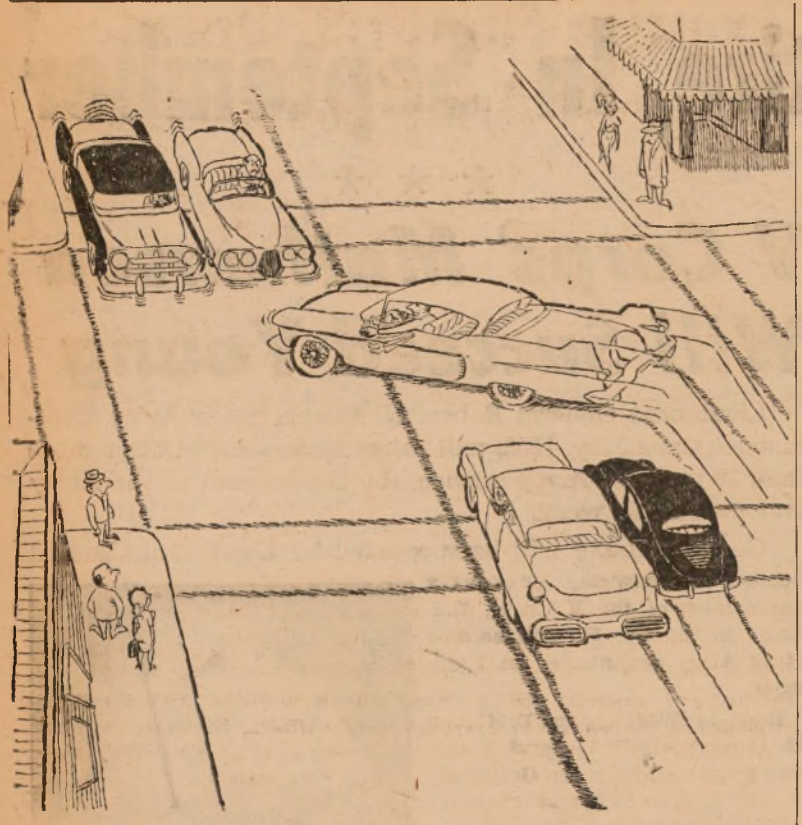
A Sixth Army bugler will participate in the commemoration. Messrs. Melville H. Marshall and Roberts M. Firth, the Australian and New Zealand Consuls General, will take part.

The word "Anzac" is derived from the Australian and New Zealand Army Corps, who were detailed to effect a beachhead against the Turkish Army in the Dardanelles on 25 April, 1915. The force advanced for 11 days without sleep, food or support and with insufficient water in the scalding sun of early summer in southern Turkey. The sea was behind them as they faced a vastly outnumbering enemy dug-in in front of their steadily diminishing ranks.

The place of attack, known as Gelibolu, was first changed to Gallipoli and later to Anzac. The day is still observed throughout the British Empire and wherever Australia and New Zealand are represented by their own nationals.

In both Australia and New Zealand, "Anzac Day" is a national holiday and is celebrated by dawn services at every cenotaph and memorial throughout the country, by memorial services in all churches at 1100 hours and by full-scale veterans' parades through every city and country town.

Hey, don't forget!



If you are unusually tired Sunday, don't start thinking you are too old for those Saturday nights out because you have actually lost an hour's sleep. Sunday marks the beginning of this year's daylight saving time and clocks will be set an hour ahead. For example, if you start to go to bed at midnight, stop a moment and set your clock to 1 a.m. Utilizing the daylight hours will continue until 29 September.

Top Changes Follow New Assignments

Changes in assignment and retirement of general officers were announced this week by Secretary of the Army Wilbur M. Brucker.

Lt. Gen. Francis W. Farrell, Special Assistant to the Joint Chiefs of Staff for National Security Council Affairs, will succeed Lt. Gen. Lemuel Mathewson as Commanding General of the V Corps, U.S. Army Europe. General Farrell has held his present position since July 1955.

Lt. Gen. Clovis E. Byers, Commandant, North Atlantic Treaty Organization Defense College, Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers, Europe, has been named as Military Advisor, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs. General Byers, who has held his present position since November 1955, will succeed Lt. Gen. Alonzo P. Fox, who will retire on 31 July after more than 40 years of Army service.

Meet Wrong Lane Willie. The friendly joker who thinks every other driver is a mind reader. Willie is a "spur of the moment" character. His mind is like an unmade bed and his frantic last minute signaling is guaranteed to turn a nervous driver into a potential bridge jumper. Willie is the most optimistic driver in the world. He never waits to see if his erratic signals have been observed. He will turn blithly, from the wrong lane, into the full flush of oncoming traffic, trusting in the patron saint of ignorance to protect his unwary way. Willie relies on the old military maxim—"a good offense is the best defense." Drivers, dumbfounded at Willie's flagrant violation of laws for survival, have been known to rub their eyes in dismay and head for their occulist; jump from their car and pound their head on the asphalt; pay a belated visit to their psychiatrist, or even give up driving altogether. Some day a preoccupied driver will splatter Willie and his dangerous innocence all over the pavement.

When this happens, accident bureaus everywhere will declare an annual holiday . At least until another of Willie's ludicrous ilk return to the car wars.

Suggestions Save $9,138

An estimated $9,138 was saved during the first half of this fiscal year due to civilian suggestions, according to the latest report. Approximate savings were not computed for the $25 in awards presented last quarter.

Civilian suggestions submitted last quarter were the greatest of any quarter in FY 1957; however, the cumulative total for the three quarters is only half of the fiscal year objective of 16 per cent participation.

For the third successive quarter military participation exceeded corresponding quarters in FY 1956.

Service Bills in Congress

Washington (AFPS) — Legislation which would permit service families living in substandard government housing to pay rentals without loss of quarters allowances, has been approved on the House floor by a voice vote.

Passage of the bill (HR 1056) followed introduction of a proviso by Rep. Carl A. Vinson (D—Ga.) which will exclude Wherry housing from being declared substandard.

An earlier amendment of the House Armed Services Committee stipulates that quarters deemed inadequate be occupied only for a period of two years after which time the services would be required to rebuild or replace the below-par buildings.

The measure, as altered, now moves across Capitol Hill for consideration by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

EVASION PAY—Members of the Armed Forces and ex-servicemen would be compensated at the rate of $2.50 for each day spent in hiding during WWII and the Korean conflict to evade capture by the enemy under a bill (HR 4742) proposed by Rep. Frank J. Becker (R—N. Y.)

The measure has been referred to the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee which reviews all legislation to amend the War Claims Act.

★ ★ ★

DISABILITY HIKE—A 10 per cent increase in compensation for service-connected disabilities and for some classes of dependents of ex-servicemen has been approved by the House Veterans Committee, headed by Rep. Olin E. Teague (D—Texas).

The new bill (HR 52) would up the basic VA compensation rates paid to veterans who have service-connected disabilities less than total. For those totally disabled, monthly payments would be raised from $181 to $225, or about 24 per cent.

The measure now moves to the House floor for debate and vote in the near future.

Greek Private Knew War Intimately

It has been a big month for Pfc. Miltiades "Milton" Panou, for his United States citizenship papers were added to his 201 file. Private Panou, who is with Headquarters Company of the 660th Battalion, 30th Engineer Group, has been in this country for six years.

Born in Greece in 1931, Private Panou witnessed two wars in his native country. While he was in grade school, the Germans and Italians occupied his home town and the schools were closed for 10 months.

After World War II, the Germans and the Italians were replaced by American and British Occupation Forces and in 1948 the country was torn by civil war. At 18, while acting as a guide for the Greek Army, Milton was wounded in the right leg when 3,000 Communist rebels raided an Army supply depot.

Two years later, Private Panou left for the United States and arrived in New York in July, 1951. He spent his first eight months with an uncle in Wilmington, Deleware, where he learned English while working in a restaurant. In April, 1952, Milton moved to Ann Arbor, Michigan, and studied electrical engineering at the University of Michigan.

Employed by the General Motors Corp. as an assistant electrical engineer before his induction into the Army, Milton plans to return there after his release this summer.

While in the Army, Milton was first assigned to the 542nd Survey Company as a computor and is now a supply clerk with Headquarters Company of the 660th Battalion. His family is still in Greece, and one of his brothers is a captain in the Greek Army.

★ ★ ★

"Coming to America was the turning point of my life," Private Panou summed up his story.

New Citizenship papers are added to Pfc. Miltiades Panou's file by Captain Louis Paragon, Adjutant, 660th Engineer Battalion (seated), and First Lieutenant Harry A. Taylor, Headquarters Detachment Commander. Only Private Panou's smile can describe how it feels to become a citizen of the country he entered six years ago from his native Greece.

Sixth Army, Post Name Top Saving Bond Sellers

Several Post and Sixth Army Savings Bond canvassers have been recognized for their participation during the recent drive by Lieutenant Colonel Walter R. Jorgenson and First Lieutenant Patricia Flynn, Sixth Army and Post savings bond officers.

The two top Sixth Army solicitors were Lt. Col. John P. A. Kelly, G3, and Mrs. Wanda Greer, G2. Colonel Kelly sold 16 bonds and Mrs. Greer signed up 14 persons.

Although the original goal for recognition was at least 20 subscriptions, Colonel Jorgenson noted that few if any of the Sixth Army canvassers were assigned a goal of more than 10 to 15 persons because of the relatively thin spread of prospects throughout the sections. Because of this, efforts are being made to give special consideration to industrious canvassers.

Twelve Post canvassers sold at least 20 bonds during the drive. The top people were First Lieutenant George Burt, Company A, USA Garrison; CWO Alvin H. H. Volimer, 21st Engineer Co.; M/Sgt. Juan B. Francisco, U.S.A. Engineer Group Augmentation; Sfc. Philip J. Pisilina, Jr., 549th Engineer Co.; and CWO Harry O. Clayton, 56th MRU.

Others were M/Sgt. Frank Datner, M/Sgt. Edward Kierszten and Sp3 Howard Sturdivan, Headquarters Company, USA Garrison; CWO Leo P. Day, Headquarters Company, 6000; Capt. James Malizola, Post Quartermaster; and Maj. Everett G. Salyer and Mrs. Ruby Stammers, Post Transportation.

752nd AAA Folds

The 752nd AAA Battalion, with headquarters at Fort Scott, will be inactivated 15 June, according to the U. S. Army Air Defense Command. The inactivation is part of a readjustment of Army Forces in the nation's air defense system.

Some of the technically qualified personnel from the 752nd will be trained for Nike Hercules duty or transferred within the command.

Powerful Short Wave Set Will Go To Pentagon

A powerful new short wave transmitter which can beam vital defense messages to any spot on earth, even through severe interference, has been developed and will be installed for Pentagon use, the Department of the Army has announced.

Called the World Spanner, the transmitter was designed by the U.S. Army Signal Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and Continental Electronics, Inc., Dallas, Tex. The set is nearly 50 times more effective than the loudest commercial broadcasting station.

The set owes its tremendous power to single sideband design as compared to three separate signals broadcast by conventional transmitters. The single sideband provides eight times the strength of conventional transmitters with the same power supply, according to Army Signal Corps engineers.

With ordinary design the World Spanner would have a power of 300,000 watts, more than enough to light 100 homes. With the new single sideband refinements and a new beam antenna now under development, effective power will reach 24 million watts. The transmitter can send 64 teletypewriter messages or four separate voices at the same time.

The World Spanner with all its accessories can be housed in a 50-foot square room. One man can replace the 150-pound tube in little more time than he could its smaller counterpart in an ordinary radio.

CAP Drill Team Will Hold Annual Competition Here

Six drill teams composed of Civil Air Patrol cadets will compete in the California Wing CAP Cadet Northern California Drill Competition at 1400 hours, Sunday, on the parade ground near the Officers' Club. Entrants are from the Bay Area.

Winners of Sunday's competition will be matched against the Southern area winner on 19 May at Hamilton Air Force Base to determine the state drill winner.

The California winner will then compete in the Pacific Region Drill Competition scheduled at the Presidio in June. Teams from Washington, Oregon, Nevada, Hawaii and Alaska will be entered. The region winner will then compete in the national competition which will be held in July at Amarillo Air Force Base, Texas.

Members of the drill teams are CAP cadets between the ages of 14 and 18. The Sixth Army Band will furnish music for this week's competition.

Colonel Hamilton visited Hastings Law School in San Francisco this week and plans to visit Santa Clara University soon.

'Exercise Fire Drill' Draws Praise Of Army Commander

The outcome of Letterman Army Hospital's "Exercise Fire Drill" far exceeded original expectations, according to Brig. Gen. Paul S. Fancher, LAH Commander. The drill staged last week unveiled Letterman's plan for coping with civilian disasters.

Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, who commands the hospital in such emergencies, said:

"This type of exercise is an example of the many training exercises in which the Army is constantly engaged. Other exercises include maneuvers, command post exercises, training of units, as well as survival drills. The entire staff at Letterman Army Hospital is to be congratulated on the imagination, energy, and sincerity which they displayed in the conduct of Exercise Fire Drill."

Among the distinguished visitors at the drill was Maj. Gen. Silas B. Hays, Army Surgeon General. General Hays seemed pleased with the attitude and esprit de corps of the Letterman personnel, as well as the helpful participation of others on the post.

Military personnel were alerted at 0500 the day of the drill and worked until 1500 hours that day. Civilians at Letterman and the Post Dispensary were called at 0600 hours to fill in at critical posts.

Capt. Frank M. Bowen, Jr., who is working with the Military Affairs Division, will be serving until 28 April. He is from San Francisco.

First Lieutenant Robert W. Morrison, Sausalito, is working with the Military Justice Division. He remains on active duty until 5 May.

Doctor, Dentist Draft Sought By DOD Bill

Washington (AFPS)—The Defense Department has asked Congress for legislation authorizing President Eisenhower to issue special draft calls to doctors and dentists under 35 who were given draft deferments.

These physicians and dentists who were deferred from military service to complete their professional education, will be subject to call by Selective Service if the Armed Forces can not obtain sufficient volunteers to meet their needs, the Defense Department said.

Primarily affecting dental and medical school graduates who have not met their military obligations, the legislation would amend the Universal Military Training Act instead of continuing the Special Doctors' Draft Law, which expires July 1.

Those called to active duty under the proposed bill would receive the additional $100 a month now paid medical officers.

In submitting the measure, officials said that its enactment is essential if the services are to continue to maintain "sufficient numbers of well-qualified" physicians, dentists and allied specialists to meet requirements.

The last draft call, for 450 medical officers, was in November.

Presidio 'Fatties' Near Ton Loss

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

To date, participants in the Presidio Weight Clinic have lopped off a total of 1805 pounds of excess weight, Dr. Martin J. Seid of the Post Dispensary reported this week.

This is an average of nine pounds for each of the 160 officers and enlisted men who have taken part in the program since its inception two months ago.

The weight reduction program stemmed from the annual physical given to officers which revealed unauthorized concentrations of fat in "off limit" areas. Once the clinic got under way, a number of NCO's, many of them mess stewards, were directed to the program.

"The way it works," explains Dr. Seid, "they come in here and I size them up by checking their height, weight, age and chest measurement. The latter fact enables me to determine their skeletal structure, an important factor in a man's weight. I then fix an ideal weight, subtract it from their present weight and tell them how much they have to lose."

Dr. Seid emphasizes the fact that the men are not given any medications to kill appetite. They are put on an 1100 or 1200 calorie diet and told to walk two miles a day. It works! Star performer to date is a mess steward who has lost 55 pounds in 11 weeks. But he still has 25 pounds to go to get down to his ideal weight of 205 pounds.

To the question "what if a man doesn't cooperate in this plan to lost weight?" Dr. Seid replied, "I don't know, I haven't had a single failure. The men come back just tickled to death and proudly show me how loosely their pants are hanging."

A thorough explanation as to why they should lose weight is one of the main reasons why the patients are eager to cooperate, the doctor asserted. "When they are told that losing weight will ease the work of the heart and save them from circulatory problems in later life, they are eager to get those pounds off."

While the patients now attending the weight clinic have all been directed there through command channels. Dr. Seid is perfectly willing to advise any overweight military personnel who want to "take it off." They should visit his office at the Post Dispensary Physical Standards Section, Bldg. T-3, at 1300 hours, Monday through Friday.

With May Day coming up and the month of brides just one jump away, our thoughts turn to what to give at the endless parade of showers.

The first step in answering the "what to buy" question is to avoid the "different" complex and be practical in your purchases. Prospective guests frequently study the latest papers and gadgets for hours and come up with something the bride will use once a year if that often. Modern gadgets are wonderful, but in starting their first household, today's newlyweds need the same things their parents did—everyday dishes and silverware, glasses, pots, mixing bowls, towels, sheets, ash trays and on down the practical list. Try to remember that you are trying to help them get started and that they have practically nothing for their household as they enter the shower whirl.

The second consideration should be based on the couples' immediate plans. Is the prospective groom in the service? If so, will the newlyweds be moving frequently in the next couple of years? Then it would be a little difficult to pack bulky items such as a carpet sweeper. Along these same lines, are the bride and groom from different cities? If so, will the bride be moving her gifts 1000 miles away?

If the couple is planning to move into a home or an apartment also should influence your choice of a gift, for five or six rooms offer much more space than a one-bedroom apartment. If you are creating storage problems for the couple, then you are not accomplishing your aim of helping them out.

Just one last tip to the May shower hostess—gaily or uniquely decorated May baskets add spirit and fun to the party. In addition to the flowered baskets, basket decorations which depict the lives or courtship of the bride and groom or future plans of the couple are always different and worth saving. If you use the May basket theme, how about buying the bride a clothes basket and decorating it similarly to the individual favors?

New Task Force To Monitor Military Pay Legislation

A "task force" to monitor new pay legislation soon to be introduced in the 85th Congress has been formed by the Defense Department.

Headed by Maj. Gen. Harold R. Maddux, USAF, the staff organization will be known as the "Task Force on Modernization of Military Compensation."

The pay bills, now being drafted by the task force for the approval of the President and the Secretary of Defense, will be shaped from changes recommended in the Cordiner Committee's final report on suggested improvements in technical and professional compensation for the Armed Forces.

vision at Camp Adair, Oregon, in March 1943.

In September of the following year he joined the 3rd Infantry Division as Assistant Division Commander and served in that capacity during its drive through Southern France, the Vosges Mountains, the Colmar Pocket operation and the capture of Salzburg, Austria.

In 1950 the general attended the parachute school at Fort Benning, Georgia, and qualified as a parachutist. He then served for one year in the 82nd Airborne Division.

General Young was promoted to Major General and assigned to command the 2nd Infantry Division in Korea in 1951. He remained with that unit until the summer of 1952. During this period successful attack was completed against the now famous Heartbreak Ridge hill mass.

Before coming to the Presidio, General Young was Commandant of the Infantry School at Fort Benning and was Assistant Chief of Staff for Personnel (G1), Department of the Army, at the Pentagon. He was promoted to Lieutenant General on 29 June, 1955.

General Young's successor, General Mathewson, was born at Bath, New York, on 29 March, 1899. He was graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1922, and the Command and General Staff School in 1939.

Prior to becoming Commander of the V Corps, U.S. Army Europe, General Mathewson was Director of the Joint Staff of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and at one time was artillery commander of the 11th Airborne Division.

General Mathewson's promotion to Lieutenant General was announced on 7 April, 1954. He holds the Legion of Merit with two Oak Leaf Clusters and the Bronze Star Medal for heroism in combat.

Mr. Army Production Will Be Shot Here

Many Presidio soldiers will become actors in the Army's coast to coast television show "The Big Picture" when a Signal Corps Motion Picture camera crew arrives in San Francisco, 1 May, from Governor's Island, New York, to shoot the west coast sequence for "Mr. Army."

In this episode of The Big Picture series, "Mr. Army," the theme will be the mission of the Army Recruiter across America. It will show his position as a public relations expert of the greatest and largest business in the United States, where and how he works, and will point up that Recruiting is a business today conducted in the highest principles comparative to modern industry.

The film will be taken in five American cities with San Francisco and the Presidio as key points for production.

Highlights of the San Francisco filming will include an interview between Mayor George Christopher and a Recruiting Sergeant telling of the support given by the city to the Army recruiters; travelogue shots of the city, the Presidio and troop activities on the Post, and a visit by 100 San Francisco high school ROTC students to the Nike site at Fort Baker.

Led by Captain James S. Bowns, Production Supervisor, Radio-TV Branch, Public Information Division, Washington, D. C., the team is composed of two officers and four enlisted men.

Dinner Special

"Tornedo Grillee" is the mysterious sounding entree that will be featured at a special dinner-dance this Saturday at the Presidio Officers' Open Mess. Both the dinner and dance will be held in the ballroom, with dinner starting at 2000 hours and dancing at 2100 hours. Murray Peterson and his orchestra will provide music. Reservations will be accepted.

New Legislative Proposals Would Aid Most Civilians

Several legislative proposals relating to civilian personnel management in the Federal government have been recommended to the Department of Defense by the Army. Army's views will be consolidated with those of the other military departments and suggested to the Civil Service Commission for inclusion in a government legislative program.

The proposals include paying travel expenses of applicants in scarce categories who are requested to visit an installation before employment and new employees reporting for duty; paying "dislocation allowance" to employees who move from one locality to another for the convenience of the government; and extra pay for employees at installations located in unattractive or isolated areas.

Others are a substantial increase in the number of supergrade and specially paid research and development positions; permanent authority for Federal agencies to train employees at government expense at non-government facilities; codification of the laws and orders affecting Federal personnel management; and repeal of the Whitten Amendment.

It has been suggested that the Classification Act pay system be revised to permit greater flexibility and allow pay rates to be adjusted to prevailing rates in private industry by administrative action rather than by Act of Congress. A broad, integrated insurance program to include hospitalization, surgical service and "catastrophe" protection has been proposed. The program would be financed jointly by the Federal government and employees.

Final Army proposals are to amend the Performance Rating Act to eliminate the requirement for mandatory summary adjective ratings; and to permit the payment of cost of living allowances in excess of 25 per cent in territories and possessions where currently authorized allowances fail to make up the differences in living costs.

on our shelves

This month's book list from the Sixth Army Library and its Library depot include the following titles. The books may be consulted at the depot or they are available through the Sixth Army libraries on interlibrary loan.

SOUND OF THE GUNS, by F. D. Downey, is the story of American artillery from the ancient and honorable company to atom cannon and guided missile. It covers the period from 1745 to the present and includes accounts of many battles and the exploits of heroic men and women.

ARMS AND MEN, by Walter Millis, is a study in American military history. It examines the forces and events which have shaped military policy since Colonial days and explains something of the significance of the military factor in the gigantic social and political issues of our times.

U.S. AND ASIA, by L. A. Battistini, traces the development of United States relations with the Orient from the birth of our republic to contemporary times, with emphasis on the Far East and Southeast Asia.

THE NEW JAPAN, by H. S. Quigley and J. E. Turner, is a comprehensive appraisal of postwar political, constitutional and administrative developments with special attention to the MacArthur period.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS AND THE UNION, by S. F. Bemis, is the final biography of the President, covering the period from his campaign in 1824 to his death in 1846.

BATTLE HYMN, by D. E. Hess, is the compelling autobiography of a clergyman turned fighter pilot in World War II, who developed the South Korean Air Force and rescued thousands of Korean children from the advancing Chinese Communist armies by means of an audacious airlift.

THIS HALLOWED GROUND, by Bruce Catton, is a story of the Union side of the Civil War. A military history, it encompasses the whole of the North's military effort, but mainly the land forces that won the war.

Headquarters, Military Division of the Pacific and Department of California

April 1878

To The Commanding Officer
Presidio of San Francisco

Sir:

The city authorities have informed the Division Commander that a large number of evily disposed men in the city are endeavoring to stir up strife with the intention of overawing the city government and forcing it to yield to their demands. It is thought that this riotous element may AT ANY TIME violate the local laws—and possibly the United States laws in preventing Chinamen from obtaining their rights under treaty and in imperiling United States property in this city.

I send you the information unofficially, but as important for you to know.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. A. SKELTON,
Lt. Colonel.

Above is part of a page of Presidio history which was in the making back in 1878, when the United States Military government was committed to taking active preventive measures against municipal riots.

Since the collection of historic documents pertaining to the Presidio is so inadequate, one can only assume that "the evily disposed men" referred to by Colonel Skelton were averse to the Chinese colonists in San Francisco enjoying any of the municipal rights granted to other citizens.

The obvious deduction is that since then, the Chinese in the city of San Francisco have come into their own according to existing legislation, and that, far from being detrimental to the city's cultural aspects, they have enhanced them, and through civic administration of their particular colony—Chinatown—added more color, and indeed more cash—to the spectrum which has made this city famous throughout the world.

Had you served as an officer or an enlisted man at the Presidio during the time that the above letter was written to the Presidio commander by the resident G-2, you might probably be called on for special guard detail at Old Fort Point every week.

You would have—if you were serving as Officer of the Guard—been privileged to call for—not a vehicle, but a horse—on which you would ride to Fort Point in the morning, returning on horseback for the noon and evening meals, and seeing to it that your horse was properly fed, curried and stabled when you returned the animal to the cavalry post that evening.

While on duty at Fort Point, you would be regarded by the Presidio Commanding Officer as "ex-officio commanding officer of Fort Point, pro tem," but you would not be designated Port Commander, even though your special detail placed you in charge of the military unit defending the harbor.

You would divide your enlisted men into three reliefs of three men each: one for Sally Port, one for Water Battery and one for something known on the Orders of the Day as Para-Pet.

As Guard Officer, you would see to it that your men would be drilled twice daily at the guns. And you would be directed to note particularly that the Old Fort Point flag would not be dipped in salute at any time to any incoming vessel, since Fort Point was but an outpost of the Presidio proper.

There would be a lighthouse keeper on the fort, and you would make sure that he and his assistant would be allowed free access to the reservation, by making them known to the enlisted man on guard at the entrance. Also you would be liable for disciplinary action were you to permit any guns but those near the flag staff to be fired at Reveille and Retreat.

Your enlisted men would have to have a thorough knowledge of all types of ships, particularly those larger than schooners, and you would instruct them each morning, that the ships' courses (whether inward or outward bound) were to be recorded in the Guard Report.

It is probable also, that if you were an old-time Presidio officer or an enlisted man, your thoughts would turn to the joys of fishing in a mountain lake near The Presidio. (Nobody knows where the lake has disappeared to.) But you would have been accorded fishing privileges there at that time. And one fine day there might come to you a civilian stranger, bearing a letter of introduction from Headquarters of the Military Division of the Pacific. His credentials, signed by Brevet Captain A. W. Preston, 8th Cavalry Regiment, would state that the bearer was authorized by Major General Halleck, the Division Commander, to "plant trout in the mountain lake" and that the job would be in no manner disturbed or interfered with by anyone belonging to the military service in the Division.

The whole story of military duty at the Presidio in the 19th century sounds somewhat antiquated, but it surely had its compensations. For instance, who—even now—could not enjoy the pleasure of ordering a cavalry horse, rather than a sedan, to ride to duty at Fort Point, and return at day's end, lulled to contemplation by the beauty of the local scene and the quiet clip-clop of ironclad hooves on the dusty highway?

Debra.

Model Plane Meet Set For Fort Lewis

Washington (ANS) The Department of the Army has announced that the All-Army Model Airplane Meet will be held at Fort Lewis, Wash., 21-25 August, 1957.

Teams of 12 "flyers" from each of the major Army commands throughout the world will compete in free flight, control line, and the glider events. Trophies will be awarded to individual winners, the high point winner, and the team champion.

Winners at installation level will compete in area command level competitions and these winners in turn will form the team to represent their commands in the All-Army competition at Fort Lewis.

Other competition in addition to the flying events include entries in the special scale models of Army aircraft. They will be forwarded to the Department of the Army for judging.

Dual Reception Will Honor WAC On Fifteenth Birthday

A reception for Presidio women officers and their guests—first in a dual celebration honoring the 15th Anniversary of the Women's Army Corps—takes place in the Fort Scott Officers' Open Mess, Sunday, 12 May, from 1600 to 1800 hours.

Attending the Fort Scott reception will be officers from the Sixth Army headquarters, Post headquarters and sections, Letterman Army Hospital, Fort Mason, Oakland Army Terminal, and other units within the Bay Area. Guests will be representatives of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and the Marine Corps.

Guests at the reception will include members of the General Staff and officer and civilian section chiefs and co-workers of the enlisted women at the given installations.

The formal reception will be followed by a dinner dance at the Non-Com Open Mess. Dining, for enlisted women and their Company officers and guests, begins at 1900 hours, followed by a program of entertainment and the dance which continues until 2100 hours.

"THE LITTLE HUT"—Because of her husband's frequent absences from London on Government business, Lady Susan Phillips (Ava Gardner), is the constant companion of her former suitor, Henry (David Niven). Sir Philip Phillips (Stewart Granger), is delighted that his best friend is always available to entertain his wife, but he takes a different attitude when a shipwreck maroons the threesome and their pet German shepherd on a deserted island. Here the indifference of the husband vanishes, the previous advantages of the best friend disappear. How this situation develops and is solved makes for amusing and intriguing film fare.

"KRONOS" is a Science Fiction movie. It deals with a tiny light which approaches the earth from space. Buzzing electrically, it strikes a salesman, turning him into an automaton. Animating the salesman's body, the Intelligence gains entry into top-secret LAB-CENTRAL, super atomic plant. Leaving the salesman's dead body, the light enters the body of the lab director, leaving him powerless to act of his own volition. The light is the pilot for the oncoming Kronos, which is invading the earth in search of energy for the dying people of its own planet. The electronic monster is fashioned to absorb the vital energy it gathers in its mammoth frame. Realizing that the electronic monster cannot survive without its pilot, the lab director locks himself in a time vault, perishing with the Intelligence which has invaded his body.

"THE LONELY MAN"—(Jack Palance) has earned the reputation of gun killer during the years since he reluctantly abandoned his wife and son after a range war killing he was blamed for. The son, now grown to manhood, bitterly hates his father, blaming him his mother's early death. Forced out of town by the hostile sheriff and the aroused townspeople, father and son retreat to a distant hideout, where they attempt to start a new life. Their plans are interrupted by Jake's outlaw pals who try to force Jake back into his old ways. What was his choice?

"THE GIRL CAN'T HELP IT" presents Jayne Mansfield as a night club singer slightly on the dumb side, whom an ex-gangster, for romantic reasons, attempts to launch as a juke box favorite, through typical gangster tactics. Tom Ewell is the press agent who is given the job of giving Jayne a big build-up. Edmund O'Brien is the ex-gangster with romantic designs on Jayne and a strong attraction for Rock and Roll Music. The hilarious climax occurs at a Rock Around the Rock Pile Jubilee, at which the romantic complications are unravelled.

"HELLCATS OF THE NAVY" is the story of the little publicized exploits of the Navy's submarine service in the Pacific phase of World War II. Two strategic problems assigned to the submarines involve detecting the mines through electronic equipment and plotting mine fields in the Japanese Sea. The heroic and daring solution of these problems is a glowing part of Naval history.

for your pleasure!

Presidio Dominates Army Volleyball Tourney

3 Teams Unbeaten In Tourney

With play in the pre-season softball tourney half-way completed, seven of the original sixteen teams have been eliminated in the double elimination tournament and only three teams remain undefeated. Hq. Co., USA Garrison; A Co., USA Garrison and the 561st Engineer Co. of the 30th Engineer Group are the three unbeaten teams.

In the first round of play, Hq. and Hq. Co. beat the Medics 7-4; MRU topped the Interns 6-2; 16th BPO beat the Teen Agers 7-3; Hq. Co., Sixth U. S. Army, bested D Btry., 9th AAA 7-2; and the 561st Engrs. downed Hq., 752nd Engrs., 7-1.

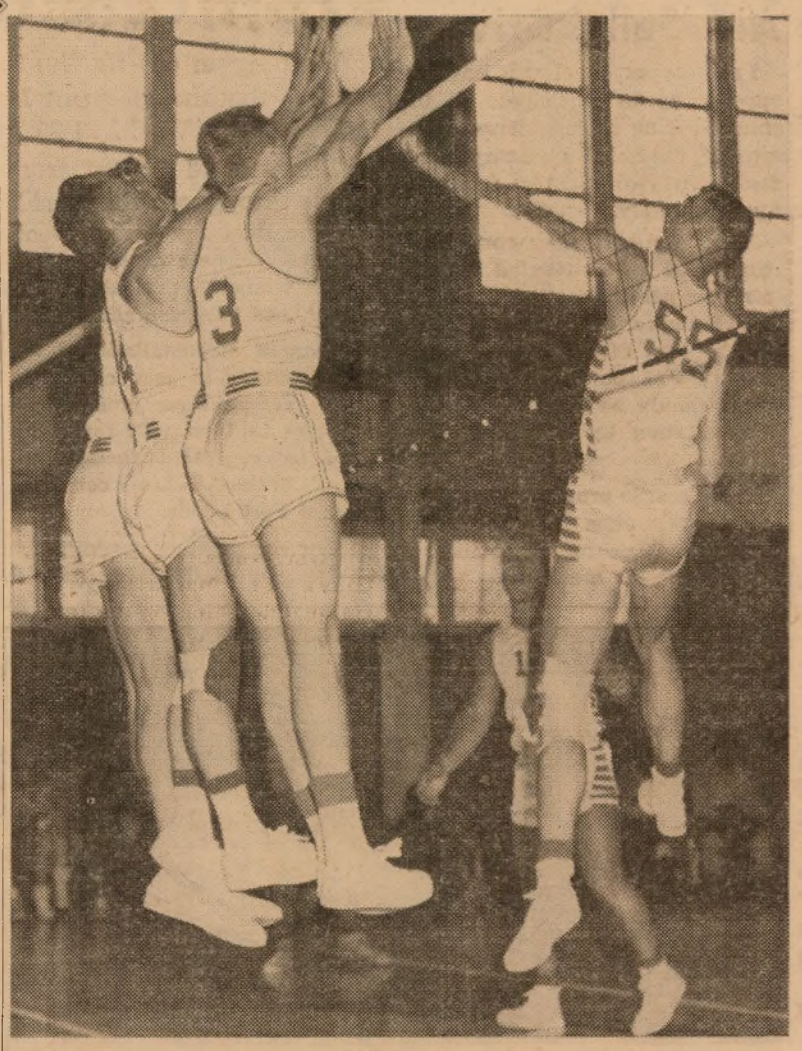
Play in the winners' bracket saw MRU down Hq. and Hq. Co., 30th Engrs., by a score of 20-16 and Hq. Co., Sixth U. S. Army, dropped 16th BPO by the lop-sided score of 24-3. A Co., USA Garrison, also took a one-sided decision from the 549th Engrs. 11-3 and the 561st Engrs. rolled over the LAH nine 5-3.

The losers' bracket was the setting for Hq. 660th Engrs.' 10-7 victory over the 21st Engrs. The loss dropped the 21st Engrs. from further tournament action. The Medics were also eliminated from further play when they fell before 16th BPO by a score of 7-0. Next to be eliminated from the tournament were the Teen Agers when they were bested 11-5 by Hq. and Hq. Co., 30th Engrs. The 99th Engrs. knocked the 549th Engrs. from play when they beat them 14-9.

Teams with only one defeat in the tournament so far are Hq. and Hq. Co., 30th Engrs.; 16th BPO; 99th Engrs.; Hq. Co., Sixth U. S. Army; LAH; and MRU. A second loss for any of these teams will disqualify them from further play in the tournament.

The teams already having suffered two defeats and eliminated from play in the tourney are 21st Engrs.; Medics; Interns; Hq., 752nd Engrs.; D Btry., 9th AAA; 549th Engrs.; and the Teen Agers.

Swimmers, Divers, Golfers And Tennis Players Needed



The Post Sports Office is still searching for swimmers, divers, golfers, and tennis players. Anyone interested in participating in any of these sports should contact the Sports Office in Bldg. 122 or call Ext. 3968.

A meeting was held this week to plan the intramural golf program for 1957 and the complete story will be available for a later addition of the Star Presidian, according to Hal Fischer, post sports director.

At present, there are tentatively planned intramural tournaments to be conducted in the four sports mentioned. The intramural programs will serve to condition the individuals who might desire to participate in the post level sports. Personnel who plan to take part in the post level sports are urged to contact the Sports Office now.

Sports Casting with Casey

On Wednesday night in Chicago Stadium one of the greatest fighting machines in ring history may sing his swan song from the rosin-dusted podium which he has dominated for the past fifteen years. We use the term "may" advisedly. For should even a flicker of the old "Sugar Ray" shine through the mist of tired reflexes and aging legs, Gene Fullmer would find himself on the canvas. Maybe to stay. Still, all the odds are on the side of Fullmer. Youth, aggressiveness and a cagey manager that won't let his tiger risk a thing. Of course, should Fullmer let emotion take charge and go all out to destroy the "Robinson myth" he could bring to an end the market place talk that he is an ersatz titleholder, or be belted out quickly in the process. Most sports pundits feel that the "Sugar Kid" is all washed up on the basis of his loss to Fullmer in the Garden on 2 January. In this scrap Robinson found himself on the deck twice, more from bulling than from a single solid blow, as Fullmer followed to the letter managerial direction to stay in close and never give the champion a chance to launch an attack. Sugar seemed to be making the age-old mistake of the puncher vs. boxer who waits for that single opening that can end it all. He seemed to underrate his own proven ability to box and counter in an effort to force an opening. Rather, he relied on the potential big punch for an opening that never came. Will he make the same mistake again? Will Fullmer fight back to the pattern of the first fight? It should be a good show and although my better judgment says Fullmer, my hope and my heart are with the fading Sugar Man.

Gene Littler, the engrossing ex-sailor links master who found his game again in the Tournament of Champions at Las Vegas, last Sunday, and Doug Ford, slam-bang winner of the Masters, top the list of those favored to win the Derby Open Golf Tournament at Louisville this week. One hundred pros and 20 amateurs will test the hilly Seneca course. Par is 71. Prize money totals $30,000. Personally, I like Jay Hebert, Texas open king, and South African Gary Player to finish in the top five.

I'm still sticking with General Duke (Casey—8 March 57) to cop the annual Run for the Roses at Churchill Downs next Saturday. If the track is fast we expect the Calumet Flash to set a new Derby record. I also think the Argentine Ace, Holandes II, should have an easy trip in William P. Kyne Memorial at Bay Meadows this Saturday.

A Presidio fighter with the euphonious name (nom de plume?) of Red Lite, 159-pounder, dropped a decision to Rocky Fumerelle in the Richmond Auditorium preliminaries on the Scanlon vs. Macias card Monday night, according to a local sports writer. We never heard of the guy, but win or lose with a name like that we sure would like to meet him. Think of the wonderful headlines you could write pro or con—Bloke Fails to Stop for Red Lite—Red Lite Stops Bloke Short—come on up Red, we need you.

Post Team Trounces Ft. Lewis In Title Game

Making a repeat performance of last year's Sixth Army Championship Volleyball Tournament, the Presidio clinched the Sixth Army title again yesterday when they defeated Ft. Lewis at Letterman Gym and also won the right to represent the Sixth Army area in the All-Army tourney to be held 1-5 May at Ft. Benning, Georgia.

The Toreros downed the Ft. Lewis Warriors 15-7 and 14-10 in the championship game after beating them earlier in the winners' bracket of the double elimination tourney.

Final game of the winners' bracket found the Toreros facing Ft. Lewis. These two teams were a toss-up for the top spot in the tournament prior to the opening game. Coach-player, Bob Jones' team opened the first game with two scores and went on to win the game by the wide margin of 15-6.

Aroused, the Ft. Lewis Warriors stormed back in the second game and collected a six-point advantage before the Toreros managed to break the ice. With less than two minutes left to play, the locals had managed to take the lead at 12-11. With one minute to go the Warriors tied the score at 12-12 and went ahead to win 15-12.

The final game of the series saw the Torero netmen grab a 3-0 lead, stretch it to 8-5, then 13-6, 13-9 and 13-11 when the new eight minute rule ended the game. The win placed the locals at the top of the winners' bracket where they met the winner of the losers' bracket yesterday.

Opening the tournament, the strong Ft. Lewis Warriors downed Ft. Mason 15-0 and 15-1. LAH met Ft. Ord in the second contest of the day and were victimized 15-7 and 15-10 to be dropped to the losers' bracket in the double elimination tourney. Oakland Army Base defeated Dugway Proving Grounds 15-6 and 14-11. The 14-11 score arose out of the eight-minute rule applying to any game that has run for eight minutes without either team scoring 15 points. The team ahead at the end of eight minutes playing time is declared the winner.

The Torero netman made their first appearance in the tournament against a game Ft. Huachuca team and downed them 15-2 and 15-6. In the second round pairing of winners, Ft. Lewis met Ft. Ord and defeated them easily by scores of 15-2 and 15-7. The locals' second tourney appearance was against Oakland Army Base. The Toreros had little difficulty winning 15-5 and 15-4.

The first game in the losers' bracket was between LAH and Ft. Mason. LAH won the encounter 15-4 and 15-8 to give Ft. Mason their second defeat and drop them from further tournament play. Dugway also went the same way when they lost to Ft. Huachuca 15-3 and 15-4.

Presidio Diamond Men Rack Up Two Victories

The Presidio diamond-men made a strong showing in their two outings this past week when they dumped Humboldt State College 6-1 and then trounced San Quentin 15-5. Robert Shinnick went the full nine innings on the Presidio mound, allowing only four hits in the Humboldt State College game.

At bat 28 times during the game, the Toreros collected only nine hits, and Humboldt State's Loggers could connect for only four hits out of 26 times at bat. John Zeleznock was the only Torero batter to collect more than one hit and he connected for two in three times at bat.

The Presidio-San Quentin contest was the scene of three four-baggers, two by Toreros and one by a San Quentin player. David W. Carey and Zeleznock connected for homers on the Presidio squad and Jackson, San Quentin, belted a home run.

Zeleznock again led the Torero batters with three hits in four times at the plate, one of the three being good for the round tripper. David Carey, Nick Capachi, and Bud Larsen got two hits for the Toreros. The locals managed to connect with 12 pitches in 46 trips to the plate while the opposition could find only five hits among 38 attempts at the plate.

Trackmen

Track and field men are still urgently needed for the Presidio track team with the track season well under way in the Bay Area. The Presidio thinclads will participate in a meet at College of Pacific tomorrow.

Teams entering the COP meet will be the Presidio, College of Pacific, Santa Clara Youth Center, Moffett Field, McClellan AFB, and Travis AFB.

According to Hal Fischer, Post sports director, there is a critical need for talent in all events in the track and field category. Thus far there has been a very small turnout for the Post track team. Anyone interested in participating in the Post level team should contact Post Sports Office immediately in Building 122 or call Ext. 3968.

Volkswagen Roundup On Parade Ground

The main parade grounds of the Presidio will be invaded Sunday by approximately 150 Volkswagens when the Volkswagen Club of California holds its annual Road-eo on the parade ground from 1000 hours to 1400 hours.

The Road-eo is a series of exercises to test the skill and proficiency of the driver. Winner of the meet will be determined on a point basis accumulated during the course of the day's various activities.

Lady Spikers Top Army Meet

Presidio's WACs added another star to their crown when they waltzed through the Sixth Army Championship Volleyball Tournament held at Letterman Gym this week to win the title without suffering a loss.

The female volleyball players opened the women's division against Ft. MacArthur by defeating them 15-8 and 15-7. Ft. Ord met Ft. Lawton in the second game and downed them 15-4 and 15-4 after losing the first game 16-14 to the Ft. Lawton team. In the third and fourth pairings, LAH and Oakland Army Base drew byes.

Next Ft. Lawton fell before LAH 15-7, 9-15 and 16-14. The second game of the losers' bracket paired Ft. MacArthur against Oakland Army Base. Oakland turned back MacArthur 15-12 and 15-7 to drop them from the tournament.

Making their second appearance in the tournament, the local women went the full three games of the series to defeat Ft. Ord by scores of 15-7, 10-15, and 15-5. The win put them at the top of the winners' bracket where they waited to see who would be paired against them as the winner of the losers' bracket.

Ft. Ord won the rematch for the championship by coming up through the losers' bracket with a win over Oakland Army Terminal after Oakland had knocked LAH from contention in the tourney. Ft. Ord defeated Oakland 15-2 and 15-11 in the semi-final contest.

Presidio's women were forced to play the full three games of the series against the scrappy Ft. Ord team to take the championship game. The locals won the first game 15-7, but the Ft. Ord women rallied to take the second game 15-6. The final game was a close one with the locals emerging on top at 15-13.

The tournament marks the end of the volleyball season for the women since there is no All-Army competition for women's teams.

Miler Only Repeat From Last Season

Brightest spot in the gloomy Presidio track team picture is the lone returnee from last year's track team, Lt. Francis L. Zellers, 163rd MP Det. Zellers has amassed an impressive record of wins in army and collegiate competition.

Zellers was one of the two Presidio trackmen to survive the Sixth Army track meet and go on to the All-Army competition. He qualified for the All-Army events with a first place win in the 1,500-meter event and placed third in the 5,000-meter event. His 1,500-meter win established a new record for the event in Sixth Army competition when he crossed the line in three minutes and 55 seconds.

The lanky speedster loped home to win second place in the All-Army meet held at Sixth Army's Ft. MacArthur. The win qualified him for the Inter-Service meet where he captured third spot in the 1,500-meter race. Winner of the event was the now suspended Wes Santee, running for the Air Force.

Zellers was also on the track team representing the U. S. Army that took part in the NATO track meet in Germany in August of last year. Once again, Zellers raced home at the head of the pack to set a new record for the event in the NATO meet of three minutes and 52 seconds.

His seventh place showing in the Olympic Trials at Los Angeles last fall was not good enough to place him on the U. S. Olympic Team that went to the Australian meet.

Prior to his entry in the Army Zellers had already established a number of track records while attending the University of Indiana. While running under Indiana's colors he annexed the freshman record for the indoor mile, all-time Indiana U. record for the indoor mile, one half mile event in 1.54, Big Ten 1,-500-meter second place in 1954, and the NAAU second U. S. National Championship mile in 4.11.

All his time was not devoted to running while in college as the records might appear to indicate. Zellers has majored in history, economics, and holds a graduate degree in business administration.

Veteran Miler and 1500 meter trackman, Lowell Zellers will represent the Presidio for the second year and is expected to be the one bright spot in the post track outlook.

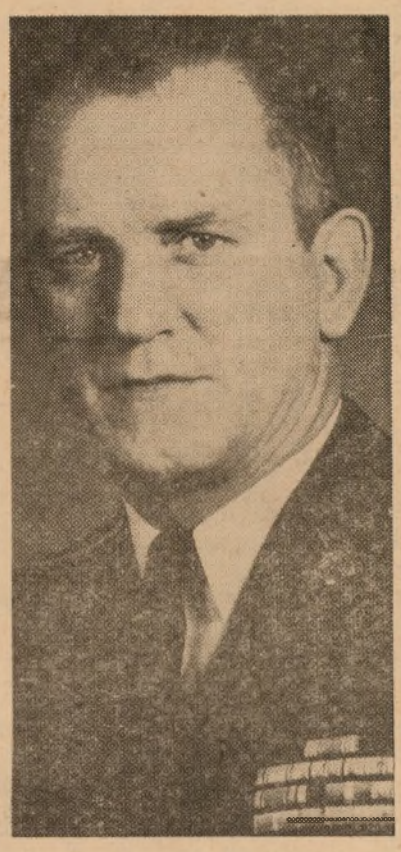
Marines Make Clean Sweep Of NRA Rifle Matches

Wall Named Top Recruiter; Wins Trip To AG School

Master Sergeant Jack C. Wall of the Oakland, California, Recruiting Main Station has been selected as Top Recruiter of the Sixth United States Army Recruiting District and will spend three days at The Adjutant General's School, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana.

On 6, 7 and 8 May, Sergeant Wall will tell the members of Class No. 111 of the methods he employs as a successful Area Sales Manager in Northern California and Western Nevada.



A native of Indiana, Sergeant Wall entered the Army on 13 May, 1929, and was assigned to Battery C, 76th Horse Drawn Field Artillery, at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming, later re-designated Fort Francis E. Warren. In 1937 he returned to civilian life.

He re-entered the Army in 1940, was graduated from Tank Destroyer Officer Candidate School at North Camp Hood, Texas, in September, 1943, and was assigned to the 670th Tank Destroyer Battalion, serving in Okinawa with the 10th Army.

Sergeant Wall was separated for the second time in January, 1946, as a Captain and re-enlisted the following day as a Master Sergeant assigned to Fort Bragg, North Carolina. In April, 1951, he was recalled to active duty as a Captain, served as Post Athletic Officer at Fort Fragg, and was ordered to Japan in November, 1951, where he was Commanding Officer of Headquarters Company, Camp Drake. He was separated on 22 February, 1954, as a Major, immediately re-enlisted as a Master Sergeant, and reported to the San Francisco Recruiting Main Station as the Coastal Area Sales Manager.

In addition to his military duties, Sergeant Wall is active in the Boy Scouts of America and the American Legion. In 1950, he was elected Vice Commander of the North Carolina Department of the American Legion.

Sergeant and Mrs. Wall reside in San Francisco. They have two sons, Jack, Jr., enlisted in the Army by his father and now serving in the 10th Ordnance Battalion in Germany, and James D. Wall, 16 years of age.

Aggressor Center Now Directly Under CONARC

The U. S. Army's Aggressor Center at Fort Riley, Kansas, will become an agency directly under the U. S. Continental Army Command on 1 May, it was announced yesterday. The Center is presently under the Fifth U. S. Army.

The change will provide more direct coordination and direction between CONARC and the Center. The Center's new role will be similar to that of CONARC testing boards and human resources research units throughout the country.

At the Center, experts in intelligence, camouflage and tactics train and advise American soldiers who wear the aggressor uniform and oppose American troops during training maneuvers. During the next year the aggressors will battle American troops in seven large-scale CONARC maneuvers.

The aggressor concept, as an improvement in training methods, was tested during 1946, and the force was created on 31 January, 1947.

A veteran soldier equally adept with rifle or pistol, M/Sgt. Douglas B. Sheridan, Headquarters Company, Sixth U. S. Army Garrison, is one of the top shooters in the country today.

Sergeant Sheridan, who acts as "non - commissioned officer in charge of marksmen" at the Presidio, holds the Distinguished Marksmanship Badge with the pistol, the highest award in pistol competition.

In addition, he holds two of the three legs necessary to earn the Distinguished Marksmanship Badge with the rifle, the coveted award of rifle competitors.

Presently attending the Sixth Army Small Arms Firing School at Camp Roberts, the Army sharpshooter has won more than 207 awards in rifle and pistol competition. For three consecutive years, 1952 through 1954, he earned the all-Alaskan Championship in both rifle and pistol.

According to Sergeant Sheridan, steady practice is the key to expert marksmanship.

High Praise!

Colonel Charles G. Rau, deputy commanding officer of the Presidio and a vital force in the excellent marksmanship program at that installation, visited Camp Roberts several times during the Sixth Army Rifle and Pistol Matches.

A Distinguished Pistol shot, coach of the Olympic Shooting team in 1952, twice coach of International Rifle and Pistol Teams during competition in Norway and Venezuela in '52 and '54, a seven-year executive director of the National Rifle Association and prior to assignment to the Presidio executive director for three years of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, the colonel was very impressed with the matches.

He cited the excellent shooting conditions and was particularly impressed with the performance of the Presidio team. "Their esprit and teamwork was superlative. Our young shooters were the talk of the meet. Never before in my long experience have I seen young marksmen reach such a high level of proficiency in such a short period of instruction. Our older shooters deserve a great deal of credit for the extra time and effort they put into bringing these youngsters to such a fine peak."

Plans Near Completion For Armed Forces Day

The main parade ground will come alive on Armed Forces Day as 28 organizations, both military and civilian, display their varied activities. The Army, Air Force, Navy, and Coast Guard will be represented in the 18 May extravaganza.

Open houses, a parade and several special events will round out the annual Armed Forces show.

"The purpose of Armed Forces Day is to put the Armed Forces of the nation on display for the ordinary citizen," Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Post Commander, said. "This will increase their confidence in the ability of the Armed Forces."

Colonel Lundquist also stressed that comparison between the services should be eliminated on this day.

Several civilian additions will augment this year's observance. The American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the San Francisco City and County Disaster Council and Corps will participate. The Disaster Corps is bringing a rescue truck.

A mock jet engine will be displayed by representatives from Hamilton Air Force Base; a helicopter demonstration in addition to a static display will be presented by the Coast Guard, and the Navy will have two ships at Fort Mason.

Among the other spectacular events will be a helicopter demonstration by the Army and a flame throwing equipment show by Post Chemical.

Enlisted men assigned to the Presidio, who have had a permanent change of station during the current fiscal year will not be considered eligible for such transfer before 1 July, 1957.

Secretary Brucker Launches First Army Reactor

The switch on the Army's first nuclear power reactor was thrown by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker and Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Lewis L. Strauss, this week. Dedication exercises were held at the U.S. Army Engineer Center, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Major General Emerson C. Itschner, Army Chief of Engineers, welcomed several distinguished visitors to the ceremony. Speakers included Secretary Brucker, Chairman Strauss and P. T. Egbert, president of Alco Products, Inc., the prime contractor. Deputy Chief of Chaplains, Brig. Gen. Frank A. Tobey, gave the invocation.

Music was furnished by the U.S. Army band. Visitors toured the plant which is the first of a series of reactors to be built for military use.

Transportation Day

The Sixth Army Transportation Officer, Colonel Calvin L. Whittle, has been named program chairman for the Presidio and San Francisco observance of National Defense Transportation Day. The celebration which is scheduled 17 May will feature the role transportation plays in the United States defense.

New Campaign To Stress Military, Civilian Ideas

"Project Paydirt," an Army-wide campaign to encourage military and civilian personnel to submit suggestions for improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the Army, will be conducted locally during this quarter of the fiscal year.

The Post Commander has urged all unit and section chiefs to give full consideration and encouragement to civilian and military suggestors.

"In an increasingly competitive manpower market and complex defense system, the Army finds itself in a position of having to do more with much less.

Each of us must continuously strive to obtain the optimum results with the tools at our disposal. We can only accomplish this by being ever alert to ideas that will expedite production, improve operation and effect maximum economy."

During the first three quarters of this fiscal year Sixth Army civilians were paid $1,555 for suggestions that will effect an estimated $37,536 savings. During the first half, Post civilian employees were paid $1,205 for suggestions that will save the Army about $9,138.

In 1956 Army-wide suggestions were submitted at the rate of 136 per 1,000 persons. Dollar savings were estimated at $16,000,000.

Station Change Limits To Weigh Any Hardship

Although the Army has placed limitations on permanent Change of Station moves resulting from the reorganization of divisions, it is taking positive action to keep personnel inconvenience at a minimum.

A maximum effort is being made by the Army to use personnel in jobs as closely related to their Military Occupation Specialties as possible even though a grade and MOS imbalance is expected during the division reorganizations.

To increase its combat effectiveness, the Army ultimately will have all "pentomic" divisions.

Army Boss on TV

Secretary of the Army Wilber Brucker will appear on the ABC-TV program "Press Conference" with Martha Rountree at 1600 hours, Sunday, 5 May, over Station KOVR (Channel 13).

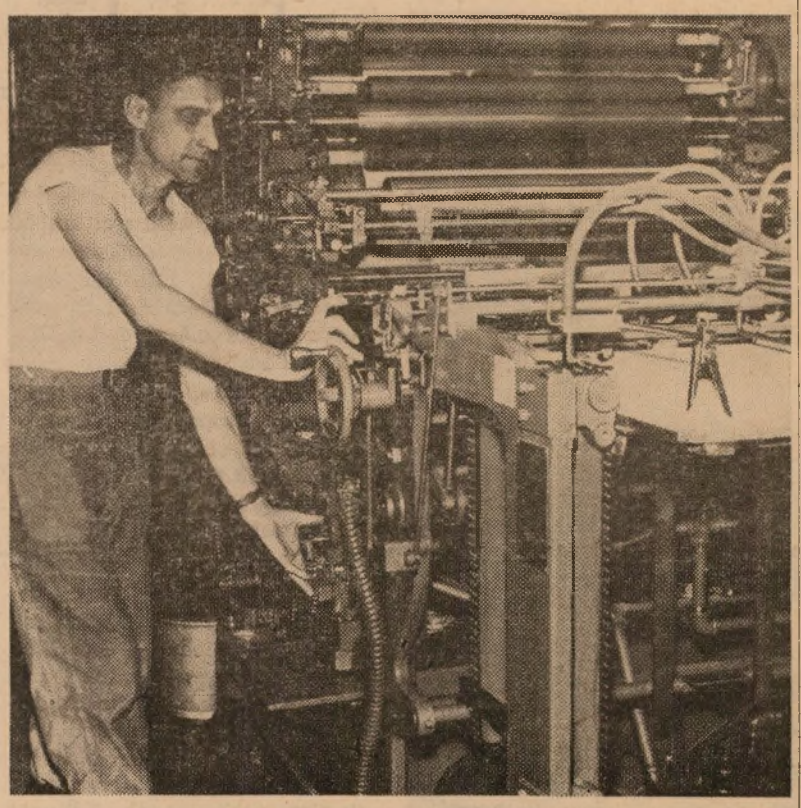
Soldier Pressman Perfects Trade While Serving His Country

(Ed's Note: This is the first of several articles on the specialized Army occupations that will appear in the "Star Presidian" throughout the year. Through these stories, the paper will introduce you to the highly trained men that serve today's modern Army.)

The strategic functions performed by Army printing press operators who reproduce military maps on a large scale is exemplified locally by M/Sgt. William Thomas, senior pressman of the 99th Engineer Company.

During the Korean War Sergeant Thomas was assigned to the South Korean Army to supervise the ROK's map reproduction unit. This unit made maps used by the South Korean Army to plan battle strategy. The unit used maps furnished by the Eighth U.S. Army, translated the English into Korean and reprinted the maps in quantity for the use of South Korean strategists.



In peacetime Army pressmen concentrate on the distribution of Army maps which can be used for both civilian and military purposes.

As a pressman's training is highly specialized and takes from two and a half to five years, Army pressmen spend most of their careers in the printing field. Except for a few years spent with the combat engineers in World War II, Sergeant Thomas has devoted his 20-year Army career to printing.

Says Thomas, "It's been a full and interesting career. I wouldn't swap the knowledge and satisfaction that I have gained during my service with anyone. Not only can I look forward to retirement while still a relatively young man, but to many years of additional security afforded by the excellent trade I have learned while preparing for that retirement."

Map printing is a meticulous job because five colors generally are used in the Army map. Each map must be run through the press five times, for only one color can be printed at a time. Since extreme precision is vital, caution must be taken to prevent the colors from overlapping.

Sergeant Thomas joined the Army in 1927 and will retire from active duty next month. He intends to continue working as a printer after his retirement.

Highly Skilled Army pressman, M/Sgt. William Thomas, has spent nearly 20 years reproducing military maps. The 99th Engineer Company senior pressman has utilized his skill in both wartime and peacetime. His job requires from two and a half to five years of training.

The Medical Officers Reserve Corps, established in 1908, is the oldest organized reserve element of the U.S. Army. It was the forerunner of the reserve program instituted by the National Defense in 1916.

America A Dream Come True For M-Sgt.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

As a young student M/Sgt. Larry Pangan studied American history in a Manila high school and dreamed of coming to America. Today his dreams are a reality, but the road which brought him and his family to San Francisco was not an easy one.

Now with the 30th Engineer Group, Larry, at 21, joined the Philippine Scouts under the late General Jonathan W. Wainwright. He took his basic training at Fort William McKinley in the Philippines and was serving with the Scouts when his homeland was conquered by the Japanese in the early years of the war.

Surviving the famed Bataan Death March, Larry spent a year in a prisoner of war camp where he contracted malaria. Under a Japanese propaganda program which paroled sick prisoners, Larry was able to join a guerrilla outfit in Central Luzon. Here he acted as an espionage agent, entering and gathering information from enemy installations.

In 1946 the first part of Larry's dream came true. By a special Congressional act which granted naturalization to survivors of the Philippine Scouts, he became a United States citizen without ever seeing the country. Three years later he was assigned to Camp Stoneman and finally set foot on U. S. soil.

Ex-Philippine Scout
M/Sgt. Larry Pagan

"December 23, 1954, was the happiest day in my life," Larry described the day his family arrived in America. "This was the finest Christmas present we could have. My family was so excited they didn't even notice the cold weather, which was something they had never experienced."

Sergeant Pangan, his wife and seven children live on the Presidio. His oldest daughter is a junior high school honor student.

"In America my children have an opportunity to get ahead and enjoy more in life," the sergeant explained. "This would have been extremely difficult in the Philippines, where there was little chance for self improvement because of social class distinction."

For the past two years Larry has been Administration and Training NCO of the Group S-3. He holds the Good Conduct Medal (3rd Award), Presidential Unit Citation with three Oak Leaf Clusters, American Defense Medal, Korean Service Medal with two Battle Stars, Combat Infantry Badge, Philippine Defense Service Ribbon, World War II Medal, United Nations Service Medal and the Philippine Presidential Unit Citation. During the Korean War he was awarded the Bronze Star while serving with the X Corps in combat.

Quick Thinking Private Saves Childrens' Lives

Several children's lives were saved and heavy property damage prevented last week when Pfc. Merrill Gustoff of the 21st Engineer Company, 30th Engineer Group, heroically stopped a runaway steam roller.

Private Gustoff and his wife were visiting friends in the San Francisco Sunset District when they heard a rumbling outside. The others thought the noise was an earthquake and remained in their seats, but Private Gustoff went to the window and saw the steam roller as it hit the curb on 23rd Avenue near Ulloa Street, swerve and start down the fairly steep grade on Ulloa Street.

At the same time he noticed several children playing about a block down the hill.

Without hesitating, the husky ex-University of Iowa football player rushed outside, leaped on the machine and by manipulating the control levers, turned the roller into the curb while slamming it into reverse. He then blocked the roller's wheels and called the owner, a construction company that was re-paving 23rd Avenue.

Private Gustoff, a supply clerk, is scheduled to leave for the Far East in two months.

M/Sgt. Wade was also second high individual champion over the open course as he blazed his way to a 2573-87X grand aggregate out of a possible 2700. Sp3 Bertus won a second in the Expert Class and Pfc. Robert Wehnau finished fifth in the Sharpshooter Class.

A Veterinary Corps Lieutenant, 1st Lt. Walter F. Norvell, took the combat arms shooters for a ride as he fired his way to victory over the .38 cal. rapid fire course with his 195-9X being good enough for first place and a Gold Medal. M/Sgt. Wade scored another victory as he shot 287-8X with the .45 cal. over the National Match Course. Norvell also won the Expert Class with the .45 cal. over the National Course.

In team matches, Presidio marksmen finished second in A Competition with the .22 cal. and second in the B Division with the same weapon. They topped A Team Competition with the .45 cal. scoring 1091-20X some 10 points higher than last year's winning total. In B Division Competition with the .45 cal. the Presidio team finished third with an aggregate of 1028.

One of the meet's top individual shooters was Sfc. Arthur G. Ogden of the California Military District at Presidio. Representing the District, Ogden won five Gold Medals, two Silver Medals, two Bronze Medals and two Special Awards. He topped the sharpshooter class in the grand aggregate with a 2519.

In the final pistol match of the meet, .45 cal. Individual Ft. Ord Pistol Match, Col. Leon J. Rouge scored a 282-8X to win the match, while Maj. Richard Hirsch topped the sharpshooter class with a 272-10X.

This year for the first time, Army teams had to be made up of fifty per cent new shooters.

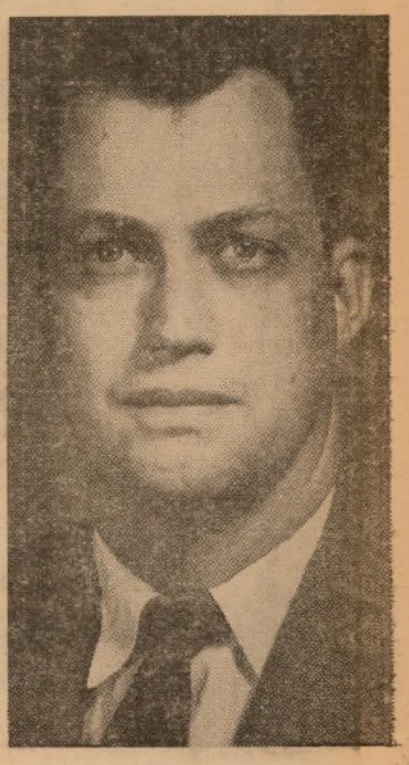
Two Presidio new shooters who showed well in the Musketry Matches, 32 shots fired in short 50-second intervals from 200, 300, 500, and 600-yard ranges, were Pfc. Clyde Harn who scored 1st Marksman in one match and Pvt. Donald Bailey who scored 1st Sharpshooter in another.

Ordnance Civilian Tops Guided Missiles Course

Mr. Harry L. Derflinger, Jr., an Electronics engineer with the Sixth Army Ordnance, achieved high honors recently as a student at the Guided Missiles Instructor's Course, White Sands Proving Ground, New Mexico.

An Electronics equipment advisor for Ordnance, Derflinger took first place in three courses and second place in two courses comprising five given at the school during a three-month interval.



As an individual student from the Presidio, the winner completed the course on NIKE Hercules, in competition with classes of 30 students for each phase of the curriculum.

Derflinger, a 29-year-old engineer, is completing his second year of service with the Sixth Army. A graduate of the South Dakota School of Mines, with a B.S. degree in Electrical Engineering, he worked for the Western Electric Company as a field engineer on NIKE AJAX and on M-33 Fire Control Equipment before he entered Federal service.

The special course at White Sands was presented on a one-time basis, to train instructors at Redstone Arsenal, Alabama, and the Guided Missile School, Fort Bliss, Texas, on contract to Western Electric and Douglas Aircraft which supplied the instructors and the instruments. Redstone Arsenal conducted the school.

Mr. Derflinger and his wife are parents of two sons, eight and five years old. He is a native of Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

"I believe," Mr. Derflinger said, "that the experience afforded me in my present assignment with Sixth Army Ordnance and my attendance at the school will be of tremendous service to my career as an engineer."

Thinking Of Leaving Us? Better Check Bonus Scale

Servicemen and women alert to the current high cost of living—either through actual contact or through news headlines in the daily papers—are taking sharp readings on the advantages of the military career.

As a preliminary to visiting the Post Recruiting Section here is the new bonus scale for those interested in continuing their military service.

If you are a First Term Pfc. (E-3) reenlisting for four years and drawing the bonus for the first time, you will receive $468, (117×4).

Should you be a First Term Sgt. (E-5) reenlisting for four years and drawing the bonus for the first time, your bonus will be $655.00, (163.80×4).

As a Second Term Sfc., reenlisting for six years and drawing your bonus for the second time, your take will be $858.00, (214.50× two-thirds×six).

This makes it obvious that the reenlistment bonus is bigger than ever!

While you think things over, clip this information from the Star Presidian. When your decision is a positive one, drop over to Post Reenlistment Section. You will find that in reenlisting, the bonus is definitely bigger—and the battle for survival far less than in today's commercial world.

Services Restress Policy On Military Burial Service

A policy governing participation of military chaplains in funeral services was announced jointly today by the Commanding General, Sixth U. S. Army, the Commander, Fourth Air Force, and the Navy's Commander, Western Sea Frontier.

Military chaplains will continue to conduct funeral services and graveside committal services, if available and if requested by the next of kin, for active duty personnel, personnel receiving retired pay, and their dependents.

Such services will no longer be performed for non-retired veterans and their dependents, although eligible veterans may still be buried in Golden Gate National Cemetery. Non-retired veterans who are those who have completed a tour of military service but who are not drawing retired pay at time of death.

The announcement said a study made by the Western Area Joint Committee showed that military chaplains have been conducting funeral services for more than 250 deceased non-retired veterans and their dependents each month as a courtesy to these former servicemen. The study indicated that the number of requests for military chaplains had caused an additional workload which seriously interfered with the normal responsibilities of chaplains to active duty personnel.

The dwindling number of military chaplains available makes it impossible to continue the service, the Committee said.

West Point Exams Open To Post EM

The United States Military Academy is interested in young men who have reached the age of 17 but not yet 22 years old—as prospective students in a free 4-year education course leading to a degree in Bachelor of Science and a commission as Second Lieutenant in the United States Army.

Qualifications for entrance are that the potential cadet student be a citizen of the United States, of good moral character, unmarried, of good physical condition, and that he be graduated from a secondary school and meet the basic requirements for competitive tests toward entrance to the Military Academy.

The West Point instruction course is designed to give the graduate a college education suitably proportioned in the arts and sciences; to give him a wide basic education and training in the tactics and techniques of modern warfare, and to develop him in the qualities of leadership required by the armed forces of the United States.

Attendance at the Military Academy does not require tuition or other charges. A cadet is a member of the Regular Army and as such, he receives $111.15 monthly from which he pays for his uniforms, text books, and incidental items. He also receives a ration allowance.

In effect, therefore, the young man who is admitted to West Point has won a scholarship covering an all-expense, 4-year college education. This would lead to a lifetime career as a professional military leader.

Enlisted men now on active duty, who are interested in securing an appointment to West Point, may secure the necessary information from AR-350-55 and contacting their company commanders.

Lt. Robert W. Brownlee is West Point advisor to prospective military academy students in the Bay Area. His phone number is 2910 or 3622.

Local Support For Mental Health Week

Giving Blood is easy, says Miss Donna Neiss, Letterman Army Hospital Department of Surgery, who was among the 15 civilian employees who helped launch the Presidio Civilian Blood Fund. Miss Neiss is shown going through three of the four steps entailed in donating blood. First she registered, then after recording her medical history, gave blood and finally enjoyed coffee and cookies at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank canteen. All employees will have a chance to give to the fund on 14 May.

LAH Open House Aids Nation's Info Effort

Ninety-three per cent of the mentally ill patients admitted to the closed wards of Letterman Army Hospital's Neuropsychiatric Department during the past three months were either returned to duty or their homes.

"The other seven per cent were transferred to Veterans' Administration hospitals for further treatment," explained Lt. Col. Oswald Weaver, Chief of the NP Department. "The important thing is that mental illness, like other types of illness, is not hopeless."

In conjunction with Mental Health Week, the department held its first open house yesterday. The project was entered into by patients who acted as guides and prepared the refreshments. Patients who did not want to participate were allowed to remain in a section closed to the public.

The local NP Department has about 120 patients at the present time. Sixty of these are in closed wards where they have access to more nursing and medical attention. The others, assigned to open wards, have duty hours at Letterman and regular privileges. In addition, they consult with their doctors regularly.

Several of the closed ward patients also are assigned to Letterman for duty purposes. In addition, they enjoy individual, group and occupational therapy and physical reconditioning.

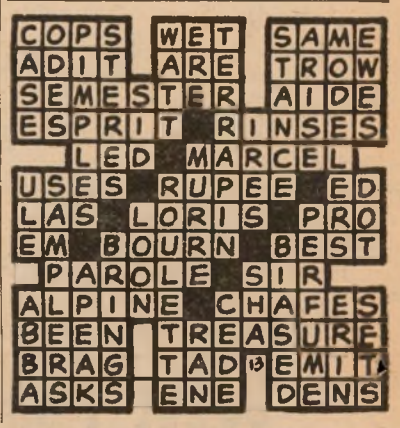
"We assume that every patient will be rehabilitated and returned to the community," explained Capt. Miron W. Neal, Chief of the Closed Ward section.

Medical therapy includes the newer drugs, insulin and electric shock treatment. Due to the newer drugs, only one patient is under electric shock treatment and four under insulin at the present time. Less than two years ago the NP staff had a waiting list of persons requiring insulin.

The staff includes six staff and eight resident psychiatrists; 13 nurses who are specialists in psychiatric nursing; and 38 enlisted and 17 civilian neuropsychiatric technicians. Several clinical psychologists, psychiatric technicians and psychiatric social work officers and technicians augment the staff. These people assist the patient by contacting outside agencies and by orienting the individual as he begins and completes treatment.

A mental hygiene clinic which offers psychiatric treatment on an outpatient basis is also part of the department. The clinic treats patients who are able to remain on duty. In includes a child guidance clinic which treats children with emotional problems.

"People today are more conscious of seeking help with their emotional problems," Colonel Weaver said. "Many come to us asking for assistance."



As a Neuropsychiatric Center, Letterman treats people from all over the United States and overseas stations. Although most of the general Army hospitals have similar centers, Letterman and Walter Reed Army Hospital are the only two training centers.

Seek Donors For Civilian Blood Fund

The average person's heart pumps 250,000 tons of blood in a lifetime — one pint of this blood donated to the new Presidio Civilian Blood Fund will protect you, your family and fellow civilian employees in an emergency.

The Fund, which has scheduled its first big "give blood" drive on 14 May, was launched last week by 15 local employees. All eligible donors have been urged to participate in the drive by Mr. Les Scanlon, Civilian Personnel Officer and Fund chairman.

Persons between the ages of 18 and 60 are eligible to give blood. Minors must carry the written permission of a parent or legal guardian. Civilian employees' family members are eligible to participate.

Each pint of blood donated will add one credit to the Presidio Fund. Although the blood must be used in 21 days, the credits are good for one year from the date of donation. Fund officers plan at least three drives a year so that only one-third of the credits will be cancelled at a time.

All civilian employees and their dependents will have access to the Fund. To replace blood needed in an emergency, the employee calls the Fund chairman, Ext. 2383, and states the name of the patient, attending physician and hospital and the number of units to be used.

If the blood is not on hand at the hospital, it will be rushed there by the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. Blood replacements will be made to the hospital by the blood bank.

How would you have liked to have been a soldier in 1775 . . . pioneering westward to found the Presidio with Captain Juan Bautista de Anza? Contrary to popular belief, de Anza was not born in Spain, but in Arizona. He was the son and grandson of fighting frontiersmen at the time he was ordered to lead the overland expedition of colonists from Sonora to San Francisco. . . . It was the first time that women, children and families were being sent to Upper California.

Daily pay began with each enlistment. The colonists added up to 240, including 160 women and children . . . all descendents of Cortez. Beside the officers, enlisted men and colonists, there were 825 animals . . . 320 cattle, 340 horses, 160 mules, 20 to carry the luggage of the commander and the officers.

They first day out, de Anza had to act as a midwife. . . . And during the remainder of the journey, there were eight children born.

Once across the desert and the Colorado River, the soldiers had to shovel sand all night to find water for the cattle. They came over the Sierra Madre in a storm so severely cold that many of the horses died. After they reached California they were greeted by an earthquake. And because a comely young widow in the group had been building up the morale of the troops, it was determined by the more pious among them that the earthquake came as punishment for her sins. (One wonders if California knows the real reason for the recent earth shocks!)

The first marriage among the traveling colonists took place at the Mission San Gabriel in January, 1776, when a soldier of the guard married a colonist's young daughter. They remained in San Gabriel and the offspring of this pioneering union eventually gave to the present movies and the modern stage Leo Carillo and William Gaxton.

De Anza and his soldiers ate the seed pods of wild roses, wild lettuce and wild onions, bear and deer meat. When the travelers came to the site of the present Legion of Honor building they had a full view of San Francisco Bay, full of spouting whales, tunas, seals and otters.

At Twin Peaks . . . ("the breasts of the Indian Maiden") they found the place abaze with blue lilies. Father Font, who traveled with them, decided that this was the spot to build a mission. There now stands the Mission Dolores.

The first house on the Presidio was built by two carpenters and a squad of sailors from the San Carlos which came through the Golden Gate in 1776. Within a month, the Presidio commander was housed, and the soldiers were in their quarters. Father Palou celebrated the first Presidio Mass here one month later.

Bull and bear fighting were the sport of the day for off-duty soldiers at the Presidio . . . but times got so bad that the officers rode their horses bareback. . . . They had no saddles. At that time a Corporal Joaquin de la Pena made a formal report to his superiors to the effect that a foreign ship could easily send launches to land on the beach . . . and unknown to the guards, roll the eight cannon down the cliff.

The first newspaper seen by Presidio soldiers of that time was the California Star, published in 1847.

Obviously, many changes have come to the Presidio since the little group of Spanish friars in their grey habits are gone . . . as are the soldiers in their red and blue uniforms. But the history is alive and more full of color now than when it was in the making.

Present-day soldiers and their wives on the Presidio can recapture the rich thread of its infancy by making a single Sunday journey to a nearby place . . . the Mission Dolores, only a short distance from the main gate. Here is the tomb of Don Louis Arguello, Presidio commandante and California's first governor . . . Liliote, the first Indian child to be baptized . . . the ghosts of Father Serra and Father Palou. . . . Moraga coming home from battle . . . Saint Francis himself, who loved the poor and the desolate . . . patron of the Presidio who humbly called himself the world's worst sinner. DEBRA

THE BACHELOR PARTY is the story of an average, easy-going young New York bookkeeper whose wife has told him she has quit her job because she is pregnant. The husband (Don Murray), begins to feel the world is closing in around him, and he longs for the sense of freedom he enjoyed as a single man.

At the office, one of his fellow-workers is getting married and Don agrees to join the stag party the office is throwing that night. His wife urges him to go, feeling that it will restore his spirits. The party starts as a spaghetti dinner, after which the five men begin to feel "gay." In rapid succession they go to a burlesque show on 52nd Street; to see a "Stag Reel" in one of the fellow's rooms, to crash a party in Greenwich Village and finally become involved with a woman.

Toward morning, Don feels that his friends are only trying to fill the emptiness of their own lives during the past hours. He returns home with a new respect and appreciation for the life he is starting for himself and his wife.

GIANT presents Rock Hudson on his wedding day with Elizabeth Taylor. He goes on to set in motion a series of events which ultimately combine to make him the founder of a dynasty, and one of the richest and most influential men in the growing State of Texas. Later twined with their lives is the career of Jett Rink (James Dean), a young ranch hand who has inherited a small ranch north of the Benedict spread. When oil is discovered, a fabulous fortune is founded for each family. This is the story of how both men were effected by their partciular financial fortunes.

740th Downs SF Police

Big right-hand pitcher George Hane struck out 13 men Thursday, 25 April, in pitching the 740th AAA Msl. Bn. to a six hit, 2-1 victory over the San Francisco Police Department.

This was the first game of the season for the 740th, a team representing the 30th AAA Group, and they have 21 more games to go as the season wears on. The Fort Scott baseballers are playing teams of all caliber, including college, independents, and other service teams. Playing manager Hubie Brown, former Niagara University baseball and basketball great, says the team may schedule more games as the season progresses.

Mendez and Buffin had 2 for 4 for the locals and Brown and pitcher Hane garnered one hit each for a total of six. Cavalli with 2 for 4 and Coreris and Pengel with one each got the only four hits for the Policemen.

Other standouts of the 740th team expected to flex their hitting muscles in the coming games are catcher Budrow Larson, who played a year of freshmen ball at the University of Minnesota; Ed Merritt from Manesfield College, N. Y., a second baseman; and Jack Gentry, shortstop from the University of Oklahoma. Jerry Zimerile, the 740th left fielder, and Gene Estab, right fielder, round out what promises to be an exciting and battling team. The only real weakness is the pitching, but an addition of two more good starters would remedy the problem.

Title Game Set Today

Winner of the pre-season softball tournament will be decided today when A Co., USA Garrison, meets the winner of the losers' bracket. Championship of the losers' bracket will go to LAH or Hq. Co., Sixth U. S. Army, who were scheduled to play late yesterday afternoon. A Co., USA Garrison, better known as the Honor Guard won the winners' bracket title early this week in the double elimination tourney.

Play in the winners' bracket paired Hq. Co., Sixth U. S. Army, against MRU, who was dropped to the losers' bracket when they went down 13-11 before Hq. Co. The Honor Guard defeated the 561st Engrs. 10-0 behind the pitching efforts of Johnson, who struck out 12 men. Johnson returned the following day to strike out ten men when the Honor Guard defeated Hq. Co., Sixth U. S. Army, 3-1 in the final game of the winners' bracket.

In the losers' bracket, Hq. and Hq. Co., 30th Engrs., eliminated 16th BPO from play by defeating them 29-12. LAH dumped the 99th Engrs. from tournament play by defeating them 16-14. The 561st Engrs. handed Hq. and Hq. Co., 30th Engrs., their second defeat to eliminate them from further play by a score of 4-3.

LAH won a 11-10 decision from MRU and a 19-5 contest from the 561st Engrs. to eliminate both of these teams from the tournament. That left only LAH and Hq. Co., Sixth U. S. Army, in the losers' bracket. Originally, the final game of the losers' bracket was to be played Wednesday, but was postponed until yesterday because of rain.

Monday, 13 May, has been set for the opening date for regular play in the intramural softball leagues. There will be three leagues: the American League, the National League and Northern League. The American and National Leagues have seven teams apiece entered and at present there are eight teams set for the Northern League.

Sports Program Set For Youth Activity

An outline of the Post Sports Program for Youth Activities has been submitted by Assistant Sports Director George McLaughlin for the coming months. The Sports Program is for the benefit of the dependents of military and civilian personnel assigned to the Presidio and surrounding installations.

Scheduled to begin on or around the first of May are the Youth Baseball League and the Little League baseball program for the younger male members of the Post dependents. Young golfers may also participate in the 36th hole golf tournament scheduled to be run off this summer at the Pitch and Putt course. In addition, there will be a hole-in-one tournament that is open to both male and female personnel.

A male softball team will be organized to participate in the Post intramural softball league. Games will be played twice a week. For the young ladies there will also be a female team if there are a sufficient number of interested persons.

The program will include organized classes for persons interested in swimming and diving. Teams will be formed if the turnout is sufficient to warrant the formation of teams.

A tennis program is scheduled for June, July and August with the organization and instruction of male and female teams. The teams will take part in a double elimination tournament. A similar program is on tap for table tennis players. A track and field day has also been set for the coming months.

Thorhaug Has 2 Wins In Tennis

The first week of play in the 30th Engineer Group intramural tennis tournament saw eight of the original 23 entrants eliminated from play in the sudden death tourney.

In first round play, Thorhaug, 549th Engrs., dropped Newman, 21st Engrs., 6-1 and 6-1; Immenhausen, Hq. and Hq. Co., defeated Chamberlain, 549th Engrs., 6-1 and 6-1; Kurn, Hq. and Hq. Co., felled Rogers, 21st Engrs., 6-0 and 6-0; Hiller, Hq. and Hq. Co., felled Tutty, 21st Engrs., 6-0 and 6-1. Williams, Hq. and Hq. Co., was defeated by McPherson, 21st Engrs., 6-2 and 6-1; and La Fever, 21st Engrs., downed Rowles, Hq. and Hq. Co., 6-4 and 6-1.

Surviving the second round of play was Thorhaug, who defeated Immenhausen 6-3 and 6-2, and Shankes, 660th Engrs., who downed Hughes, Hq. and Hq. Co., 6-0 and 6-0.

Inbreeding does not produce runt deer. Aside from genetic factors, runts are produced by inferior food or lack of food.

Championship Trophies won by Sixth Army Volleyball teams were presented to Col. Carl E. Lundquist, Post Commander, by Sp2 Julian Kite and First Lieutenant Ron Reynoir. Specialist Kite is a member of the women's team and Lieutenant Reynoir is Assistant Special Services Officer.

21st Engrs. Vie In City Tournament

A softball team need not necessarily restrict competition to intramural play. This statement can be substantiated by the 21st Engineer Company of the 30th Engineer Group, which has entered a team in the Class B City Minor Softball League. Playing in this league has given the company team an advantage over their opponents in the intramural league that will open 13 May, because they have been playing well organized teams.

The 21st Engineers have done a good job of representing the Army in the city league with two wins and no losses in league play. League play is due to end 4 June and the Engineers have five games remaining. Winner of the league will meet winners of similar leagues throughout the city in a City Tournament at Kezar Stadium beginning 21 June.

Pistol Team Fires Sunday In Oakland

A fourteen-man pistol team from the Presidio will participate in the Western Revolver Association Match to be held in Oakland Sunday, 5 May. The match is sponsored by the Oakland Pistol and Rifle Club and will be fired at Knowland State Park.

Trackmen Fourth At COP; Additional Talent Needed

Presidio's thinclads could muster only 4 points, which put them in fourth place in the standings at the College of Pacific track meet last Saturday. It was simply a case of trying to spread too little over too great an area. COP won the meet with 69 points, second was Santa Clara Youth Center with 34 and Travis AFB placed third with a total of 20 points.

Only seven men entered the meet under the Presidio colors and participated in nine events. Presidio's four points were picked up by Lowell Zellers, 163rd MP Det., who placed second in the mile. Bob Kemp took fourth place in the discus competition, but drew no point credits for the fourth spot. Kemp also entered the pole vault but failed to place.

Trackmen representing the Post in the two-miie event were Fred Hickey, 549th Engrs., and Charles Wimberly, Hq. Det. 6th Reg. Command, in the two-mile event; Bill Ream, 9956th Trng. Unit, Letterman; John Arcaro, 16th BPO, in the 220 and 440; and Ron Reynoir, Special Services, in the high jump.

The locals will take part in the San Jose State All-Comers Meet to be held in San Jose tomorrow. There will be approximately ten men from the Presidio making the trip to San Jose, according to George McLaughlin, assistant sports director, who is in charge of the track team. McLaughlin also stated that the team is still looking for talent to bolster the small squad that now represents the Presidio. Personnel interested in track and field events should contact the Post Sports Office in Bldg. 122 or call Ext. 3968.

Youth League Sets Tryouts Tomorrow

Youth Baseball League tryouts will be held at 1300 hours tomorrow and 1800 hours Wednesday at the Youth Baseball Field located behind the 30th Engineer Group Motor Pool near the 25th Avenue entrance to the Presidio.

The Youth Baseball League is for boys 13, 14 and 15, inclusive. Parents should fill out applications for boys planning to take part in the league. Applications can be secured at any one of four locations on the post: the Post Chaplain's Office in Bldg. 229, the Letterman Orderly Room, Quarters 959 at Ft. Scott, and at 1565 Baker in Wherry Housing Project. Applications may also be filled out on Saturday prior to the tryouts.

Approximately 60-70 youths are expected to participate in the program and they will be divided into four teams to form the league play.

Presidio Skeet Shooters Lose To Ft. Ord Team

Ft. Ord skeet shooters topped the Presidio skeet shooting team by nine birds to win the first quarterly skeet shoot of 1957 held at Crissy Field this past Saturday.

The Presidio skeet shooting team is composed of Sfc. John W. Queen, who is team coach, David Dunsmoor, William A. Rumble, Leon L. Bedell, Maurice Dineen, and William K. Sherman. Shooting for Ft. Ord were Charles C. Coon, Delos N. Pease, Robert C. Quellman, H. A. Hofshier, A. Frerichs, and G. O. Bush.

Dunsmoor took top honors in the shoot with 95 birds of a possible 100, and Pease topped the Ft. Ord team with 92 birds. Aggregate score for the Ft. Ord team was 437 compared to the Presidio's aggregate of 428. The top five scorers from each team were selected from the six shooters who fired for the teams to comprise the aggregate scores.

A breakdown of team scores shows Dunsmoor with 95, Rumble with 90, Dineen with 82, Queen with 81, and Bedell with 80 birds for the Presidio. Ft. Ord shooters were led by Pease with 92, Frerichs with 89, Quellman with 86, and Bush and Coons with 85.

Originally the shoot was scheduled to include 150 birds for each firer, but mechanical failure of one of the traps forced the teams to fire only 100 rounds apiece. Letterman Army Hospital's skeet shooters fired 50 rounds apiece at the shoot to gain competition practice and were not officially entered in the shoot.

Coming Home from Southern California, 537th Engineer Company members look to 1st Lt. Muril Vincelette, the Convoy Commander, for traffic direction. The 537th spent three months near Thermal and Twentynine Palms, Calif., on a surveying project.

Busy 537th Engineers Return From Southland

The widely-traveled men of the 537th Engineer Company, 30th Engineer Group, have returned from three months of intensive surveying in southern California.

Three of the six new projects assigned to the Group by Army Map Service have been given to the 537th. The new projects are located in Washington and Montana. Lt. Gerald Keleher and a few men from the company have begun classification work in Washington.

In southern California as many as 11 separate triangulations parties worked simultaneously, checking elevations which had been established by the 29th Egineer Battalion in 1941. In addition to checking elevations of known stations, geodetic positions and elevations also had to be established for aerial photo points preselected by the 30th Engineer Group. The surveyors were assisted by H-19 helicopters operated by the 521st Engineer Company (Topographic Aviation).

After completing the survey job in one month, company personnel trained new men in the company and worked with Marine surveyors laying out control for new artillery ranges. They also assisted the U. S. Geological Survey in parts of four other quads.

First NG Unit Named To Man Nike Missiles

The 720th Antiaircraft Gun Battalion, California National Guard, will be the first National Guard unit to be reorganized into a Nike Missile Battalion, Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker announced Wednesday. The 720th is located at Long Beach and San Pedro.

Within the next few years a number of National Guard Gun Battalions will be selected for conversion into Nike Missile Battalions. National Guard Batteries have been manning Antiaircraft Gun Sites since 1954, replacing active Army Batteries that had been converted to Nike units.

The 720th will start Nike training immediately. Weekly drills will be held at 47th AAA Brigade sites in the Los Angeles Defense Area. When training is completed the NG Battalion will operate four Nike sites in the Los Angeles area.

46th Ordnance Group, Back From 'King Cole'

Climaxing nearly two months of field duty, Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 46th Ordnance Group returned from participating in Army exercise "King Cole" last weekend. The exercise was held at the Louisiana Maneuver Area.

During the round trip by motor convoy, the unit traveled 100,334 vehicle miles without an accident. The men left the Presidio on 8 March and started the exercise on 27 March.

"King Cole," a command post exercise in the field, involved about 26,000 troops. It was designed to train staffs and participating units in the new concepts, organization and techniques adopted by the Army. Free maneuver over great distances was emphasized in the exercise.

The 46th, which was attached to the XVIII Airborne Corps, provided Ordnance support for all units assigned to the Corps. The mission was difficult due to the rapid and continuous movement of units that is associated with modern warfare. Because of the constant resupply of weapons and material required by modern warfare, new concepts of providing continuous support were used and proved satisfactory.

Bond Interest Up!

New and old Savings Bond holders have new incentive to keep up with their payroll savings plan by the increase in interest rates and benefits signed into law by President Eisenhower. Series "E" and "H" bonds now carry three and one-quarter per cent interest.

The new law which shortens the maturity date to eight years and 11 months is retroactive to 1 February. All bonds purchased since this date will carry the new terms.

AAA Best Mess

The 30th AAA Group Best Mess plaque was awarded recently to Sfc. Elmo D. Northcutt, Mess Steward of Headquarters Battery, 740th AAA Missile Battalion. The presentation was made by Col. Daniel A. Ranney, Group Commander.

On Site dental care became a reality this week when the Post Dental Clinic's new mobile dental van started its first journey around the Antiaircraft areas. First patient was Sp3 Elvin Dobbins, Battery D, AAA Battalion, Fort Funston. Lt. Earl Krainik, who is in charge of the van, prepares to use the modern facilities housed in the van. The 31-foot van can work with or without supplied power. The mobile clinic is expected to save many man hours at the AAA units.

Sixth Army Will Honor NG's Green Next Week

A 13-gun salute and farewell ceremony will be conducted in honor of Major General Roy A. Green at 1130 hours, 8 May, in the parking lot near Building 50. General Green, who is retiring, has been Commanding General of the 49th Infantry Division, California National Guard.

General Green, a dental surgeon in private life, began his military career as a First Lieutenant, Dental Corps, in the 184th Infantry, California NG. He was serving with the 184th when ordered into Federal service at the outbreak of World War II.

During the war he served with that unit as Battalion Commander, Regimental Executive Officer and Regimental Commander, seeing combat in the Pacific Theater with the 7th Infantry Division. Upon his discharge in May, 1946, he retained his rank of colonel in the ORC.

General Green reorganized the 184th in October, 1946, and served as the unit's commanding officer until he was appointed Assistant Division Commander of the 49th Infantry Division in 1950. He became a major general and received his present appointment four years later.

The general, who was graduated from the University of California, holds the Silver Star; Bronze Star Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters; Combat Infantry Badge; Victory Medal, World War I; Pacific Theater Ribbon with four stars and arrowhead; American Theater Ribbon; American Defense Ribbon; Army of Occupation, World War II; and the Philippines Liberation Ribbon with two stars.

Weather Gun Would Aid Defense Missiles Accuracy

A weather gun that aims at and hits itself with a round trip bullet is the latest experimental device for measuring low altitude wind velocity, the Department of the Army has announced.

Low altitude wind speed must be known precisely at the launching site in order for an unguided missile or rocket to score a hit. The first few hundred feet of the unguided missile's flight are critical. Even relatively low winds have a significant effect. The weather gun, nicknamed "breeze buster" provides fast, accurate measurements of these important winds.

Designed by physicists of the U. S. Army Signal Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J., the "breeze buster" is officially called "Shooting Sphere Anemometer." It is a smooth-bore gun which determines wind velocity by firing a small steel ball upward into the wind at an angle calculated to make the ball fall back into, or close to, the gun's own muzzle.

Before firing, the gun is angled into the wind. The greater the wind velocity, the more the gun is angled. It may be necessary to fire several shots, changing the angle of tilt each time to compensate for the wind speed. After a successful firing is made, the operator checks the gun's angle of tilt with a calibration chart to obtain a reading of the wind velocity.

An experimental test model is now in operation at Fort Monmouth. Further tests are planned before a field-test model is produced.

Unpredictable weather has lost another battle with the development of a weather gun by the U.S. Army Signal Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J. The gun measures low-altitude wind velocity with speed and accuracy. This velocity must be known precisely at the site of an unguided missile launcher in order to hit a bull's-eye.

Key Divisions Will Convene During June

Anthony J. Passanate, P. O. Box 42, Kearny, N. J., announced that the 4th will hold a three-day meeting starting 20 June at the Hotel Carter, Cleveland, Ohio.

Members of the 8th will meet from 28 to 30 June at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia. Information is available from the Association's National Headquarters, 134 North LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Defense Transportation Due Presidio Celebration

Local transportation officers and civilians will observe National Defense Transportation Day next Friday, 17 May. The day was set aside to honor military-commercial transportation teamship by the U.S. Congress.

Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, and other service dignitaries have been invited to the dinner which will highlight the local celebration. More than 300 persons are expected to attend.

General Young praised the teamwork between military and civilian transportation.

"The duty of the Sixth United States Army to provide for the movement of men and materiel through the West Coast ports of our nation owes its successful accomplishment in large part to the working partnership of our military transportation units and the commercial organizations that constitute the National Defense Transportation Association. Here at the Presidio of San Francisco we can bear witness to the effectiveness of that partnership in the San Francisco Bay Area. It is an effectiveness based upon enterprising cooperation and skilled performance motivated by individual and personal dedication to the national interest. It is therefore with much pleasure that I send greetings and congratulations to the membership of the San Francisco Bay Area Chapter of the National Defense Transportation Association on this day of celebration: National Defense Transportation Day, 17 May, 1957."

Guest Speaker
Admiral A. G. Cook

Rear Admiral A. G. Cook (USN Ret.), Director of the San Francisco Disaster Council and Corps, will be the principal speaker at the dinner. Admiral Cook, who has headed the city's emergency organization since 1950, will discuss emergency transportation.

The dinner, sponsored by the San Francisco Bay Area Chapter of the National Defense Transportation Association, is scheduled Thursday at the Presidio Officers' Club. Col. Calvin Whittle, Sixth Army Transportation Officer, assisted by Lt. Col. Robert G. Youngblood, coordinated the dinner plans.

Medicare Chief Cautions Troops On Non-Eligibles

Washington (ANS) — The Executive Director of Medicare Major General Paul I. Robinson has announced that "too many non-eligible dependents are seeking care under the Dependents Medical Care Program."

"I want to re-emphasize," he said, "that the only dependents eligible for care in civilian facilities under the program are the wives, children and dependent husbands of uniformed personnel on active duty."

Eligible dependents of retired personnel, as well as dependent parents and parents-in-law of uniformed personnel, are authorized care in service hospitals only. Too often, they have submitted to treatment in civilian facilities and later find that they must pay the physician and the hospital bills themselves.

According to General Robinson, dependents seeking care they are not authorized, results in a hardship to the dependents themselves, and also adds to the administrative burdens of the program.

New Com-System Affords Instant Combat Control

A new vehicle-mounted Army communications system which will give commanders instant control over dispersed tactical support elements, has been developed, according to a Department of the Army announcement.

Called the Tactical Support Center, the system allows a field army commander to weld his highly mobile support forces into a coordinated, powerpacked team.

Two TSC's designed and built by the U.S. Army Signal Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J., were tested recently under field conditions by the XVIII Airborne Corps in the King Cole Maneuvers at Fort Polk, La.

The need for such centers grew out of the complex nature and rapid movement of modern warfare. Problems of liaison between such tactical support elements as artillery, electronic warfare, tactical air support and antiaircraft are becoming much more complicated than in World War II or the Korean fighting.

New Enlistees May Qualify For Top Electronic Schools

Washington (ANS)—The Army has announced that newly enlisted personnel with high electronic aptitude area scores may expect to be selected for assignment to a service school that offers training in this complex field.

Because of an existing requirement for enlisted assignments in the Electronic Occupational Area, reception stations and training activities have been alerted to screen and earmark qualified personnel for certain Ordnance, Signal and Armed Forces Special Weapons Project courses.

Incoming individuals qualify for possible Electronic Occupational Area assignment by scoring 120 or higher in Aptitude Area EL. They are also eligible if they have a background of study at a school specializing in electronics and an Aptitude Area EL score of between 100 and 119.

Individuals with hobbies or avocations in radio or television repair that involve more than routine connection of assembled components will also be considered.

Department of the Army Circular 611-3 also states that personnel who have an expressed interest in electrical or electronic equipment maintenance training and have high school diplomas or equivalent are eligible, providing their Aptitude Area EL score is 100 or over.

Others who may qualify are individuals with recent actual work experience in electrical, electromechanical, or electronic equipment maintenance or repair, the Army said.

New Chief Nurse
Lt. Col. McCommons

Maley To Brooke Medical Center At Sam Houston

Lieutenant Colonel Daisy M. McCommons, Army Nurse Corps, has arrived at the Presidio to take over as Chief Nurse in the Sixth Army area. She succeeds Col. Agnes M. Maley, who leaves this week to become Chief of the Nursing Service at Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston.

Colonel McCommons, who has been in the Corps for 21 years, recently returned from her assignment as Chief of the Nursing Service at Triplett Army Hospital near Honolulu, T. H.

The colonel's overseas assignments include England and Germany during World War II.

Burglary Week Ends

Burglary Prevention Week closes its vigil at the Presidio and sub-Posts tomorrow. In observance of the date — 5-11 May — the Sixth Army and the Post Provost Marshal Sections distributed instructions to household and property owners on safety measures to discourage thefts in any form.

Top DA Team Will Display CBR Progress

A four-man Department of the Army orientation team will address major commanders and key staff officers in the Sixth Army area on the latest developments in chemical, biological and radiological warfare materiel and doctrine this morning. The orientation is scheduled from 0830 to 1200 hours at the Post Theater.

The team is composed of Brig. Gen. J. H. Rothchild, Deputy Chief Chemical Officer for Research and Development; Col. Fred W. Ludecke, Chemical Corps Board and former Sixth Army Chemical Officer; Col. J. J. Hayes, former commander of the Biological Laboratories at Camp Detrich, Maryland; and Maj. R. H. Berger, Chemical Corps Board.

About 75 officers from other Sixth Army installations are expected to attend.

AFD Luncheon Set For C of C

The Armed Forces Section of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce will host selected high-ranking military and naval leaders in the area at the Annual Armed Forces Day Luncheon, scheduled 17 May. The luncheon will be held at 1200 hours in the main dining room of the San Francisco Commercial Club, 456 California Street.

Lt. Gen. Clarence S. Irvine, Deputy Chief of Staff, Materiel, U. S. Air Force, will discuss "Armed Strength—Key to Survival."

Reservations should be made with Maj. Andrew Bretz, Ext. 2470, by 15 May.

New Medicare Rule Would Give Aid To Non-Residents

Washington (AFPS)—Dependent parents and parents-in-law who actually do not reside with members of the Armed Forces have been declared eligible for medical attention at service hospitals.

Prior to a recent interpretation of the Dependents' Medical Care Act, a dependent parent was required to live in the household of the service sponsor to receive treatment at government expense.

Under the new ruling, according to the Defense Department, if a serviceman or a retired member of the Armed Forces provides or maintains a place of residence for his dependent father or mother, regardless of its location, they may receive medical care at service facilities.

The Defense Department emphasizes, however, that these dependents do not qualify for treatment in civilian hospitals or by civilian physicians under the Dependents' Medical Care Program.

Former Post Dentist Will Lecture Here This Afternoon

Dr. James Vernetti, former Post dentist, will lecture to members of the Post Dental Clinic today. Dr. Vernetti will discuss the methods for efficient operation of a dental office and its many advantages in the proper use of dental assistants.

While on duty with the local section in 1954 and 1955, Dr. Vernetti was among the original organizers of Little League baseball on Post.

Dr. Vernetti was Chief of the Crown and Bridge Department of the Post Dental Section and Secretary of the National Academy of Gold Foil Operators. The doctor now resides in Coronado, California.

New Assignment

Lieutenant Colonel Willett Ware, Jr., has been appointed Deputy Employment Policy Officer for Post and Sixth Army. He is located in Room 106, Bldg. 220.

Army Recruiters and their service were honored this week by Mayor George Christopher, who proclaimed the week "United States Army Recruiting Week." The mayor presented the proclamation to M/Sgt. Vestal V. Nunlist, Recruiting Main Station in Oakland. The presentation was made in conjunction with the filming of the San Francisco and Presidio sequence of "The Big Picture."

Sixth Army Troops Set For Nuclear Shots

Young Named Director For Desert Rock VII, VIII

Exercises DESERT ROCK VII AND VIII, a series of atomic weapons training exercises and troop tests conducted by the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps will begin 15 May near Las Vegas, Nevada, the Department of Defense has announced. Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, is exercise director.

The Armed Forces exercises are part of Operation Plumbob, a series of low-yield nuclear tests conducted by the Atomic Energy Commission. Similar tests were conducted about two years ago.

Some 2100 Sixth Army troops from the entire eight-state area will participate in separate Army tests and atomic weapons training exercises. In addition some 1500 officers and men from Sixth Army units will play supporting roles in the Desert Rock activities, and others will be at the site as observers.

The "shots" in which Army personnel, including Reserve components, will take part tentatively are scheduled to be fired on 15 June, 27 June, 9 July, 25 July and 19 August.

The exercises are designed to develop tactical concepts and techniques relating to atomic warfare and to familiarize personnel with atomic battlefields.

Troops from this and other Army areas will act as a station complement to Camp Desert Rock in handling the additional facilities such as messing and communications. Brig. Gen. Walter A. Jensen, Commanding General of Camp Irwin, is deputy exercise director.

General Young, accompanied by 11 headquarters officers, is inspecting the Desert Rock preparations this week. Officers making the trip are Col. Harold A. Davenport, Col. Calvin A. L. Dickey, Col. Robert Erlenkotter, Col. Robert A. Matter, Col. Arthur C. Timboe, Col. Henry W. Daine, Lt. Col. Paul R. Cinq-Mars, Lt. Col. Howard L. Cornutt, Lt. Col. Clarence Ennis, Lt. Col. Kenneth A. Hunt and Capt. Thomas Austin.

About 2500 Marines will participate in a combined air-ground exercise in the 25 June shot.

New ID Card ToDependents On 1st July

A new identification card for Military Dependents (DD Form 1173) will become effective 1 July, according to a Post Headquarters announcement.

The card replaces the privilege identification card (DA 899) and the Military Dependent identification card (DD 720).

The card covers the use of exchanges, commissaries, medical care and theater admission. The only identification to be issued to dependents, the cards will be given to each eligible dependent over 10 years old.

Engineer Unit Due In Alaska

Eight men from the 21st Engineer Company, 30th Engineer Group, will leave for Alaska this week to continue and possibly conclude an aerial photography project started by the Group in 1950.

The party, headed by CWO Ralph B. Gordner, includes M/Sgt. Edward Zykowski, Sp2 Harold Davis, Sp3 John Growman, Sp3 Kenneth Barger, Pvt. Gordon Downey, Pvt. James Green and Pvt. Robert Warren.

Most of the group will fly from McChord Air Force Base in Washington to Elmendorf Air Force Base at Anchorage.

Nuclear Tests take the spotlight again next week when the Army Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps participate in a series of low-yield atomic tests. Scheduled to begin on 15 May, the tests will be held at the Atomic Energy Commission's Nevada site.

T44 Will Replace Standard Weapons In New System

Plans for a new small arms weapons system for combat forces have been completed with the adoption of a new standard rifle, according to Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker. The rifle will replace four current U.S. Army shoulder weapons.

The rifle, along with the recently adopted M60 general purpose machine gun, will fire the 7.62 mm. NATO cartridge. Appropriations to produce the rifle, presently manufactured for testing purposes only, are expected to be included in the FY 1959 budget. The rifle is scheduled for issue to troops in 1960.

Known during the testing period as the T44, the rifle eventually will replace the standard M1 (Garand); the Browning Automatic Rifle, known as the BAR since World War I; the Caliber 30 carbine; and the M3 submachine gun. The T44, which is capable of both fully automatic fire or semiautomatic fire, was developed by the U.S. Army Ordnance at Springfield Armory.

The new small arms weapons system offers forward infantry units greater firepower with a better and lighter rifle and lighter machine gun, while cutting the number of weapons in the system from seven to two. It also cuts field logistics loads, institutes the standard NATO cartridge, simplifies handling and maintenance problems and reduces training time for the combat soldier.

Defense Secretary Says Pay Raise Questionable

Washington (AFPS)—Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson says he does not intend to throw the Cordiner Committee recommendations "overboard."

Despite the fact that proposed pay legislation based on the study has failed to clear the Bureau of the Budget, he said he is trying to "understand the temper" of what can be done during this session of Congress.

Mr. Wilson conceded to newsmen at his latest press conference that he is not as optimistic about getting a pay bill enacted this year as he had been previously.

"How much we can do without increasing the budget is the question," he explained.

But, he said, "I am still working to see how much" of the Cordiner plan "can be implemented this year"—and how much can be introduced in 1958.

The Department of Defense is trying to "pinpoint" what should be done to solve all the manpower problems, he added.

Mr. Wilson said obviously the entire Cordiner proposal to revamp the military pay structure could not be implemented without "seemingly" giving everyone in the service a wage increase, which would be considered inflationary.

The Director of the Budget made no recommendations in turning down new pay legislation, he said.

"That is not his department," Mr. Wilson declared.

EMs May Wear New Whites For Off-Duty

Enlisted men have been authorized to buy and wear the white uniform for off-duty summer dress, according to an order signed this week by Chief of Staff, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor. The order to wear whites is effective immediately or with the beginning of the summer uniform season, whichever is later.

Wear of the white uniform is voluntary and parallels the wear of blues for dress by enlisted men.

The white uniform is similar to that worn by officers except that the cap chin strap is black leather, the background for insignia of rank is white, sleeve braid will be left off and stripes are gold.

AFD Celebration Set; Large Crowd Expected

The rising Armed Forces Day fever will reach a peak next Saturday, 18 May, when displays, open houses, tours, demonstrations and a parade take over the Presidio and its sub-posts. The Presidio Open House is scheduled from 0900 to 1630 hours, and the parade at 1645 hours.

Leading the list of service spectaculars will be 45-minute tours of Nike Guided Missile sites. The tours will begin at 0915 hours.

A 16-page color edition of the Star Presidian will be distributed at the sites and the main Presidio gates. As in the past the issue will be a souvenir edition honoring Armed Forces Day and the services.

Helicopter and flame throwing demonstrations will highlight the Crissy Field activities. The Coast Guard will lead off the "whirly bird" shows at both 1000 hours and 1500 hours; the Army's helicopter demonstrations will follow both times. Post Chemical will stage flame thrower shows at 1030 and 1500 hours.

Shuttle bus service will be provided from the parade ground to Crissy Field at 0930 and 1430 hours; and from the field to the parade ground for the parade at 1600 hours. Bus service also will be available from the parade ground to 30th Engineer Headquarters via Harmon Armory. These buses will run from 1000 to 1630 hours.

Several mess halls will be open to the public from 1100 to 1300 hours. Meals will be 55 cents for adults and 30 cents for children under 12.

The committee has announced that all exhibits and demonstrations will be held on Sunday, 19 May, in case of bad weather.

. . . fellow travelers

Meet Whipsaw Wilfred. He's the duck in duck out dastard whose mission in life is to destroy your confidence in your fellow drivers. Wilfred is the quick-signal boy who drives an acre of car with an inch of mind. He's a scientist of first water with the unique theory that each car carries its own space. In other words, move and the space moves with you. The other guy? Wilfred never heard of him. His only comment on the frequent cases of bent fenders, horrified shrieks and squealing brakes—"Where'd he come from?" Wilfred's pet hate is women drivers. "Not only are they slow, but they're cautious. Besides that, you never know what they're gonna do. Why I cut in front of one one day, with inches to spare, and she ran right into me!" Of course Wilfred could meet the same fate as one of his brothers in arms did recently. Seems a big ex-pug became incensed at being almost forced off a cliff while traveling sedately in his own lane. He ran the offender down, forced him to the curb and proceeded blithely to rearrange his features. Later the judge ruled the action "self defense." It should happen to Wilfred!

Test Pattern To Guide Future PX Credit Plan

Servicemen may be able to buy on credit in exchanges next year, if a new plan testing the idea proves successful. The one-year test of adding credit to the exchange system begins 1 June at two Air Force bases.

If credit is adopted, it would bring to an end a 16-year period in which service personnel could get credit almost anywhere in the nation except in their own service stores.

The test will be conducted at March AFB, Calif., and Wright Patterson AFB, Ohio. The exchanges now extend credit on uniforms and uniform accessories, shoes and insignia to officers, warrant officers and first three graders. This plan has been in effect since February 1956.

The test probably will include both a 30-day charge account based on $5 minimum sales and an extended deferred payment plan covering a six-month period. The latter plan means that a man receiving $300 credit would pay it off in equal installments of $50 a month for six months. Charge accounts would be paid monthly. No interest will be charged.

New Sfc At ADC

Newly promoted to Sergeant First Class is Miguel C. Ibarra, supply sergeant in the Headquarters Commandant's section of the 6th Region, U. S. Army Air Defense Command at Fort Baker.

Sergeant Ibarra was stationed in Germany before receiving his assignment at Fort Baker. He entered the Army in 1952.

The sergeant's decorations include the Good Conduct Medal, Army of Occupation Medal for Germany and the National Defense Service Medal.

Specialty Series!

Former Sailor In Unique Job As Army Ordnance Instructor

From a civilian machine repairman to a highly skilled instructor in the latest ordnance materiel—this is the story of Sfc. Robert G. Otto's personal skill development while in the Army. Sergeant Otto is assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 46th Ordnance Group.

Sergeant Otto, who has been with the 46th since January, recently returned from an 8300-mile trip around the Sixth Army area as part of a three-man team instructing Reserve components in ordnance materiel just declassified. In the future the team will handle inspection duties as they arise.

Assigned to the automotive maintenance section, Sergeant Otto served as a senior instructor in wheel vehicle mechanics at Fort Ord for five years. The course, now designated the Mechanics Helper Course, was the Wheel Vehicle Mechanics Course at that time.

Sergeant Otto served in the Navy from 1941 to 1945; upon his discharge he was a First Class Motor Machinists Mate, which is the equivalent to a Sergeant First Class. As a civilian he worked as a machinist at Mare Island and a heavy repairman at Ford Motor Company.

Army Instructor, Sfc. Robert C. Otto, explains the mechanics required for a maintenance inspector to Pfc. Ervin Hindrickson, Cpl. Forrest Dane and Pvt. Alfonso Thompson. Sergeant Otto, now an instructor in the new ordnance materiel and assigned to the 46th Ordnance automotive maintenance section, spent five years at Fort Ord as a wheel vehicle mechanics instructor.

In 1948 Sergeant Otto joined the Army and was sent to Leadership School. His overseas assignments include depot motor officer and assistant maintenance officer in France, and battalion motor sergeant in Germany.

Sergeant Otto, who has served about 13 years, plans to continue his Army career as an instructor in the field he most enjoys.

Liberty's Legacies

Czech Pvt. Sought America's Freedom

On a dark night in 1952, Private Vladimir Dostal broke away from an excursion group in South Moravia, Czechoslovakia, swam the river Dyje, traveled 80 miles through Russian-occupied Austria and arrived in the French section of Vienna to become one of the thousands of refugees who each year escape from behind the Iron Curtain.

Born in Czechoslovakia in 1931, Vladimir remembers the Nazis marching into his country when he was eight years old. The Nazis were there for six years until they were overthrown by an internal revolution in May, 1945. Vladimir attended elementary school under the occupation and finished high school in 1946.

"From 1945 to 1948 we were relatively free, so I studied civil engineering at a technical college," Vladimir recalled. In January, 1948, the Communists took control of the country through a parliamentary revolution. Vladimir completed the course in 1950.

"Many young people turned anti-Communist and although I wanted to attend graduate school, I couldn't because I had the 'wrong attitude.'" Vladimir continued. "This plus my listening to Radio Free Europe played a large part in my decision to escape."

He Sought Freedom
Pvt. Vladimir Dostal

Vladimir was working for an engineering company when his opportunity to escape came. The company was on a job in South Moravia, near the Austrian border, when the private started on his perilous journey.

When he arrived in Vienna, Vladimir was imprisoned by Austrian police for three days. After his release he reported to the American Refugee Office where he was interrogated and then sent to a displaced persons' camp in Wels, Austria. Three and a half months later Private Dostal went to Innsbruck where he did graduate work in math and physics at the University for three years. In 1955 he emigrated to the United States under the Refugee Relief Act.

In the United States, Vladimir first worked on a farm in Minnesota, then for the Minnesota Highway Department and was with the Anaconda Copper Corporation when he entered the service last September.

"I came to America to get free again," Vladimir said. "In Czechoslovakia my chances for study and advancement were suppressed because of my feelings and attitudes. In America progress depends on knowledge and ability, not political attitude."

Honor Guard Winner Of Softball Tourney

Co. A, USA Garrison, emerged as the champion of the pre-season softball tournament when they downed LAH for the title early this week. Co. A, also known as the Honor Guard, came from a 3-1 deficit in the third inning to win the game 12-3.

LAH broke the ice when they scored one run in the first inning. There were no runs in the second inning and the Honor Guard brought in their first run in the top of the third inning, but LAH came back in the bottom of the same inning with two more runs to put the score at 3-1 in their favor.

The fourth inning was also a scoreless one, but the Honor Guard broke loose in the top of the fifth inning with a flurry of runs to put the score at 8-3 in their favor. LAH never recovered from the shock and failed to manage to score after the third inning while the Honor Guard was picking up four more scores in the sixth inning.

Jones, Honor Guard leftfielder, and Ed Johnson, Honor Guard pitcher, each had three hits in five trips to the plate. The Honor Guard collected 18 hits in 38 trips to the batter's box while allowing only 4 hits in 27 trips to the plate for LAH. Ed Johnson struck out five LAH batters, hit one double and batted in three runs in five trips to the plate.

Winner of the pre-season tourney will receive a trophy. Intramural softball play will get under way Monday and continue through the summer.

Pacific Coast Title Won By Yoshida, Post Weight-Lifter

Yoshida, who has annexed such titles as the Territorial Championship of Hawaii, Pennsylvania State Title, the All-Alaska Title and placed first in his weight division in the U.S. Olympic Trials, took the Pacific Coast title with a 210-pound press, 210-pound snatch and a 280-pound clean and jerk for a 700-pound total. Lifters are not judged solely on the total poundage of the three types of lifts, but also on the style and technique of their lifts.

Ralph confided that he lifted only enough weight to beat his nearest competitor so that he could be more certain of his form. He has exceeded his meet total by 40 pounds while working out with the weights in practice sessions.

Winning the coast title qualified Ralph for the Junior National Championships, to be held in El Paso, Texas, 17 and 18 May. The Junior Nationals are held for the individuals who have not won a national title. A win at the junior events will qualify him for the Senior National Championships, to be held in Miami, Florida, on June 23-24.

Will Represent Army In National Tourney

The Torero volleyball team successfully defended their All-Army title and swept through this year's All-Army Matches without a defeat to win the crown for the second time in as many years and earn the right to represent the Army in the 28th U.S. Volleyball Association National Tournament to be held in Memphis, Tennessee, this week, 8-11 May.

Fifth Army fell before the locals in two straight games, 15-3 and 15-9, in the championship tilt. Opening game of the title series saw the locals jump to a 13-point lead before Fifth Army could break into the scoring column and then go on to cap the game at 15-3.

The second game of the series was a closer contest and Fifth Army managed to come within one point of tying the score at 10-9. The Fifth Army threat came with less than three minutes to play, but the Toreros went on to score five more points without allowing any further scoring from the opposition and won the game 15-9.

Superb teamwork of the local team highlighted their play throughout the tourney and enabled the Toreros to move through the tournament without a single loss. Burt Millard and player-coach Bob Jones led the Presidio attack in the championship game.

The Toreros took the winners' bracket of the double elimination tourney when they downed Fifth Army 15-10, 14-16, and 15-1. The loss to the locals dropped Fifth Army to the losers' bracket where they met Eighth Army for the title of losers' bracket play. Fifth Army downed Eighth Army in two quick games 14-10 and 15-7 to earn the right to meet Sixth Army's Presidio team for the All-Army title.

An additional player from the Eighth Army team, Lt. Gerald Evans, was selected to supplement the Torero squad in the 28th U.S. Volleyball Association National Tournament being played this week. Champion of the national tournament will be decided tomorrow. Last year's All-Army champs from the Presidio went to the national tournament and returned with second place in the tournament, the highest standing ever attained by a service team.

Toreros Win Two And Drop Third To USF

Torero diamond men won two and dropped one game this week in practice games with local collegiate nines. Stanford fell before Torero batsmen, 8-6, Marin College went down 15-5 in a lop-sided game and the University of San Francisco downed the locals 9-6.

The Stanford game saw the locals collect eight runs on as many hits in 31 trips to the plate while the Indians hit 10 times for six runs in 36 trips to the plate. Shinnick was the starting pitcher for the locals, but was replaced by Roger Collins, who was credited with the win. Jim Cummings was the only Torero who got two hits in the contest.

In the Presidio-Marin College rout, John Blackwell scored three runs in five trips to the plate and Rios, centerfielder, had three hits for as many times at bat. Capachi, Torero second baseman, also connected for three hits in six trips to the batters' box. Roger Collins was the winning pitcher in this game also.

The locals distributed their hits evenly throughout the game until the ninth inning when they broke loose with five runs.

Collins, Bilafer and Capachi each connected for two hits apiece in the University of San Francisco game. Collins was the losing pitcher, and Basques performed the mound duties for the USF team.

The locals were at bat 38 times, scored six runs and got nine hits while USF stepped up to the plate 39 times and scored nine runs on eight hits. The score stood at 6-2 in favor of USF in the third inning and 9-2 at the bottom of the eighth inning. A scoring splurge that netted four runs for the Presidio in the top of the ninth inning put the score at 6-9, but bogged down before the locals could overcome the lead of the USF crew.

Polo Pony Blessing To Highlight AFD

An unusual religious ceremony—the blessing of two teams of polo ponies and their riders—will take place in Golden Gate Park, Sunday 19 May, at approximately 1230 hours.

Planned by Mr. Henry Entermeyer and other staff members of Radio Station KCBS, San Francisco, as a means of honoring Armed Forces Day, the religious ceremony will be conducted by Chaplain Father Robert J. Plocki, of the Presidio.

It is planned to have Chaplain Plocki conveyed to the polo grounds in Golden Gate Park under Metropolitan Police motorcycle escort, to expedite his arrival at the park from completion of the 1130 Mass in the Chapel of Our Lady at the Presidio.

The blessing of the animals and their riders takes place prior to the final game between the Verdier Polo Team and the Crescent Jewelers Team which won the opening game with the San Francisco All-Star Polo Team recently. The second in the three-series game takes place next Sunday, 12 May.

An added highlight of the final event on 19 May is the amateur photography contest comprising two divisions of the polo game series, in which prizes will be awarded by the San Francisco Polo and Riding Club at the end of the polo season. The contest is open to military personnel at the Presidio and the Bay Area generally.

Free entrance to the polo field and the games is accorded to all service personnel and their families, provided the military members are wearing uniform. The courtesy admission is restricted to Sunday 19 May only.

The contest was a race with time and was open to sports-type models such as Jaguars, Austin-Healeys, MGs, and Porsches. The race began at 0800 hours and continued until 1700 hours. No admission was charged the spectators of the race.

Refreshments were served at a stand in the battery area of the Army antiaircraft unit.

Set Tuesday As B-Day For New Civilian Fund

Blood will flow freely when the first Presidio Civilian Blood Fund Drive gets underway Tuesday, 14 May. Donations will be taken from 0800 to 1500 hours.

Representatives of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will be located in Ward B-2, Bldg. 1023 on Girard Road and Lincoln Boulevard, opposite the Letterman Army Hospital parking area. A Letterman doctor will be on duty.

Persons interested in building up the civilian blood fund can contact their section blood representatives or members of the Fund committee at Ext. 2383.

"Our goal is 150 donors," Mr. Les Scanlon, Civilian Personnel Officer and Fund chairman, said. "We hope to get even more because the Fund is a wonderful idea for civilian employees and their dependents."

Persons between the ages of 18 and 60 are eligible to donate; however minors must have the written permission of a parent or legal guardian. Donors are cautioned not to eat four hours before giving blood. Fruit juices, black coffee or tea are recommended before donations.

The fund not only will assure all civilian employees of a blood reserve in emergencies, but also will save fund users the usual $25 fee for replacing one pint of blood. Employees will have to pay processing costs only.

Code Of Conduct Posters Readied For Field Issue

Washington (ANS)—A series of Department of Defense posters illustrating the six points of the Code of Conduct are currently being distributed to all Army units in the field.

Several months ago, The American Society of Illustrators was invited by DOD to interpret the Code's six points that embody the high standards governing the U. S. fighting man's conduct.

From more than 200 sketches submitted by nationally known artists depicting the timeless quality of the Code, the Defense Advisory Committee on Prisoners of War selected those which best expressed its meaning. The selected illustrations portray the high standards of devotion to country that American servicemen have held since 1775.

This series (Department of the Army Posters 21-100-1 through 6) may be requisitioned by units through normal Adjutant General channels.

Deadline Nears For Wear Of Army's New Uniforms

New uniform requirements in effect for officers and warrant officers this month include the wearing of the green cap, black tie and shade 46 shirt, excepting those who are being separated from service through 1 October, 1957.

As of 1 July, 1957, the new Army Green uniform for newly enlisted men and draftees, will be issued, one to each soldier, and one OD uniform, the type of which is now in use.

It will be mandatory for officers and warrant officers to wear the new Army Green uniform off duty on and after 1 October; however, it will be worn optionally by enlisted personnel after the given dates, with the OD uniform still mandatory for military formations.

On 1 October, 1958, the Army Green uniform will become official for all military personnel, consistent with the issuing of two of the same uniforms being issued to enlisted men.

By 1 October, 1960, the OD uniform presently in use will become obsolete for all officer and enlisted personnel.

Bicarb Banquet?

Scouts To Serve For Mother's Day

A Mother's Day Dinner for Explorer Mothers is being presented by the members of Explorer Post 77, Presidio Boy Scouts, on 11 May, 1800 hours, at the Scout House, MacArthur Boulevard.

The boys planned the dinner for the day before the national celebration of the event, so that it would not conflict with family plans on the 12th of May.

As a special mark of honor to the mothers, dinner is being cooked by the explorers' dads and served by the boys.

Supervised by their advisor, Sgt. Robert J. Reilly, the Explorers are to have a Court of Awards ceremony after the dinner, during which seven boys will receive their apprentice awards from the mothers present.

ARMY POWER — KEY TO PEACE

30th Engineer Group In Annual Training Test

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Test evaluating the ability of units to perform their mission under simulated battle conditions was conducted by the 30th Engineer Group this week. The test ran from 1500 hours, 6 May, to 1700 hours, 8 May..

The problem was built around an atomic bomb supposedly dropped by enemy forces in the vicinity of Treasure Island. Simulated radiation was present in the 99th Engineer Company's area. The men performed all necessary decontamination procedures and then returned the plant to standard operations.

The 171st Engineer Detachment underwent the maneuvers with the 99th. The aggressor team was furnished by the 21st Engineer Co.

Strict combat conditions prevailed during the test and the men worked with their weapons within easy reach. Each man carried a helmet, gas mask and cartridge belt. Work was assigned to the groups by testing officers.

In addition to the harrassment furnished by the aggressors, the men encountered high humidity built up in the plant from atmospheric conditions outside coupled with closed windows because of blackout security.

A Toast To Health in milk from one of the new dispensers now in use at most of the Sixth Army's mess halls. A money saver, the milk dispenser is being saluted by Pfc. James L. McLin, A Battery, 740th AAA, Fort Funston, and Pfc. Marjorie G. Love, of the Presidio Company D.

Milk Dispensers Save Army $1000 A Month

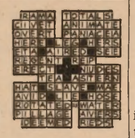
Although the dispensing machines have created an increase in milk consumption per man, it has been noted that the 9,615 gallons distributed in local mess halls during April through the new method, has resulted in savings of about 10 cents per gallon. There is far less waste incurred through the machine process rather than the individual half-pint carton system of providing milk for the troops.

Milk dispensers have been in operation at Air Force and Navy bases during the past year; however, this is the first time that they have been used locally.

The milk dispensing machines at the Presidio were installed through the mutual interests of two Presidio officers, Col. Edward B. Hempstead, Post Executive officer, and Major Jack Hunt, Post Quartermaster. Both are cost-conscious, and both are enthusiastic about the merits of a glass of cold milk from a bulk dispenser rather than from a half pint carton. According to the current increase in milk drinking at all local mess halls and the $961 saved through bulk distribution, both officers were correct.

Leased by the RODAR Corporation to the dairies under contract to Presidio mess halls, the milk dispensers are now being utilized in Sixth Army Headquarters Company A, in all Post unit mess halls, the 163rd MP Company, the Field Ration Messes of the Presidio Officers Club and the NCO Club, the 561st Engineer Company at Fort Baker, and all other units of the 30th Engineer Group.



The milk dispensers would have been utilized by mess halls of the AAA units in this area were it not for the fact that their rations are prepared for field operation soldiers.

Army Ordnance Celebrates 145th Birthday On 14 May

Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker and General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, have issued messages of congratulation to the U. S. Army Ordnance Corps on the occasion of its 145th birthday, 14 May.

A week is a week . . . or is it?

Unless immediate action is taken to organize and campaign for at least a 104-week calendar year, public relations, advertising and general media men will be facing disaster. Seems the publicists and idea boys are already battling over which weeks will be dedicated to the enlightenment of the public and the advancement of their individual project or product. For instance, this week alone has been designated National Burglary Prevention Week, National Defense Transportation Week, and U.S. Army Recruiting Week. Of course, since editors are expected to give all-out support to these weeks, it will inevitably lead to National Frustrated Editor's Week—"adversis major, par secundis!"

One cannot help wondering . . . how Presidio officers and enlisted men would react if gold ran again through the earth veins of California. Around the year 1849 . . . birth of the Gold Rush year . . . only three military units were left in California. The rest had deserted or left the service to follow the world's oldest lure . . . gold.

The whole guard at the Presidio literally went over the hill one night. Even the corporal of the guard left his post. They were overtaken 15 miles south of San Francisco. The deserters resisted capture and two of their number were shot. Only one officer and one wounded man returned, however. The enlisted men, sent out to return them, deserted also.

A determining factor in Presidio soldiers' disloyalty at that time was the fact that an enlisted man's pay was only $8.00 a month . . . while a laborer in the mines could earn more in a day in pay and allowances than he could get in four weeks' military service.

In July 1851 . . . there was a total of only 350 military men in the whole Pacific Division.

Because neither officers nor enlisted men could live on their military pay at that time they were frequently permitted to take outside jobs . . . and even to receive rations in kind . . . which they bartered for room and board. Even a Presidio commander worked as a surveyor and contractor . . . in the building of the first wharf in San Francisco.

Extra duties of the Presidio enlisted men during the Gold Rush days were road building, escort duty, relief of immigrant trains, and protection of civilians against Indian attack. But the Army was not quite so successful in preventing miners and settlers from attacking friendly Indian bands.

During gold rush days . . . furloughs were even more popular than they are today . . . they all went digging for gold, not as a pastime but for strictly financial gain.

Pvt. John Haggerty, a Presidio Third Artillery soldier returned from a furlough with 60 pounds of gold valued at $15,000. Another GI . . . back from a mining furlough, boasted that he made more money in the mines in a 20-day leave than he could earn in a five-year enlistment.

During the 1850's, the courts martial cases were predominantly for desertion and the punishment was harsh.

A soldier charged with desertion in 1857 . . . a Private, yet . . . was sentenced to forfeit all pay and allowance . . . to be permanently marked on the left hip by the letter D . . . one and a half inches long . . . and ten days later to receive 50 lashes on his bare back . . . laid on with rawhide . . . that he have his head shaved, and be drummed out of the Service. (The then commanding general did not approve of either the branding or the flogging, so the sentence was carried out only in part.)

Presidio soldiers during the eighties had much in common with today's Presidio soldier . . . they loved to go back to bed after roll call. Sick Call began at 0700 . . . but there was rarely a doctor present. A primitively-trained corpsman did some doubtful work with the needle and the pills . . . laxatives of sufficient potency to purge an elephant were cure-alls for the real and imagined ills of the patient. You would be surprised at the number of men who literally sweated out their illnesses without resort to the dispensary.

Breakfast was at 0730 . . . but by that time everybody had eaten. There was Guard Muster and inspection at 0800 . . . followed by an hour of Drill and the Manual of Arms. During the remainder of the day the soldiers worked on details assigned the day previously . . . Retreat at sundown . . . Tattoo at 2030 hours . . . and roll call taken again at about 2100.

Each Sunday, inspection was held before Guard Mount, after which the men were dismissed for the day. Those finding "no pleasure in either reading or writing passed the time by sleeping or in wandering around the reservation." "We are now experiencing the most favorable side of soldiering," one of them wrote in a letter to his family.

Don't you agree . . . that despite the fact that gold lay at their fingertips, Presidio soldiers of the eighties "never had it so good" as we do now?

"THE LIVING IDOL"—In Yucatan, an archaeological party exploring an ancient burial chamber, comes upon the fantastic sculpture of an orange-red jaguar. Upon sight of it, Liliane Montevecchi flees in panic, closely followed by Steve Forest and the professor (James Robertson Justice). The professor, in discussing the girl's strange behavior, theorizes that Juanita (Liliane), of pure Mayan blood, was frightened in her early youth by stories of how girls her age were sacrificed in the burial chamber centuries ago. It was the Jaguar cult, oldest in Mexico, and still deeply feared by the Indians.

When an accidental death occurs in the camp, the girl is convinced she is obsessed. The professor determines to rid the girl of the phobia which holds her. He re-enacts the ancient rite with the use of a real jaguar. In a dramatic climax, the beast is killed, and the girl realizes her fears were groundless.

"HOT ROD" introduces the top driver of the Red Devils, a group of hot-rod teenagers who drive their souped-up jalopies in drag strip races. When one of the boys gets killed in a senseless speeding accident, the leader is blamed, although he was not involved. The club members ostracize him and his girl stops dating him. During the running of the season's prize road race, the mystery surrounding the accident is cleared up. The leader goes on to win the race and his girl too.

"BOY ON A DOLPHIN"—When two sponge divers discover an ancient sunken ship with a peculiar masthead off the coast of Greece, and attempt to sell their information to the highest bidder, a suspenseful and intriguing series of events are set in motion. One of the divers (Sophia Loren) is induced to sell her secret to Parmelee (Clifton Webb), an unscrupulous collector, who recognizes the find as the long-lost "Boy on a Dolphin" of Christ's time.

Alan Ladd is also aware of the discovery, and attempts to save the treasure for the American museum. A battle of wits and double-crossing follows, during which Parmelee secures the bronze statue, but is forced to relinquish it when the law and Dr. Calder intervene.

"ABANDON SHIP"—When a luxury liner strikes an old mine in the shark-infested waters of the south Atlantic, the vessel sinks in seven minutes. There are 26 survivors who manage to board the ship's shore-boat, which miraculously escaped damage in the explosion. Ship's officer Holmes (Tyrone Power) as a senior, assumes command of the small boat, which has almost twice as many passengers as the boat was intended to accommodate. The next morning it is obvious to all that the load is imperilling the small craft. Holmes must decide which of the excess number shall be cast adrift in life jackets, in order that the others may live. The fateful decisions are not easily made. Holmes is compelled to enforce his commands at gun point when the crew rebels against his orders. Riding out a tropical storm, Holmes brings his tiny boat into the steamer lanes, where they are picked up by a freighter which has also rescued the passengers he had been forced to cast adrift.

Entertainment Section Has Special Feel For Show Biz

Entertainers and would-be entertainers have both facilities and encouragement waiting for them at Post Special Services Entertainment Section headquarters, Bldg. 117.

"We just want to create a friendly atmosphere where anyone interested in the entertainment arts will feel free to come," invites Sgt. Roy A. King, Post entertainment NCO.

Known as the Little Theater, Bldg. 117 is equipped with a small stage, spotlights, a tape recorder, some costumes, an accordion, a bass and a wide variety of sheet music.

"We subscribe to Downbeat, Billboard and Theater Arts," says Sergeant King, "and we want anybody interested in the entertainment field to come down, get acquainted and use the facilities."

Part of the job of the Entertainment Section is to put together talent shows for local entertainment. Another project that may be started is a little theater group. Anyone interested in this field is urged to call Sergeant King.

Sergeant King, who has attended Special Services School and toured with Soldier Shows in Korea, is assisted by Sp3 Horace Randolph. Sp3 Randolph has a Bachelor of Music from West Virginia State. He has also played and arranged for San Francisco dance bands and is available for coaching in this field.

Regular hours for the Little Theater are 0800 to 1600 hours Monday through Friday. On Tuesday and Wednesday the building is open from 1800 hours to 2000 hours for Presidio Mixed Choir practice. It is possible to arrange other hours by calling Sergeant King at 4121.

A Toast To Health in milk from one of the new dispensers now in use at most of the Sixth Army's mess halls. A money saver, the milk dispenser is being saluted by Pfc. James L. McLin, A Battery, 740th AAA, Fort Funston, and Pfc. Marjorie G. Love, of the Presidio Company D.

Milk Dispensers Save Army $1000 A Month

Although the dispensing machines have created an increase in milk consumption per man, it has been noted that the 9,615 gallons distributed in local mess halls during April through the new method, has resulted in savings of about 10 cents per gallon. There is far less waste incurred through the machine process rather than the individual half-pint carton system of providing milk for the troops.

Milk dispensers have been in operation at Air Force and Navy bases during the past year; however, this is the first time that they have been used locally.

The milk dispensing machines at the Presidio were installed through the mutual interests of two Presidio officers, Col. Edward B. Hempstead, Post Executive officer, and Major Jack Hunt, Post Quartermaster. Both are cost-conscious, and both are enthusiastic about the merits of a glass of cold milk from a bulk dispenser rather than from a half pint carton. According to the current increase in milk drinking at all local mess halls and the $961 saved through bulk distribution, both officers were correct.

Leased by the RODAR Corporation to the dairies under contract to Presidio mess halls, the milk dispensers are now being utilized in Sixth Army Headquarters Company A, in all Post unit mess halls, the 163rd MP Company, the Field Ration Messes of the Presidio Officers Club and the NCO Club, the 561st Engineer Company at Fort Baker, and all other units of the 30th Engineer Group.

The milk dispensers would have been utilized by mess halls of the AAA units in this area were it not for the fact that their rations are prepared for field operation soldiers.

Army Ordnance Celebrates 145th Birthday On 14 May

Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker and General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, have issued messages of congratulation to the U. S. Army Ordnance Corps on the occasion of its 145th birthday, 14 May.

In keeping with the corps anniversary, a broadcast from its chief, Lt. Gen. E. L. Cummings, is being aired over 125 AFRTS radio stations on the 14th.

The U. S. Army Ordnance Corps was established by Congress in 1812. It is responsible to the Army for everything that shoots, is shot, or rolls, and in addition, it supplies a major portion of weapons and Ordnance equipment to the Navy, Marines, and the Air Force.

Among significant Ordnance advances announced recently are the Dart, LaCrosse, Little John and NIKE-Hercules missiles; the M-60 lightweight general purpose machine gun, designed to replace all present U. S. Army caliber .30 machine guns, the TI71 Vulcan, 20-millimeter automatic cannon, and the T-45 175-millimeter gun, superior in most respects to the combined features of the 155-millimeter, the 8-inch howitzer and the 8-inch gun.

A week is a week . . . or is it?

Unless immediate action is taken to organize and campaign for at least a 104-week calendar year, public relations, advertising and general media men will be facing disaster. Seems the publicists and idea boys are already battling over which weeks will be dedicated to the enlightenment of the public and the advancement of their individual project or product. For instance, this week alone has been designated National Burglary Prevention Week, National Defense Transportation Week, and U.S. Army Recruiting Week. Of course, since editors are expected to give all-out support to these weeks, it will inevitably lead to National Frustrated Editor's Week—"adversis major, par secundis!"

presidio sketchbook

One cannot help wondering . . . how Presidio officers and enlisted men would react if gold ran again through the earth veins of California. Around the year 1849 . . . birth of the Gold Rush year . . . only three military units were left in California. The rest had deserted or left the service to follow the world's oldest lure . . . gold.

The whole guard at the Presidio literally went over the hill one night. Even the corporal of the guard left his post. They were overtaken 15 miles south of San Francisco. The deserters resisted capture and two of their number were shot. Only one officer and one wounded man returned, however. The enlisted men, sent out to return them, deserted also.

A determining factor in Presidio soldiers' disloyalty at that time was the fact that an enlisted man's pay was only $8.00 a month . . . while a laborer in the mines could earn more in a day in pay and allowances than he could get in four weeks' military service.

In July 1851 . . . there was a total of only 350 military men in the whole Pacific Division.

Because neither officers nor enlisted men could live on their military pay at that time they were frequently permitted to take outside jobs . . . and even to receive rations in kind . . . which they bartered for room and board. Even a Presidio commander worked as a surveyor and contractor . . . in the building of the first wharf in San Francisco.

Extra duties of the Presidio enlisted men during the Gold Rush days were road building, escort duty, relief of immigrant trains, and protection of civilians against Indian attack. But the Army was not quite so successful in preventing miners and settlers from attacking friendly Indian bands.

During gold rush days . . . furloughs were even more popular than they are today . . . they all went digging for gold, not as a pastime but for strictly financial gain.

Pvt. John Haggerty, a Presidio Third Artillery soldier returned from a furlough with 60 pounds of gold valued at $15,000. Another GI . . . back from a mining furlough, boasted that he made more money in the mines in a 20-day leave than he could earn in a five-year enlistment.

During the 1850's, the courts martial cases were predominantly for desertion and the punishment was harsh.

A soldier charged with desertion in 1857 . . . a Private, yet . . . was sentenced to forfeit all pay and allowance . . . to be permanently marked on the left hip by the letter D . . . one and a half inches long . . . and ten days later to receive 50 lashes on his bare back . . . laid on with rawhide . . . that he have his head shaved, and be drummed out of the Service. (The then commanding general did not approve of either the branding or the flogging, so the sentence was carried out only in part.)

Presidio soldiers during the eighties had much in common with today's Presidio soldier . . . they loved to go back to bed after roll call. Sick Call began at 0700 . . . but there was rarely a doctor present. A primitively-trained corpsman did some doubtful work with the needle and the pills . . . laxatives of sufficient potency to purge an elephant were cure-alls for the real and imagined ills of the patient. You would be surprised at the number of men who literally sweated out their illnesses without resort to the dispensary.

Breakfast was at 0730 . . . but by that time everybody had eaten. There was Guard Muster and inspection at 0800 . . . followed by an hour of Drill and the Manual of Arms. During the remainder of the day the soldiers worked on details assigned the day previously . . . Retreat at sundown . . . Tattoo at 2030 hours . . . and roll call taken again at about 2100.

Each Sunday, inspection was held before Guard Mount, after which the men were dismissed for the day. Those finding "no pleasure in either reading or writing passed the time by sleeping or in wandering around the reservation." "We are now experiencing the most favorable side of soldiering," one of them wrote in a letter to his family.

Don't you agree . . . that despite the fact that gold lay at their fingertips, Presidio soldiers of the eighties "never had it so good" as we do now?

"THE LIVING IDOL"—In Yucatan, an archaeological party exploring an ancient burial chamber, comes upon the fantastic sculpture of an orange-red jaguar. Upon sight of it, Liliane Montevecchi flees in panic, closely followed by Steve Forest and the professor (James Robertson Justice). The professor, in discussing the girl's strange behavior, theorizes that Juanita (Liliane), of pure Mayan blood, was frightened in her early youth by stories of how girls her age were sacrificed in the burial chamber centuries ago. It was the Jaguar cult, oldest in Mexico, and still deeply feared by the Indians.

When an accidental death occurs in the camp, the girl is convinced she is obsessed. The professor determines to rid the girl of the phobia which holds her. He re-enacts the ancient rite with the use of a real jaguar. In a dramatic climax, the beast is killed, and the girl realizes her fears were groundless.

"HOT ROD" introduces the top driver of the Red Devils, a group of hot-rod teenagers who drive their souped-up jalopies in drag strip races. When one of the boys gets killed in a senseless speeding accident, the leader is blamed, although he was not involved. The club members ostracize him and his girl stops dating him. During the running of the season's prize road race, the mystery surrounding the accident is cleared up. The leader goes on to win the race and his girl too.

"BOY ON A DOLPHIN"—When two sponge divers discover an ancient sunken ship with a peculiar masthead off the coast of Greece, and attempt to sell their information to the highest bidder, a suspenseful and intriguing series of events are set in motion. One of the divers (Sophia Loren) is induced to sell her secret to Parmelee (Clifton Webb), an unscrupulous collector, who recognizes the find as the long-lost "Boy on a Dolphin" of Christ's time.

Alan Ladd is also aware of the discovery, and attempts to save the treasure for the American museum. A battle of wits and double-crossing follows, during which Parmelee secures the bronze statue, but is forced to relinquish it when the law and Dr. Calder intervene.

"ABANDON SHIP"—When a luxury liner strikes an old mine in the shark-infested waters of the south Atlantic, the vessel sinks in seven minutes. There are 26 survivors who manage to board the ship's shore-boat, which miraculously escaped damage in the explosion. Ship's officer Holmes (Tyrone Power) as a senior, assumes command of the small boat, which has almost twice as many passengers as the boat was intended to accommodate. The next morning it is obvious to all that the load is imperilling the small craft. Holmes must decide which of the excess number shall be cast adrift in life jackets, in order that the others may live. The fateful decisions are not easily made. Holmes is compelled to enforce his commands at gun point when the crew rebels against his orders. Riding out a tropical storm, Holmes brings his tiny boat into the steamer lanes, where they are picked up by a freighter which has also rescued the passengers he had been forced to cast adrift.

A recent list of Department of the Army overseas vacancies is available at the Civilian Personnel Division, Bldg. 36. Oversea questionnaires, which are available in most sections, are to be completed only if the individual is interested in an oversea assignment.

Entertainment Section Has Special Feel For Show Biz

Entertainers and would-be entertainers have both facilities and encouragement waiting for them at Post Special Services Entertainment Section headquarters, Bldg. 117.

"We just want to create a friendly atmosphere where anyone interested in the entertainment arts will feel free to come," invites Sgt. Roy A. King, Post entertainment NCO.

Known as the Little Theater, Bldg. 117 is equipped with a small stage, spotlights, a tape recorder, some costumes, an accordion, a bass and a wide variety of sheet music.

"We subscribe to Downbeat, Billboard and Theater Arts," says Sergeant King, "and we want anybody interested in the entertainment field to come down, get acquainted and use the facilities."

Part of the job of the Entertainment Section is to put together talent shows for local entertainment. Another project that may be started is a little theater group. Anyone interested in this field is urged to call Sergeant King.

Sergeant King, who has attended Special Services School and toured with Soldier Shows in Korea, is assisted by Sp3 Horace Randolph. Sp3 Randolph has a Bachelor of Music from West Virginia State. He has also played and arranged for San Francisco dance bands and is available for coaching in this field.

Special celebrants will be Sp3 Donald Weller and Sp3 Erlyn C. Krueger, who recently received their promotions to specialist.

The company also plans to erect a complete field camp for display at Fort Scott on Armed Forces Day.

Little Theater

Persons interested in Little Theater work are invited to attend the opening session of the Little Theater Workshop at 1800 hours, 16 May, in Bldg. 117. The workshop is open to civilians as well as military personnel.

Members of the team are front row, l. to r., Gordon Peak, Ciprinjas Garanes, and Catalino Ignacio. Back row, l. to r., are Robert L. Will Represent Army In National Tourney

The Torero volleyball team successfully defended their All-Army title and swept through this year's All-Army Matches without a defeat to win the crown for the second time in as many years and earn the right to represent the Army in the 28th U.S. Volleyball Association National Tournament to be held in Memphis, Tennessee, this week, 8-11 May.

Fifth Army fell before the locals in two straight games, 15-3 and 15-9, in the championship tilt. Opening game of the title series saw the locals jump to a 13-point lead before Fifth Army could break into the scoring column and then go on to cap the game at 15-3.

The second game of the series was a closer contest and Fifth Army managed to come within one point of tying the score at 10-9. The Fifth Army threat came with less than three minutes to play, but the Toreros went on to score five more points without allowing any further scoring from the opposition and won the game 15-9.

Superb teamwork of the local team highlighted their play throughout the tourney and enabled the Toreros to move through the tournament without a single loss. Burt Millard and player-coach Bob Jones led the Presidio attack in the championship game.

The Toreros took the winners' bracket of the double elimination tourney when they downed Fifth Army 15-10, 14-16, and 15-1. The loss to the locals dropped Fifth Army to the losers' bracket where they met Eighth Army for the title of losers' bracket play. Fifth Army downed Eighth Army in two quick games 14-10 and 15-7 to earn the right to meet Sixth Army's Presidio team for the All-Army title.

An additional player from the Eighth Army team, Lt. Gerald Evans, was selected to supplement the Torero squad in the 28th U.S. Volleyball Association National Tournament being played this week. Champion of the national tournament will be decided tomorrow. Last year's All-Army champs from the Presidio went to the national tournament and returned with second place in the tournament, the highest standing ever attained by a service team.

Lab., placed second in the discus and third in the pole vault. Lowell Zellers, 163rd MP Det., placed third in the mile. The All-Comers Meet is not based on a team scoring set-up and consequently there were no official listings of how teams fared.

The eight man squad from the Presidio was composed of Kemp, Zellers, John Arcaro, 16th BPO; Ron Reynoir, Special Services; Bill Ream, 9956 TU, Letterman; Fred Hickey, 549th Engrs.; Charles Wimberly; and Pat Peterson and Jay Gould of Hq. Co., Sixth US Army.

Toreros Win Two And Drop Third To USF

Torero diamond men won two and dropped one game this week in practice games with local collegiate nines. Stanford fell before Torero batsmen, 8-6, Marin College went down 15-5 in a lop-sided game and the University of San Francisco downed the locals 9-6.

The Stanford game saw the locals collect eight runs on as many hits in 31 trips to the plate while the Indians hit 10 times for six runs in 36 trips to the plate. Shinnick was the starting pitcher for the locals, but was replaced by Roger Collins, who was credited with the win. Jim Cummings was the only Torero who got two hits in the contest.

In the Presidio-Marin College rout, John Blackwell scored three runs in five trips to the plate and Rios, centerfielder, had three hits for as many times at bat. Capachi, Torero second baseman, also connected for three hits in six trips to the batters' box. Roger Collins was the winning pitcher in this game also.

The locals distributed their hits evenly throughout the game until the ninth inning when they broke loose with five runs.

Collins, Bilafer and Capachi each connected for two hits apiece in the University of San Francisco game. Collins was the losing pitcher, and Basques performed the mound duties for the USF team.

The locals were at bat 38 times, scored six runs and got nine hits while USF stepped up to the plate 39 times and scored nine runs on eight hits. The score stood at 6-2 in favor of USF in the third inning and 9-2 at the bottom of the eighth inning. A scoring splurge that netted four runs for the Presidio in the top of the ninth inning put the score at 6-9, but bogged down before the locals could overcome the lead of the USF crew.

Polo Pony Blessing To Highlight AFD

An unusual religious ceremony—the blessing of two teams of polo ponies and their riders—will take place in Golden Gate Park, Sunday 19 May, at approximately 1230 hours.

Planned by Mr. Henry Entermeyer and other staff members of Radio Station KCBS, San Francisco, as a means of honoring Armed Forces Day, the religious ceremony will be conducted by Chaplain Father Robert J. Plocki, of the Presidio.

It is planned to have Chaplain Plocki conveyed to the polo grounds in Golden Gate Park under Metropolitan Police motorcycle escort, to expedite his arrival at the park from completion of the 1130 Mass in the Chapel of Our Lady at the Presidio.

The blessing of the animals and their riders takes place prior to the final game between the Verdier Polo Team and the Crescent Jewelers Team which won the opening game with the San Francisco All-Star Polo Team recently. The second in the three-series game takes place next Sunday, 12 May.

An added highlight of the final event on 19 May is the amateur photography contest comprising two divisions of the polo game series, in which prizes will be awarded by the San Francisco Polo and Riding Club at the end of the polo season. The contest is open to military personnel at the Presidio and the Bay Area generally.

Free entrance to the polo field and the games is accorded to all service personnel and their families, provided the military members are wearing uniform. The courtesy admission is restricted to Sunday 19 May only.

Set Tuesday As B-Day For New Civilian Fund

Blood will flow freely when the first Presidio Civilian Blood Fund Drive gets underway Tuesday, 14 May. Donations will be taken from 0800 to 1500 hours.

Representatives of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will be located in Ward B-2, Bldg. 1023 on Girard Road and Lincoln Boulevard, opposite the Letterman Army Hospital parking area. A Letterman doctor will be on duty.

Persons interested in building up the civilian blood fund can contact their section blood representatives or members of the Fund committee at Ext. 2383.

"Our goal is 150 donors," Mr. Les Scanlon, Civilian Personnel Officer and Fund chairman, said. "We hope to get even more because the Fund is a wonderful idea for civilian employees and their dependents."

Persons between the ages of 18 and 60 are eligible to donate; however minors must have the written permission of a parent or legal guardian. Donors are cautioned not to eat four hours before giving blood. Fruit juices, black coffee or tea are recommended before donations.

The fund not only will assure all civilian employees of a blood reserve in emergencies, but also will save fund users the usual $25 fee for replacing one pint of blood. Employees will have to pay processing costs only.

Code Of Conduct Posters Readied For Field Issue

Washington (ANS)—A series of Department of Defense posters illustrating the six points of the Code of Conduct are currently being distributed to all Army units in the field.

Several months ago, The American Society of Illustrators was invited by DOD to interpret the Code's six points that embody the high standards governing the U. S. fighting man's conduct.

From more than 200 sketches submitted by nationally known artists depicting the timeless quality of the Code, the Defense Advisory Committee on Prisoners of War selected those which best expressed its meaning. The selected illustrations portray the high standards of devotion to country that American servicemen have held since 1775.

This series (Department of the Army Posters 21-100-1 through 6) may be requisitioned by units through normal Adjutant General channels.

Deadline Nears For Wear Of Army's New Uniforms

New uniform requirements in effect for officers and warrant officers this month include the wearing of the green cap, black tie and shade 46 shirt, excepting those who are being separated from service through 1 October, 1957.

As of 1 July, 1957, the new Army Green uniform for newly enlisted men and draftees, will be issued, one to each soldier, and one OD uniform, the type of which is now in use.

It will be mandatory for officers and warrant officers to wear the new Army Green uniform off duty on and after 1 October; however, it will be worn optionally by enlisted personnel after the given dates, with the OD uniform still mandatory for military formations.

On 1 October, 1958, the Army Green uniform will become official for all military personnel, consistent with the issuing of two of the same uniforms being issued to enlisted men.

By 1 October, 1960, the OD uniform presently in use will become obsolete for all officer and enlisted personnel.

A Civil Service employee for four years, Miss Jackson has been with the section since last August.

Bicarb Banquet?

Scouts To Serve For Mother's Day

A Mother's Day Dinner for Explorer Mothers is being presented by the members of Explorer Post 77, Presidio Boy Scouts, on 11 May, 1800 hours, at the Scout House, MacArthur Boulevard.

The boys planned the dinner for the day before the national celebration of the event, so that it would not conflict with family plans on the 12th of May.

As a special mark of honor to the mothers, dinner is being cooked by the explorers' dads and served by the boys.

Supervised by their advisor, Sgt. Robert J. Reilly, the Explorers are to have a Court of Awards ceremony after the dinner, during which seven boys will receive their apprentice awards from the mothers present.

30th Engineer Group In Annual Training Test

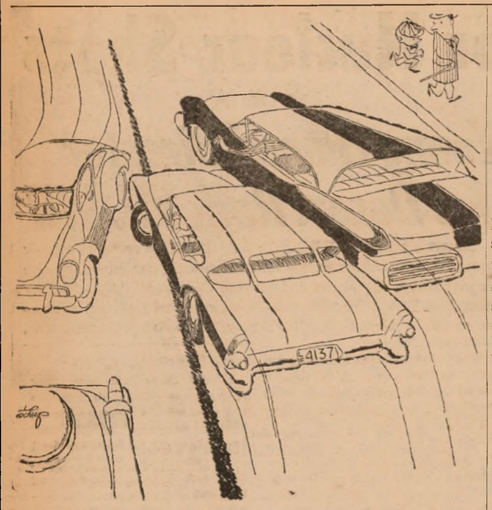
Test evaluating the ability of units to perform their mission under simulated battle conditions was conducted by the 30th Engineer Group this week. The test ran from 1500 hours, 6 May, to 1700 hours, 8 May.



The problem was built around an atomic bomb supposedly dropped by enemy forces in the vicinity of Treasure Island. Simulated radiation was present in the 99th Engineer Company's area. The men performed all necessary decontamination procedures and then returned the plant to standard operations.

The 171st Engineer Detachment underwent the maneuvers with the 99th. The aggressor team was furnished by the 21st Engineer Co.

Strict combat conditions prevailed during the test and the men worked with their weapons within easy reach. Each man carried a helmet, gas mask and cartridge belt. Work was assigned to the groups by testing officers.

In addition to the harrassment furnished by the aggressors, the men encountered high humidity built up in the plant from atmospheric conditions outside coupled with closed windows because of blackout security.

. . . fellow travelers

Meet Whipsaw Wilfred. He's the duck in duck out dastard whose mission in life is to destroy your confidence in your fellow drivers. Wilfred is the quick-signal boy who drives an acre of car with an inch of mind. He's a scientist of first water with the unique theory that each car carries its own space. In other words, move and the space moves with you. The other guy? Wilfred never heard of him. His only comment on the frequent cases of bent fenders, horrified shrieks and squealing brakes—"Where'd he come from?" Wilfred's pet hate is women drivers. "Not only are they slow, but they're cautious. Besides that, you never know what they're gonna do. Why I cut in front of one one day, with inches to spare, and she ran right into me!" Of course Wilfred could meet the same fate as one of his brothers in arms did recently. Seems a big ex-pug became incensed at being almost forced off a cliff while traveling sedately in his own lane. He ran the offender down, forced him to the curb and proceeded blithely to rearrange his features. Later the judge ruled the action "self defense." It should happen to Wilfred!

Test Pattern To Guide Future PX Credit Plan

Servicemen may be able to buy on credit in exchanges next year, if a new plan testing the idea proves successful. The one-year test of adding credit to the exchange system begins 1 June at two Air Force bases.

If credit is adopted, it would bring to an end a 16-year period in which service personnel could get credit almost anywhere in the nation except in their own service stores.

The test will be conducted at March AFB, Calif., and Wright Patterson AFB, Ohio. The exchanges now extend credit on uniforms and uniform accessories, shoes and insignia to officers, warrant officers and first three graders. This plan has been in effect since February 1956.

The test probably will include both a 30-day charge account based on $5 minimum sales and an extended deferred payment plan covering a six-month period. The latter plan means that a man receiving $300 credit would pay it off in equal installments of $50 a month for six months. Charge accounts would be paid monthly. No interest will be charged.

Sergeant Otto, who has been with the 46th since January, recently returned from an 8300-mile trip around the Sixth Army area as part of a three-man team instructing Reserve components in ordnance materiel just declassified. In the future the team will handle inspection duties as they arise.

Assigned to the automotive maintenance section, Sergeant Otto served as a senior instructor in wheel vehicle mechanics at Fort Ord for five years. The course, now designated the Mechanics Helper Course, was the Wheel Vehicle Mechanics Course at that time.

Army Instructor, Sfc. Robert C. Otto, explains the mechanics required for a maintenance inspector to Pfc. Ervin Hindrickson, Cpl. Forrest Dane and Pvt. Alfonso Thompson. Sergeant Otto, now an instructor in the new ordnance materiel and assigned to the 46th Ordnance automotive maintenance section, spent five years at Fort Ord as a wheel vehicle mechanics instructor.

Sergeant Otto served in the Navy from 1941 to 1945; upon his discharge he was a First Class Motor Machinists Mate, which is the equivalent to a Sergeant First Class. As a civilian he worked as a machinist at Mare Island and a heavy repairman at Ford Motor Company.

In 1948 Sergeant Otto joined the Army and was sent to Leadership School. His overseas assignments include depot motor officer and assistant maintenance officer in France, and battalion motor sergeant in Germany.

Sergeant Otto, who has served about 13 years, plans to continue his Army career as an instructor in the field he most enjoys.

Liberty's Legacies

Czech Pvt. Sought America's Freedom

On a dark night in 1952, Private Vladimir Dostal broke away from an excursion group in South Moravia, Czechoslovakia, swam the river Dyje, traveled 80 miles through Russian-occupied Austria and arrived in the French section of Vienna to become one of the thousands of refugees who each year escape from behind the Iron Curtain.

Born in Czechoslovakia in 1931, Vladimir remembers the Nazis marching into his country when he was eight years old. The Nazis were there for six years until they were overthrown by an internal revolution in May, 1945. Vladimir attended elementary school under the occupation and finished high school in 1946.

"From 1945 to 1948 we were relatively free, so I studied civil engineering at a technical college," Vladimir recalled. In January, 1948, the Communists took control of the country through a parliamentary revolution. Vladimir completed the course in 1950.

"Many young people turned anti-Communist and although I wanted to attend graduate school, I couldn't because I had the 'wrong attitude.'" Vladimir continued. "This plus my listening to Radio Free Europe played a large part in my decision to escape."

He Sought Freedom
Pvt. Vladimir Dostal

Vladimir was working for an engineering company when his opportunity to escape came. The company was on a job in South Moravia, near the Austrian border, when the private started on his perilous journey.

When he arrived in Vienna, Vladimir was imprisoned by Austrian police for three days. After his release he reported to the American Refugee Office where he was interrogated and then sent to a displaced persons' camp in Wels, Austria. Three and a half months later Private Dostal went to Innsbruck where he did graduate work in math and physics at the University for three years. In 1955 he emigrated to the United States under the Refugee Relief Act.

In the United States, Vladimir first worked on a farm in Minnesota, then for the Minnesota Highway Department and was with the Anaconda Copper Corporation when he entered the service last September.

"I came to America to get free again," Vladimir said. "In Czechoslovakia my chances for study and advancement were suppressed because of my feelings and attitudes. In America progress depends on knowledge and ability, not political attitude."

Honor Guard Winner Of Softball Tourney

Co. A, USA Garrison, emerged as the champion of the pre-season softball tournament when they downed LAH for the title early this week. Co. A, also known as the Honor Guard, came from a 3-1 deficit in the third inning to win the game 12-3.

LAH broke the ice when they scored one run in the first inning. There were no runs in the second inning and the Honor Guard brought in their first run in the top of the third inning, but LAH came back in the bottom of the same inning with two more runs to put the score at 3-1 in their favor.

The fourth inning was also a scoreless one, but the Honor Guard broke loose in the top of the fifth inning with a flurry of runs to put the score at 8-3 in their favor. LAH never recovered from the shock and failed to manage to score after the third inning while the Honor Guard was picking up four more scores in the sixth inning.

Jones, Honor Guard leftfielder, and Ed Johnson, Honor Guard pitcher, each had three hits in five trips to the plate. The Honor Guard collected 18 hits in 38 trips to the batter's box while allowing only 4 hits in 27 trips to the plate for LAH. Ed Johnson struck out five LAH batters, hit one double and batted in three runs in five trips to the plate.

Winner of the pre-season tourney will receive a trophy. Intramural softball play will get under way Monday and continue through the summer.

Trophy Presentation, by Capt. Alfred Brazeal, Commanding Officer of 16th Base Post Office, to Ralph Yoshida, who won the trophy as the champion of the lightweight division of the Pacific Coast Weight-Lifting Championships held at Vallejo, California, last week.

Pacific Coast Title Won By Yoshida, Post Weight-Lifter

Yoshida, who has annexed such titles as the Territorial Championship of Hawaii, Pennsylvania State Title, the All-Alaska Title and placed first in his weight division in the U.S. Olympic Trials, took the Pacific Coast title with a 210-pound press, 210-pound snatch and a 280-pound clean and jerk for a 700-pound total. Lifters are not judged solely on the total poundage of the three types of lifts, but also on the style and technique of their lifts.

Ralph confided that he lifted only enough weight to beat his nearest competitor so that he could be more certain of his form. He has exceeded his meet total by 40 pounds while working out with the weights in practice sessions.

Winning the coast title qualified Ralph for the Junior National Championships, to be held in El Paso, Texas, 17 and 18 May. The Junior Nationals are held for the individuals who have not won a national title. A win at the junior events will qualify him for the Senior National Championships, to be held in Miami, Florida, on June 23-24.

The Triple Aces and 30th AAA were the only teams to battle to a 2-2 split in the first game of the new league. F. Potter topped the 30th crew with 557 and 192 while McFadin and Salisbury rolled 543-186 and 512-213 respectively for the Triple Aces.

In the Presidio League, the Keystone Kops walloped the Radicals 4-0 to hang onto the lead spot in the near completed winter league. Ed Johnson led the Kops with 607-206 and Edward Wolfman was high man for the Radicals with 484-182. Hq. Co. 6A whitewashed the Sneakers 4-0 with Robert Wilmoth leading the way with 609-205 and Ed Kiersztian topping the losers with 534-200.

The Hilltoppers also jumped the King Pins and took a 4-0 decision from them. George Iwai was high man for the winners with 560-202 and Arthur Palmeris topped the King Pins with 514-187. Glenn Bolton's 609-220 was the top effort of the Hardnoses, while they were taking a 3-1 decision from the Dental Clinic. Theo Rolla was high man for the Dental Clinic with 492 and 199.

Defense Transportation Due Presidio Celebration

Local transportation officers and civilians will observe National Defense Transportation Day next Friday, 17 May. The day was set aside to honor military-commercial transportation teamship by the U.S. Congress.

Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, and other service dignitaries have been invited to the dinner which will highlight the local celebration. More than 300 persons are expected to attend.

"The duty of the Sixth United States Army to provide for the movement of men and materiel through the West Coast ports of our nation owes its successful accomplishment in large part to the working partnership of our military transportation units and the commercial organizations that constitute the National Defense Transportation Association. Here at the Presidio of San Francisco we can bear witness to the effectiveness of that partnership in the San Francisco Bay Area. It is an effectiveness based upon enterprising cooperation and skilled performance motivated by individual and personal dedication to the national interest. It is therefore with much pleasure that I send greetings and congratulations to the membership of the San Francisco Bay Area Chapter of the National Defense Transportation Association on this day of celebration: National Defense Transportation Day, 17 May, 1957."

Guest Speaker
Admiral A. G. Cook

Rear Admiral A. G. Cook (USN Ret.), Director of the San Francisco Disaster Council and Corps, will be the principal speaker at the dinner. Admiral Cook, who has headed the city's emergency organization since 1950, will discuss emergency transportation.

The dinner, sponsored by the San Francisco Bay Area Chapter of the National Defense Transportation Association, is scheduled Thursday at the Presidio Officers' Club. Col. Calvin Whittle, Sixth Army Transportation Officer, assisted by Lt. Col. Robert G. Youngblood, coordinated the dinner plans.

New Medicare Rule Would Give Aid To Non-Residents

Washington (AFPS)—Dependent parents and parents-in-law who actually do not reside with members of the Armed Forces have been declared eligible for medical attention at service hospitals.

Prior to a recent interpretation of the Dependents' Medical Care Act, a dependent parent was required to live in the household of the service sponsor to receive treatment at government expense.

Under the new ruling, according to the Defense Department, if a serviceman or a retired member of the Armed Forces provides or maintains a place of residence for his dependent father or mother, regardless of its location, they may receive medical care at service facilities.

The Defense Department emphasizes, however, that these dependents do not qualify for treatment in civilian hospitals or by civilian physicians under the Dependents' Medical Care Program.

Former Post Dentist Will Lecture Here This Afternoon

Dr. James Vernetti, former Post dentist, will lecture to members of the Post Dental Clinic today. Dr. Vernetti will discuss the methods for efficient operation of a dental office and its many advantages in the proper use of dental assistants.

While on duty with the local section in 1954 and 1955, Dr. Vernetti was among the original organizers of Little League baseball on Post.

Dr. Vernetti was Chief of the Crown and Bridge Department of the Post Dental Section and Secretary of the National Academy of Gold Foil Operators. The doctor now resides in Coronado, California.

New Assignment

Lieutenant Colonel Willett Ware, Jr., has been appointed Deputy Employment Policy Officer for Post and Sixth Army. He is located in Room 106, Bldg. 220.

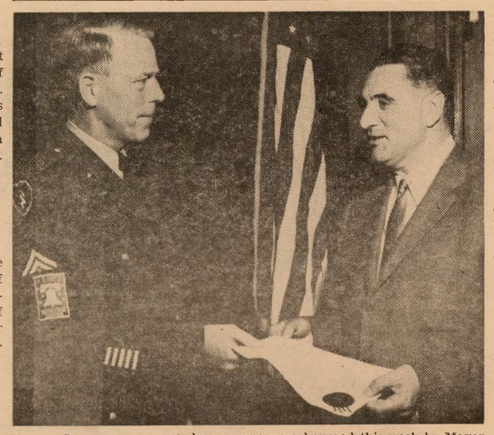
Medicare Chief Cautions Troops On Non-Eligibles

Washington (ANS) — The Executive Director of Medicare Major General Paul I. Robinson has announced that "too many non-eligible dependents are seeking care under the Dependents Medical Care Program."

"I want to re-emphasize," he said, "that the only dependents eligible for care in civilian facilities under the program are the wives, children and dependent husbands of uniformed personnel on active duty."

Eligible dependents of retired personnel, as well as dependent parents and parents-in-law of uniformed personnel, are authorized care in service hospitals only. Too often, they have submitted to treatment in civilian facilities and later find that they must pay the physician and the hospital bills themselves.

According to General Robinson, dependents seeking care they are not authorized, results in a hardship to the dependents themselves, and also adds to the administrative burdens of the program.



New Com-System Affords Instant Combat Control

A new vehicle-mounted Army communications system which will give commanders instant control over dispersed tactical support elements, has been developed, according to a Department of the Army announcement.

Called the Tactical Support Center, the system allows a field army commander to weld his highly mobile support forces into a coordinated, powerpacked team.

Two TSC's designed and built by the U.S. Army Signal Engineering Laboratories at Fort Monmouth, N. J., were tested recently under field conditions by the XVIII Airborne Corps in the King Cole Maneuvers at Fort Polk, La.

The need for such centers grew out of the complex nature and rapid movement of modern warfare. Problems of liaison between such tactical support elements as artillery, electronic warfare, tactical air support and antiaircraft are becoming much more complicated than in World War II or the Korean fighting.

Army Recruiters and their service were honored this week by Mayor George Christopher, who proclaimed the week "United States Army Recruiting Week." The mayor presented the proclamation to M/Sgt. Vestal V. Nunlist, Recruiting Main Station in Oakland. The presentation was made in conjunction with the filming of the San Francisco and Presidio sequence of "The Big Picture."

New Enlistees May Qualify For Top Electronic Schools

Washington (ANS)—The Army has announced that newly enlisted personnel with high electronic aptitude area scores may expect to be selected for assignment to a service school that offers training in this complex field.

Because of an existing requirement for enlisted assignments in the Electronic Occupational Area, reception stations and training activities have been alerted to screen and earmark qualified personnel for certain Ordnance, Signal and Armed Forces Special Weapons Project courses.

Incoming individuals qualify for possible Electronic Occupational Area assignment by scoring 120 or higher in Aptitude Area EL. They are also eligible if they have a background of study at a school specializing in electronics and an Aptitude Area EL score of between 100 and 119.

Individuals with hobbies or avocations in radio or television repair that involve more than routine connection of assembled components will also be considered.

Department of the Army Circular 611-3 also states that personnel who have an expressed interest in electrical or electronic equipment maintenance training and have high school diplomas or equivalent are eligible, providing their Aptitude Area EL score is 100 or over.

Others who may qualify are individuals with recent actual work experience in electrical, electromechanical, or electronic equipment maintenance or repair, the Army said.

Top DA Team Will Display CBR Progress

A four-man Department of the Army orientation team will address major commanders and key staff officers in the Sixth Army area on the latest developments in chemical, biological and radiological warfare materiel and doctrine this morning. The orientation is scheduled from 0830 to 1200 hours at the Post Theater.

The team is composed of Brig. Gen. J. H. Rothchild, Deputy Chief Chemical Officer for Research and Development; Col. Fred W. Ludecke, Chemical Corps Board and former Sixth Army Chemical Officer; Col. J. J. Hayes, former commander of the Biological Laboratories at Camp Detrich, Maryland; and Maj. R. H. Berger, Chemical Corps Board.

About 75 officers from other Sixth Army installations are expected to attend.

New Chief Nurse
Lt. Col. McCommons

Maley To Brooke Medical Center At Sam Houston

Lieutenant Colonel Daisy M. McCommons, Army Nurse Corps, has arrived at the Presidio to take over as Chief Nurse in the Sixth Army area. She succeeds Col. Agnes M. Maley, who leaves this week to become Chief of the Nursing Service at Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston.

Colonel McCommons, who has been in the Corps for 21 years, recently returned from her assignment as Chief of the Nursing Service at Triplett Army Hospital near Honolulu, T. H.

The colonel's overseas assignments include England and Germany during World War II.

Burglary Week Ends

Burglary Prevention Week closes its vigil at the Presidio and sub-Posts tomorrow. In observance of the date — 5-11 May — the Sixth Army and the Post Provost Marshal Sections distributed instructions to household and property owners on safety measures to discourage thefts in any form.

Young Named Director For Desert Rock VII, VIII

Exercises DESERT ROCK VII AND VIII, a series of atomic weapons training exercises and troop tests conducted by the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps will begin 15 May near Las Vegas, Nevada, the Department of Defense has announced. Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, is exercise director.

The Armed Forces exercises are part of Operation Plumbob, a series of low-yield nuclear tests conducted by the Atomic Energy Commission. Similar tests were conducted about two years ago.

Some 2100 Sixth Army troops from the entire eight-state area will participate in separate Army tests and atomic weapons training exercises. In addition some 1500 officers and men from Sixth Army units will play supporting roles in the Desert Rock activities, and others will be at the site as observers.

The "shots" in which Army personnel, including Reserve components, will take part tentatively are scheduled to be fired on 15 June, 27 June, 9 July, 25 July and 19 August.

The exercises are designed to develop tactical concepts and techniques relating to atomic warfare and to familiarize personnel with atomic battlefields.

Troops from this and other Army areas will act as a station complement to Camp Desert Rock in handling the additional facilities such as messing and communications. Brig. Gen. Walter A. Jensen, Commanding General of Camp Irwin, is deputy exercise director.

General Young, accompanied by 11 headquarters officers, is inspecting the Desert Rock preparations this week. Officers making the trip are Col. Harold A. Davenport, Col. Calvin A. L. Dickey, Col. Robert Erlenkotter, Col. Robert A. Matter, Col. Arthur C. Timboe, Col. Henry W. Daine, Lt. Col. Paul R. Cinq-Mars, Lt. Col. Howard L. Cornutt, Lt. Col. Clarence Ennis, Lt. Col. Kenneth A. Hunt and Capt. Thomas Austin.

About 2500 Marines will participate in a combined air-ground exercise in the 25 June shot.

New ID Card ToDependents On 1st July

A new identification card for Military Dependents (DD Form 1173) will become effective 1 July, according to a Post Headquarters announcement.

The card replaces the privilege identification card (DA 899) and the Military Dependent identification card (DD 720).

The card covers the use of exchanges, commissaries, medical care and theater admission. The only identification to be issued to dependents, the cards will be given to each eligible dependent over 10 years old.

Applications for the card must be turned into the PID Branch by unit commanders before 15 May.

Taylor on Television

General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, will make two television appearances this Sunday on Meet the Press at 1500 hours and on Wide Wide World at 1600 hours. Both programs are scheduled for viewing over Channel 5.

Engineer Unit Due In Alaska

Eight men from the 21st Engineer Company, 30th Engineer Group, will leave for Alaska this week to continue and possibly conclude an aerial photography project started by the Group in 1950.

The party, headed by CWO Ralph B. Gordner, includes M/Sgt. Edward Zykowski, Sp2 Harold Davis, Sp3 John Growman, Sp3 Kenneth Barger, Pvt. Gordon Downey, Pvt. James Green and Pvt. Robert Warren.

Most of the group will fly from McChord Air Force Base in Washington to Elmendorf Air Force Base at Anchorage.

Nuclear Tests take the spotlight again next week when the Army Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps participate in a series of low-yield atomic tests. Scheduled to begin on 15 May, the tests will be held at the Atomic Energy Commission's Nevada site.

T44 Will Replace Standard Weapons In New System

Plans for a new small arms weapons system for combat forces have been completed with the adoption of a new standard rifle, according to Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker. The rifle will replace four current U.S. Army shoulder weapons.

The rifle, along with the recently adopted M60 general purpose machine gun, will fire the 7.62 mm. NATO cartridge. Appropriations to produce the rifle, presently manufactured for testing purposes only, are expected to be included in the FY 1959 budget. The rifle is scheduled for issue to troops in 1960.

Known during the testing period as the T44, the rifle eventually will replace the standard M1 (Garand); the Browning Automatic Rifle, known as the BAR since World War I; the Caliber 30 carbine; and the M3 submachine gun. The T44, which is capable of both fully automatic fire or semiautomatic fire, was developed by the U.S. Army Ordnance at Springfield Armory.

The new small arms weapons system offers forward infantry units greater firepower with a better and lighter rifle and lighter machine gun, while cutting the number of weapons in the system from seven to two. It also cuts field logistics loads, institutes the standard NATO cartridge, simplifies handling and maintenance problems and reduces training time for the combat soldier.

Defense Secretary Says Pay Raise Questionable

Washington (AFPS)—Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson says he does not intend to throw the Cordiner Committee recommendations "overboard."

Despite the fact that proposed pay legislation based on the study has failed to clear the Bureau of the Budget, he said he is trying to "understand the temper" of what can be done during this session of Congress.

Mr. Wilson conceded to newsmen at his latest press conference that he is not as optimistic about getting a pay bill enacted this year as he had been previously.

"How much we can do without increasing the budget is the question," he explained.

But, he said, "I am still working to see how much" of the Cordiner plan "can be implemented this year"—and how much can be introduced in 1958.

The Department of Defense is trying to "pinpoint" what should be done to solve all the manpower problems, he added.

Mr. Wilson said obviously the entire Cordiner proposal to revamp the military pay structure could not be implemented without "seemingly" giving everyone in the service a wage increase, which would be considered inflationary.

The Director of the Budget made no recommendations in turning down new pay legislation, he said.

"That is not his department," Mr. Wilson declared.

EMs May Wear New Whites For Off-Duty

Enlisted men have been authorized to buy and wear the white uniform for off-duty summer dress, according to an order signed this week by Chief of Staff, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor. The order to wear whites is effective immediately or with the beginning of the summer uniform season, whichever is later.

Wear of the white uniform is voluntary and parallels the wear of blues for dress by enlisted men.

The white uniform is similar to that worn by officers except that the cap chin strap is black leather, the background for insignia of rank is white, sleeve braid will be left off and stripes are gold.

AFD Celebration Set; Large Crowd Expected

The rising Armed Forces Day fever will reach a peak next Saturday, 18 May, when displays, open houses, tours, demonstrations and a parade take over the Presidio and its subposts. The Presidio Open House is scheduled from 0900 to 1630 hours, and the parade at 1645 hours.

Leading the list of service spectaculars will be 45-minute tours of Nike Guided Missile sites. The tours will begin at 0915 hours.

A 16-page color edition of the Star Presidian will be distributed at the sites and the main Presidio gates. As in the past the issue will be a souvenir edition honoring Armed Forces Day and the services.

Helicopter and flame throwing demonstrations will highlight the Crissy Field activities. The Coast Guard will lead off the "whirly bird" shows at both 1000 hours and 1500 hours; the Army's helicopter demonstrations will follow both times. Post Chemical will stage flame thrower shows at 1030 and 1500 hours.

Shuttle bus service will be provided from the parade ground to Crissy Field at 0930 and 1430 hours; and from the field to the parade ground for the parade at 1600 hours. Bus service also will be available from the parade ground to 30th Engineer Headquarters via Harmon Armory. These buses will run from 1000 to 1630 hours.

Several mess halls will be open to the public from 1100 to 1300 hours. Meals will be 55 cents for adults and 30 cents for children under 12.

The committee has announced that all exhibits and demonstrations will be held on Sunday, 19 May, in case of bad weather.

Born In Combat, Sixth U.S. Army Still Growing

Born a product of war 14 years ago, the Sixth U. S. Army today is the symbol of peace and security to the eight Western states.

It was in 1943 when General Douglas MacArthur, then Commander-in-Chief, Southwest Pacific, requested additional forces to spearhead his return to the Philippines. The Sixth U. S. Army was activated to fill his request and just 90 days after its activation, General Walter Kreuger, the first Sixth U. S. Army Commander, and his troops were at Milne Bay, New Guinea.

This was the beginning of a praiseworthy record which included 15 amphibious operations and 22 major assault landings in the Philippines.

After its victory in the Philippines, the Sixth U. S. Army turned the islands over to the Eighth U. S. Army and began training for "Operation Olympic," the invasion of the Japanese home islands. A few weeks before the scheduled invasion, the atomic bomb forced the Japanese into an unconditional surrender and the Sixth U. S. Army became the first American occupation force to land on the islands.

After four months of occupation duty the Sixth U. S. Army was inactivated on 28 January, 1946, and General Kreuger and the members of his staff returned to the United States. On 1 March of the same year, the Sixth U. S. Army was reactivated at the Presidio under the command of General Joseph W. Stillwell.

Since General Stillwell's death in October, 1946, Sixth U. S. Army commanders have been General Mark W. Clark, General Albert C. Wedemeyer, Lieutenant General Joseph M. Swing, whose 11th Airborne Division was part of the wartime Sixth U. S. Army, General Willard G. Wyman, and its present commander, Lieutenant General Robert N. Young.

Dwight D. Eisenhower:

"This is the day, set aside for the past eight years, to salute our fellow citizens serving in the Armed Forces of the United States.

"We have provided our military personnel with the finest equipment and training in the world, but it is equally essential for them to know they have our respect and appreciation.

"It is a privilege to join in honoring them and I urge all citizens, wherever the limits of time and distance permit, to take part in the observance of Armed Forces Day.

"By arms, by work, and by spirit, it is the responsibility of each citizen to help in the defense of the national community."

A Field Shower with varied types of fixtures and a modern mess hall and Army kitchen done in plastic, will complete the Training Aids display on the parade ground.

Army's Vital Acres Top Community Asset

More than 56 million dollars is added to the Bay Area economy by the Presidio of San Francisco each year. An additional five million dollars is spent by retired personnel attracted to this area by the Army facilities housed at the Presidio.

Some 2,900 military and 3,200 civilian personnel are employed at the Presidio, which houses 11 active Army units. Their pay rolls will total about 60 million dollars during this fiscal year. In addition, about 843 Presidio children are enrolled in San Francisco schools. From $82 to $130 is allotted from Federal funds for each enrollee, a total of about $80,000 a year.

The Sixth United States Army Headquarters, located at the Presidio, controls military operations in the eight Western states, an area which covers nearly one-third of the United States.

The states included in this command are California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Utah and Arizona. Altogether, about 86 Army installations are located in this area, with approximately 66,000 Regular Army military personnel and nearly 11,000 civilian employees.

The headquarters also controls the activities of some 172,000 U. S. Army Reserve personnel, supervises and coordinates the training of about 50,000 National Guard personnel and is responsible for the operation, training and administration of some 25,000 ROTC students in 83 units.

Each evening of the week and over weekends some 21 San Francisco U. S. Army Reserve units train at the Presidio.

On the aesthetic side, the Presidio is part of a 49-mile scenic drive and is visited by thousands of tourists each year. Last year about 3,500 Boy Scouts, Explorer Scouts, school children and college students visited here by invitation from the Army.

Since California joined the Union, the Presidio has been Federal land. The city of San Francisco grew around the seat of the Federal Government in this area.

Forty sets of color guards including the Army, Air Force and Coast Guard will add to the spectacular climax. Additional colors will be carried by the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion. The parade will be reviewed by high ranking officials.

The Coast Guard and Air Force will be represented by one company each. The Air Force representatives are from Hamilton Air Force Base.

Music will be furnished by the Sixth Army Band.

Army Fetes 50th Year In Aviation

The 50th Anniversary of military aviation will be highlighted by the services in 1957 observances of Armed Forces Day, today.

The first chief of the U.S. air arm, established Aug. 1, 1907, was an Army signal officer, Capt. Charles Chandler.

As head of the Signal Corps' Aeronautical Division, Capt. Chandler's responsibilities encompassed all matters concerning "military ballooning and air machines," although there were no flying machines in the Army until a year later.

The first flight from the deck of a Navy ship was made Nov. 14, 1910, by a civilian test pilot named Eugene Ely, who took off from the cruiser Birmingham. Lieutenant Theodore G. Ellyson was designated the first naval aviator.

Marine Corps aviation was inaugurated May 22, 1912, when Lt. Alfred A. Cunningham, a marine, reported to the U. S. Naval Academy for aircraft training.

The Air Force was established as an autonomous service in September 1947.

The separation of the Air Force from the Army was the beginning of a modern concept of unified military command in the U.S., with James Forrestal being sworn in as the first Secretary of Defense on Sept. 17, 1947.

Under his guidance and that of his successors, Louis Johnson, Gen. George C. Marshall, Robert A. Lovett and Charles E. Wilson, the Department of Defense has since directed the administration of the nation's military forces. (AFPS)

Colonel Carl E. Lundquist:

"It is with a great deal of pride and pleasure that I welcome you to the Armed Forces Day Open House at the Presidio.

"Once again our displays, exhibits and general activities are directed towards the theme of 'Power for Peace.' Every effort has been made to demonstrate the key role your Army plays in keeping this nation militarily alert. Our progressive responsibilites in Free World leadership demand imaginative, intelligent and dedicated men and women in the Armed Forces. Such men and women we have, and it is to them that this annual celebration is dedicated.

"On behalf of the military and civilian personnel of the Presidio I welcome you and wish you an informative and enjoyable visit."

Commanding Officer

The Army is the versatile member of the defense team with a flexible system of weapons at its command. While possessing atomic weapons of great power, it retains the ability to vary the application of military force to the needs of the moment, to make "measured" rather than "mass" retaliation.

Reserve WAC'S too turn professional soldier one meeting night each week and perform their duties along with men Reservists. Here members of the 6227 Army Reserve Area Service unit, the School Center for Reservists, handle the paper work necessary to this operation. They include l. to r.: M/Sgt. Anne C. Koch, M/Sgt. Esther Wasserman, Major Bernadetta A. Whitehead and Lt. Hamashige Tatsuko.

Presidio Military District Bolsters Bay Area Economy

More than $6,800,000 is poured into the Northern California economy each year by the Headquarters U.S. Army Military District, California, which administers Army Reserve affairs. Most of the total is spent on payrolls.

Military personnel assigned to the district draw $1,902,385, and civilian employees receive $577,560. Active duty training during the last year cost $1,804,000—this includes military pay for officers and enlisted men of the Reserve and ROTC, and their allowances for travel and uniforms.

College students, whose training is subsidized by the government, received $255,000. The average payroll per month for Reservists who attend weekly or bi-monthly meetings was estimated at $161,796, with 6,950 individuals receiving payments during an average month.

In a national emergency, one of the key offices in mobilization would be the Personnel Management Division, Adjutant General section of the Headquarters. In this office, 80 employees handle about 47,000 sets of records for reservists in Northern California.

The Adjutant General Section, headed by Lt. Col. Dwight C. Brewer, handles all the functions of appointment, assignment, transfer, promotion, retirement, discharge, calls to extended active duty and calls to active duty for short periods of training.

The Personnel Management Division, headed by Major James E. Marks, controls the Reserve Personnel Branch. This branch is divided into the Officer Unit, Enlisted Unit, Active Duty Branch and the Assignment Branch.

Lose Something?

A Lost and Found office will be set up in the Post Provost Marshal Building during the open house hours today. The office will be in Bldg. 106, located at the end of Lincoln Boulevard.

Price Has Gone Up!

The first Conscription Act was passed by Congress in 1865. It applied to all male citizens and foreign-born 25 to 45 years of age. Those who could pay $300 for a substitute were exempted.

Mobile Dental Van Proven $, Time Saver

Men stationed at isolated antiaircraft defense areas are serviced by modern dental facilities on site through a mobile dental van operated by the Post Dental Section. The van started making its rounds last month.

Purchased by the Army for about $192,000, the van can operate either independently or from fixed electrical and water outlets. The 31-foot unit houses modern services such as laboratory, X-ray and a two-chair operating room.

The van is expected to save many man hours at the AAA sites. Lt. Earl Krainik and two technicians travel with the unit.

Nike sites located at Richmond, San Pablo, Rocky Ridge, Lake Chabot, Coyote Hills, Sharp Park and Fort Funston are on the van's schedule. Each site is visited for about two weeks.

Many Famed Generals Interred on Presidio

The San Francisco National Cemetery, located between the Presidio and Fort Scott, has been in use for more than 100 years. Interred in this ground are many officers whose names are closely identified with U.S. history. Some of the more familiar names are those of Generals Hunter Liggett, Irwin McDowell, William R. Shafter, Frederick Funston and Arthur MacArthur. Of some unusual interest is the name of Major Pauline C. Tyler. During the Civil War she was a talented and beautiful actress who appeared under the name of Pauline Cushman. It was in this guise that she became a Union spy and was made a brevet Major after the war had ended.

Radford Says Military Career Is High Calling

"To our minds, military service in defense of our country and the cause of democracy is one of the most honorable professions possible for an American," said Admiral Arthur W. Radford, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in a recent interview advertisement sponsored by a major life insurance company.

The Admiral went on to say that although the primary mission of the Armed Forces is to prevent war, the members also serve the country through construction projects, scientific development and research.

Among the advantages of a career in the Armed Forces listed by Admiral Radford are adventure, physical fitness, comradeship, opportunities to learn and develop skills, medical care and security.

To qualify for a military career, young people must be interested in military matters, loyal to their country, proud of its history and feel a duty to its future, according to the Admiral. In addition, they must be adaptable, get along with others, be leaders, be amenable to discipline; have a quick, agile mind; like adventure; and be in good health.

Admiral Radford advises young people to read everything about the four services before selecting which service to join. Also, they can talk with veterans or persons now on active duty.

Service Clubs Stay Popular With Soldiers

Whether it be on main or sub-posts, large or small, service clubs and their personnel extend welcoming hands to military persons. In the local area, service clubs at the Presidio, Fort Baker and Fort Cronkhite emphasize this purpose.

The Presidio Service Club, which was built nearly eight years ago, overlooks San Francisco Bay and the Presidio. During the past year more than 100,000 persons passed through its doors.

Operated continuously since October 1951, the Fort Baker Service Club serves the men of Fort Baker, Angel Island and other outlying sites.

Stressing an atmosphere of comfort and relaxation, the clubs plan programs and activities to include all tastes and interests. Projects range from dances, stage shows, instruction and creative work to picnics and tours. Individual participation is encouraged through musical instruments, records, reading and indoor game equipment.

Model Plane Contest

A model plane flying contest takes place in the ball park adjacent to the Post Exchange today. First prize winner in the contest will take home $25.00.

Presidio and sub-Post model plane enthusiasts are invited to attend the Armed Forces Day event.

No Mexican Vets

The armed forces boasted 117,000 men in the Mexican War. The last veteran died in 1929 at 98.

Army's Women Soldiers Proud Team Members

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The Presidio has two units of enlisted women assigned here; one which serves the Sixth U. S. Army headquarters and Post headquarters in administrative capacity; the other, a medical detachment assigned to Letterman Army Hospital.

The corps members generally are utilized in nine of the ten occupational fields established to furnish a career pattern which includes Army antiaircraft and artillery static units, electronics, precision maintenance, military crafts, motor, clerical, graphics, general technical and special assignment fields. The women serve in administration, communications, finance, information, machine accounting, supply, medical, food service, security, electronics, coding, and as control tower and Link trainer operators at Army Aviation installations.

At the Presidio, the Wacs are utilized in all phases of administration covering the Command functions. Their preparatory training is accomplished by two methods; attendance at a specialized Army school and on-the-job training which begins after the women have completed their basic training at the U. S. Army Training Center, Fort McClellan, Alabama. Many are college graduates or completed a year or more of college before they entered the Army.

As they progress in their Army careers, the enlisted women are sent to various schools throughout the country to train for the work in which they have shown special aptitudes in scientifically designed tests.

The military schools to which enlisted women have access include Finance, Signal, Adjutant General, Information, Intelligence, Quartermaster, Engineer, Medical, Chemical, and Food Service.

Wac officers come into the Army under a direct commission program which constitutes the major source. Their requirements are a baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university; they must be between the ages of 20 through 32 years, and they must have no dependents or legal responsibility for family members under 18 years. Such individuals are commissioned as second or first lieutenants in the Reserve and are called to active duty for a minimum of two years.

Officers are also drawn from highly-qualified enlisted women between the ages of 20 and 28 years, through the Officer Candidate School program made available to them on the basis of high mental, moral and physical standards. They are assigned in 115 military occupational specialties, in staff and operational commitments at all levels of command and staff in the Army.

Wac officers are also assigned in administrative and training positions within the corps and in charge of Wac detachments.

Officers and enlisted women receive the same pay as their male counterparts and are eligible for the same promotions as Army men through the rank of lieutenant colonel. They receive full medical and dental care and they are included in social security benefits.

Enlisted women are also eligible for retirement pay after a minimum of 20 years' service. Officers, likewise, may retire after 20 to 30 years' service, depending on their age, grade and status.

Presidio servicewomen are drawn either directly from the Army Training Center, or from those returning from the completion of their foreign service tours.

The corps was established during World War II during an acute manpower shortage. Before war's end, more than 150,000 Wacs had served in the United States, Europe, Africa, the Southwest Pacific, China, India, Hawaii, the Philippines, and Alaska. By that time they had proved their merit to the extent that Congress made them a permanent party of the military establishment.

Sixth Army Bagpipe Band Originated By Gen. Clark

The bagpipe is considered a weapon of war not a musical instrument by the British Musician's Union.

It was this quality of the pipes to stir a soldier's heart and ignite him with esprit de corps that prompted General Mark Clark in 1949, when he was Sixth Army Commanding General to call for the creation of the Sixth Army Bagpipe Band.

Today the band includes nine bag pipers, six drummers, a drum major and a pipe major. The band, which spends 80 per cent of its time playing and marching for non-military audiences, travels all over the eight Western states. They play at fairs, football games and schools.

The band was so favorably received at an elementary school in Palo Alto that the children started a bagpipe fan club. "They dig us more than Elvis," said Pipe Major Sgt. Alvin Pierce, who along with his fellow band members spent two hours one afternoon signing autographs.

What about the razzing you must take from persons who liken your kilts to women's skirts, Sergeant Pierce was asked. "Nobody ever makes a wise remark to me," the drum major answered. Sergeant Pierce is six feet, eight inches tall.

The men wear their complete and authentic Highland kilt in the Royal Stewart tartan with a great deal of pride. Since their debut at the Presidio during Armed Forces Day, 1950, they have won more than 70 trophies during various competitions.

The uniform of the pipers today is far more grand than it was during their debut in 1950 when they marched in the Glengarry bonnet, white spats and olive drab trousers and jackets. Today the resplendent uniform glitters with silver ornaments and imitation jewels.

Like the instruments and the music, the uniform has an impressive historical background. Many of the traditional ornaments now worn started as a matter of necessity in the ancient Scottish wars. Silver chains were sometimes used to buy a captured soldier's freedom. The white gaiters are worn in memory of the retreat of Corunna during the Peninsular War when the Highlanders used their skirts to bind their feet after their boots had worn out on the rocky Portugal coast. Silver buttons once paid the burial fee of soldiers slain in battle far from home.

One part of the uniform is traditionally shrouded in mystery. To the question: "What is worn underneath the kilt," Pipe Major Pierce offered this bit of enlightenment, "We are strictly regimental."

Good pipers are hard to come by, and to survive, the band has to teach new members as it goes along. New recruits start by practicing on a chanter, which is similar to the flute part on the bottom of the pipes. Next they carry pipes and learn to march with the band. Finally after nine or ten months they are allowed to play their first music before the public.

Currently the band has only three genuine Scots within its ranks. This includes Pipe Major Sp3 Jack Donaldson and two drummers. Nearly every nationality has been represented in the band, including a Mexican, Italian, Swede, and even an Irishman.

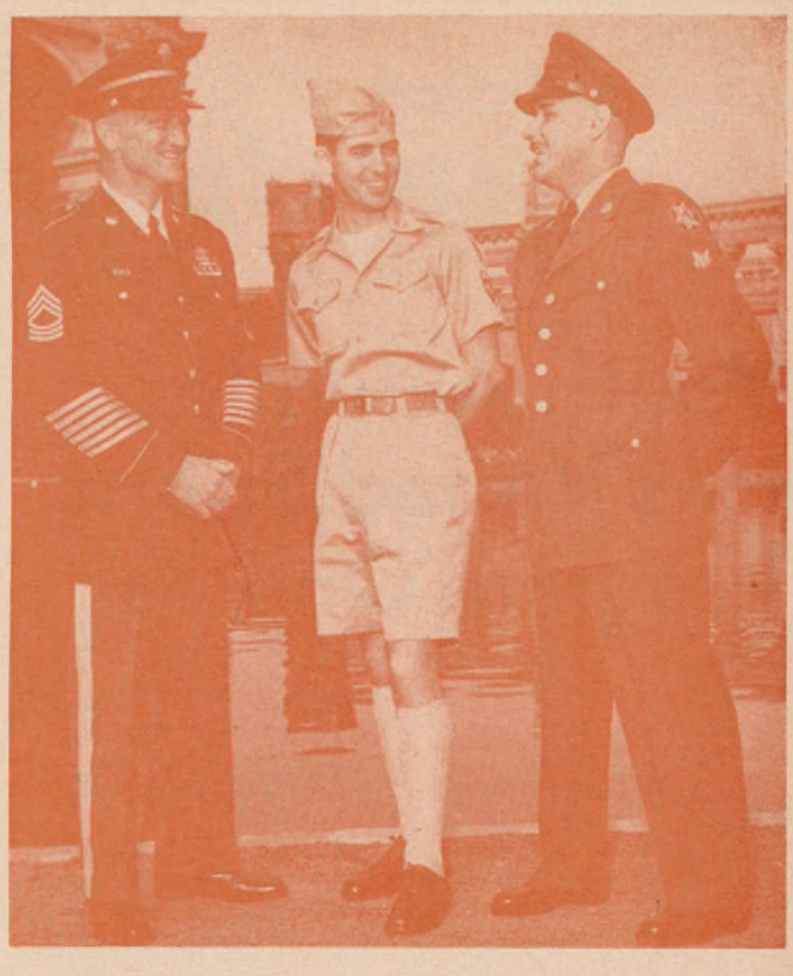
For Tiny Tots

Post Nursery, Kindergarten Top Community Service

The Presidio Pre-School Nursery and Kindergarten operate throughout the year with capacity for 60 students. Minimum age for enrollment is two years and the maximum age is ten years.

Open to the children of military and civilian workers at the Presidio, Fort Mason, and to those of the Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Hospital members on duty throughout the immediate area, the Pre-School Nursery and Kindergarten accommodates from 50 to 55 children daily.



The school's tuition fees, which provide for free milk and crackers twice daily, are payable in advance after receipt of the monthly statement.

Free bus transportation is furnished for the children of parents who have established residence on the Post, for Letterman Hospital personnel, and for the children of those living in Fort Winfield Scott. Children living beyond the limits of the reservation are brought to and from the school by private conveyance.

A medical officer inspects the Pre-Nursery School and Kindergarten once each week. If signs of ill health are noted, the children are either hospitalized or placed under treatment at their homes.

Application for entry to the school is made by contacting the director of the Post School, WEst 1-6111, Ext. 2141. Each child has to have immunization records of smallpox, diptheria, whooping cough and tetanus before they can be admitted.

The school is open from 1200 noon Saturday to 0100 on Sunday mornings; from 0730 to 1300 Sunday—for church attendance, and every Thursday from 2000 to 2300, allowing for social activities planned by parents for that evening.

QM Will Display Uniform

Two displays featuring new uniforms and aerial equipment are being planned by the Post Quartermaster Section as part of the Armed Forces Day parade ground panorama. The displays will be open from 0900 to 1600 hours.

The spotlight will fall on the dress blues and WAC dress and duty uniforms, both summer and winter, in the new uniform show. The dress blues date back to about 1840 and have been brought back recently. All of the uniform changes are being phased into use over the next three years.

All types of QM aerial equipment will be featured in the second display. Parachutes will be emphasized and a demonstration of repairing parachutes on sewing machines will be given.

Honor Guard Marches In A Typical Retreat Parade

Mobile Alert Force Has Many-Faceted Functions

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Any of you who have watched a parade — from Seattle's Seafair to San Francisco's Chinese New Year — may have been struck by the solemn marching perfection of a unit of tall young soldiers wearing white helmet liners and Sixth Army patches on their olive drab uniforms.

These men, known as the Sixth Army Honor Guard, are charged with the responsibility of representing the Commanding General at ceremonies, parades and other civic functions anywhere in the Sixth Army area.

Selected by interview for their poise, coordination and military bearing, these soldiers are recognized by their white helmet liners, white fourragere, sharply pressed olive drab uniforms and dazzling boots.

The primary mission of the Sixth Army Honor Guard, which was organized in 1952, is to stand ready as a mobile alert force capable of functioning as a controlling or tactical arm in case of disaster, fire or civil defense. But they are better known for their secondary mission, fulfilling the ceremonial duties of an Army headquarters and representing the Army in a variety of civic activities.

There are actually three separate units among the 80 men and three officers who make up the Honor Guard. Besides the main marching unit, there is the crack 16-man drill team, the Presidians, and the four-man Color Guard. The three units can march separately or together and each maintains a separate schedule of civic appearances.

The Color Guard, which in past months has appeared at such varied events as the San Francisco St. Patrick's Day Parade, the Washington's Birthday service at Grace Cathedral and a Seal Stadium baseball game, consists of four men, two flag bearers and two flankers.

The main Honor Guard marching unit has recently appeared at the Lodi Grape Festival, the South San Francisco Boy Scout Day Parade and Chinese New Year's parade. In addition, they furnish a daily burial detail for the Golden Gate National Cemetery at San Bruno. Besides the firing squad and the bugler, this detail furnishes pall bearers for the interment of veterans.

But it is the Presidians who are the cream of this outstanding unit. Each member of this 16-man precision drill team must spend approximately six months in training before he is eligible to represent Sixth Army. Dressed in the traditional Honor Guard uniform with the addition of chromed helmets and chromed .03 rifles and bayonets, this unit has accumulated over 75 trophies in its short history.

In the past year the Presidians, who were winners of the 1955 California Open State Field Championship, have drilled at the Hollywood Paladium, the Arizona State Fair and the Seafair celebration in Seattle.

Lt. Nicholas B. Nikas is the commander of this "showpiece" unit.

Youth Activities Has Varied Sports Program On Post

Presidio's sports program is an all-inclusive one that extends to the younger athletes on the post in the form of the Youth Activities and Sports Program.

The Youth Sports Program is designed for military personnel dependents from eight years of age through the late teens, both male and female. As is easily understood, the majority of the sports program is planned during the summer vacation period when it is of the greatest benefit to the largest number of participants.

Summer activities include a Little League, for baseball players from eight through twelve years of age. The Little League is composed of two divisions, the major and minor. The Minor Division is for the eight through ten year olds and the Major Division for the eleven through twelve years olds.

Post winners will compete in the Little League Western Regionals, which includes California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, Western Canada, Arizona, and Utah. Winner of the Western Regionals will go to the national championships to be held in the East in the late summer.

The Pony League, which opens June 1, is for male participants from age thirteen through fifteen. This season marks the second anniversary of the Pony League's birth at the Presidio and its fifth national birthday. The Pony League will include four teams: the Braves, Dodgers, Pirates and Tigers.

A 36-hole golf tournament is scheduled to be run off at the Presidio nine-hole Pitch and Putt Course this summer for the young golfers on post. In addition, there will be a hole-in-one tournament open to male and female participants.

A male softball team, for the older teen-agers, will take part in the post intra-mural softball tournament and games will be played twice weekly. The league opened play the first of this week. The older teen-agers also participate in the post intra-mural football, basketball and volleyball tournaments held throughout the year.

If there are a sufficient number of young ladies interested, there will be a softball tournament organized for their benefit also.

For the mermen and mermaids, the summer program includes organized classes in diving and swimming to be held at Letterman Army Hospital Pool. Dependent upon interest will be formation of teams and team competition.

June, July and August have also been designated as the months for a tennis program. The program will consist of qualified instructors for male and female players and the organization of teams to participate in the double-elimination tournament. For table-tennis players there will be a program set up that is similar to the outdoor tennis tournament.

A Track and Field Day will also be held here at the Presidio during the course of the summer sports program. The program as explained above will be complemented by participation of Presidio teams with teams from nearby Army, Navy and Air Force installations whenever they can be arranged.

Intra-mural Sports For Everyone

Sports activity is open to every individual who desires to participate in the varied sports program offered to him through Special Services Sports Division.

Post level teams, equivalent to collegiate and semi-professional competition, are the senior sports activity at all military installations. Post teams compete for area championships and winners of area titles move on to All-Army tournaments. Winners of All-Army titles represent the Army in All-Service tournaments held annually. Only the major sports are carried to this point. Some of the sports are carried even further, to National Amateur Athletic Union tournament competition.

Affecting a far greater number of athletes, are the intra-mural programs maintained at all military installations. Intra-mural sports are conducted on a unit team level and result in a post championship team. Intra-mural competition extends from football, basketball, baseball, softball, volleyball, tennis, golf and swimming to table tennis, chess and pool tournaments.

The Presidio Special Services Post Athletic Division is in charge of a number of ball fields, equipment, and facilities pertinent to sports activities. Facilities included at the Presidio are three ball fields, one gymnasium, two golf courses, a gymnasium and swimming pool at Letterman Army Hospital Sports Center, plus tennis courts, volleyball courts, handball courts, a nine-hole Pitch and Putt Course and the Presidio Golf Course.

The sports office also maintains a supply of golf clubs, tennis racquets, fishing gear and boats which are available to any individual who desires to check them out.

Hane Wiffs 12 As 740th Axes Parks

With professional form, pitcher George Hane of the 740th AAA Msl. Bn., put his swift right arm to work again as he struck out 12 men, in pitching his way to a seven-hit, 4-2 victory over Parks Air Force Base.

A timely home run by Hubie Brown, player-manager, in the sixth inning with Ronald Ross aboard, provided the margin of victory.

Ed Merritt, the club's leading hitter with a .352 average, didn't play. Rudy Buffin, big first baseman, failed to get a hit in three official at bats and lowered his torrid average from .380 to .333.

Following that game, the 740th had a three-won, three-lost record.

Pony League

Applications to play in the Pony League, boys from 13 through 15 years of age, may be had by contacting George McLaughlin, assistant Sports Director, at Ext. 3968, or by going to Bldg. 122, where the Sports Office is located.

League play will begin 1 June and applications should be filled out now. The league will consist of four teams.

Presidio Dominates Sixth Army Area Sports Competition

The avid interest and participation in the Presidio sports program is attested to by the large number of championship teams developed at the Presidio in the past twelve months alone.

Armed Forces Nationals, Third Place, All-Army Champs, and Sixth Army Champs, thus reads the record of the Presidio volleyball team, who returned to the Post the first of this week from their conquests in the All-Army tourney and National Volleyball Tournament in Memphis, Tenn. This is the second year running that Presidio's volleyballers captured the Sixth Army and All-Army titles. They placed second in the National Volleyball Tournament last season, the highest an Army team had ever accomplished.

Basketball was another sport that the Presidio excelled in this year. The Post team had a season record of 45 wins and three losses, two of the losses being to All-Army Champions, Ft. Dix, New Jersey, and one loss to the Mirror Glazers from Pasadena, California, winners of the Southwestern Invitational Basketball Tournament held in Las Vegas, Nevada. The locals placed second in the All-Army tourney, were Sixth Army Champs, and placed second in the Southwestern Invitational Tourney.

Three members of the Torero basketball team were chosen to play for the All-Army All-Stars that represented the Army in the National AAU Tournament held in Denver, Colorado.

A Presidio boxer slugged his way through Sixth Army opponents and into the All-Army finals where he lost a bout to an illness that prevented him from going any further than the All-Army quarter-finals.

Last season's softball champions of the Sixth Army area were the Torero softball team. Two Presidio trackmen qualified for the All-Army meet by winning their specialties in the Sixth Army Meet and one of them placed second in the All-Army competition.

The combined Presidio-Letterman fencing team has annexed championships and trophies too numerous to mention in detail. Competing in collegiate, athletic club meets and AAU sponsored meets, the fencers have been consistent winners.

A Presidio weight-lifter recently won the Pacific Coast Championship in his weight division and is now competing in the National Junior Events held in El Paso, Texas. This same weight-lifter qualified for a berth on the U. S. Olympic weight-lifting team.

The location of the Presidio is a very advantageous one, in that there are a number of service teams, collegiate teams and athletic club teams with which games and matches can be scheduled in the immediate area. Service teams paired with community teams offer a high calibre of sporting entertainment for military and civilian spectators. All military sports competition is open to civilian spectators free of charge.

AAA Sports Activities Run Under New Set-up

Nearly a year ago a U. S. Army Air Defense Command sports competition program was inaugurated and welfare fund grants provided for more athletic and recreation facilities at sites of Army antiaircraft units.

This meant more and better dayrooms and the construction of multi-purpose athletic courts.

The sports program provided for the establishment of a sports conference, the San Francisco Area Conference, which is made up of units of the 30th Antiaircraft Artillery Group.

Three other conferences were established on the Pacific Coast; one in the Seattle area, the Hanford area and the Los Angeles area.

For the first time, units of the 30th AAA Group were given a chance to compete in athletic contests with other units of the 6th Region, U.S. Army Air Defence Command.

Both intra-conference and inter-conference competition was established in order to determine championships within the conference areas and of the 6th RAADCOM itself. After the program became active enough, competition began on a nation-wide basis with the 1st, 2nd, Central, 4th and 5th Regions competing.

Through this program, all major and minor sports became available to personnel desiring to compete in the many tournaments and meets.

The first in a series of command-sponsored sports tournaments was held in September, at Fort Baker, bringing together softball teams from each of the six regional commands.

In December, at Selfridge Air Force Base, Michigan, competitions were held for the ARADCOM volleyball championship.

Fort Winfield Scott's 752nd AAA Gun Battalion roared unbeaten through the tournament to bring home the second nationwide championship ever won—the first by a West Coast AAA team.

Just last March, the 30th AAA Group again made an outstanding showing when the 740th AAA Missile Bn. swept the 6th RAADCOM basketball championships, and represented the West Coast in the ARADCOM basketball tourney at Fort Devens, Mass.

Through the grants provided, sufficient funds are available to the various Pacific Coast defense areas to enable the 30th AAA Group to construct 18 athletic courts.

Athletic courts will be constructed this summer on land already within the boundaries of the guided missile sites. They are 60 by 120 feet and hard surfaced—suitable for the widest variety of sports: basketball, tennis, volleyball, badminton, etc.

The need for these recreational facilities was most evident in the many isolated units, whose personnel must live within ten minutes of their stations, due to the constant 24-hour alert maintained.

First Blood

One hundred thirteen men of the 30th Antiaircraft Group, led by Colonel Daniel A. Ranney, group commander, and Maj. Raymond E. Siegrist, battalion commander, and assisted by Capt. Jewell Blount, Army Nurse Corps, and the baseball team of the 740th AAA Missile Battalion tossed out the first ball in the blood donation drive at the Presidio of San Francisco.

Fish Need Space

Trout in some streams live, spawn and die without ever growing to legal size. A six-year-old fish, for example, might be only six inches long. Usual reason is lack of living space.

Squirrels can locate buried nuts by scent through more than a foot of snow. Scent and not memory enables the squirrels to find their buried food caches.

Prior to entering the Army, Pfc. Arthur Smith of the 87th Infantry Regiment in Germany, worked as a full-time grounds keeper for the Cleveland Indians.

Nike Best Defense Against Any Sneak Attack

Armed Forces Go Forward During Year

Standing ready along the frontiers of the free world, the U.S. Armed Forces guard the peace as a powerful deterrent to war.

Ever alert to new dangers to the security of the nation and to our allies, America's defense team, in outstanding accomplishments of the past year, has:

ARMY—Reorganized seven divisions to meet the conditions of atomic warfare with plans to streamline all combat elements under the new Pentomic concept.

● Equipped infantry, airborne and armored Pentomic divisions with weapons and rockets artillery having nuclear capabilities.

● Organized the first Redstone missile unit, giving combat forces tremendous new firepower on the expanding modern battlefield.

● Modified Nike installations to fire the more powerful, longer-range Nike-Hercules antiaircraft guided missile using a conventional or atomic warhead.

NAVY — Launched the aircraft carrier Ranger to join her sister supercarriers, the Forrestal and Saratoga.

● Regrouped its air and sea "sub-killer" forces to defend our shores against the danger of attack by guided missile submarines.

● Armed additional fleet units and planes with more lethal anti-aircraft and attack missiles.

● Started new construction on its fleet of atomic submarines, guided missile cruisers and destroyers, and the world's first nuclear-powered cruiser.

MARINES—Adopted the "vertical assault" using helicopter-borne troops in ship-to-shore operations.

● Formed new combat ready air-ground assault teams.

● Added missiles and rockets with atomic capabilities to air and ground attack elements.

● Perfected a revolutionary amphibious concept with the first helicopter assault carrier, the Thetis Bay.

AIR FORCE—Replaced the B-36 in additional Strategic Air Command wings with the B-52 intercontinental jet bomber.

● Organized three squadrons armed with the Matador, a tactical "pilotless" bomber, into a wing in Europe.

● Put the F-102, a new faster-than-sound all-weather interceptor, into operation with the Air Defense Command; assigned the RF-101, a supersonic reconnaissance-fighter, to the Tactical Air Command.

Pipe Band Sked

The Sixth Army Band and Pipe Band will entertain Armed Forces Day visitors with intermittent concerts in the vicinity of the main parade ground. The Pipe Band will play in the morning and the Sixth Army Band from 1100 to 1300 hours.

Blackjack's Visit

Old Trading Post

Thrift Shop Plays Vital Role In Dependent Economy

Thrift is just as much an important factor in the military life as it is in civilian! That is one of the reasons why the Presidio Thrift Shop has been in operation here for the past 22 years.

Originally called The Old Trading Post, the present Thrift Shop was taken over as a community benefit project by the Presidio Woman's Club in 1953. The good deeds accomplished through its operation since would fill a book.

Managed for the past four years by Mrs. Lloyd C. Parsons, wife of a retired Army colonel, the shop has blossomed forth from just a small general supply store to a three-way project of mutual benefit to the customer, to the person submitting an article for sale there, and to the Presidio Youth Activities Council which is the main reason for the shop's existence.

The Thrift Shop is allocated a 15 per cent dividend on each item sold there by the volunteer saleslaadies, all of whom are members of the Presidio Woman's Club.

Major source of income for all the youth projects in this military area, the Thrift Shop is financial parent to the Teenage Club, Little League, Boy and Girl Scouts, Youth Baseball League and to social and religious groups active in youth activities here. The Presidio School Nursery, operated for the benefit of working mothers, is also financially maintained by the operation of the Thrift Shop.

Shopping there is an interesting experience in itself! You are likely to encounter in it the happy goodfellowship of a colonel and a private soldier going over the merits of a second-hand German camera, or a bride discussing with some seasoned housekeeper the good qualities of a bargain-priced refrigerator.

The Thrift Shop is on Montgomery Street and Sheridan Avenue, near the main Post Exchange. It is open from 1100 to 1500 every Monday through Friday.

You are invited to patronize the Thrift Shop, either as a contributor of articles for sale or as a purchaser for your home or your friends.

Bay Area Must Depend On Vital Sites For Protection

Moves faster than the speediest jet aircraft; flies higher than today's best jets; stays unswervingly on the right course to the target; and explodes a deadly warhead to destroy the threatening bomber at the right moment.

This is not the Army's defense dream weapon, but a description of the Nike missile—the deadly weapon that protects the Bay Area from air attack 24 hours a day.

Today visitors will have an opportunity to tour the Army Antiaircraft Nike Guided Missile units located in the San Francisco, Marin County and East Bay areas. The local defense system consists of three Nike battalions and one 90-mm Gun Battalion controlled by the 30th AAA Group at Fort Barry.

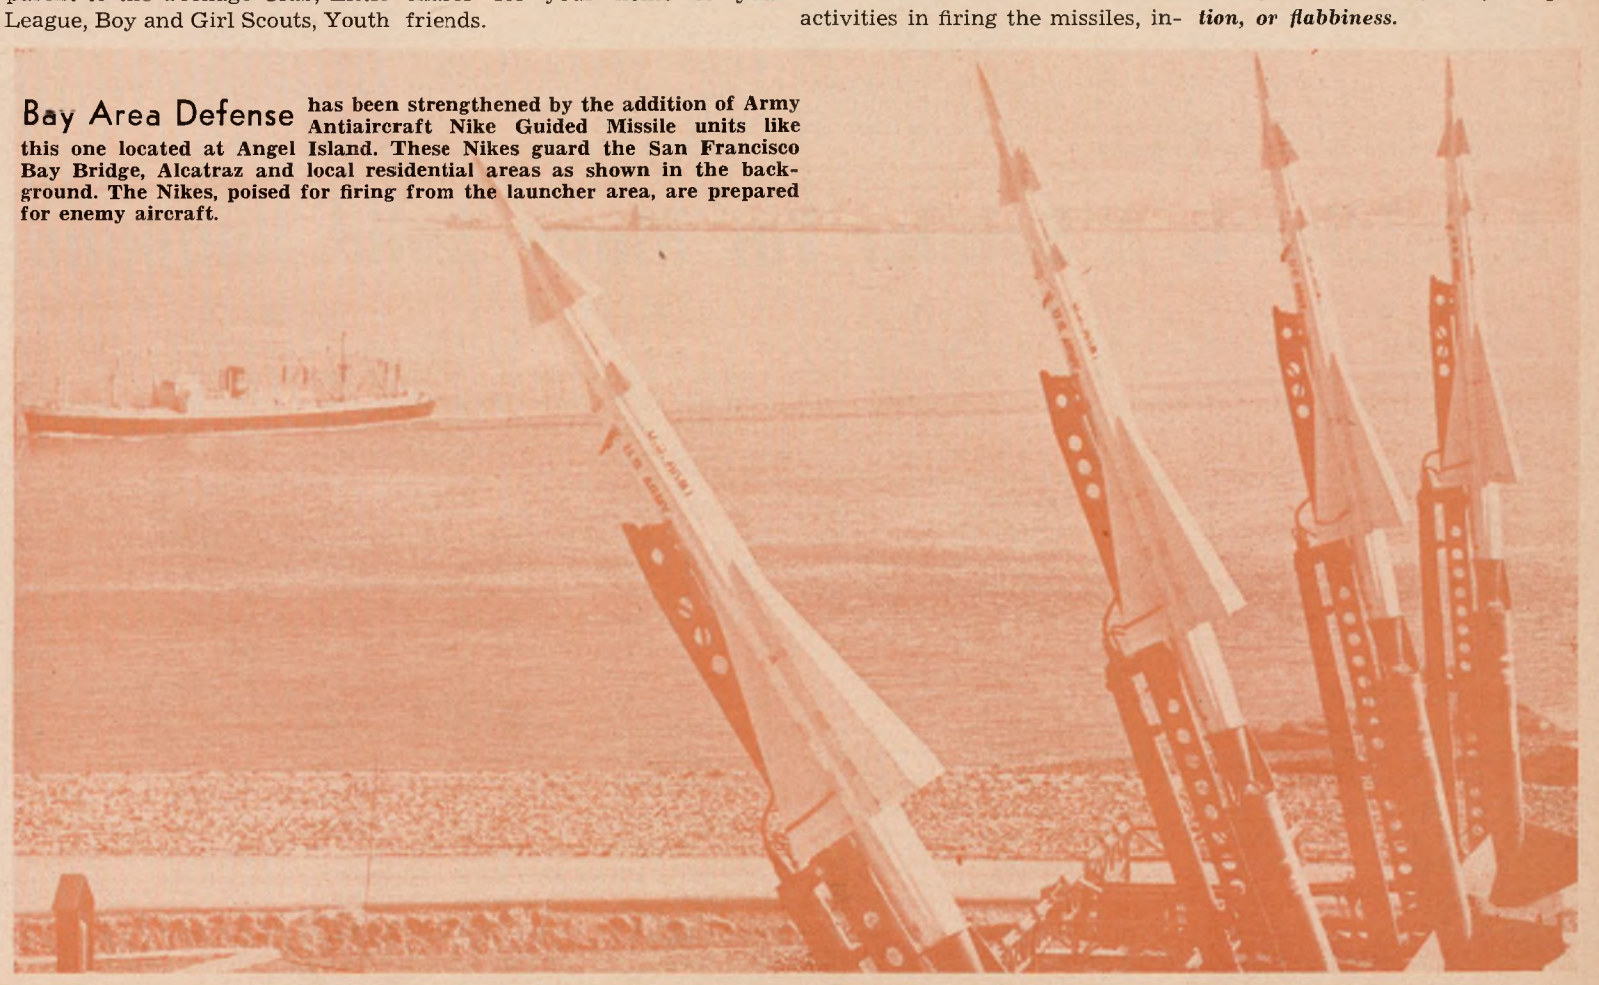
Missile battalions within the 30th AAA Group are the 9th, which includes mainly the Marin County batteries; the 740th, which consists of Nike units in and around San Francisco; and the 441st, which is responsible for the East Bay defense. The 752nd AAA Gun Battalion, the last Regular Army active gun battalion in the defense area, is also controlled by the 30th Group. The 752nd is scheduled for inactivation on 15 June.

Two other 90-mm Gun Battalions, the 271st and the 728th, are manned by the California National Guard and controlled operationally by the 30th Group. The Guard has an extensive AAA program in addition to these tactical sites.

A Nike site is divided into a launcher area and an Integrated Fire Control Area. The launcher area is mostly underground with the missiles kept ready in a reinforced concrete pit. For firing the missiles are raised to the surface on a giant elevator and pointed skyward. Each launching platform can hold four Nike missiles at one time; frequently each battery has two or three launching platforms.

Missiles are fired from local launcher areas only when real danger strikes; practice firing is held at the Army's Red Canyon Ridge in New Mexico. The 740th recently scored an 84.6 per cent improvement over 1956 in its annual firing practice there. Scores are based on all the battalions activities in firing the missiles, including the preparation and efficiency of the operation as well as the actual number of hits and misses.

The 740th, the first of the three local battalions to practice this year, fired at Radio Controlled Aerial Targets which are motor-driven with 12-foot wingspreads.



The second major Nike area, the Integrated Fire Control Area, is where the Battery Commander or the Battery Control Officer controls the firing of the missiles. This area is usually from one to six miles from the launching area and must have a direct, unobstructed line of sight to the Nikes on their launching rails.

This area contains a long range radar, a radar to track the incoming targets and a radar to track the missile after it is fired. It also contains the lightning-fast computing brain of the Nike system which directs the missile to an interception with the aggressor aircraft.

The Nike, which is destroyed as it destroys an invader, is about 20 feet long, one foot in diameter and joined to a booster about 10 feet long. The booster lifts the Nike to supersonic speed, burns out, and drops off in a predetermined disposal area, such as the sea. Then the Nike motor takes over, and guided from the ground, propels the rocket through space to its target.

ARMY POWER — KEY TO PEACE

The Army, by the nature of its requirements, attaches the greatest importance to human values. It recognizes man as the basic element of military strength. Hence, it works constantly to improve the moral, physical and intellectual capacity of its men. It creates for them an environment of decent, clean living and of intolerance of vice, dissipation, or flabbiness.

Bay Area Defense has been strengthened by the addition of Army Antiaircraft Nike Guided Missile units like this one located at Angel Island. These Nikes guard the San Francisco Bay Bridge, Alcatraz and local residential areas as shown in the background. The Nikes, poised for firing from the launcher area, are prepared for enemy aircraft.

Sixth Army Soldier Key To Atomic Defense Plan

A series of atomic weapons troop tests and training exercises conducted by the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps are under way near Las Vegas, Nevada. Exercises DESERT ROCK VII and VIII opened this month and will continue into August.

The Armed Forces Exercises are part of Operation Plumbob, a series of low-yield nuclear tests conducted by the Atomic Energy Commission. Similar tests were conducted about two years ago.

Some 2100 Sixth Army Troops from the entire eight-state area are participating in separate Army tests and atomic weapons training exercises. An additional 1500 Sixth Army officers and men are playing supporting roles while others are at the site as observers.

The exercises are designed to develop tactical concepts and techniques relating to atomic warfare and to familiarize personnel with the environment of atomic battlefields.

Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, is exercise director. He is assisted by Brig. Gen. Walter A. Jensen, Commanding Officer of Camp Irwin and deputy exercise director.

Army personnel, including Reserve components, tentatively are scheduled to participate in "shots" on 15 June, 27 June, 9 July, 25 July and 19 August. About 2500 Marines will take part in a combined air-ground exercise on 25 June.

Army Show

A dramatic 15-minute radio program highlighting the Code Of Military Conduct, will be aired over San Francisco Radio Station KGO and affiliated stations at 2030 hours tonight.

Sponsored by the Sixth U. S. Army headquarters, and planned and written by its Office Of Information, Radio and Television staff, the program is dedicated to Armed Forces Day and to the principles of U. S. Power For Peace, world-wide.

Flame Throwing equipment will be demonstrated to visitors today by the Post Chemical Section at Crissy Field. In addition, the section will display protective, detective and chemical operating equipment on the main parade ground.

'Copter Evac To Highlight Flight Show

A pickup and evacuation of simulated wounded personnel by a litter-equipped helicopter will highlight the Armed Forces Day activities planned by the Sixth Army Flight Detachment. The detachment will also display six types of aircraft at Crissy Field.

The helicopter demonstrations will be staged once in the morning and afternoon.

The Flight Detachment provides air transportation for the Army Commander, his staff and other authorized personnel; provides emergency medical evacuation from isolated points such as Angel Island by float equipped helicopter; and provides a constant training program in instrument flight for assigned aviators, as well as a general training program to increase the professional proficiency of its aviators and enlisted personnel.

Sixth Army Medical Lab Seeks Out Killer Germs

The Sixth U. S. Army Medical Laboratory, located at Fort Baker, is the second largest Army Medical Service in the world. It is second only to the 406th General Laboratory in Japan.

One of nine medical laboratories established by the Army, the local group performs reference and research work for the Army, Air Force, Navy and Public Health Service in the eight-state Sixth Army area and Alaska.

In addition to serving the Armed forces, the laboratory works with state and local public health authorities on medical problems common to civil and military populations. At present it is engaged in a joint project with the California Board of Health and the United States Influenza Commission. Purpose of the project is to perfect a vaccine which will reduce upper respiratory infections in young people who are living under group conditions such as Army posts, college dormitories and summer camps for the first time.

Other projects underway at the laboratory are in the fields of virology where much work is being done on influenza and poliomyelitis and toxicology where the most complete and modern service is available in the Western United States.

Award Winning Paper Boasts Outstanding, Versatile Staff

This three-color edition of THE STAR PRESIDIAN will be seen by some 80,000 people. Distribution points have been arranged at all Nike sites and displays, which include Hamilton Field and Alameda Naval Air Station. On the Presidio proper and sub-posts, an additional 12,000 copies were split and distributed to military and civilian regulars yesterday and to civilian visitors today.

The Armed Forces Day Edition is the highlight of this Army newspaper's publishing year. Although some five or six other special editions are published yearly, most are necessarily limited, economy-wise, to the scope and distribution of the local audience.

Following the next issue, the Star Presidian will be five years old. It has grown from a small bush leaguer to "one of the Army's outstanding newspapers," winning numerous awards for makeup, typography, coverage and timeliness. It was recently voted "best" of some 200 letterpress papers being published throughout the world.

Still edited by its original organizer, Kenneth S. Erwin, a 15-year veteran of service newspaper and public information fields, the paper boasts a top staff of versatile military and civilians:

● Marian Cornfield, Phi Beta Kappa journalist from the University of Washington. Assistant editor and Girl Friday.

● Sp3 Richard Lewis, University of Oregon journalist, is an associate editor, senior photographer and an expert in general Army policy coverage. Currently on a 45-day tour of Europe, he will rejoin the paper in mid-June.

The Star Presidian is published weekly under the general editorial direction of the Sixth U.S. Army Commander and the direct supervision of the Commanding Officer of the Presidio.

Chemical Display Will Show Flame Throwers In Action

The Post Chemical Section display on the parade ground, Armed Forces Day, will include portable flame throwers of various types with actual demonstration of each type being given at Crissy Field from the hours of 1000 to 1400 today.

Chemical agents and detectors used in all phases of modern warfare will highlight the Post Chemical display. Protective masks, Geiger counters and radioactive detection agents will also be shown—with a smoke generator, CBR markers and CBR protective suits.

Photo illustrations on a board will be used during the introductory session on each Chemical Section item.

A Soldier Is A Soldier For Many Solid Reasons

Ask a career soldier why he's in the Army and you may hear any of a dozen solid reasons.

There are dedicated soldiers who are in the Army today because they feel the responsibility of today's critical times. They know that without themselves and others in the Army our Nation could not maintain its position of strength.

And there are many men who are career soldiers because they feel it has more to offer than any other life work. They have added up their base pay and their fringe benefits and know that the Army is giving them a very generous livelihood.

Take the master sergeant with 18 years' service who draws a basic pay allowance of $304. To this basic rate he may be able to add any or all of the following "extras": Overseas pay, $22.50; quarters allowance, $96.90 (more than two dependents); separate rations, $31.30, and uniform allowance, $4.20. Free medical and dental care and travel reimbursements are additional benefits that can sometimes ease a great burden for the individual soldier.

The Army retirement plan is one of the greatest incentives for career service. Unlike industrial retirement benefits that go to the worker after he reaches a certain age, 60 or 65, the Army plan works strictly on number of years served.

A master sergeant retiring after 30 years' service would draw two-thirds of his basic pay, or $251.55, for life! This means a high school graduate who entered the Army at the age of 18 could retire at 48, still young enough to enter a civilian career, and with the security of a lifetime income.

Many men stay in the Army, because they are given the opportunities through education to advance themselves. Every day of the year almost 30,000 soldiers receive technical training which ranges from advanced electronics repair to helicopter pilot training. Army personnel today have more than 500 courses from which to choose.

If night civilian college instruction is available, soldiers are encouraged to attend with the Army footing the largest share of the bill. And military personnel can advance themselves through USAFI (United States Armed Forces Institute), a gigantic organization designed to provide the individual with high school and college correspondence courses.

Some men are in the Army because they enjoy the travel opportunities. American soldiers today are stationed in Europe: France, England, Italy, Germany; in the Far East: Japan, Hawaii, Southwest Pacific; and in the Caribbean, Panama and Puerto Rico.

The recreation and vacation opportunities available to soldiers are hard to beat. Every soldier is entitled to 30 days of paid leave each year. Recreational facilities, most of them free, are available right on post. They include libraries, craft shops, music service clubs, sports and soldier shows.

Power for Peace!

Tall in the shadows
Stands Freedom's might Stalwart and steady
Ready for fight
Against any usurper
Who'd violate our lease
Challenge our ability
In "Power for Peace."

Ode to Old Glory

My blood sings high;
My hopes ride free;
Whenever your beauty unfurls.
Then I drink a draught,
From Liberty's tree,
To the red, white and blue
Of your curls.

Post Signal Display Marks Recent Technical Progress

A new Signal Corps communications system called "Multipoint" will highlight the Post Signal Section Armed Forces Day display. The system automatically sends and receives teletypewriter messages, processing from two to ten stations through a single multipoint channel.

Other Post Signal displays include an electronic counter device which, at high speeds, measures signal frequencies generated and converts this count into an easily readable figure almost instantaneously. A switchboard van and tractor, V-58 installer repairman's truck, V-58 sound truck, V-17 line truck, V-18 hole digger, two Ampex recorders, dual dictaphone recorder, portable dictaphone recorder and test equipment also will be shown.

About 17,000 16mm training films and allied aids are stocked at the Central Film and Equipment exchange for loan to authorized using agencies in this area. The Central Exchange directly supports more than 575 organizations in Northern California and Nevada and furnishes such other support to area units as required.

Services include loan of motion picture films, film strips, recordings, transparencies and audio-visual projection and sound reproducing equipment; training of 16mm projectionists and projectionist instructors; and the furnishing of information pertaining to available audio-visual aids and equipment best suited to training needs and assistance in the effective application of these aids. The exchange also furnishes initial and supplementary film stocks to 37 film and equipment exchanges and controls film stocks at three War Reserve Stock Points located in the Sixth Army area.

The Photographic Laboratory performs official photography and photographic services in black and white or color, still or motion picture, throughout the San Francisco Bay Area, Northern California and parts of Nevada. Color transparencies taken in the Sixth Army area are processed in the laboratory which acts as a collecting agency for record negative material forwarded to Washington.

The laboratory conducts experimentation as directed by Department of the Army and acts as a backup for laboratories in the Sixth Army area in all types of photographic operations, including emergency supplies.

A projector (rear view) showing films continuously and a Mobile Photographic Laboratory, including PE-95 power supply, will be displayed.

Presidio Marksmen Prove Tops With Basic Weapons

About 1,000 marksmanship awards won by Presidio individuals and teams during the past year will be exhibited on the parade ground near the bleachers today. The display also will include rifle and pistol shooters' equipment.

The teams have marked up several outstanding records during the year. In March two Presidio teams won matches in the Northern California Area Competition in Oakland. In addition many individual first places were recorded in the .22, .38 and .45 calibre classes.

During the same month the Presidio teams shot in the NRA national indoor championship held at San Bruno. There the four-man team set new all-service and national records, and Col. Leon J. Rouge established an individual service record. These records have since been broken.

Last month five Presidio shooters went on a good-will tour to Hawaii to match skills with 25th Division team members.

The rifle and pistol teams recently competed in the Sixth Army competition at Camp Roberts. The rifle team, which was organized only a few weeks before the competition, took two first place awards in the .38 calibre B division. The Presidio team also won the Sixth Army Commander's Trophy in the .45 calibre matches.

Five local persons won places on the Sixth Army pistol squad and two on the rifle team. These teams will compete in All-Army competition in June and the national meet in August.

The marksmanship competition program produces experienced teachers and coaches who train new personnel in the use of rifles and pistols.

Soldier Today Given Best In Education Aid

More than 3900 military persons interested in continuing their education were interviewed by education advisers at the Presidio Army Education Center during the first three quarters of this fiscal year.

The Center offers counseling on every school level from the intermediate grades through college and including special vocation and technical courses. Its program engulfs all of these levels through on-post instruction, on- and off-duty, and off-post instruction.

Many off-duty classes are taught on post by instructors from the San Francisco Adult Education Division or San Francisco State College.

Personnel are eligible for tuition assistance when attending local accredited colleges and universities off post.

The Center boasts a unique college degree program executed in conjunction with San Francisco State College. Through the program the college's instructors conduct three courses for eight-week periods five times a year on post. Courses are accepted as resident credit toward a bachelor of arts degree at the college. Twenty-seven persons are expected to receive degrees through this plan in June.

Changing Tastes

Army Library Stays Alert To Need Of Modern Soldier

Reorganization and several service additions highlighted the past year in the Sixth U.S. Army Library and Library Depot and the Post Library System. The two systems are under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth Bock, Supervisory Librarian.

One of the principal developments is the construction of a new post library which is scheduled to be completed this fall. Located between the Officers' Club and the Main Post Exchange on Arguello and Moraga, the new library will feature separate rooms for the Military Science and Reference Department and the Children's Department. In addition it will have hi-fi for three listening booths.

Recently a branch library was opened at Fort Cronkhite and children's programs were started at Forts Scott and Baker.

Isolated Antiaircraft sites located in the area are now serviced by a bookmobile which operates from the Fort Scott Branch Library. The unit carries about 750 books, rotated frequently, and visits each site once every two weeks. The bookmobile is able to fill special requests by drawing from the 50,000 books held in both the Post and Sixth Army Libraries through the interlibrary loan system.

An adult education program is also part of the library service. Earlier this year a series of meetings were scheduled to help individuals study Spanish by listening to library recordings. Last month a Great Books discussion program was launched. Meetings are held each week.

Arts & Crafts Offers Soldier Creative Outlet

The new Arts and Crafts shop, which was opened this year after two years of planning, will put its varied activities on Armed Forces Day display in the Special Services tent on the parade ground. The shop also will hold open house in Bldg. 122 from 1300 to 1700 hours.

The tent display will feature mosaics, the graphic arts, ceramics and weaving. Demonstrations will be given of pottery-making and loom work.

Building 122, which houses the shop, is located on Lincoln Boulevard and Riley Street.

Junior Rifleers

Firearms Training Program Through Post Gun Club

The Junior Rifleers is a marksmanship program conducted at the Presidio to promote gun safety and marksmanship with the small arms caliber .22 rifle.

The instructor, M/Sgt. John D. Vekich, carries a certificate from the National Rifle Association. His project is open to boys and girls from 12 through 17 years.

Awards achieved by the junior rifle students include pro-marksman, marksman, marksman first class, sharpshooter and expert.

In addition to the medals, a corresponding brassard and an NRA Diploma are awarded for each medal won.

Funds supporting the Junior Rifleers are furnished by the Youth Activities Council fund which pays for the medals, brassards and membership patches.

The caliber .22 rifles and the ammunition are furnished by Post Ordnance, through the Presidio Gun Club.

The Junior Riflemen maintain a 100 per cent safety program. No injuries nor accidents have occurred during their two-year training interval.

Motto adopted by the group is "Safety First; Good Shooting Second."

Army Dug It!

The Panama Canal was built by Army Engineers and was officially opened on 15 August, 1914.

Musical Ambassadors Real Area Asset

The Sixth U.S. Army Band is known all over the eight Western States both for its stirring marching music and its symphonic concerts.

The band's busy schedule keeps it occupied with a variety of activities that include annual appearances at the California State Fair and recruiting concerts at various high schools in the Bay Area. Post duties required of the band include parades, reveille and retreat ceremonies, concerts and dance combos as needed by clubs and other organizations on the Presidio.

The band performs at Honor Guard ceremonies for visiting military and civilian dignitaries, including high ranking foreign visitors. The band has played at the Tournament of Roses and the Seattle Seafair.

The Sixth U.S. Army Band has provided background music for a variety of historical events since it first came to the Presidio in 1946. It provided music for the organizing session of the United Nations in 1945 here in San Francisco and was also called on to perform for the formal signing of the Japanese Peace Treaty at the enlisted men's Service Club at the Presidio in 1951.

The 60 members of the band are equipped with the new Army dress blue uniform. They wear the tropical worsted uniforms when playing in warm weather areas and may also be seen in parades wearing the olive drab uniform with white helmet, white pistol belt and highly polished combat boots.

CWO Louis Ferraro, who is commanding officer and leader of the Sixth U.S. Army Band, has a rich background in music education and experience. A native of New Jersey, he has studied at the Juilliard School of Music in New York and the San Francisco Institute of Music.

During World War II, Mr. Ferraro was Bandmaster of the European Command Bands in London, Paris and Berlin and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for outstanding service as Bandmaster of the 7th Infantry Division Band during the Korean conflict.

The band was first activated in 1942 as the 19th Coast Artillery Band at Fort Rosecrans in San Diego. In 1944 the band was redesignated the 78th Army Ground Forces Band. Later that year it transferred to Camp Lockett at Campo, Calif., as the 441st Army Service Forces Band. Next it was transferred to Camp Haan, then Camp San Luis Obispo and finally it wound up at the Presidio of San Francisco in 1946.

30th Group One Of Army's Unique Units

Aviators Support 30th Engineer group surveyors as they run a level line. The surveyors are Pvt. Dean Merrick, recorder, and Pvt. Paul McEnery, instrument man. Officers investigating the men's progress in a Hiller H-23 helicopter are assigned to the Group's 521st Aviation Company stationed in Stockton.

A year's work in map making, which has taken its surveying units to such remote regions as Iran, Libya and the South Pacific Islands will be reviewed by the 30th Engineer Group through its Armed Forces Day displays today.

Working in conjunction with the U. S. Army Map Service and the U. S. Geological Survey in the United States and abroad, the Group maps previously unmapped or inadequately mapped regions. In addition, the projects provide highly skilled specialists who are prepared to make strategic wartime maps in national emergencies.

This year the Group started three overseas mapping projects centered in Iran, Libya and the South Pacific Islands. Meanwhile, in the United States the Group's 660th Battalion is helping the U. S. Army Map Service and the U. S. Geological Survey chart large regions of unmapped land.

Projects in Alaska and California recently were completed by the Group. The Alaska problem was to map the approximately 313,000 square-mile Alaskan peninsula, a six-year operation which took hundreds of the Group's men to extremely barren, frozen and treacherous land.

In California the 537th Engineer Company mapped the Pinyon Well district, an assignment which was received in 1950. The Group has been assigned several other areas to survey in Southern California.

During the summer the 30th's surveyors will be working in Northern California, Washington and Montana.

The Group is equipped to handle not only surveying, but also the compiling and reproducing of the maps, the other two steps in the map making process. The 21st Engineer Company compiles the maps which are then sent to the 99th Engineer Company to be reproduced for distribution.

An aviation company is maintained by the group to provide transportation in rugged country. The 521st Aviation Company, stationed at Stockton, has twenty-four H-23 helicopters, five H-19 helicopters and a variety of fixed wing aircraft, including three U-1 Otters, each capable of carrying 14 passengers.

The company's officers are trained in the principles of surveying so that they can render effective aerial support and help when the smaller helicopters are used.

The 521st also supports various Sixth Army projects and assists civilian authorities with rescue operations in disasters.

The 30th Engineer Topographic Battalion was formed from the 29th Engineer Topographic Battalion stationed at Portland, Oregon, on 1 September, 1939. During World War II the unit served in North Africa and the Hawaiian Islands. On 7 December, 1949, it was assigned to Fort Scott and in March, 1954, was redesignated the 30th Engineer Group (Topographic Survey).

Unit Advisor Key Member Of Reserves

Behind the scenes of every Army Reserve unit meeting is the Unit Advisor, the man who has no regular working hours and is expected to know or find out everything.

A member of the regular Army establishment, the unit advisor's job is to keep Army Reserve units up to the desired standard of efficiency and readiness. Unit advisors supervise some 30 units at the Presidio.

The job of a unit advisor consists of coordinating administration and training of Ready Reserve units. He also advises and assists the Reserve unit commander to insure that units are effectively organized, trained and equipped for rapid mobilization, expansion, or deployment in times of emergency.

The unit advisor is present at his units' evening meetings, frequently acts as recruiter for the units, and may be called upon to umpire Army exercises, join an inspection team for the Reserve Officers Training Corps, sit as a member of a promotion or appointment board, or become the chief of a special recruiting team.

AFD Ball Set

The third annual military ball sponsored by the combined Bay Area Chapters of the Reserve Officers' Association and the ladies' auxiliary will be held Armed Forces Day evening at the Presidio Officers' Club.

The affair will start at 1830 with cocktails followed by dinner and dancing. Uniforms are preferred.

OrdnanceGroupStands Ready In Every Crisis

Few Presidio units have a broader range of responsibilities than the 46th Ordnance Group whose men are engaged in everything from keeping Nike missiles in operating condition to assisting local police in bomb disposal.

Headquarters Company this month returned from Exercise King Cole in Louisiana where it served as a control unit during the testing of nuclear warfare concepts.

The units under the 46th Ordnance Group, commanded by Col. Albert L. Hettrich, are as follows: 46th Ordnance Group Headquarters Company, 49th Ordnance Detachment (EOD), 87th Ordnance Detachment (EOD), 548th Ordnance Detachment (EOD control unit), three integrated fire control detachments: 154th, 165th and 585th, 181st Ordnance Detachment (Artillery Repair), 280th Ordnance Detachment (Heavy Artillery Repair) and two guided missile maintenance detachments: the 194th and 197th.

The job of supporting the AAA gun and Nike battalions in the San Francisco defense area is handled by the 46th. Extensive on-the-job training is conducted by all units to instruct new men and keep experienced technicians up to date in the technical field of electronic repair.

The job of "handling" bombs discovered in the Bay Area usually falls to the men in the EOD (Explosive Ordnance Disposal) detachments of the 46th. Sometimes the bomb scares are caused by fakes, but since it is impossible to tell which are the real thing each must be handled with the same errorless care. For this reason, local policemen invariably call the Army when they run across items with explosive potentiality.

In the past year, the bomb experts have been called out on dozens of bomb cases, including one in the Oakland City Hall. This one turned out to be an "elaborate fake," but many of the calls, which average 11 a month, are for real.

The 46th Ordnance bomb experts have been passing on their technical knowledge to civilian law enforcement personnel through a series of three-day courses taught at the Presidio and other Sixth U. S. Army installations.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 46th Ordnance Group, came to the Presidio from Camp Irwin, Calif., in 1953. The unit was first activated in 1946 at Luzon, the Philippines Islands.

Army Aviation Looks To The Future

Jet flying tactics will be adapted for Army use on some future day as part of the rapidly expanding Army Aviation Program, a program which provides the Army with the mobility necessary in atomic combat missions. An Army Jet Detachment already has been organized at Fort Rucker, Alabama.

The Sixth U. S. Army is paralleling the national plan in developing aviation. In the immediate future a combination airfield - heliport will be constructed at Fort Ord. Fort Ord, one of the largest installations in the Army area, now uses the Post parade ground as an airfield.

Most recent step forward in Army aviation at the Presidio was the installation of oxygen and deicing equipment in local aircraft. Before this equipment was added, local Army detachments frequently were unable to perform desired missions because of the height and freezing temperatures of the nearby mountains.

Instrument flight training of Army pilots was introduced at this headquarters last October. The training conducted by the Trans-Ocean Airlines, Taloa Academy of Aeronautics at Metropolitan Oakland International Airport in Oakland.

Battlefield Mobility has been greatly improved by the Army's procurement of 12 Aerocycles, individual helicopter-type lifting devices. Initial tests of the new machine proved that men without previous flying experience could become proficient operators after 20 minutes of instruction. The Aerocycle will fly at an estimated maximum speed of 65 miles per hour with an estimated range of 150 miles.

Six classes of 18 students will be held this year. During the course each student receives 80 hours of first-pilot instrument flight instruction and 132 hours of associate ground school instruction. Upon passing a final examination, the graduates are issued an Army Standard Instrument Certificate.

Other training programs have been added to the Army Aviation program during the past year.

The first is an Army Aviation Safety Course sponsored by the Department of the Army and conducted by the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. The eight-week course, which was recently completed by Colonel Frank G. Forrest, Sixth U. S. Army Aviation Chief, is designed to indoctrinate key staff aviators and safety directors in aviation safety. Sixty officers are scheduled to complete the course by 3 July.

The second training addition, an Army ROTC Flight Training Program, was established by the U. S. Continental Army Command last November. ROTC students eligible for the training must be seniors in Military Science instruction; agree to serve three years on active duty; volunteer for Army Aviation Flight Training; pass a flight physical examination and the Army Fixed-Wing Aircraft Aptitude Battery; and be recommended by their deans or professors of Military Science and Tactics.

Sixth U. S. Army area schools which have adopted the program are the University of Santa Clara, Arizona State College, Oregon State College and Utah State Agricultural College.

Seagoing Soldiers Set Record Service

One hundred thousand passengers transported during the past two years without a single accident is the remarkable record of Post Transportation's Water Division which is charged with the responsibility of hauling personnel and supplies to the Nike installation at Angel Island.

Passengers and some freight are carried by the 65-foot T-boats operated by the Water Division. Most of the freight is left aboard vehicles and transported by the LCM's (landing craft). These vessels can carry one large moving van or several small vehicles.

The boats make their 30-minute runs during 18 hours of the day through all types of weather. They transport school children back and forth during the weekdays and the chaplain on Sunday as well as all other military personnel and dependents.

Recently a reduction in force, caused by lack of funds, has reduced the Water Division civilian force by three-fourths leaving only 10 civilians in the maintenance shop and none operating the vessels. To fill the gap the Water Division has been putting its 43 military personnel through an extensive on-the-job training program.

Boat operation and boat engineering are both being taught to the Water Division's seagoing soldiers. They are learning everything from machine shop lathe operation and welding to diesel operation and navigation. At the completion of the instruction, some of the men will be licensed boat engineers and others will be licensed boat operators.

Chief of the Water Division, Harry H. Plummer, has been with the organization since its beginning in 1942 when it was designated the Marine Repair Shop and charged with the maintenance of the "Mine Flotilla" which laid the mine field in the Bay Area. In 1943, the Water Division took on the additional assignment of maintaining the Army Air Force crash boats. In 1950, the repair shop had the large job of recommissioning crash boats for use in the Korean war.

The Army does not forget its old soldiers after they retire. It remains interested in their welfare, and wants them to serve in their civilian communities as loyal, informed representatives of the Army.

In War & Peace!

Red Cross Sponsors Visit Of Fifty Orphans Here

Fifty children who live in San Francisco orphanages are visiting the Armed Forces Day displays and demonstrations at the Presidio today as guests of the American Red Cross.

The Red Cross, which today is turning its attention to the children, is normally occupied at the Presidio office and the Fort Mason sub-office with serving military personnel and their dependents. In an average month the two Red Cross offices which are directed by Raymond Gilbreth, service approximately 500 clients. The amount of financial assistance by both offices is approximately $8,000 per month.

Service provided by the Red Cross includes counseling and advisory service in personal and family problems, financial assistance to servicemen and their dependents for emergency transportation expenses, or other family emergencies which arise as a result of military service.

The Red Cross has a broad communications network which includes 3,700 chapters in the United States and field directors at all military installations throughout the world. This network provides information which can assist the military in making decisions regarding leave requests, applications for transfer, reassignment and dependency discharge. A vital morale service in building the Army's Power For Peace.

Military Policemen Busy, Vital Unit

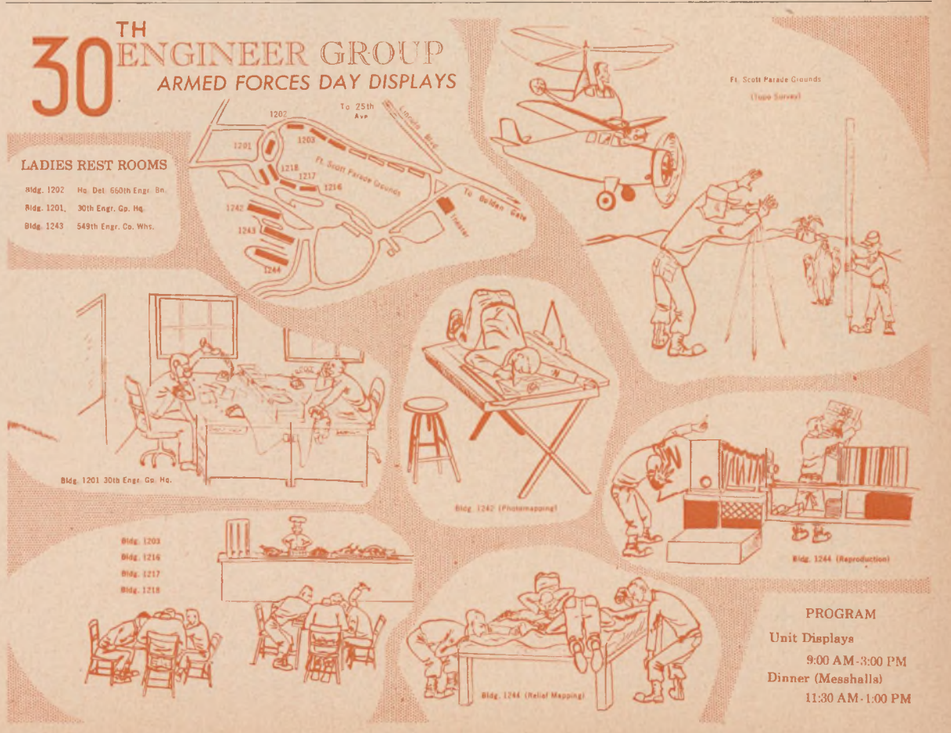
Last year approximately 12,072,000 vehicles passed through the gates into the Presidio of San Francisco. It is a tribute to the alertness and efficiency of the Post's military policemen and the Provost Marshal's office that during this period there was not a single vehicle fatality at the Presidio.

"From a traffic standpoint we have one of the safest places to live," is the opinion of Post Provost Marshal Maj. Wilfred J. Curley, who attributes traffic safety to "so many clearly marked traffic control signs which are backed up by alert MP's."

During all of 1946 there were only 239 traffic accidents of all types, said Major Curley, who explained that only 26 of these accidents involved any injury at all.

The Presidio MP's must be on their toes when they direct traffic on a post where as many as 9,000 vehicles pass a single point during a 12-hour period. With their sharp whistles and precision hand signals they are able to move the great herd of commuter vehicles into the Presidio in the morning and out in the evening with a minimum of confusion and wasted time.



Traffic control is but one part of the activities carried out by the some 125 men of the 163rd Military Police Company stationed at the Presidio. They handle AWOL apprehension, security patrols, investigations and guardhouse confinement.

MP Signals which are used to direct traffic at the Presidio are demonstrated by three members of the 163d MP Company. The military police in this company under the direction of the Post Provost Marshal have established a proud record of traffic control at the Presidio. In 1956 more than 12 million automobiles passed into the Presidio, yet there were only 239 traffic accidents, no fatalities and only 26 injuries.

Motor patrols cruise the Presidio 24 hours a day assuring maximum protection both to the Post's residents and to the physical property. Also on a 24-hour schedule is the MP-operated information booth located at the Lombard Gate entrance.

The 163rd MP Company, commanded by Capt. Robert N. Anderson, is the remnent body of the 505th MP Battalion which was deactivated 21 September, 1956. This colorful MP unit, whose history dates back to 1921, participated in the D-Day landing during World War II and more recently fulfilled police duties during the United States nuclear tests in the South Pacific.

Port Construction Company On Moment's Notice

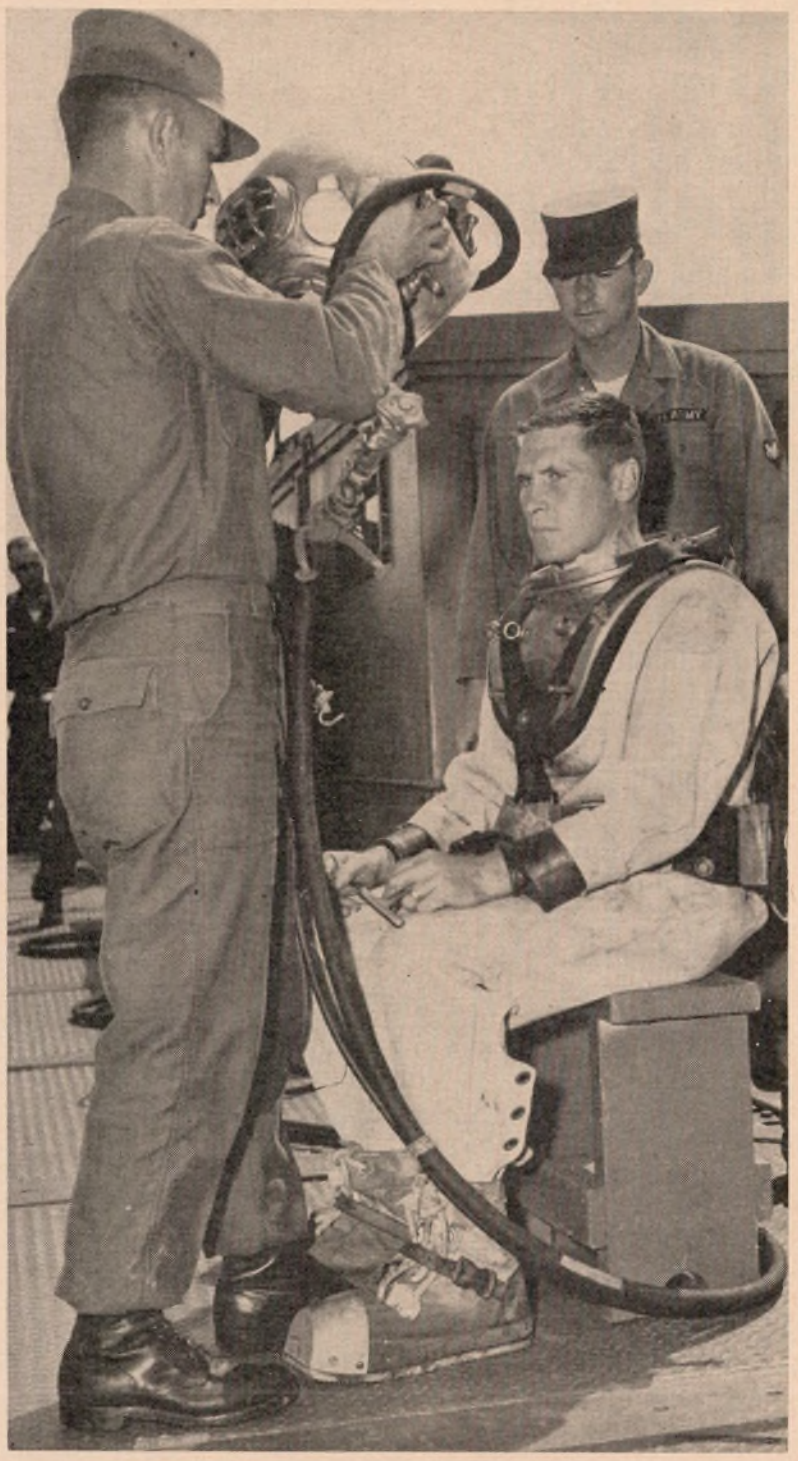
The 561st Engineer Company (Port Construction) maintains a platoon on a 24-hour alert basis ready on a moment's notice to rush heavy equipment and men to the assistance of military or civilians caught in an emergency situation.

As the only heavy equipment Army unit in the Bay Area the 561st has a broad range of responsibilities. Its basic mission is construction and rehabilitation of seaports, but in addition its heavy equipment enables it to do a variety of other jobs—from fishing sunken helicopters out of the bay to leveling parking areas.



The broad range of equipment operated by the company includes floating pile drivers, a diving barge, a 150-ton work barge, an LCM (landing craft), bulldozers, heavy truck-trailer vehicles and concrete mixers.

Two of the biggest projects undertaken by the 561st recently involved the destruction of a city-owned pier in Sausalito and the ripping up of the old and rotten Panama Pacific International Exposition pier which jutted out from the Presidio beach in front of Letterman Army Hospital.

Capt. Charles F. McCurdy, Company Commander for the 561st, described the Sausalito job as a project where "everybody benefits—the men get training, the city saves thousands of dollars, and the Army gets valuable timbers."

At the time the Sausalito city fathers were trying to figure a way to clear their waterfront of an old, rotting 45 x 200-yard dock, Captain McCurdy approached them for information on any old piles in the area that the 561st could remove for training purposes.

He learned that the old pier, which would have cost $30,000 if leveled by a private firm, had 200 good piles. So the men of the 561st moved in with heavy equipment, took down the dock and recovered the piles. The job took a little over two weeks and, according to Captain McCurdy, "was one of the best training projects we've ever had."

Demonstration is readied as members of the 561st Engineer Company (PC) fit diving helmet on Specialist First Class Charles W. Holland, who will demonstrate diving techniques in a water tank on the Presidio parade ground. The unit will show the public how underwater welding and repair is accomplished.

The job of clearing the beach area in front of Letterman Army Hospital took longer as each steel pile had to be individually blasted from the bay floor. But with company divers working in shifts it was possible to blast one of the 96 pilings each 20 minutes.

The 561st, which has the distinction of being the only fully trained, fully equipped port construction company in the Army, has a colorful history which started with activation in 1942 at Camp Edwards, Mass. It first tasted action in the Algeria and French Morocco campaign for which it was awarded the French Croix de Guerre. The company then saw action in Italy, following which it returned to the United States.

The company was shipped to the Pacific Theater and arrived in time to participate in the Luzon campaign. It was awarded the Philippine Presidential Citation for this action.

Deactivated in the Philippines, the 561st during the post-war period was activated and deactivated in Alaska and Japan as well as at Fort Dix. On 18 March 1955 the 561st was reactivated here at the Presidio and has since been stationed at Fort Baker.

Top Reserve Exhibit On Army Skills

Army Reserve exhibits will be displayed both at the Army Reserve training area at Crissy Field and on the main parade ground today.

Medical equipment pertaining to surgery, dentistry, X-ray, pharmacy and a Medical Department pictorial display will be at Harmon Hall, Bldg. 649. It will be handled by the 820th Hospital Center, which also will demonstrate first aid and mass casualty treatment.

The 353d Loudspeaker and Leaflet Company will demonstrate the methods of using equipment in psychological warfare in Bldg. T-908, across from Harmon Hall.

A 75mm Skysweeper along with a target selector and generator on a truck will be shown by the 319th AAA Battalion-USAR on the parade ground. A "BC" telescope, 105mm howitzer and two radios in jeeps will be displayed as part of the 91st Infantry Division's exhibit.

When lowered, the American flag is folded into a triangular shape with stars showing to represent the cocked hat of the American Revolution.

Award Winning Nike Soldier Was Former High School Teacher

Pfc. William H. Bolitho, Battery B, 9th AAA Missile Battalion, holds this month's honors for top Soldier of the Month. He won his laurels over four other contenders representing the battalion batteries.

Bolitho, an assistant Battery clerk, Troop Information NCO and Education NCO for his particular battery, has served with the famed NIKE unit since nearly a year ago, after completion of his basic training in Fort Bliss, Texas.

The NIKE honor man was graduated from Colorado State College. During his student years he became a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity. He taught Social Sciences in Nebraska High School, Hay Springs, before his entrance to military service.

The Best Soldier award at the Missile Battalion is based on the soldier's knowledge of foreign affairs, ability and interest in his military job, and his awareness of Army customs and courtesies. He is chosen from soldiers representing the five batteries on the NIKE site.

Retirement Benefits

Service in the Army Reserve can give the reservist a retirement income equal to an investment of $30,000, if he follows the terms of Title III of Public Law 810, passed by the 80th Congress. Under this law, when he reaches the age of 60 and if he has completed 20 years of satisfactory Federal service, either Reserve or Regular, as long as the last eight years of the 20 years service is in the Army Reserve he may retire.

Exercise Big Lick!

In a given year, military personnel purchase more than $16,000,000 worth of stamps and $233,00,000 worth of money orders from 285 Army-Air Force Post Offices. Sales were made in 285 post offices in the U.S. and 32 foreign countries.

Chaplains Set Special Exhibit For AFD Show

Nine military chaplains serving personnel at the Presidio and its outlying units will combine their observation of Armed Forces Day here with a "Four Chaplains" theme exemplifying religious unity in a common cause.

Planned and produced by the Adjutant General Army Exhibit Section, the display on the main parade ground will illustrate the day-to-day activities of the chaplain.

The Post Chaplain Section has arranged to display the dressed altars of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths. The Sixth U. S. Army Chaplain Section will show the literature pertaining to the three religious persuasions, and the outlying Antiaircraft chaplains are to demonstrate the field equipment used in conducting religious services under combat conditions.

Throughout the day, chaplains will be on duty to welcome the visitors and to answer queries concerning the military Chaplains' Corps.

On Armed Forces Sunday, 19 May, civilian clergymen will be present as guests in the Chapel Of Our Lady on the Presidio and in the Post Chapel.

Father John Zimmerman, of Saint Francis Xavier Mission, will celebrate Mass in the Chapel Of Our Lady. Doctor John A. Gardner, executive secretary of the San Francisco Council of Churches, will be guest preacher in the Post Chapel.

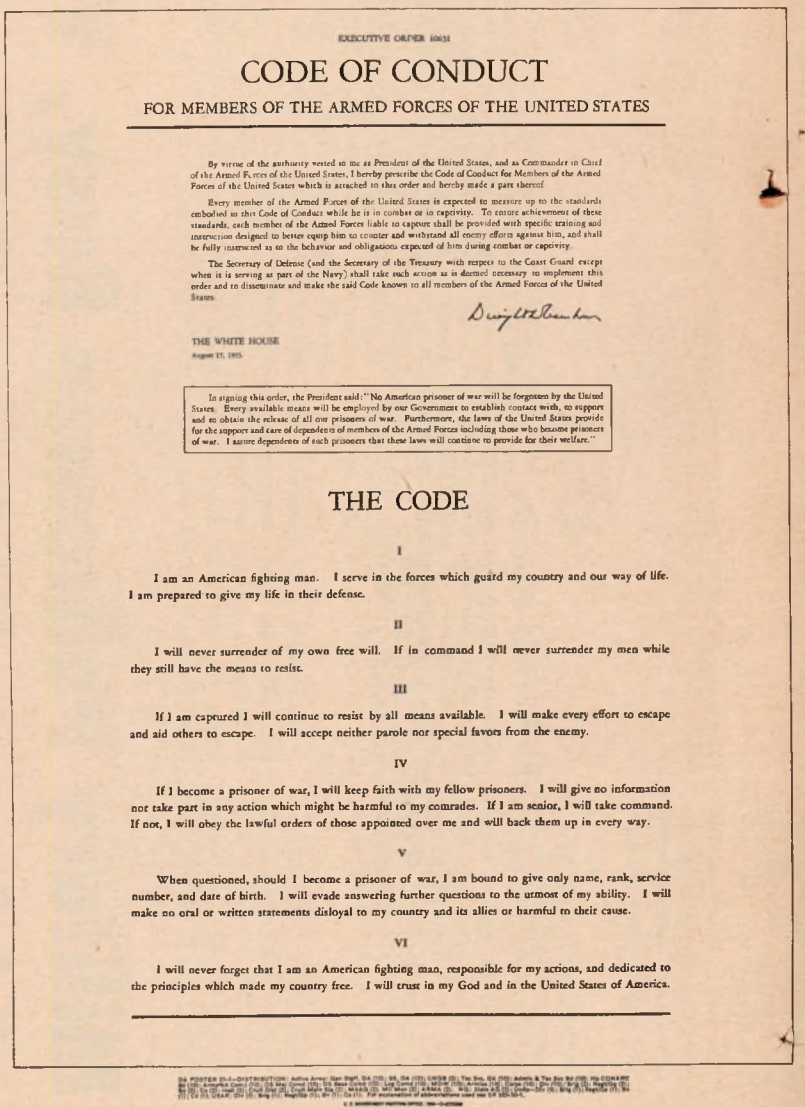
Mexican Magazine Now 110 Years Old

At the south end of the parade ground at Sheridan Avenue and Anza Street is the old powder magazine built by the Mexican garrison 110 years ago. The stone walls are ten feet thick with an air space in the middle to insure dryness. Two narrow slots for ventilation pierce the east wall near the door.

Presidio Is Important Community Asset

The Presidio of San Francisco scores heavily on four counts in its contribution to the community of San Francisco:

1.) A vital defense bastion geared to protect one of the nation's top industrial areas.



2.) A major economic force that contributes some $60,000,000 each year to the community's income.

3.) A historic beauty site that draws thousands of tourists yearly to San Francisco.

4.) A defense community within a greater civic community that is a day-to-day working example of civilian-military unity.

These are only the major assets that accrue to the local community from Presidio's vital acres. Other less tangible contributions would have to include the many off-duty civic activities of the soldier-citizen participation in fund-raising events, public ceremonies, exhibits and many other individual and collective contributions to the civil life of the community.

All in all, San Francisco's Presidio is an integral part of a great city and a living and vital monument to the free enterprise of Americans of yesterday and today.

EXECUTIVE ORDER 10631

CODE OF CONDUCT

FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES OF THE UNITED STATES

By virtue of the authority vested in me as President of the United States, and as Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces of the United States, I hereby prescribe the Code of Conduct for Members of the Armed Forces of the United States which is attached to this order and hereby made a part thereof.

Every member of the Armed Forces of the United States is expected to measure up to the standards embodied in this Code of Conduct while he is in combat or in captivity. To ensure achievement of these standards, each member of the Armed Forces liable to capture shall be provided with specific training and instruction designed to better equip him to counter and withstand all enemy efforts against him, and shall be fully instructed as to the behavior and obligations expected of him during combat or captivity.

The Secretary of Defense (and the Secretary of the Treasury with respect to the Coast Guard except when it is serving as part of the Navy) shall take such action as is deemed necessary to implement this order and to disseminate and make the said Code known to all members of the Armed Forces of the United States.

Dwight D. Eisenhower

THE WHITE HOUSE

August 17, 1955.

In signing this order, the President said: "No American prisoner of war will be forgotten by the United States. Every available means will be employed by our Government to establish contact with, to support and to obtain the release of all our prisoners of war. Furthermore, the laws of the United States provide for the support and care of dependents of members of the Armed Forces including those who become prisoners of war. I assure dependents of such prisoners that these laws will continue to provide for their welfare."

THE CODE

I

I am an American fighting man. I serve in the forces which guard my country and our way of life. I am prepared to give my life in their defense.

II

I will never surrender of my own free will. If in command I will never surrender my men while they still have the means to resist.

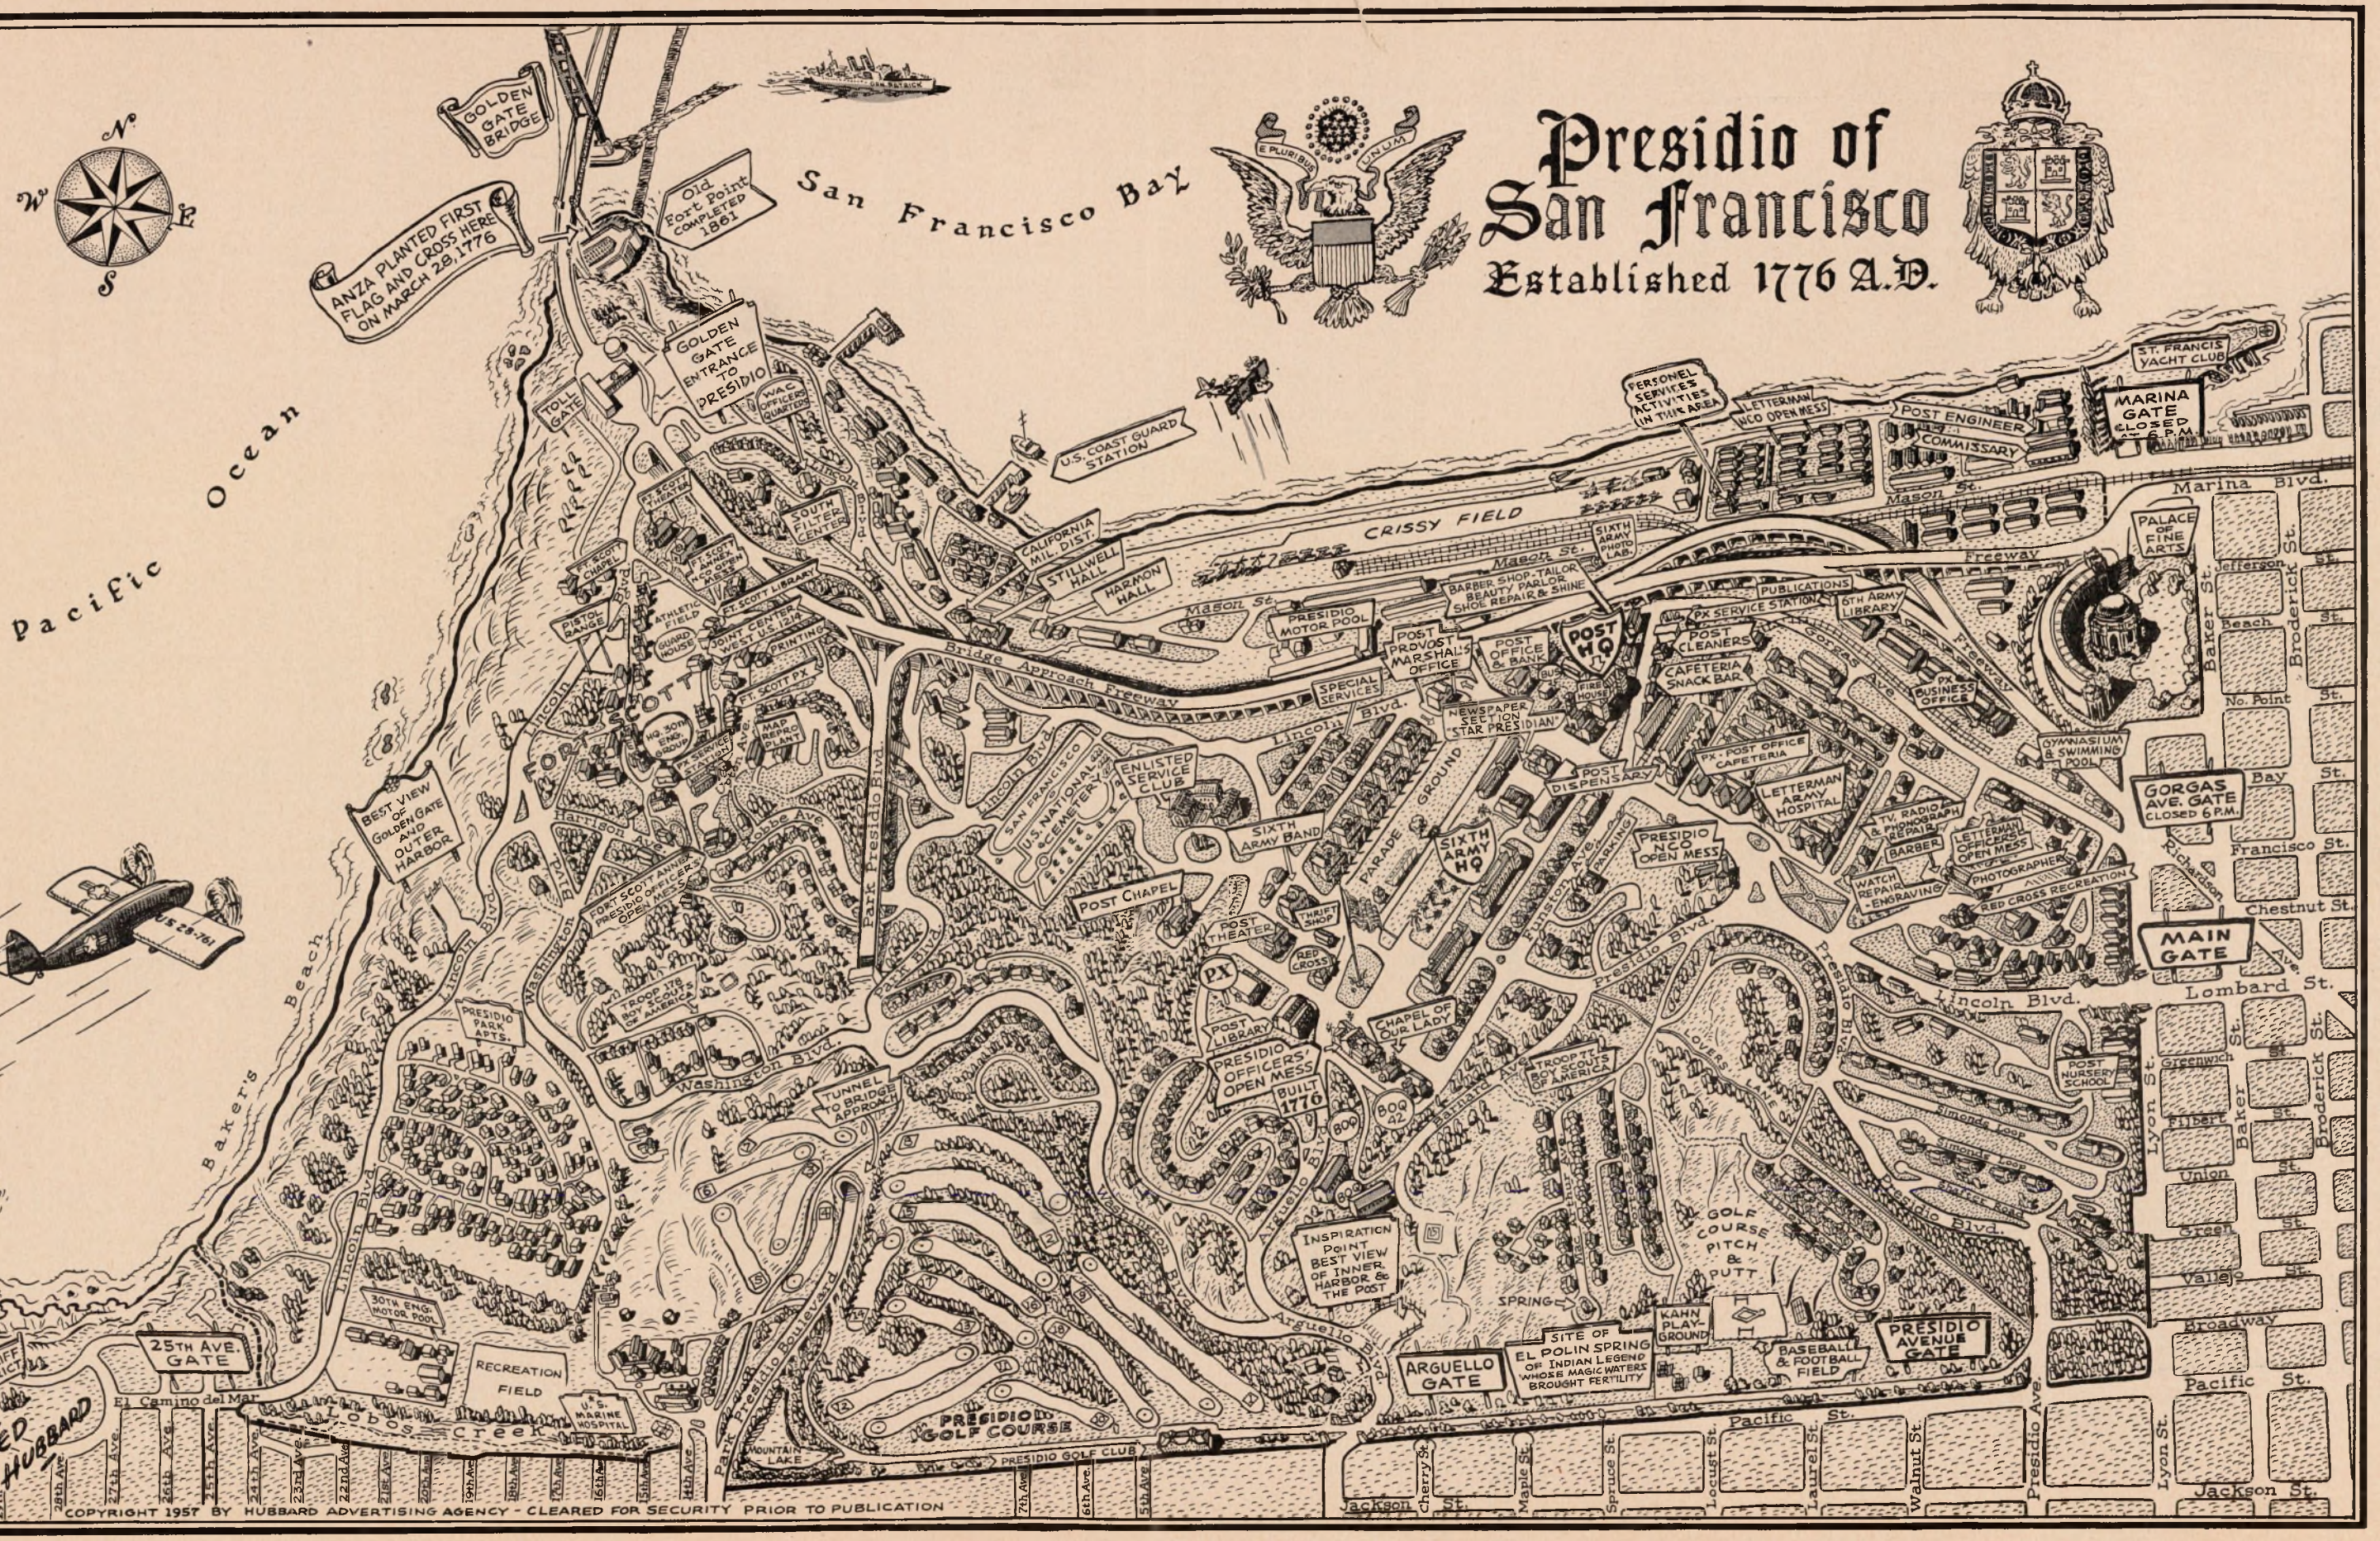
III

If I am captured I will continue to resist by all means available. I will make every effort to escape and aid others to escape. I will accept neither parole nor special favors from the enemy.

IV

If I become a prisoner of war, I will keep faith with my fellow prisoners. I will give no information nor take part in any action which might be harmful to my comrades. If I am senior, I will take command. If not, I will obey the lawful orders of those appointed over me and will back them up in every way.

V



When questioned, should I become a prisoner of war, I am bound to give only name, rank, service number, and date of birth. I will evade answering further questions to the utmost of my ability. I will make no oral or written statements disloyal to my country and its allies or harmful to their cause.

VI

I will never forget that I am an American fighting man, responsible for my actions, and dedicated to the principles which made my country free. I will trust in my God and in the United States of America.

"On Fame's Eternal Camping Ground, Their Silent Tents Are Spread,

And Glory Guards With Solemn Round, The Bivouac Of The Dead."

San Francisco's National Cemetery! . . . It would be remiss to omit . . . in this special issue of the Star Presidian any reference to the military men and women now interred there . . . they were once so active in shaping the events which make Armed Forces Day a living memorial to all who serve.

The graves are numbered, but the dead are numberless . . . legion down the years . . . since before the Nation became a Republic.

On the gentle slopes of this green hill are approximately 23,000 dead from many wars and many climes. Here is a marker to a paymaster who served in the Spanish-American War . . . there a water tender who fought with the Infantry in 1845 . . . farther on a monument erected by the crew of the OREGON to their shipmates of the United States Marine Corps . . . killed in action on the Tartar Wall, Peking, China . . . in defense of the Legations during the Boxer Rebellion.

Army . . . Air Force . . . Marine . . . Navy and related units . . . you can almost see them . . . resplendent in their blues and khakis . . . or mud-caked . . . coming home . . . or being borne home from the Indian Wars . . . from the Civil War . . . World Wars I and II . . . from the far places where so many soldiers served.

Tall helmets and old-style muskets . . . sandalled feet . . . water pouches slung over the leather-fringed jackets of the Western plains . . . doughboys of 1918 . . . Infantrymen of World War II . . . streamlined with the years as to the cut of the coat and the carriage of the men. Home from the Civil War and from Koreo . . . different uniforms, but changeless in patriotism!

The General lies softly by the grave of the Private . . . the Admiral rests well by the side of his cabin boy . . . the common denominator has made them brothers!

Golden Gate Cemetery is maintained by Sharpe General Depot. Its supervisor, John Griffin, directed by Major Arthur Arena of Sharpe General Depot.

John and his wife and child live in a small yellow bungalow inside the cemetery gate. He is a quiet-spoken man whose career is devoted almost exclusively to the administration of military cemeteries across the nation.

John doesn't use a trumpet to announce Reveille or Retreat . . . The dead are so quick to hear. He walks respectfully up the driveway every morning . . . and even the birds sing mutely then, as, under his gentle hands, the flag is raised over the cemetery. It lifts and ripples in the sea-blown air . . . snaps, as if in salute . . . as it tells them of the birth of the day. And at sunset, John returns to bring the banner down . . . folds it and takes it to its hallowed corner in his own home.

Visitors to the Presidio on Armed Forces Day are invited to make even a brief visit to San Francisco National Cemetery while they are on the reservation. The message presented to them there will reaffirm the poet's own words when he wrote of the war dead:

"Your Own Proud Land's Heroic Soil Must Be Your Fitter Grave . . .

DEBRA.

Letterman Has Top Record

Letterman Army Hospital has been on the "front" in two World Wars and the Korea conflict since it was established during the Spanish-American War.

When the United States entered World War I, Letterman ranked as the largest general hospital in the Army. In 1917 it was expanded to 1200-bed capacity and was designated an Orthopedic Center for amputation cases from the American Expeditionary Forces. A year later Orthopedic Surgery became a separate service.

The Army School of Nursing became a part of Letterman's program in 1918. At the beginning of World War I the corps had only 403 nurses, but in 18 months the figure had increased to 21,000.

Two services, Physical Medicine Service and the Psychiatric Center, were established during World War I. The Medical Administration Corps was created just before the U. S. entrance into the war and during the first year of fighting, the Letterman staff numbered 35 officers, 114 nurses and 347 enlisted men.

By 1921 the bed capacity was reduced to 750, which included a 250-bed allocation for Veterans Administration patients. Army personnel treated at the hospital were from the Philippines, Hawaii, China, Alaska, Panama and the western states.

The first interne program was formed in 1920 and in 1924 internes were militarized by appointment as first lieutenants in the Medical Reserve Corps. The program was discontinued and reinstated several times in the years between the two world wars.

Pre-World War II activities became apparent in 1940 when the expansion of the Army raised the usual Letterman patient load from 5,500 a year to more than 9,000. After entry into the war, Letterman became a debarkation hospital for casualties from the Pacific area.

Dante Hospital, Broadway and Van Ness Avenue, and several buildings at Crissy Field were added to the hospital in 1944 to increase the bed capacity to a necessary 3,500. Dante Annex was returned to its civilian owners two years later.

The peak patient load reached 72,000 in 1945, and on 20 October of that year, the hospital set an all-time record by admitting 1,862 patients at one time. Of those admitted, 991 were recovered American military personnel, known as RAMPS, who had been in enemy prison camps during the war.

WAC's were first assigned to Letterman in 1944 and the Hospital Train Unit was authorized in the same year. Evacuation of patients from Letterman to hospitals near their homes was accomplished by hospital train from Crissy Field and by airplane from Mills Field.

When World War II ended, Letterman returned to general hospital status. It received a War Department medal for superior performance during the war.

During the Korea conflict, Letterman again stepped into a debarkation hospital role. Activities were not as heavy, however, since many patients were initially taken to Tokyo hospitals.

Pleasant Surroundings and top equipment and staff combine to make Letterman Army Hospital a haven for the ill for military personnel, active and retired, and their dependents. The hospital also is equipped to lend aid in case of civilian emergencies.

Tasty Menu Will Please AFD Guests

Armed Forces Day visitors have been invited to dine with their soldiers in mess halls at the Presidio, Fort Scott and Fort Baker in Marin County. Lunch will be served from 1100 to 1400 hours.

The mouth watering menu reads as follows: baked ham, raisin sauce, buttered frozen string beans, mashed potatoes, lettuce wedges with 1000 island dressing, lemon cake with butter cream icing, lemonade, coffee, tea and milk. Prices are 55 cents for adults and 30 cents for children.

Host Presidio messes are Headquarters Company, 6000, 163rd MP and Headquarters Company and C Company, USA Garrison. All 30th Engineer Group messes at Fort Scott and the 561st Engineer Company mess at Fort Baker will also be open.

Transportation Will Display Eight Vehicles

Eight types of motor vehicles ranging from a light sedan to a trackmobile will be featured in the Post Transportation display today. The vehicles will be on the main parade ground.

The trackmobile, a new vehicle at the Presidio and rare among other Army installations, operates on rail tracks or over roads. It is used for pulling or switching cars.

Rounding out the display will be a half-ton panel delivery truck; ton and a half van with hydraulic tail gate; ton and a half stake and platform truck; a truck tractor with low boy trailer; bus; and a motor scooter.

The section plans to mount a CONNEX box on the the stake and platform truck. The box, a large metal container, is used by the military to ship household goods overseas. It also plans to have a vehicle on the low boy trailer attached to the truck tractor.

Hospital Has Been SF Landmark 59 Years

Local history of Letterman Army Hospital dates back nearly 59 years to the Spanish-American War.

At that time 22,000 troops had been sent to California enroute to the Philippines and the Chief Surgeon of the Department of California recommended the construction of a 400-bed general hospital to the Surgeon General.

W. H. Wilcox, a San Francisco architect, submitted plans for a pavilion-type hospital which would accommodate 400 patients and cover 393,228 square feet, allow 983 square feet per patient. The completed structure which became the U.S. Army Hospital, Presidio of San Francisco, cost $113,399.50.

The three buildings which at that time comprised the hospital are the present LAH heaquarters building (1016), outpatient clinic (1017) and the general assembly room (1039).

When opened in 1898 the hospital operated with six Medical officers, 23 contract female nurses and 85 enlisted men. A few months later the staff had increased to 19 officers, 37 female nurses and 158 enlisted men.

Colonel Alfred Gerard was the hospital's first Commanding Officer. He performed nearly all operations.

General Medicine, General Surgical and Venereal were the first three professional services offered by the hospital. Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat and Bacteriological and Laboratory services were soon added. During 1899 the hospital served 5,390 patients.

In 1901 the X-ray Laboratory was created to handle fluoroscopic examinations and the taking of radiographs. Three years later the operating pavilion was built and a $585 grant was received from the Surgeon General to purchase billiard tables and to establish a post exchange. The Dental Corps was created by Congress in 1911 and was incorporated into the Medical Department.

During the same year the hospital's name was changed to Letterman General Hospital, in honor of Major Jonathan Letterman, Medical Director of the Army of the Potomac during the Civil War.

Between 1911 and 1914 the hospital acquired a hydro-therapeutic ward, a disinfecting and sterilizing plant and a nurses' dormitory. During these years the hospital averaged 3,000 patients per year and was the largest Army general hospital.

Much Variety interests young people—this is revealed in the Presidio Girl and Boy Scout programs for local youth. Crafts, initiation, aviation and awards are only part of the many activities included in each year's schedule.

Presidio Girl Scouting Offers Varied Projects

Eighty-five Brownies, seventy Intermediates, and twenty-nine Seniors are registered in the eight Girl Scout Troops at the Presidio. About thirty registered adults here serve as their leaders and committee members.

A new Wing Scout Troop encompassing Troop No. 5 here, is taking an aeronautical course under direction of Lt. Charles L. Haney, a pilot with the Sixth U.S. Army Flight Detachment. Through his courses, they have already learned to identify plane types, how an airplane is made to fly, the various workings of motor assembly, and safety measures in connection with flight.

The Wing Scout Troop, first of its kind on the Presidio, is privileged to visit Crissy Field and Hamilton Air Force Base as a medium of on-the-scene instruction. Their club speakers are drawn from commercial airlines in the city of San Francisco, the Ground Observation Corps, Civil Defense Office, and the Civil Areonautical Board.

Mrs. James Enmeier is leader for Troop No. 5. Her assistants are Lt. Ann Damsbo, Miss Lois Morlock and Miss Jere De Roin. The 24 Troop members and their activities are presided over by Miss Beth Quillen.

The Brownie Troop utilizes its recreational time in the study of arts and crafts and related pastimes.

The senior Scouts carry out specific assignments such as entertaining hospital patients, making scrap books for shut-in patients and mittens for the various day camps. They are specifically trained in community action in cases of emergency or disaster.

Mrs. J. G. Ondrick works as general chairman for Troop activities. Under her direction the Girl Scouts held an early-Spring Doll Show which brought a fat sum to the financial fund maintained for the girls' social and recreational activities through their own efforts which include amateur shows, cake and cookie sales, calendar sales and other projects.

In combination with Girl Scout Troops from the city of San Francisco, the Presidio Girl Scouts (senior) take courses in emergency training which include first aid, civil defense and how to care for and entertain small children.

The Presidio Girl Scouts are now in process of completing their work for badges and honors to be presented during the Court Of Awards ceremonies, 27 May.

Post Boy Scout Troops TopCommunityActivity

Happy, wholesome and healthy youth is the theme of the Boy Scout program at the Presidio, as it is worldwide.

The local scout troops—No. 77, representing the Presidio proper, and Troop 178, which draws its membership from Wherry Housing, are under charter by the National Boy Scout Council of San Francisco for the past 15 years.

Partly independent of civilian control, both units serve the civic, social and athletic needs of the sons of officers and enlisted men serving in the immediate area. Their goal pursues the national ideal—to build good citizenship and strong moral character.

Combining their activities over the past years, the two units have worked together in conservation projects involving soil erosion, clean-up details, paper collections, ticket sales for civic projects, distribution of special bulletins advancing public interest in national voting and the maintenance of a Pet Cemetery on the reservation.

Both scout troops use camping facilities at Camp Lilienthal, near Fairfax; Camp Alice Eastwood, in Mount Tamalpais State Park; Camp Royanah, in Guerneyville; and the tent sites in Yosemite and Sequoia National Parks.

Locally, the Boy Scouts make regular trips to Fleishhacker Zoo, Golden Gate Park, Kirby Beach and other places of interest within hiking distance.

Training in scout leadership is constantly in progress. During the past six months the scout masters and troop committeemen have completed two courses conducted by the local scout council.

During this month the scouts will participate in the local Scout-O-Rama when the troops will be in charge of the demonstration booth on Marksmanship. In mid-May they take part in a reclamation project at Kirby Beach beyond the Golden Gate Bridge. The plan includes removal of barbed wire, thinning and transplanting of trees, removal of poison oak, and other clearance. During the latter part of this month the scouts participate in a district camporee at Kirby Beach when they compete in a demonstration of outdoor skills and general camping techniques.

Lt. Col. Willett Ware, Jr., is Institutional Representative for Sixth Army Boy Scouts. The adult committee includes Col. Henry M. Greenleaf, Maj. Frank D. Ivey, Capt. James S. Hackney, Capt. Charles R. Holland (Letterman Army Hospital), M/Sgt. John D. Vekich and M/Sgt. Frank Campbell. M/Sgt. William Lucas is scout master for Troop 178 and Sgt. George K. Freedman is scout master for Troop 77.

At the last Court of Honor conducted by Troop 77, three Star Scout awards were made. There were also three First Class awards, five Second Class awards, five Merit Badges, five Leader Warrants, one Tenderfoot award and two Adult Training Emblems. Leaders in the adult group have been trained through the various programs set up by the San Francisco Scout Council. Similar ceremonies brought a like number of awards to members of Troop 176.

Lieutenant Commander James B. MacKinsey is Troop Council Chairman for 176, whose Scout Advisor is Mr. Clyde H. Martin. Col. Robert H. Ryan is chairman for the Explorer Post.

Youth Program Molds Future Leaders

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Youth Activities, a plan to aid in the social and recreational guidance of the sons and daughters of military personnel on the Presidio, is operated by a council which meets monthly to discuss plans and outline fund-raising projects in support of the Youth Program.

The Teenage Club, which comes under sponsorship and administrative guidance of the Youth Activities Council, is for the most part a self-supporting social and recreational headquarters for local boys and girls between the ages of seven and seventeen.

Fund raising projects carried out by the club members include variety shows, Post clean-up projects, basketball games, beauty contests, doll shows and paper drive sales.

Salaries of the Teenage Club employees are paid through sales of merchandise at the Post Thrift Shop through which financial aid is extended to all Presidio activities devoted to the welfare of the children of military parents at the Presidio.

Council members responsible for administration and guidance of the Youth Program here are Col. Harold M. Lindstrom, chairman; Lt. Col. James N. Enmier, Teenage Club Advisor; Lt. Col. Willett Ware, Jr., Boy Scout Advisor; Lt. Col. Thomas E. Baker; Chap. (Maj.) Erhard H. Harms; Maj. Wilfred Curley; Capt. John P. Hoover; Capt. Ronald F. Ellis; M/Sgt. Ferdinand Johnson; M/Sgt. Charles R. Sprague; Mrs. Blanche Parsons, Post Thrift Shop Director; Chap. (Lt. Col.) John Strevig; Capt. John F. Kallam; Capt. Richard McIntosh; Lt. Frances J. Kirk; and Capt. Herbert M. Youngdahl, Funds Custodian.

Group activities deriving financial support from the Presidio Youth Activities Fund include the Boy and Girl Scout Troops, the Youth Baseball League, the Little League, Junior Rifleers, The Teenage Club and the Chaplains' Recreational-Social programs.

PX Has Special Booth

The Post Exchange has built a 12-foot wide booth representing the refreshments section of the PX for the Armed Forces Display. It will be stocked with hot dogs, peanuts, coffee, sandwiches, doughnuts, milk, orange drinks, candy and cigarettes, all for sale to patrons on the parade ground that day.

Key Presidio Companies Furnish Soldier Experts

At an Army command center such as the Presidio it is the function of the headquarters companies to house, feed and administer the enlisted men who work in the varied office jobs necessary at an Army headquarters.

Headquarters Company Sixth U.S. Army, Bldg. 100, under the command of Lt. Col. Verne E. Marsden, performs these housekeeping functions for the personnel working at Army headquarters. In addition to these troops, this company also has the responsibility of housing and feeding all personnel who attend Sixth U. S. Army schools at the Presidio. Its mess hall, Bldg. 101, also feeds personnel for 6300 Signal Service, 16th Base Post Office and the Sixth U. S. Army Flight Det.

At Post level these functions are carried out by two companies, Headquarters Company, USA Garrison, Bldg. 105, commanded by Capt. Charles J. Monges, and Company C, USA Garrison, Bldg. 103, commanded by Capt. Edgar Unthank.

The personnel who work in Post headquarters are housed at Headquarters, USA Garrison. This company also provides personnel for the Teen-age Club, Boy and Girl Scout activities and Letterman Army Hospital Special Services. Headquarters Company mess feeds almost 500 persons. Besides their own personnel, they feed the Sixth U. S. Army Band, the 56th and the 102d Machine Records Unit.

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor:

"On this Armed Forces Day, the United States Army stands guard on the frontiers of the Free World as a powerful deterrent to war. Our combat-ready Army confidently prepares to carry out its important present and future roles in maintaining the security of our Nation."

Chief of Staff, USA

Post personnel who work in transportation, engineer, signal, ordnance and quartermaster sections are assigned to Company C, USA Garrison. This company runs the Post Transit and Company C consolidated mess in Bldg. 617 where they feed about 300 daily.

Company E, USA Garrison, located in Bldg. 103-A and commanded by Capt. Raymond S. Smelser, is the Presidio's holding company. Most replacements report to this unit.

Unique Postal Unit Ready For Service

The only strategic reserve base postal unit on active duty in the Army today is the 16th BPO which is located here at the Presidio, Bldg. 101-A.

Primary mission of this unit is training so that it will be ready at a moment's notice to leave the Presidio and join any emergency troop concentration.

The existence of this unit is based on the Army's realization that "mail from home" is a morale factor of vital importance. In past conflicts, World War II and Korea, mail service sometimes lagged while key reservists were trained to handle it. The 16th BPO represents a reserve unit activated in advance and ready to serve the troops immediately.

Besides its training activities, the 16th BPO operates the Post Locator section which keeps tabs on every man at the Presidio and forwards mail to those who have moved on to new stations.

If the 16th BPO were called away from the Presidio to handle emergency mail service, it would probably move to a port or a major air base. There the unit of four officers and 42 enlisted men could set up operations and provide mail service for as many as 30,000 troops.

In terms of its official mission, BPO personnel are "capable of providing for receipt, separation, distribution, routing and dispatch of mail to and from troops in a designated area or command."

BPO duty at the Presidio is generally considered "choice." However, the men of this unit just recently returned from two weeks of strenuous bivouac and field problems at the Hunter Liggett Military Reservation south of Monterey, where they got a taste of the long, hard hours called for during emergency situations.

During the Korean conflict it was not uncommon for BPO men to work seven-day weeks of 12-hour shifts.

The 16th BPO, which is commanded by Capt. Alfred L. Brazeau, was the first activated at Guadacanal in 1943. After serving at various Pacific locations it was transferred to Japan and deactivated in August, 1951. In September, 1952, the unit was reactivated here at the Presidio.

Mock Crime Will Display CID Methods

The 60th Military Police, CID unit, plans to honor Armed Forces Day with a parade ground display featuring photographic illustrations of crime detection, castings of moulage showing collected evidence in group and individual form, and finger-printing processes used in identification.

Members of the unit will also demonstrate the use of the polyograph and related mechanisms drawn into use in evidence.

Ultra-violet and speed graphic photography will illustrate other facets of crime detection, as will a copying kit and photostatic copy work.

A mock crime scene with a live model portraying a death scene is being planned for the Armed Forces display, featured by the Traffic Investigation section of the CID unit.

Courtesy copies of finger prints will be presented to visitors requesting them for personal use.

Charles E. Wilson:

"For the eighth consecutive year, Armed Forces Day is an occasion when we give prideful acknowledgment to the men and women of the American Defense establishment as the shields and protectors of our freedoms.

"I urge communities of the nation to observe this day by promoting visits of their citizens to our posts and bases. There they may observe the skills and equipment of the dedicated persons who hold in trained hands and minds our deterrent 'Power for Peace.'

"You will find them ready and able to wield that power should a crisis command it.

"For this and for all that they are and do, we bring our appreciation on this, their day of special recognition."

Machine Records Unit Keys Personnel Service

The Army keeps tabs on its personnel the same way business concerns keep track of their customers—through utilization of the most modern electronic business machines.

At the Presidio two machine records units working as an integrated body under Maj. Robert D. Jones, Chief MRU, Adjutant General Section, Hq., Sixth U. S. Army, are responsible for counting the heads of active duty and reserve personnel in the eight Western States.

To collect the necessary personnel data the 102d MRU, under Capt. Charles C. Cunningham, and the 56th MRU, under Capt. Bradd B. Coons, make use of the following business machines: Punch Card Varifier, Interpreter, sorter, collator, reproducer, plus accounting machines and data processing machines.

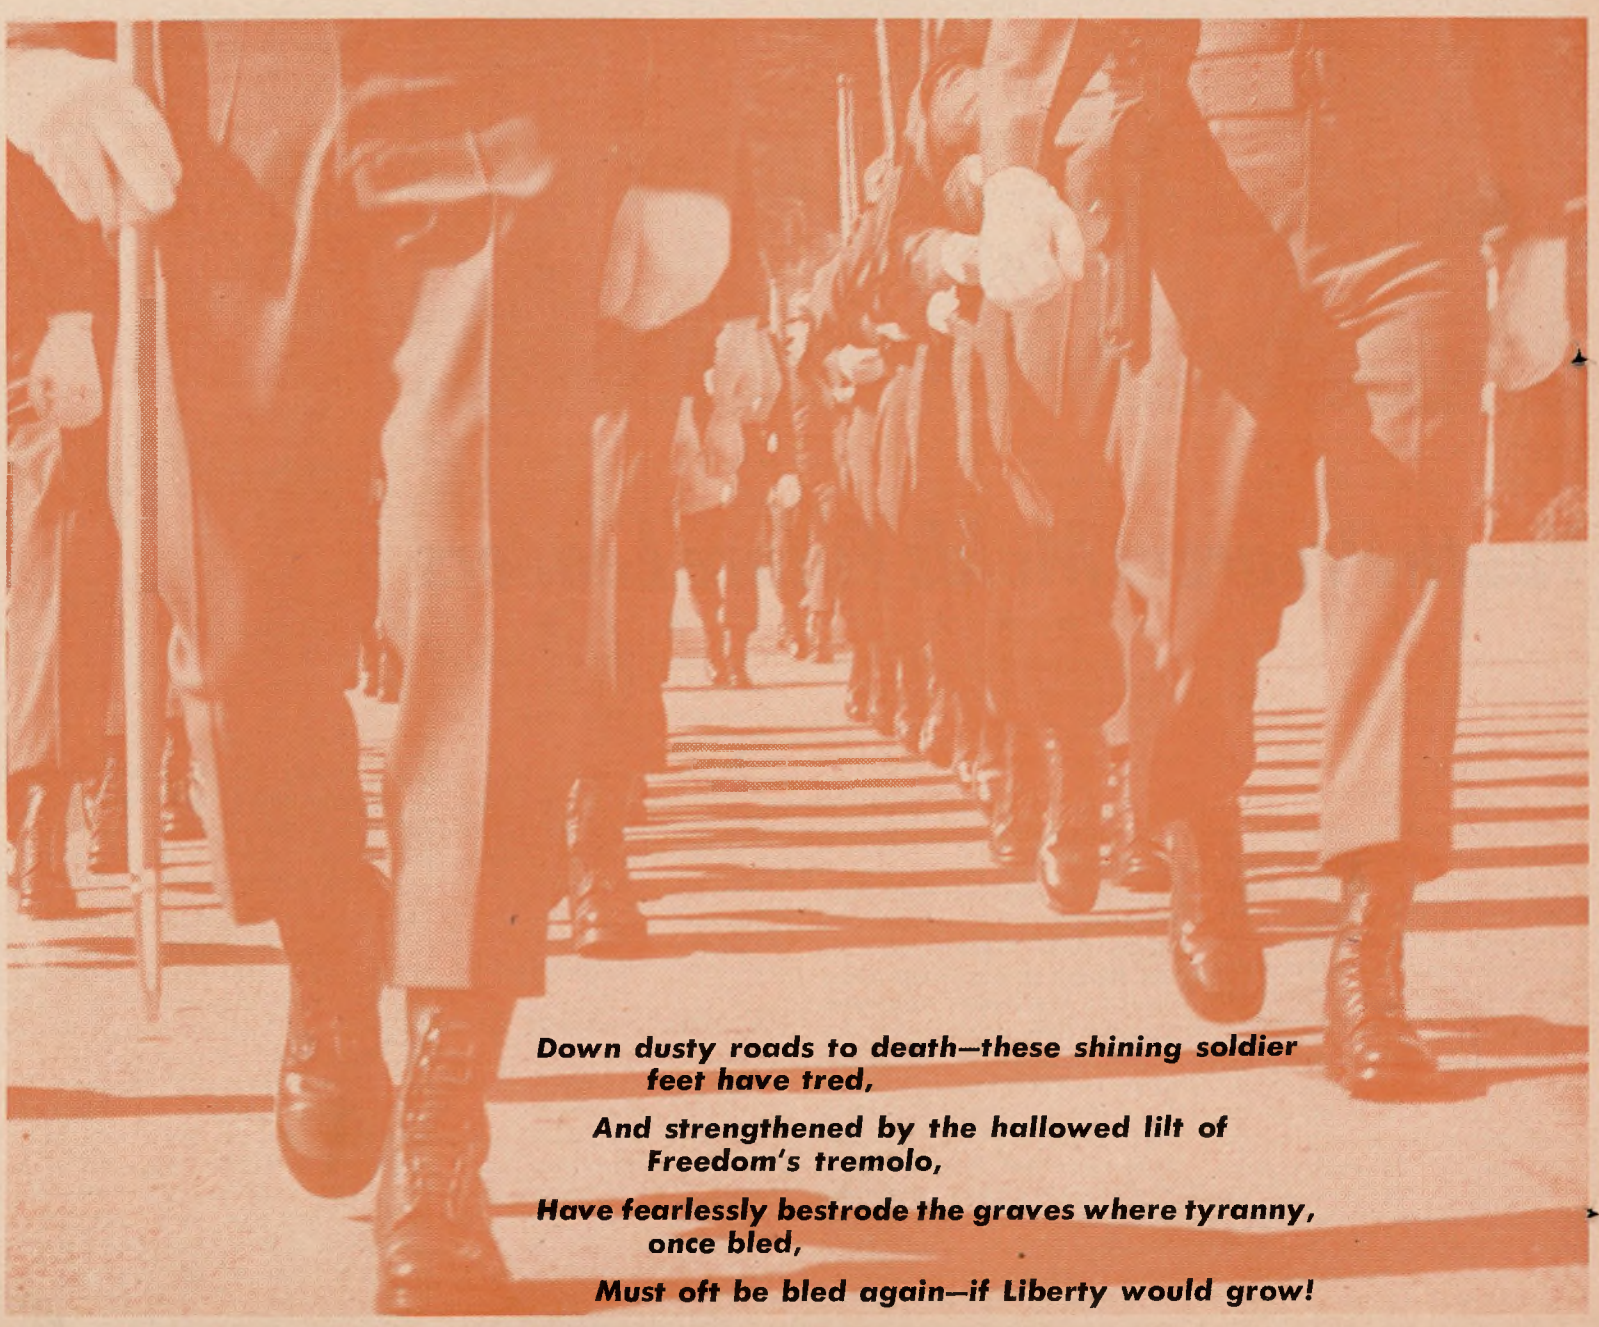
The units follow approved business methods and, according to Captain Coons, "are always looking for a new wrinkle." On occasion, the Army has been able to show big business a thing or two new in the personnel accounting business.

One new wrinkle that has recently been added at the Presidio is the utilization of two data transceivers which maintain electronic radio contact with MRU stations in the Pacific and with Washington, D. C. Punch cards can be fed into a transceiver here and be instantaneously reproduced thousands of miles away.

The end result of these machines is the feeding of information to a gigantic electronic brain in Washington, D. C., known as the Electronic Digital Computer (705). This electronic complex is currently at work memorizing the names of some 120,000 Army officers and from 200 to 300 facts about each man.

The official definition of the machine record unit mission is as follows: "To collect, audit and maintain personnel, organizational and equipment data from personnel sections, administration centers and units both active Army and reserves, and to furnish timely administrative information reports, statistics, programs and records required by the Department of Army and local commands."

Hon. Wilber M. Brucker:



"The establishment of a firm peace based upon honor and justice among all nations is the indispensable requirement for survival of our enlightened civilization. To this vital task the United States Army, — strong, vigorous, progressive, and alert—is steadfastly dedicated. The Army will be ever ready to discharge its manifold responsibilities as a pillar of our diplomacy for peace and as a guarantor of our national security."

Secretary of the Army

Personnel accounting troubles which developed during World War I paved the way for the adoption of the modern business methods currently used by the Army. The first MRU unit was conceived in 1939 when it was evident that the Army was approaching its greatest period of growth.

Activated in 1940, the MRU outfits went to war just like the rest of the Army. While some were stationed in the Continental United States and Army Headquarters, there were mobile units operating in the various combat zones all over the world. One MRU in Germany even took a number of prisoners.

The Army strives to get the most defense for the money from the resources provided to it. It spends its money prudently for the essentials of defense in accord with good business practices. It is constantly self-critical, trying on its own initiative to uncover inefficiency and malpractice.

Down dusty roads to death—these shining soldier feet have tred,

And strengthened by the hallowed lilt of Freedom's tremolo,

Have fearlessly bestrode the graves where tyranny, once bled,

Must oft be bled again—if Liberty would grow!

Presidio Is Ideal Lure To Outdoors

Outdoor sportsmen assigned to the Presidio could not hope to find a more ideal location at which to follow their favorite pastimes, whether it be fresh-water angling, salt-water fishing, large game hunting, bird hunting, swimming, skiing, or packing into the mountains for a few days.

Within a few hours' time from the Presidio lies some of the best fresh-water fishing to be found anywhere. Mountain lakes and mountain streams and tumbling rivers offer numerous species of trout, salmon and bass and many other kinds of fish that abound in the fresh waters.

Regularly scheduled trips and chartered boats are available to the salt-water angler, or for the individual who enjoys salt-water fishing, but is plagued with a squeamish stomach, there are innumerable piers and beaches from which a line may be dangled or cast. Types of piscatorial life inhabiting the Bay Area salt-waters are too numerous to mention.

A number of mountainous regions within a short distance of the post abound with wildlife and game. The hunter who prefers large game can hardly fail to find some game that is to his liking in these regions. These same regions boast some of the world's top skiing accommodations in the winter and beautiful scenery to be enjoyed during the remainder of the year from horseback or on camping trips for the entire family.

The Bay Area boasted the second largest average wild fowl take per hunter in California in the last season. The widespread lakes and quiet bays in this area are ideal attractions for the migrating ducks and geese that pause here in their migration or choose to spend the winter here, as some of the birds do. The Fort Cronkite Pool is one of the favorite spots for birds and hunters.

The state of California maintains a large and well-organized Fish and Game Department that is proud of its natural resources and spends millions of dollars each year to preserve and protect these facilities that attract sportsmen from all parts of the United States. The outdoor sportsman has only to take advantage of the numerous opportunities that are open to him.

Cricket for All

London — Cricket — as played throughout the British Empire— is for the common man as well as the wealthy.

The first Vanderbilt Cup Race was run on Long Island on Oct. 8, 1904, and the winner was A. L. Campbell in a foreign-built Mercedes.

Team Sports Superior To Mass Muscle Building Says General

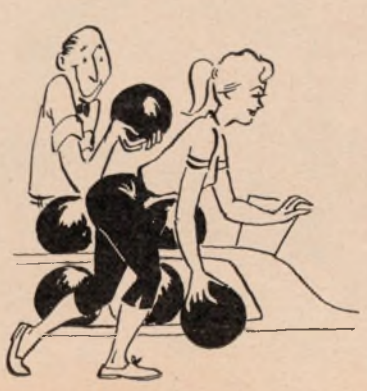
★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

A five-star general who chose a military career rather than a big league ball player's career, Omar N. Bradley, spoke his piece on the benefit of team sports as opposed to mass muscle building as is done in the Soviet Union.

"I am convinced team sports as we play them produce better citizens and superior fighting men. This was graphically demonstrated to me at the River Elbe near the end of the European campaign in the last war. We had second lieutenants who showed more drive and initiative than Russian generals.

"The Russians always were having to refer back to Moscow for decisions. Our lieutenants made decisions on the spot. They had developed a confidence in themselves and in their buddies."

Moscow papers made snide remarks about the "decadent physical condition" of the United States after the unofficial team results showed that Russia had beaten U. S. teams. Said Bradley, "I have no argument with calisthenics and gymnastics. They are wonderful for condition and we have used them on a large scale ourselves, but for developing men and soldiers, you cannot beat team sports. I found out long ago that nations with great emphasis on mass athletics put the same emphasis on their war endeavors. They throw their weight forward in masses without the concern which we have for the individual life. Individually there is little resourcefulness."



Bradley attended West Point at the same time that President Eisenhower did, played football with the President and was a baseball star, rated by big league scouts as probably having a better throwing arm than any in the majors outside of the New York Giants' George Burns. His baseball throw at the Academy is still a record.

Although very light, Bradley played in the Point backfield and line and won his senior letter as a pivot man and line backer. Eisenhower had suffered a knee injury which forced him to drop football.

Bradley and the President have often been golf partners. Bradley has a nine handicap and shoots in the low 80's and high 70's, a few strokes better than his playing partner. "The day I was put on the inactive list, I shot a par 72 at Burning Tree in Washington. I was loose and relaxed. It was one of the best rounds I ever had. The next day I was back at 81."

The retired general is an avid sports fan and keeps abreast of a number of sports. He played semi-pro ball and received a number of offers to play professional ball, but chose the Army. "And you know what," the modest general said, "every member of our baseball team at West Point became a general. It proved the value of team sports to the military."

Sgt. Domingo Padilla of Ft. Benning, Ga., entered the 3,000 5,000 and 15,000 meter runs in the recent Third Army track meet and finished fifth in all three. Not bad for a 47-year-old.

Sports Are Big Part Of WAC's Life

Sports are an integral part of the training and recreation of the Women's Army Corps just as they are part of the remainder of the armed services off duty recreation and sports.

The women's sports program is maintained on the same basis as men's and includes intra-mural level sports and Post level teams. Women's competition does not extend beyond area level to All-Army events as do the major sports of the men.

Presidio's women have also established an enviable record for themselves in Sixth Army competition as have the men. In the recent Sixth Army Volleyball Tournament held at Letterman Gym, the WAC team made it a twin sweep when they captured the female division title while the men were doing the same in the male division.

In the one event that can result in All-Army competition for women, bowling, a Presidio woman paired with another Sixth Army area bowler to win the All-Army doubles competition. Presidio's women annexed the Sixth Army women's team championship in the area tournament held at Ft. Mason.

The local women are also the winners of last season's Sixth Army Volleyball title, which makes them a two-time consecutive winner of the Sixth Army title along with the men's team.

Further addition to the local's trophy case is the championship trophy for Sixth Army area basketball title. The women garnered the title in the previous season but did not fare quite so well this season when they finished in their respective league.

Hampered by a lack of available competition for practice games that does not plague the men's team, the women have done extremely well for themselves. Their accomplishments are all the more remarkable, when the fact is known that women's sports do not receive all the support that the men's teams enjoy.

Only 100 Tons

More than fifty teams with six members on each team roll at least once each week on Post alleys. This means that nearly 3,000 keglers roll an average of 45,000 balls in one game apiece and 135,000 balls have been rolled by the time each of the league bowlers have competed in league action. If each ball averages seven pins knocked over, you have 945,000 pins that the pin boys must reset.

All of this action takes place in three alleys located on the Presidio with a total of only thirteen alleys. That too is quite a bit of traffic on so few boards. Assuming that the average weight of the balls used is fifteen pounds, Presidio keglers hoist over 112 tons or 2,025,000 pounds in one week, in pursuit of their favorite pastime.

If the mere thought of so much exertion is fatiguing to you, you must remember that it is all for the sake of recreation and relaxation.

Army Emergency Relief Drive Starts

Sixty-Six Years young, M/Sgt. Arne Stenslie, the only man to serve continuously with the Second Infantry Division in Korea, retired from the Army last weekend at Fort Lawton. Known as "Mr. Second Division," the sergeant received his third Commendation Ribbon with metal pendant from Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff. Sergeant Stenslie was wounded three times in Korea and was awarded the Silver Star six years ago.

Soldiers' Own Fund Seeks Local Support

The Joint Army Emergency Relief-Army Relief Society Fund Campaign is underway at the Presidio and will continue through 10 June, according to Capt. Herbert M. Youngdahl, local AER Officer.

Proceeds from the drive cover the annual loans and grants made by the two organizations and the distribution of information concerning assistance to Army personnel and needy widows and orphans of Regular Army members.

The fund is supported by voluntary contributions from every Army member and donations from civilian personnel. Civilians are not solicited.

Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, described the campaign as follows:

"The purpose of the joint campaign is to raise, with the least possible burden, the minimum funds necessary to permit both organizations to operate without incurring an annual deficit, and to keep all members of the Army informed concerning the financial assistance which they and their families may receive when faced with an emergency.

"The funds provide the means through which we in the Army cas assist one another in time of need. Last year more than 37,000 members of the Army received financial assistance in excess of $4,000,000.

"I urge each member of the Army to give wholehearted support to the 1957 campaign. It is through your generous contributions that the AER and ARS continue their successful role of assisting those in need."

Col. Carl E. Lundquist, Post Commander, also urged participation in the campaign.

"Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society are basic to the tradition that the 'Army takes care of its own.' Last year, at the Presidio alone, 142 grants or loans totaling $15,316 were made. These monies went to assist your fellow soldiers in those financial emergencies to which none of us are immune. It is my sincere hope that every single member of this command will make a special effort, even to the point of some self sacrifice, to contribute generously during this annual drive."

Men of the 30th AAA Group contributed $858 during the first part of the campaign. Special fund-raising projects are planned by the Sports and Service Club departments of Special Services and the Presidio Officers' Open Mess.

Chief To Chicago District; Successor Not Named Now

Brigadier General Louis J. Rumaggi, Sixth Army Chief of Staff since 1955, has been assigned to the U. S. Army Engineer Division North Central in Chicago. A successor has not been announced.

General Rumaggi will report to his new assignment on 15 July after an orientation in the Office of the Chief of Engineers in Washington. The general served as Deputy Chief for Military Operations in that office before his Presidio assignment.

Graduated from West Point in 1922, the general received his bachelor of science degree in civil engineering from the University of California in 1927.

During World War II General Rumaggi served with the 30th Engineer Topographic Battalion on various stateside assignments before going to the Southwest Pacific Theater in June, 1944. During his 30-month tour, the general attained the position of Acting Chief Engineer, Army Forces, Western Pacific.

After the outbreak of hostilities in Korea, General Rumaggi joined the Ninth Corps as Deputy Chief of Staff. From October, 1952, until November of the following year, he was Engineer for the Eighth U.S. Army.

General Rumaggi was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service as Eighth Army Engineer in Korea and was decorated by the Republic of Korea with the Ulchi Medal with Silver Star, one of its highest awards.

The general also holds the Legion of Merit, the Commendation Ribbon with Metal Pendant, the Philippine Liberation Medal, the Philippine Presidential Unit Citation and the Republic of Korea Presidential Unit Citation.

Set Presentation Show For DA 'Reserve Award'

A Department of Defense "Reserve Award" for cooperation with the Armed Forces Reserve program will be presented to the Richfield Oil Company by Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander, today. The presentation ceremony is scheduled at 1630 hours on the parade ground.

The award is the first to be given at the Presidio and in Northern California by the Army. Mr. Charles S. Jones, Richfield Oil Company president, will accept the award in behalf of the firm.

The DOD citation points out several projects and policies which have strengthened cooperation with the Reserve program. Among these are the company's policy of granting military leave in addition to regular leave; granting space and facilities to the 968th QM Corps Mobile Petroleum Products Laboratory; and presenting a dramatic story of the 91st Infantry Division and the Reserve program in general on the television program "Success Story."

Brig. Gen. Menist D. Stuart, 91st Infantry Division CG, will participate in the ceremony. Other division officers will attend.

Invitations have been sent to Maj. Gen. Robert D. Landry, 4th Air Force Commander; Maj. Gen. George F. Good, Jr., Department of the Pacific, U. S. Marine Corps CG; and Rear Adm. John R. Redman, 12th Naval District Commandant.

The ceremony will be televised live on KGO-TV from 1630 to 1700 hours.

5th Infantry Division Goes; Troops To "Pentomic" Units

The 5th Infantry Division, located at Fort Ord, will be inactivated on 1 June, the Department of the Army has announced. The troop units composing the division will be realigned as part of the overall reorganization of the Army under the "Pentomic" concept.

The change will have little effect upon the active status and military population of Fort Ord as one of the Army's principal military posts. Present plans provide for the activation of a a U.S. Army replacement training center and for the expansion of the Combat Developments Experimentation Center. Troops assigned to the 5th are expected to be transferred to these organizations.

The designations of the division's component regiments will be kept active in the form of separate battle groups, organized as parts of other Army divisions in the Regular Army establishment.

Holiday Ahead

Military and civilian personnel will enjoy an added holiday on Memorial Day, 30 May. All work except essential staff functions will be suspended.

Due to the holiday, The Star Presidian will be distributed on Wednesday, 29 May. Copy deadlines have been moved up to noon, Monday, 27 May.

Will Be Closed

The Army Commissary Store will be closed Thursday, 30 May, for the legal holiday. The Commissary will be open all day Friday, 31 May. The Self Service Center will be closed Tuesday, 28 May, for inventory. No sales will be made on that day.

Presidio "NeedleMan" Happy In Physical Therapy Duties

"I had no idea of going into medical work until I entered the Army and was sent to Brooke Army Hospital Medical Center," explained Sgt. Val. D. Cherechukin, NCOIC of the Immunization and Physical Therapy Section at the Post Dispensary.

Known as "The Needle Man" among Presidio personnel, Sergeant Cherechukin is a member of the Medical Specialist Corps. Since receiving his local assignment in March, 1955, he has received on-the-job physical therapy training.

Laboratory and pharmacy work hold the most interest for the sergeant. He hopes to take an advanced Army medical course in the future.

Sergeant Cherechukin entered the service in 1951 and after completing basic training, went to Fort Sam Houston for his 16-week medical training. From Texas he went to the Far East and became a "Procurement Accounting Specialist" with the post exchange. During his 46-month stay he was attached to the 8079th Army Hospital located outside of Tokyo.

"I was given the exchange assignment because I had been a department manager with Montgomery Ward as a civilian," the sergeant said.

Born in China, Sergeant Cherechukin has been in San Francisco since 1940.

It's Easy hopes Shirley Rodenhizer as she gets a polio shot from Sgt. Val Cherechukin, NCOIC of the Immunization and Physical Therapy Section, Post Dispensary. The sergeant developed his interest in the medical field after completing a 16-week Army training course at Brooke Army Hospital Medical Center.

549th Engs. Will Map Rugged California Mountain Area

Some 131 officers and enlisted men of the 549th Engineer Company (30th Engineer Group, will leave 3 June to undertake the mapping of five quadrangles in the White Mountain area of California. The project will be handled in conjunction with the U. S. Geological Survey in Sacramento.

The 549th will be augmented by 45 officers and enlisted men from the 521st Engineer Company, which will provide aerial support, and 10 Headquarters Company men who will operate water purification kits and radio communications.

The base camp will be set up in Crestview, Calif. The 549th, which is commanded by Lt. George Jacob, is expected to remain in the field until late August.

We're Five Years Old Today!

With this issue The Star Presidian completes its fifth year as an Army newspaper. Organized by its current editor, it replaced several previous attempts to establish both post and Sixth Army publications, bringing together the Sixth Army newspaper, Western Star, and the Post newspaper, Presidian, under one editorial staff and budget. In 1952, the then Sixth Army Commander, Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, requested a single publication with a format "perceptive and elastic enough to serve every member of the Presidio Community. One (newspaper) that will carry forward the ideas of the Army Commander on questions of policy and service and chronicle the outstanding achievements and accomplishments of this post and headquarters." An editor was sought from working newsmen and editors throughout the area. Mr. Erwin, then editing the Camp Roberts Parade, was chosen by the Army Commander. Since its inception, The Star Presidian has won two Department of the Army Newspaper Awards for excellence and numerous plaudits, from professional and laymen alike, for layout, typography, content and service.

Latvian Officer Found Profession In America

As a young Latvian boy determined to become a doctor, Capt. Ciprijans Garancs stubbornly snatched at intermittent opportunities to attend school while being forced to serve in two armies during World War II.

Captain Garancs, now Tissue Pathologist at the Sixth Army Medical Laboratory, came to the United States in 1950 under the sponsorship of a Catholic priest whom he had helped in Germany.

Born in Latvia, the doctor started his pre-medicine training in 1936 at the beginning of the war period. Five years later he was forced into the Russian Army; however, he was not shipped out of Latvia because of a panic in the army due to the coming outbreak of the war.

During the turmoil, Captain Garancs was able to return to the University of Latvia Medical School for two years. This time his studies were interrupted by his forced service in the Latvian Legion, a group of all available young men organized by the Germans to work for German forces. He worked with the legion in hospitals until the end of the war. First he was assigned to Latvia, then Russia and finally was shipped to Germany.

Freedom to Work
Capt. Ciprijans Garancs

When the war ended, Captain Garancs stayed in Germany and completed the University School of Medicine in Heidelberg, which was in the American zone. He then worked as a general practitioner for the International Refugee Organization until coming to the United States in 1950.

"I decided upon the United States mainly because I was afraid of the Russians and did not want to go to a small country where communism undermines the lives of newly-established displaced persons. Everyone likes to get out of communistic countries because the government owns not only what you have, but also what you are."

"A dictatorship goes by the moment; a democracy by law," he explained.

After entering the United States, Captain Garancs first built roofs until he learned English and then completed a one-year internship at Saint Joseph's Hospital in New Jersey and a four-residency in Pathology at Saint Luke's Hospital and Western Reserve Hospital in Cleveland. He entered the Army in 1955 under the Doctor Draft Law.

"The United States offered me as a doctor more opportunity to work in my own profession," he summed up.

Just last month Captain Garancs passed the College of American Boards in Pathology, the final scholastic hurdle in his career.

All-Army suggestion award of $100 was presented to Mr. Paul Breglia by Col. Steven S. Cerwin, Sixth Army Signal Officer. Mr. Breglia received a local $35 award for his suggestion last August.

Six Army Civilians Win Top Suggestion Awards

Mr. Paul Breglia, Sixth Army Signal Section, has been awarded a $100 check for Army-wide adoption of a suggestion which is expected to save the Army about $2,857. Five other local employees were awarded checks for suggestions.

The suggestion, which was adopted locally last year, concerned the revising of a routine form. The Chief of Office Services Unit, Maintenance and Administration Branch, Mr. Breglia has been with the section since February 1952.

Two employees of the Army Command and Administrative Network (ACAN) in Davis and Middletown, Calif., were awarded $10 checks. Recipients are Mr. Eldon Kempton and Mr. William D. Doty. This was the 13th suggestion award received by Mr. Kempton.

Mr. Harold Sherf, Post Ordnance, received a $25 check as his fifth suggestion award; Mrs. Mildren Noblet, Post Signal, won $15; and Mrs. Marie Warner, Sixth Army Finance and Accounting, received $50 for her second adopted award.

Info Expert Tells Military Role At State

Colonel Arthur C. Timboe, chief of Sixth Army Information Activities, was a guest lecturer at San Jose State College this week.

Speaking to journalism and public relations majors, Col. Timboe detailed the progress of information activities in today's Army. He stressed the recent revitalization of the Army's program and pointed out that numerous opportunities for military service in their chosen fields are being made available to journalism graduates.

"This year, and for several years to come, the Army will assign fifty ROTC graduates who are journalism majors to public information duties following completion of their branch schooling. This is quite an exception to the general policy of Department of the Army which normally requires officers to serve in branch material assignments following graduation from their basic courses."

Colonel Timboe also stressed the growing importance of Army newspapers and the role they play in supplementing command lines via positive troop information "that results in better understanding and higher morale."

Performance Awards Given Six Employees

Six civilian Presidio and California Military District employees have been awarded a total of $1,100 for sustained superior performance of duty.

Top award winner was Mr. Norman Bader, Chief of the Management Division, Sixth Army Comptroller Section. Mr. Bader, who has been at the Presidio since 1946, received a $300 check from Col. C. G. Gealta, Asst. Comptroller, Sixth Army.

Awards of $200 were presented to Mrs. Wilford Hickman, Sixth Army Signal; Mrs. James H. O'Brien, Post Quartermaster; and Miss Leah Herz, Region I, 115th CIC Detachment.

Mrs. Hickman, who received her award from Capt. Albert C. Eldridge, has been with the Communication Center for more than 15 years. Maj. Jack R. Hunt made the award presentation to Mrs. O'Brien and Col. S. Gruneck did the honors for Miss Herz.

Mrs. Hazel M. Keyes and Mrs. Marian J. Dennis, CMD employees, received $100 checks from Col. Frank H. Maerdian, Deputy Chief.

Nike Records were set recently by Seattle's 28th AAA Missile Battalion when they fired the first Nike guided missiles at low-altitude targets. Lt. Col. M. A. "Buck" Rogers, Battalion CO, demonstrates how the Nikes outsmarted a target plane's dive to Lt. Gen. S. R. Mickelsen, Commanding General of the Army Air Defense Command. The battalion's record was 13 "kills" in 14 tries.

Nike Scores Near Perfect Kill In Low-Altitude Test

Seattle's 28th AAA Missile Battalion "killed" 13 targets in 14 tries in the first test of the Nike guided missile against low-altitude targets, the 6th Region United States Army Air Defense Command has announced.

The score was received from the Army Air Defense Command after photographic data on the test was checked and verified.

One outstanding phase of the firing, which was held at Red Canyon Firing Range in New Mexico, saw the Nike credited with destroying a target at about 1000 feet above the canyon.

"The NIKE missiles continue to outpace improvements in aircraft," Lt. Gen. S. R. Mickelsen, Commanding General of the Army Air Defense Command, said. "The Army missile system is more than a match for any enemy bomber regardless of how high, how fast or how maneuverable it might be."

The 28th, which led Nike firing competition in 1956, surpassed its own record. Last year the battalion scored 10 kills in 12 tries while firing at high altitude targets which the missiles engaged at maximum range.

Battery D of the 28th scored a perfect record both years and has now fired 17 missiles without a miss.

Lt. Col. M. A. "Buck" Rogers, Commanding Officer of the 28th, called the tests particularly significant for his battalion, since the Seattle terrain is comparable to that of Red Canyon.

The Youth Activities will receive $3 for every 18 tickets sold.

The drawing is scheduled 14 June. Winners are not required to attend the drawing.

The Guardsmen, a group of young business and professional men, have sent 17,862 San Francisco children to two-week summer camps in the last seven years. In addition, the members counsel and help boys who are wards of the court and are referred by the Youth Guidance Center.

First customer for the Guardsmen drawing being conducted on Post by the Youth Activities Council is Lt. Gen. Robert N. Young, Sixth Army Commander. Making the sale is Harry Bjornberg, Jr. The double-threat $1 tickets support a summer camp for needy children while adding to the Youth Activities treasury.

High Test Rating

The 99th Engineer Company received a 90.1 rating for its participation in the Annual Army Training Test conducted earlier this month by the 30th Engineer Group.

Three of the company's men received recognition for outstanding performance during the test. Praise went to CWO Wilmer E. Rarick, M/Sgt. Anthony J. Pascale and M/Sgt. Charles R. Spargur.

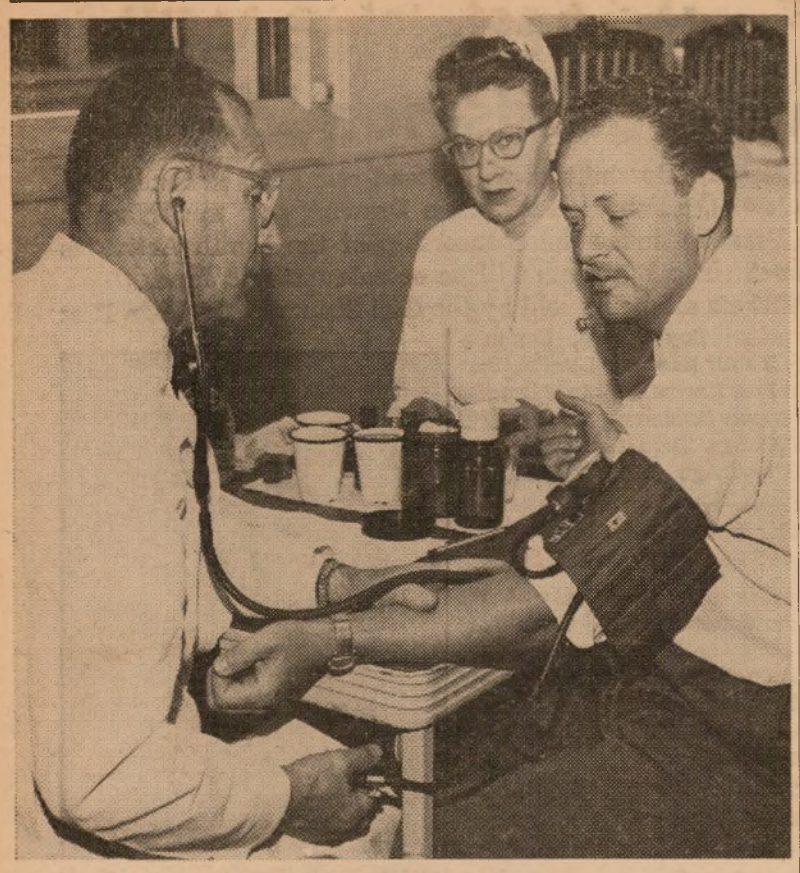
Scouts Win Wings

Twenty-five members of Brownie Troop No. 162 received their Wings and Girl Scout pins at a Fly-Up Ceremony Tuesday evening. The girls have completed the Tenderfoot requirements.

Members of the Presidio Neighborhood Council Board, leaders and members of Presidio Brownie Troops attended.

The original Fort Point area was redesignated Fort Winfield Scott in 1882.

Engineer Soldier Wins Commission In Medical Corps



A direct commission to second lieutenant in the Medical Service Corps has been awarded to Pvt. Joseph A. Marangi of the 549th Engineer Company. He reports to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, for his new assignment.

The new lieutenant attended La Salle Military Academy in Oakdale, Long Island, for three years and then was graduated from the Virginia Military Institute with a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering. Lieutenant Marangi completed four years of Air Force Officers' Training.

The lieutenant applied for his commission in May, 1956, but was drafted and inducted before the application completed processing.

Something for the Girls and something for the boys! Colonel Carl E. Lundquist, Post Commander, cuts the birthday cake marking the 15th anniversary of the Women's Army Corps. Looking on are Sfc. Esther Johnson and Pvt. Lois Curtis. Sgt. Johnson and Pvt. Curtis are the oldest and the youngest in point of military service in the Presidio WAC Detachment.

First Donor on "give blood" day for the new Presidio Civilian Blood Fund was Mr. John H. Condor, Employee Utilization Representative in the Civilian Personnel Division. Mr. Condor is shown in the medical history step of the blood procurement process. The fund boasted 166 units at the end of the main drive day.

Blood Fund Successful; First Drive Tops Quota

Three civilian Presidio employees already have benefited from the new Presidio Civilian Blood Fund created during the "give blood" campaign this month. A total of 166 units were donated during the drive.

Ralph Phillips, Post Signal; James Murray, Post Ordnance; and Mattie Cunningham, Letterman Army Hospital, have each drawn one pint from the week-old fund. Requests for blood for Mr. Murray and Mr. Phillips were received on the day of the drive.

Through the fund, these employees were assured of blood in emergencies and were able to save the $25 fee usually charged for replacing one unit of blood.

"Employees who were unable to give blood on the day of the drive and wish to donate to the fund now, can either contact their blood representatives or our office," explained Mr. Les Scanlon, Fund chairman and Civilian Personnel Officer. Appointments will be arranged.

All Presidio employees and their dependents are eligible to draw from the fund. To order blood replacements, contact Mr. Scanlon at Ext. 2383.

Soldiers, WACs Will Aid Child With Rare Blood

Practically every enlisted man and woman at the Presidio volunteered to give a pint each of their blood this week to aid medical science in attempting to save the life of a small boy, son of a former Presidio soldier.

The child is due to undergo a rare operation at Stanford University Hospital during which from 10 to 15 pints of Type A Positive blood are necessary during the pumping of a scientific "heart" machine being utilized during the operation.

The enlisted women of Company D, and their executive officer, Lt. Frances J. Kirk, volunteered their blood as a group but because only a limited number have the necessary blood type, the officer and eight enlisted members having Type A Positive, are on ready-alert with 15 men from various Presidio units. They are due to be taken to Irwin Memorial Blood Bank where the blood is being drawn for Stanford University Hospital.

The present Post Headquarters, Building 220, was built in 1939 to house the kitchens and classrooms of the Presidio School for Bakers and Cooks.

Pay Measure Introduced

Legislation revamping the Armed Forces military pay structure has been introduced in the Senate by Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.).

Jointly sponsored by Sen. Barry Goldwater (R.-Ariz.) and drafted along the lines of the Cordiner Committee recommendations, the bill carries the full program of the Defense Department's blue ribbon pay panel.

The measure proposing revision of the Career Compensation Act of 1949 has been referred to the Senate Armed Services Committee. No date for committee hearings has been set.

New Phone System Should Cut Costs

Persons who live on Post and have Class B telephones will begin placing calls out of metropolitan San Francisco with Presidio operators tomorrow, according to Post Signal officials. These long-distance toll calls will be billed to the individual.

The change in the system will be effected by electronic equipment installed at the Presidio Telephone Exchange. Persons attempting to dial out of the metropolitan area will be interrupted by a record reminding the individual to contact the operator.

Basis of the change is the flat Class B $4 rate which covers calls within San Francisco only. The new system is expected to save the Army about $1,000 a month.

Officials added that the basic message unit rate listed for non-metropolitan areas is based on three-minute calls; additional message units are charged for calls which run over the three-minute limit. Individuals are also urged to be prepared to dial metropolitan numbers immediately after dialing "9," so that they would not be interrupted by the new tape recording.

LAH Sets Jack & Jill Party

"If men and women bachelor officers at the Presidio can't be lighthearted, who can," asks ye olde Star Presidian editor, on receiving the news for publication, that Letterman Officers Open Mess is pitching a Jack and Jill party on 7 June at 2000 hours. Hence this lighthearted announcement to all free agents in the area:

Every officer, male and female, is welcome to attend the Jack and Jill party at Letterman Officers Open Mess—provided neither a husband nor a wife is slaving over the familiar hot stove while their better halves are revelling in nickel beer, snacks, dancing, and other special entertainment at the gathering place.

You may wear anything you desire at the party, but don't overdo it; rather—don't underdo it in any shape or form.

Did you know . . . that a crudely-lettered brass plate caused a search throughout the Presidio almost as intense as that for the Holy Grail?

The missing plate, 8 x 5 inches long, bore the name of Queen Elizabeth . . . and the date of Sir Francis Drake's arrival here. The queen's picture was outlined on it . . . and her Coat of Arms, on an English sixpence, sealed under the plate with Drake's name.

In modern English the plaque would read:

"Be it known to all men by these presents, June 17, 1579—By the grace of God and in the name of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth of England and her successors forever, I take possession of this kingdom whose king and people freely resign their right and title to the whole land unto Her Majesty's keeping now named by me and to be known unto all men as Nova Albion."

Francis Drake

Missing for nearly 400 years, the plaque was discovered in 1936 . . . by an excursionist who picked it up from a rockpile near San Quentin . . . to use as a hammer to fix a broken fender on his car. Now almost historically priceless, the plaque is on display in a museum of the California Historical Society in San Francisco.

Finding of the plaque proved that Sir Francis Drake did not remain for 36 days in what is now known as Drake's Bay, north of San Francisco . . . but in Marin County, near Greenbrae. It was there that the first English camp was settled in the Western Hemisphere. Drake did arrive in Drake's Bay but it was in Marin County that he landed, to remain while the accumulated barnacles had been removed from his sailing ship.

California's first revival meeting was held in one of Drake's tents . . . as a means of impressing the natives. The Indians asked the white visitors to continue singing and playing their violins . . . and the women were so affected by the ceremony that they screamed, tore their flesh with nails . . . and flung their bodies against rocks and thorn trees.

Drake's Indian audience included giant men wearing chains of bones and crowns made of wild bird feathers. . . . Led by a scepter-bearer, came a majestic-looking king surrounded by other men nearly seven feet tall. Adults and children bore gifts for the visitors . . . the king danced and removed his crown to place it on the head of Drake. . . . And so it was that when Sir Francis Drake later returned to England he gave Queen Elizabeth some million pounds of loot from South America . . . and the Crown of California.

After Drake . . . no foreigners came to San Francisco until 1775 when Lt. Juan Bautista de Ayala sailed up the Golden Gateway to explore the bay. After the Spaniards, came the Russians from their earlier settlement in Alaska. . . . It was then that the Presidio governor, Morago, warned the Russians at Fort Ross that they were breaking the treaty with Spain by settling there. But they ignored him . . . planting orchards and corn, hunting and fishing, and even exchanging their produce with farming Californians.

Before the Russians had left Fort Ross, they had fenced in 2000 acres and planted German prunes. One assumes that the lack of hospitality toward them by the Spaniards and the Indians was responsible for their mass return to Alaska.

Next foreign settler in California was an Irishman, John Read, who jumped ship . . . from an English vessel in 1826. The Spanish priests who had established the mission of San Rafael placed him in charge of the mission. He is credited with bringing new energy to the area, and his ferry boat . . . first in California . . . sailed twice weekly from Sausalito to San Francisco. He died of fever in 1843, and lies buried now in the Mission of San Rafael. . . . After all the men . . . from Mexico, from England, from Spain and Russia and Ireland . . . came the most modern of their epitaphs . . . the giant Golden Gate Bridge . . . one hand holding the Presidio . . . the other Sir Francis Drake's former empire headquarters . . . Marin County.

Toreros Win Two, Call For Players

Kurn Tops 30th Intramural Tennis

Three thousand miles from Forest Hills, but in an equally atractive setting, in the shadows of the Ft. Scott Officers Club, the 30th Engineer Group completed its 1957 Championship Singles Tennis Tournament.

Neal Kurn emerged the champion, capping a long string of wins before a sizable crowd of enthusiastic spectators, downing his opponent, Jim Shanks, in five hotly contested sets by scores of 6-1, 3-6, 2-6, 6-1, 7-5. Both men played remarkably consistant games and the outcome was in doubt until the last point was played. Good sportsmanship was exhibited on the part of both finalists during the afternoon.

In quarterfinal play, Kurn defeated Frank Price, Hq. and Hq. Co., 6-2, 1-6 and 8-6 to gain the final spot. Shanks' opponent in quarterfinal play was Ed Johnson, also of Hq. and Hq. Co., who, Shanks put down 6-3 and 6-0.

Kurn, playing out of Hq. and Hq. Co., has been playing tennis sporadically since he was 8 years old. Hailing from Tucson, Arizona, Neal was captain of the Tucson High School tennis team and went on to play varsity tennis at the University of Arizona. Working for a public accounting firm, prior to his entry into the service, left very little time for his favorite sport, but the preliminary matches in the tournament enabled him to regain much of his past form.

Shanks, representing Headquarters Det., 660th Engineer Bn., is no novice when it comes to tennis. A native of Buffalo, New York, he has trod the courts for the past 11 years, including varsity tennis for the University of Buffalo. Like Kurn, he had to forego some time on the courts while he was working toward his Master's Degree at Louisiana State University; this tourney affording him the first opportunity to devote any length of time to the game.

The intra-mural tourney was well received and included 21 entries from nearly every company in the 30th Engineer Group. It can conceivably become an annual competition.

Top AAA Shooters

The 30th AAA Group topped other regional antiaircraft teams to win the rifle competition recently held at Camp Roberts. The team also took sixth place in competition with Sixth Army teams.

The first place trophy was presented to First Lieutenant James M. Pryor by Major General E. J. McGaw, Commanding General of the 6th Region, U. S. Army Air Defense Command.

Hot Old Owl?

The egg of the great horned owl might well be called "cold storage" eggs. These birds usually nest in mid-winter but successfully keep their eggs warm in sub-zero weather.

Intramural Softball Now In Full Swing

Post intramural softball is now in full swing, with the three leagues operating on as full a schedule as the rain will permit. Included in the three leagues are twenty-two teams representing the various units throughout the Post proper and across the bay Nike units.

Highlighting the action of the past week was the 5-4 win of Hq. and Hq. Co. 30th Engrs. over Hq. Co. 6th USA Trg. Unit. The Engineers were sitting on the bottom side of a 4-1 score in the ninth inning with two out and the bases loaded when John Lichliter slapped one out of everyone's reach for a home run, scoring the three men on base and winning the game 5-4. Hq. and Hq. Co. 30th Engineers now has a 3-0 record and will meet the 99th Engineers, who boast a 2-0 record, on Monday.

In the American League, Co. A, USA Garrison, defeated 16th BPO by a lopsided score of 25-5; 46th Ordnance downed the Teen-Agers 13-5; Hq. Co. 6th US Army beat 56th MRU 6-4; Hq. Co. USA Garrison ran over 16th BPO 15-1; and Co. A, USA Garrison, felled 56th MRU 7-1. Hq. Co. 6th US Army downed 46th Ordnance 8-5.

Opening game in the National League saw the 21st Engineers defeat the 537th Engineers easily by a score of 16-5. Next, the 99th Engineers downed Hq. Co. 6th USA Trg. Unit 8-2; Hq. 30th Engineers felled the 537th Engineers 11-5 and Hq. Det. 660th Engineers downed the 549th Engineers 7-0. Further action saw the 21st Engineers rap the 549th Engineers to the tune of 7-2 and the 99th Engineers beat Hq. Det. 660th Engineers 14-6 and 637th Engineers downed 549th Engineers 7-0.

First game of the Northern League saw Hq. Btry, 9th AAA drop 6th USA Med. Lab. by a score of 11-2 and in the second game A Btry. 9th AAA felled Hq. 30th AAA 7-0. The 561st Engineers ran over B Btry. 9th AAA 20-0 and D Btry 9th AAA blanked C Btry. 9th AAA 10-0. Further action saw Hq. Btry. 9th AAA romp over Hq. Btry. 16-4 and 6th USA Med. Lab. fell before the 561st Engineers 13-8; D Btry. 9th AAA squeezed past A Btry. 9th AAA 8-7, while B Btry. 9th AAA topped C Btry. 9th AAA 5-4.

Rains Hamper Locals, Play Only Two Games

Rainy weather and resulting muddy diamonds have given the Torero baseball players very little opportunity to play during the last week. Only two games have been played, the first, with Marin Junior College was rained out at the bottom of the second inning with the score standing 5-0, favor of the Toreros and in the second one the Toreros downed City College 7-0 in nine innings.

In the Presidio-Marin JC encounter, Nick Capachi was walked and scored when John Zeleznock doubled to centerfield. Zeleznock then stole second and came home on a wild pitch. Bob Shinnick, on the mound for the Toreros, struck out the first three batters that faced him to retire the side.

In the top of the second inning, Shinnick went to first on four balls. Dave Carey followed, and he and Shinnick advanced to second and third, when the shortstop for Marin erred on a ground ball hit by Carey. Roger Collins connected with the ball for a ground ball that passed between the third baseman's legs, for an error and two runs for the locals. Collins came across home plate when Gritts hit into centerfield.

Marin JC started the bottom of the second with a grounder to third, put a man on first with a walk, and the third man up grounded out to third for the second out. Fourth man up for Marin struck out to retire the side. Then the rains came.

Bob Clark was the winning pitcher in the Torero-City College tilt, allowing only nine hits and no runs. The locals also collected nine hits, but managed to score on seven of them. Second baseman Nick Capachi got two hits and scored two runs, leftfielder Jim Cummings connected twice, but failed to score on either hit.

The seventh inning was the big one for the Presidio, as they picked up four runs to add to the one run scored in the sixth inning. The top of the eighth inning saw the locals get the final two runs of the game, as City College failed to score.

A game today will pit the locals against the powerful San Diego Marine Recruit Depot. The game begins at 1430 hours and will be played at the Big Rec baseball field in Golden Gate Park.

Local Trackmen Improve As Army Meet Nears

740th AAA Looks Good In Two Wins

With clutch pitching and hitting, the 740th AAA baseball team has won two important games, 3-2 over Mill Valley VHW Merchants and an impressive 6-0 victory at the expense of A Btry., 441st. AAA. Maj. Gen. Edward J. McGaw, commanding general of the Sixth Region, US Army Air Defense Command, threw out the first ball to open the latter game.

In the win over Mill Valley, pitcher George Hane fanned 11 Merchants and scattered three singles. The 740th catcher, Budrow Larson, led off the big fifth inning with a single to center, leftfielder Jerry Zimmerele followed by slamming a double to left and Jack Gentry singled, scoring Larson. Hane walked, filling the bases, and Ronald Ross hit a fly to deep center scoring Zimmerele. Bob Mendez flew out to right, sending Gentry to third, Hane stole second base and Gentry scored on the play.

The hitting stars of the afternoon were Rudy Buffin with two doubles and Hubie Brown with two singles. The Merchants brought the 300 spectators to the the edge of their seats in the ninth inning by placing the winning run on second base with only one away. Hane shut the door by striking out the next two batters.

In the second game of the week, 740th hosted "brothers" of A Btry. of the 441st. Recent addition to the team, Bob Clarke, 740th AAA, gave up six scattered singles in pitching a 6-0 victory.

In this game, the 740th had their big inning in the sixth, with Buffin going to first on a third baseman's error and then stealing second. Merritt singled to left scoring Buffin. Post Thinclads Set For Sixth Army Meet At Ord

With the Sixth Army Track and Field Meet set for June 6-7 at Ft. Ord, the Presidio thinclads are holding extensive preparatory practice sessions. Outstanding performers at the Sixth Army meet will be selected to go on to the California AAU meet, to be held at Bakersfield, California, on the 8th of June.

The top 20 winners at the Sixth Army championship meet will represent the Sixth Army area in the All-Army Championships at Ft Hood, Texas, on June 13-15. Winners there will go on to the National Amateur Athletic Union Track and Field Championships to be held at Dayton, Ohio, June 20-22.

Pvt. Ernie Shelton, California Military District, established himself as the prime contender for the All-Army High Jump championship when he topped the bar at 6'8" to win the Occidental College invitational meet held in Los Angeles last weekend. The former USC star's jump set a new meet record, while defeating Herm Wyatt, Santa Clara Youth Center, who jumped 6'6". This weekend he will compete in the Coliseum Relays on Friday night at Los Angeles and Saturday afternoon at the California relays in Modesto.

Ex Indiana University ace, Lowell Zellers, has rounded slowly into shape in his specialty, the mile, and gives every indication that he will be in top shape for the Sixth Army Championships, as evidenced, by running a 4:13 mile at the Fresno Relays two weeks ago.

Another Torero thinclad, Bob Kemp, Sixth Army Med. Lab, is expected to capture points in several events. Kemp, a former nation-wide small college Decathalon champion at Beloit College, Wiscinsin, is a contender for points in the discus, shot put, pole vault, high jump, and high hurdles.

Pintails Can Pinwheel!

Among ducks, the pintail is one of the strongest and fastest fliers. A flock of 22 pintails landed on Palmyra Island, 1,100 miles south of Hawaii in 1942 and one wore a band placed on it in Utah 82 days earlier.

No Goose These Geese!

The flight of the Canada goose is heavy but powerful. It averages about 55 miles per hour. To cut down air resistance, the Canada geese usually form a V-shaped flock. These magnificent migrators sometimes negotiate a non-stop flight of hundreds of miles.

Lifter Injured At El Paso Matches

Presidio's lightweight Pacific Coast Weightlifting Champion, Ralph Yoshida, suffered a stroke of misfortune that cost him a title in the Junior Nationals being held at El Paso, Texas, and caused him to be dropped from contention in any matches for the coming months.

While participating in the finals, with the remaining two contenders in his division, Yoshida's weight struck that of the man next to him, due to close quarters, and caused him to momentarily become unbalanced. In the effort to save the lift and stay in contention for the title, Ralph strained himself and will be unable to do any lifting for the next few months.

A win at the El Paso event would have qualified Ralph for the Senior National Championships in Miami, Florida, and he was the number one contender for the title at El Paso. The injury marked Yoshida's last appearance as an Army competitor due to the fact that the lifter will be released from active service next month.

Brigadier General L. K. Tarrant, Deputy Commanding General, Sixth Army, accompanied by two Sixth Army officers and the Safety Director, attended a Joint Military-State Official Traffic Safety Conference this week. The meeting was held in Governor Goodwin Knight's office.

The main purpose of the meeting was to bring together top public and military officials for a frank appraisal of the traffic accident situation in California in order to develop areas of cooperation and assistance in solving recognized problems and to estimate immediate as well as long-range needs to control traffic accidents.

Attending the conference were Lt. Col. Robert G. Youngblood, Operations Officer, Sixth Army Transportation; Lt. Col. Byron Petersen, Executive Officer, Sixth Army Provost Marshal; and Mr. Joseph S. Ellerby, Sixth Army Safety Director.

On-Duty Visit to discuss reenlistment benefits is made by M/Sgt. John E. McConnell, Reenlistment NCO, to Sp3 Louis J. Hill, motor pool driver assigned to "C" Company, U. S. Army Garrison. The visit is part of a new service offered by the Post Reenlistment Branch.

On-The-Job Recruiting

Prospective reenlistees who find it difficult to get to the Post Reenlistment Branch during regular duty hours can take advantage of a new "visiting" service launched by the branch.

Under the new service a member of the Reenlistment staff will meet with individuals at their duty station during duty hours or at their homes after duty hours. Questions concerning such things as bonus, overseas assignments and concurrent travel will be answered during the visit.

To take advantage of the new service, call the Post Reenlistment Branch at Ext. 3594 or go to Bldg. 220, Room 213. Capt. James E. Corum is Post Reenlistment officer and M/Sgt. John E. McConnell is the Reenlistment NCO.

Defense Tightens Regs For All Overseas Tours

Military personnel of all four services will be given uniform overseas tours to the "maximum extent" according to a new Defense Department directive signed by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson. The order, which becomes effective 6 June, sets 30 June, 1958, for all readjustments to be completed.

The order also tightens restrictions on travel and privileges of "ineligible" dependents overseas, but authorizes all Armed Forces service families, unless otherwise approved by the Secretary, to be present in any area where dependents are permitted.

Dependents of military personnel who go overseas as their own expense without authorization, will be given only those services and privileges to which the law entitles them, including medical attention. Overseas station allowances for authorized dependents will be paid only to sponsors who are entitled to government transportation for dependents.

Dependents of personnel below grade E-4 with four years' service or who are otherwise ineligible to join servicemen at a foreign station will not be furnished "space available" transportation to overseas areas. Transportation back to the United States for such dependents also will be restricted to cases which must be transported in the "best interests of the government" according to the service concerned.

Other uniform practices established by the order include figuring duty outside the ZI from the day of departure from the United States to the day of return to a permanent change of station; establishing a 36-month "standard" tour of duty for personnel accompanied or joined by dependents in "desirable overseas locations"; and setting a 12-month minimum for duty in remote or isolated areas.
